THE TRADES UNIONIST is heartily and unqualifiedly indorsed by the Central Labor Union and the Allied Building Trades as well as by the various locals connected with the two central bodies.

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL WASHINGTON. 2

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1903.

PREPARE for the New Year resolution joke.

IT would be a good idea to have your new leaf turned over before the new year gets here.

SOME men are born rich, some men achieve riches, and some profit by the gullibility of the public.

IN an effort to get rid of that tired feeling Newport men and women get divorced and married while they wait.

ORGANIZED labor has saved the country from many a riot and considerable bloodshed during the past ten or twenty years.

IF business agents are not necessary to the healthy development of great labor organizations then they are not necessary in the case of industrial corporations.

WITH eggs at 50 cents a dozen it looks as if the domestic hen sympathizes with the W. C. T. U. in its endeavor to limit the flood of egg-nog during the approaching holidays.

IT is a cheering sign of the times that the American Federation of Labor is generally looked upon in all classes of society as an important factor of progress of American civilization.

ORGANIZED labor will be entitled to a well earned breathing spell when social and economic conditions are such as to render the universal employment of women and children inexcusable.

A WRITER in the Washington Post thinks the labor question might be satisfactorily settled if labor were relieved of its ugliness. Just what we have thought all the time. And we would suggest that as a labor beautifier there is nothing like a nice fat day's wages.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

Last summer, while William F. O'Brien was spending his vacation on Mackinac Island, away up in northern Michigan (I was there once myself a little over thirty years ago), he got acquainted with a Catholic priest who was stopping at the same hotel, who, finding that O'Brien was from Washington, asked him:

"Did you ever hear anything of that Miller case while you were in Washington?"

"Oh, yes," said "Oby," "I know all about it. I worked in the same building."

"Did you, indeed?" said the priest. "What is your business?

"I am a printer," said "Oby."

"So am I," said the priest.

O'Brien told him all about the affair, in which he took the greatest interest, and in return told of his own experiences as a printer, from which business he had retired some ten years ago on entering the priesthood. On returning home O'Brien thought he would send his friend one of the Convention Souvenirs, but he had forgotten his name and where he was from. So he wrote to the hotel-keeper, who said that the party he was looking for must be one of two men who were there at the date given, which names and addresses he gave, one of which was the Rev. Father P. J. Dunavan, of St. Mary's Cathedral, Hamilton, Ontario, and to him O'Brien wrote on a venture. It proved to be the one he was seeking, and after receiving the Souvenir Father Dnnavan wrote again, saying:

"I received the Souvenir O. K. Thank you very much. I have been waiting to look it over carefully before writing you, and I find that the subject matter is well gotten up. What pleases me most, however, is the ads. The rule work, the type, and presswork are really excellent. I just pick that Souvenir up and study the workmanship of a page of ads. with pleasure. Again thanking you for your kindness, I remain, etc."

I have known a number of Protestant ministers who had been printers, but I believe I never heard of a printer-priest before. However, I have known a number of printers who had been intended for the priesthood, but somehow had gotten spoiled in the making.

One of the strongest recollections I have of Bob Wicker, whom I have referred to on several occasions in these and other columns, the time he escaped from North Carolina and spent a winter in Washington, about thirty years ago, was Jack Kennedy taking advantage of his rawness and sending him all around the room to borrow a few barrel marks to enable him (Jack) to finish a table he was working on. After a long and fruitless searce he returned, saying, "I kyaint fine none."

Taking out a take the heading of which was marked "Roman l. c., hanging indention," he asked the foreman where he would find the "Roman l. c. hanging indention case," and later on he asked one of his alleymates how to divide "prockydure." He was great on compounding words and insisted on setting it up "cold-boiled ham" and "Horse-hay rake." Another time he made the common Record abbreviation "p. q." (previous question) "page 9," and in a speech in which a horse race was used as an illustration he set it, "They are only waiting for the starter to say 'ninety'" ("go"). He improved much, however, while he was here.

The tragedy enacted by Robt. J. Hale in murdering his wife and committing suicide is one that passes ordinary understanding, and must have been brought about by an overwhelming fear of prosecution in connection with the death of Miss Madge Hale, for whose trouble he was presumably responsible, or acute remorse because of his part in the matter. But why he took his innocent wife's life is a mystery, and it must have been an afterthought, as notes left addressed to her would indicate. He was a valuable workman and for that reason will be missed, but he was not the sort of a man to have warm friends to feel deeply distressed over his criminal acts, for he lived mostly to himself and for himself.

I received an interesting letter from William E. ("Kid") Shields one day last week, giving an intelligent review of the miners' troubles in Colorado, but too long to print. Mr. Shields is now one of the regular correspondents of Hubbard's Colorado Springs Labor News and often writes for the Typographical Journal, and is always an able writer.

* * * *

A friend of mine "jumped all over me" the other day for setting forth Miss Wilson's claims to election as delegate to St. Louis next year, saying that such positions should be for the "workers" of the Union. It probably never occurred to him that there are other ways of working for the Union than merely working the jawbone. Not all of our good union men and women attend all the meeting and take the floor on every question, though I admit that part of this proposition is very desirable. Miss Wilson will make a delegate of whom we will be proud, and arguments against her such as have been made will contribute to very largely increase her vote.

* * * *

Ed Bunker showed me a letter from Henry Ripley the other day. He is at his old home, Edgartown, Martha's Vineyard, Mass., enjoying an outdoor life, to engage in which, on account of his health, he resigned his position in the Record room a year or so ago. He says that at present there is no position in the Government Printing Office he wants except that of Public Printer.

* * * *

A determined effort is to be made all over the country to achieve the eight-hour day, under the intelligent advice and control of President James M. Lynch, with a very encouraging outlook for ultimate success. It is necessary that we should all "set our shoulders to the wheel" and do all in our power to assist this great movement, for in no other way than by decreasing the number of hours can we meet the inroads made on the trade by the introduction of machines. Thirty years ago the Englishman had a rhyme like this:

Eight hours for work,
Eight hours for play,
Eight hours for sleep,
Eight shillings a day.

I move to strike out "shillings" and insert "dollars," and that as amended the resolution pass.

* * * *

Next Sunday afternoon Columbia Union holds her memorial exercises for the dead, the program for which is published elsewhere. It is a beautiful custom in many organizations to hold such services, and it is to be hoped that it may become a permanent one in our Union.

* * * *

The sincere sympathy of all his associates is extended to Henry S. Weyand, of the Night Bill Proof Room, because of the death of his wife, which occurred at Bridgeport, Onio, last Friday. Mrs. Weyand had been in bad health for several months, and her death was not unexpected.

* * * *

The strongest move that can be made for unionism to-day is to buy nothing that does not bear the union label. With that weapon we can whip into line the most strenuous foe, for there are no manufactured goods that can do without the market furnished by trade unionists. I hope to see the day when nothing that does not bear the label will go into the use of a union man or his family.

A. F. BLOOMER.

We have to-day the man of pretensions, with the voice of Jacob and the hands of Esau.

It can be proven by a multitude of worthy witnesses that charity is not always "at home" to callers.

The report of General Bristow on the postal scandal is out, by which he makes it very clear that the Government is also out.

Judas of old has long occupied the place nearest the footlights as the prince of betrayers, but some of his prototypes have shown, and are now showing, a remarkable knack at imitation.

That proposition of Mr. Kennedy's to open a machine type-setting school in the G. P. O. should be stood up alongside that of the steel trust's offer of "common" to its employes to "take them in" as shareholders.

Displace hand labor everywhere and fail to provide for the displaced would be to create an army of discontents and invite a revolution, in comparison with which the horrors of the Bastile would seem as tame as a sham battle or a sportive target practice.

It is surely an evidence of misplaced confidence when a man seeks and is given preferment in the councils of labor and at the critical moment turns his back upon all former professions for a consideration. There are those who, if they had their just deserts, would now be clad in stripes and in company with Parks.

All substantial prosperity has for its foundation the bed-rock of labor, beginning with the soil. Increase or profit taken from the toilers, by whatever pretense or device, and monopolized by the few to the detriment of the many is a presumptive privilege, which the toilers at one time accepted or tolerated as equity, but upon reflection are now rejecting as an absurd and unwarranted assumption.

An object lesson to illustrate what the conditions in general among the workers would be in the absence of organization may be had by a visit to the southeast section of Washington at this time, where the work of excavation and construction of the approaches for the new union depot is in operation. It is a good place to learn how cheaply a man may live—how sparing he may be of the commonest necessities and yet possess a reasonable amount of physical strength for the labor required. You will not find the ideal condition which American workingmen are striving for, but by comparison you will be brought to a better understanding of what the conditions in general would be without organization.

CYCLE.

Reception and Anniversary.

Woman's Bindery Union, No. 42, will hold a reception and entertainment for its friends on the occasion of its ninth anniversary, Tuesday evening, December 8, at Typographical Temple.

The committee in charge of the anniversary have arranged for a reception between 8 and 9 p. m., followed by short addresses by Hon. Edw. J. Livernash, member of Congress from California; Hon. William Hughes, member of Congress from New Jersey, and Mrs. Ellen Foster, the well-known lecturer.

The officers of the affiliated unions in the Allied Printing Trades have been tendered a special invitation to be present and will ably represent their organizations.

After the reception and addresses the floor will be cleared for dancing and an enjoyable evening is promised to all who attend.

Memorial Services.

The memorial services to be held next Sunday afternoon at Typographical Temple will be the first of its kind given by Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101.

The committee in charge has made all arrangements for the occasion and the program will be found to be appropriate and impressive.

Steam Engineers Union, No. 99.

At the last meeting of Steam Engineers Union, No. 99, the new educational feature of the union was inaugurated. After the regular business of the union was transacted Mr. W. B. Murray read a paper on the "Economy of Fuel Combustion." At the next meeting, December 15, Mr. W. I. Evans will give a talk on "The Corless Engine."

This feature will no doubt prove instructing and entertaining, and is worthy of emulation by sister unions in other crafts.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Down Town.

George Bradley, President of Pittsburg Typographical Union, and R. N. Kelchner of the same organization, were in the city during the week on business connected with their union.

For Rent.

One or two furnished or unfurnished rooms with private family; with or without board; steam heat; convenient to G. P. O.; 29 M street N. W.

Third Division.

Edward F. Hall has been out sick for some time.

W. D. ("Windy") Morgan is back at work after a few days in bed with tonsilitis.

The Jackson alley elevators are now running, to the intense satisfaction of those who have had to walk down stairs and lose valuable time at noon.

Goodkey reports that while in Louisville, Ky., last month, his watch was stolen. We didn't know that anybody in this room could be "buncoed" so easily.

The tags on the new stools indicate that they are made in Providence, R. I., or some nearby point in New England. Moses was certainly on deck when the light went out.

From the length of time taken to erect those lockers it is a little doubtful if we get them by Christmas. If they are ever put into commission they will certainly fill a "long-felt want."

A new messenger for this division went on duty Tuesday morning. He is J. F. Warner, of Chillicothe, Ohio, a pleasant mannered gentleman, who has already made friends among the comps.

We understand a project is on foot to get up a subscription to defray the cost of a wheel for "Pard" Julian, as he gets very much fatigued by numerous trips down the length of the room for copy.

A loud cry goes up for new sticks. There is hardly a stick in the place that is absolutely true. The vast majority of them are only fairly good, but a very respectable minority are worse than useless.

One can not use too much care in correcting the Blue Book index, judging by the number of "pink slips" awarded last week to those who were plumb certain the proof reader was mistaken.

The consensus of opinion seems to be that there should be a new numbering machine for the copyright catalogue cards. The numbers are often so indistinct that one can not tell whether the figure is a cipher, a six or a nine.

It is worthy of note that the idea of Memorial Sunday originated with a member of this division, J. E. Goodkey. All should remember that the first memorial service will be held Sunday afternoon, December 6, at Typographical Temple.

A. K. Williamson has just returned from Richmond, Va., whither he has been to bury his father-in-law, Hon. Robert B. Witter, formerly an employee of this office, who was Secretary and Librarian of the House of Representatives, C. S. A., at Richmond, Va., during the civil war.

We are glad to see that the Spess correspondent has an enlightened idea of the functions of a window in cold weather. Still there is much to be said ror those who would like the air pure. Why can't we have a healthful, medium temperature in place of the almost suffocating heat which prevails most of the time?

It was a cruel circumstance that the "down-town" items last week should have contained the first news of the arrival of that new girl baby at the home of our old friend, C. C. Hipkins. This division extends its congratulations, none the less hearty for being a little late. We are pleased to see Mr. Hipkins back from his leave.

The following new subscriptions for THE TRADES UNIONIST have been received from the new men in this division: Walter Brooks, H. D. Wadhams, W. D. Thornton, E. Strohmeyer, Sr., Robert Robinson, William Y. Clarke, J. F. Stewart, and A. W. McEwen. The rest should follow suit, or subscribe for some equally good labor publication.

Since we began settling the department reports it is a very noticeable fact that many more cap I's than ordinary are being used. Each report begins, "I have the honor to submit, etc." Ends ups with "I have the honor to remain," and "I think," and "I recommend," occur many times in the text. And these gentlemen all think, no doubt, that they are the real thing.

Just a word of warning to the groups who gather before work and at luncheon to swap stories tnd talk over matters of interest. Have a care lest your most innocent thoughts, expressed without malice or suspicion of injury to anyone high or low, are not warped and twisted into words of evil intent by some impossible person who conceives it to be his duty to report your conversation at the desk.

We are compelled to disagree with one thing the Spess man says, namely, that the people who occupied "this room" last "took everything as they went, except the drinking cups, which were chained." If our friend will take the trouble to investigate he will find in the boiler room of the new building a large number of stools in a more or less (mostly less) serviceable condition, which were left behind by those who last occupied the room where the Spess is now located. The subscriber contributed one of Manuel's choicest productions to the bunch.

A crying need for this office is a room where luncheon might be purchased and eaten,—a room such as one may see annexed to large factories in some parts of the country. The Gorham Manufacturing Company, silversmiths, have erected near their works, in Providence, R. I., a small building in which those who desire may find tables and chairs during the lunch hour, and where light eatables, hot tea and coffee, milk, and cool drinks of a non-intoxicating nature may be bought. It is strange that this idea did not occur to those who planned the new Government Printing Office. Let us hope it is not too late to incorporate some such scheme, as it will be of vast benefit to the large army of employees who are compelled to seek inferior accommodation in the neighborhood.

The Star last week published an interesting article on the terminal work now being done by the B. & O. Railroad. It mentioned the fact that there are about 1,000 laborers employed on the work, the greater number being foreigners who were not citizens of the United States. Most of them get $1.50 per day, but their needs being small, they expect to save up enough while the work is in progress to keep them in affluence for several years when they return to their native country. The question arises whether these citizens of Italy and other countries should be allowed to step into jobs that American citizens could fill with equal profit to the railroad people and to themselves. Another question which could be asked in all seriousness, is, How were these aliens hired? Were they contracted for in their own country by agents of the railroad company? If not, how was it possible for the railroad company to hire nearly 1,000 aliens in the United States, as the Star says was done? Either the B. & O. Railroad Company is amenable to the contract-labor law, or it is not. If the former condition exists, they should be made to pay the penalty.

Strike of Iron Workers.

The structural iron workers on all buildings under construction by the Geo. E Fuller Company throughout the country were called off on an order from the Executive Board of International Bridge and Structural Iron Workers Union on Wednesday.

The order is the result of action taken by the Fuller Company in subletting some of their contracts to the Hecla Iron Company, a member of the Iron League, of New York City, which employs nonunion men.

About twenty men employed on a building on Connecticut avenue and M streets in this city are affected by the order.

The Allied Label League.

The regular meeting of the Allied Label League was called to order last Friday evening, with President McCarthy in the chair, and all officers present except Vice-President Tripitoe.

Delegate B. T. Berd, from Local 234, was seated.

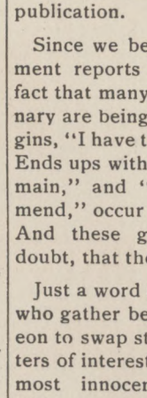
Delegate Schaffer reported that he secured four contracts for the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association.

Delegate Brahler moved that the Committee on Contracts be discharged. Carried.

Delegate Helmuth, of the Butchers' Union, asked that delegates ask of their locals to see that the Butchers' Union card was displayed on all meat stalls and ask their wives to do likewise.

The Chair asked all delegates to so report back to their locals.

The Retail Grocery Clerks asked all the delegates to have their fellow members see that the clerk wore the clerks' button.



The Clerks reported that Hecht & Co. was still unfair to their union and asked sister unions not to patronize said firm until it settled with the clerks.

The Cigarmakers asked all friends of organized labor not to buy cigars or cigarettes that gave premiums of any kind and to buy only labeled cigars and tobacco.

The Chair, on being asked for a decision, decided that all locals of the miscellaneous calling must affiliate with the Allied Label League.

Proof Room Notes.

I extend my warmest sympathy to Mrs. Bennett, of the Specification, in her bereavement for the loss of her boy, a promisiny youth of six years. Mrs. Bennett has seen much trouble and sorrow in her life and always bears it with admirable fortitude and resignation. She was the first woman to join the union of Waco, Tex., some fifteen years ago. Her father, Col. Rusk, was then publishing a newspaper there, of which I had mechanical charge.

It is also a sad duty to express condolence with W. H. Weyand, of the Night Proof Room, for the loss of his wife, who departed this life last week.

There is a physicological mystery connected with the Hale tragedy worthy of study by professionals. Hale was undoubtedly sincere when he penned the note so full of sentiment and respect and esteem for his good wife. What caused him to change his mind in a few moments and take her life? It is easy to say he was insane, but that explains nothing.

The German Reichsdruckerei, or Imperial Printery, celebrated its fiftieth anniversary recently with a volume giving the history of the institution and other matters of interest connected with it. The occupancy of the new G. P. O. building would be a good time for a similar volume to make its appearance here.

Many members of the Masonic order have to work at night regularly, and find it impossible ever to get to a lodge meeting. I would not be bold enough to make a suggestion, but would like to ask Bro. Evans, of the Masonic Disciple, what he thinks of the advisability of instituting a day lodge for the night hawks?

The Germans of the city have been having a "gemuthliche Zeit" in Alt Deutschland. Any one who has missed it has missed something worth seeing. The celebration commemorates the settlement of the first German colony in America, in 1683, at Germantown. It is a fact not generally known that the first English settlers who came on the Mayflower were the same type of religionists and derived their doctrines from the same source. Both were repudiated by the orthodox churches of their respective countries and both found a refuge on these shores, where "there works do follow them."

Mr. Gompers, in defining his position on Socialism before the convention at Boston, is reported to have said: "I declare it to you, I am not only at variance with your doctrines, but your philosophy." I would like to know what distinction Mr. Gompers makes between the doctrines and the philosophy of Socialism. If I accept the doctrines of the Republican party or of Calvinism I must approve the philosophy that establishes those doctrines; if I accept the philosophy I am bound to accept the doctrines also. I want to know wherein Socialism differs in this respect from any other sect or party.

The Bureau of Labor has just published an interesting bulletin showing the cost of living and income of workingmen's families. It is based on reports from 2,568 families in 33 States. It shows the average annual income per family to be $827; average expenses $768; net surplus per family, $55. The statistics show an increase in the cost of living for the decade ending 1902 of 10 per cent. Wages, on the other hand, for the same period, show a slight decrease, and this in a period of unprecedented prosperity.

Messrs. Frye, Johnson, and Rhodes have been transferred from the Day to the Night Proof Room.

The "largest chapel in the world," or to be more specific, the Specification Division, is now comfortably located in its old-time quarters in the old building on H and North Capitol streets. It occupies the entire space formerly occupied by the First and Second Divisions. The proof room takes up a section of the old Third Division, neatly partitioned off with a view to privacy and quiet. There are 174 compositors engaged in elucidating to the public the various inventions evolved by American genius. And it is a pleasant sight to see nearly half a thousand arms and hands in motion picking up the nimble bits of metal, accompanied by the click click of the brand new sticks. And then the apparent confusion but real order, the motion and the activity of the floor hands, makers-up, etc., adds greatly to the variety and loveliness of the scene. The 40 or 50 beautiful lady compositors in this division are, of course, not the least of its attractions, whose presence puts one beyond the great printing office in imagination and he finds his mind wandering in another realm—the family and its wants. The men are an intelligent set. The ladies are beautiful and inspiring. One takes his leave of them with reluctance and wishes them all kinds of prosperity and happiness.

The Document Division, the clearing house of the big printery, is now being moved into the old office and will occupy that section of the second floor formerly the home of the Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Divisions, including the proof room, and the whole of the fourth floor.

CHAS. W. PAFFLOW.

THE PRINTER GROUP MINES.

Interesting Letter From the Thunder Mountain District, Idaho.

In a letter from R. G. Bailey, president of the Nonpareil Mining and Development Company, to a friend in this city, he says:

DIXIE, IDAHO, November 18, 1903.

I arrived here to-day, after a ride of eighteen miles through from two to three feet of snow, and with the thermometer at 14 degrees below zero, almost frozen and utterly worn out. * * * Don't be afraid to push the company, as all is O. K. on this end of the line. Have had a long talk with Mr. Wm. High, a mine manager who has done business in this section for years, and is thoroughly familiar with all conditions governing our property, and he says that if we can save only one dollar on the plates from the mill that we have the biggest thing in the West. Also says there is no doubt about the ore remaining free milling, as all porphyry in this section does. He owns large holding of porphyry near the Ora Grande, the property I wrote about some time ago, where the ore runs only $1.05 to the ton. And, by the way, the property has recently changed hands, the purchase price being $1,000,000; sold to the Daly estate, the rich copper magnate of Butte, which was manager of the famous Anaconda mine.

When I wrote about what we could do with our claims I did not depend at all on my ability or knowledge, but consulted with at least twenty practical mining men who were conversant with the conditions and surroundings here, and I gave you a summary of their opinions. There is an old miner who has some claims adjoining ours who is developing them, and when I passed him today he showed me some rock that was fine.

Everything is lovely with me and * * * tomorrow I shall go to Dixie to file another claim, as I suceeded in locating another fine-looking ledge alongside of our other claim. This makes thirteen quartz claims, besides the Pi placer. The last claim I have named "Press." Work on the claims is progressing nicely. We are driving a tunnel just now on the Primer Claim, which showed the highest assay. * * * I did not make the trip up the river for meat as I had anticipated. The snow and ice drove us back. Instead, I went up the mountains about three miles from camp and killed two buck deer, each dressing about 160 pounds. One of them we packed out on a horse; the other was in such an inaccessible place that Randall and I had to bring our backs into use. One-half a mile was up hill and the balance of the way down grade. At no point, either up or down was the mountain as level as the ordinary shingle roof, and most of the way was over rocks and fallen trees. We brought down 60 pounds apiece yesterday, and today I brought down the other 40 pounds, the hide and head in addition. I can assure you there is not a man in the G. P. O. who could, without a good deal of training, accomplish this feat, and I do not want to repeat the performance. When I first came here I covered almost the same ground with only a pick as a burden, and even then could hardly keep my feet. Most of the way was about quarter pitch. But we needed the meat, and I considered the work necessary.

Well, our cabin is completed and all supplies here for the winter. Cabin 14x16, built of "bull" pine logs, some of them two feet in diameter. Building covered with shakes well chinked, and daubed with mud. We have also erected a blacksmith shop, size 10x14, and right here I want to say that to get the bellows was one of the hardest tasks I ever attempted. The man who packed down most of our stuff from Dixie got it two miles on the way and then said he would not bring it any further for its weight in gold. I was with him, and had it on one of our horses. So we laid the bellows alongside the the trail, and Randall and I went up in a few days and "fetched" it down. But we nearly killed a horse and lost the bellows in the bargain. The horse rolled down the mountain with it. The bellows was four feet wide, six feet long, and weighed 160 pounds, a very awkward load for a horse.

Randall started in this morning on the tunnel we will work in this winter, and I put in the day with a pick and shovel doing the necessary work on balance of the claims of the group, so they can be recorded before I make transfer to the company. This work will occupy me about five days.

The place we have started the tunnel is a quarter of a mile from the cabin, and that portion of the dyke looks firm. Randall says that he cut through a quartz stringer to-day, perhaps a foot wide, which is the best he has seen on the ground. Several parties have been in here recently and located claims adjoining ours.

I would like to put another man to work for a few months on a large quartz ledge which recently I find crosses our property at right angles with the dyke. I believe it to be a good thing. It certainly looks good to me.

God never made a rougher country than that we are located in. The canyon is so deep that at this season of the year the sun does not shine on our cabin at all, and will not do so until about March 15.

It's terrible lonesome here, and work is about four times as hard as at the G. P. O. Nine hours with us constitutes a day's work, with about two hours extra to cook meals.

I will send samples of ore the next time I go out. By that time we will be well in on the tunnel. Don't know when I can get mail again, as within the next few days our trail will be completely blocked for horse travel, and we will have to depend on snow-shoe trips; but will let you all hear from me as often as possible.

As ever, your friend,

ROBERT G. BAILEY.

Hand Composition vs. Machines.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

There has been much said pro and con as regards the introduction of machines in the Government Printing Office. As one passingly familiar with both machine work and the work of the G. P. O., I desire to make a few remarks on the subject.

To begin with, I hope I may be understood and accredited with being unbiased in the matter, for as a job printer I earned a living many years before coming here and feel able to get along O. K. regardless of the introduction of machines; besides with my knowledge of machines and machine composition, were they introduced, I would at least stand a fighting show for a machine or at some of the "newly made" positions, of which your correspondent speaks.

I have had six years experience in an office which used machines, from which was issued a daily paper and in connection with which was one of the largest and best equipped job printing establishments south of St. Louis. I worked as a compositor, maker up, and also played the key board for a time. I had an opportunity to see the machines tried on various classes of work, and must say that outside of straight composition they were in no manner equal to hand composition.

I have as yet the first pressman to meet who will say he can produce the same results from machine matter as from hand composition.

In the office to which I refer we tried tabular work in several forms, viz: we set some across in the same manner as the hand compositor would do. Then we tried sawing and inserting brass rules. Then we tried setting one column at a time, and to my mind the latter plan is the only one by which decency can be approached as regards tabular matter.

Our machine tabular matter was somewhere between "horrible and awful" and the machine set sectional rules resembled a row of ants going to war more than anything else I can call to mind.

If the reader will look through the New York American Almanac and Year Book he will see a good illustration of machine set tabs—that is, those set across in the manner they would be set by hand.

The plan of setting one column at a time down the sheet is a slow process. With a table with columns set five, six, or seven ems wide, which is about the average and are often set more narrow, if the operator sets full capacity of his his machine he will accomplish very little more than the hand compositor, for the reason that the machine must be given time to cast, and it requires as much time to cast a short line as a long ene.

When we remember that the tools of one consists of a $1.50 steel stick, steel or brass rule, while those of the other represent $3,000 or more in machine, electricity, etc., and the compensation of the operator must be equally as great if not greater than the compositor, to say nothing of the services of a skilled machinist, there is no comparison between the two.

As regards the amount of matter kept standing in the G. P. O., I think it wisely arranged and a big saving to the Government. By this method oftimes one man can produce as much or more matter than would be produced by a machine in the same length of time. For instance, we will mention the Monthly Report printed in the First Division, which is mainly tabular matter. These pages are kept standing, and the figures have more or less changes each month. Ordinarily one man will change a page every four or six hours, often in less time. One of these pages represent 20,000 ems—a machine would not do more under the most favorable conditions. In hand set matter you may change a figure and save the whole line—with the machine a change of a figure means a change of the whole line.

I believe the most modern up-to-date methods are used in the G. P. O. in setting all clases of matter. The style of tabular matter is superior to anything I have seen, and I have worked over a number of States and Territories.

The compilation of tabs here is the most thorough and come nearer containing everything that is necessary to be put into a tab than any place I have been. This, of course, makes the work somewhat intricate, and when it is remembered that both italic and roman superior and inferior letters and figures, algebraic, mathematical, and astronomical signs are used in many of the tabs, it will be seen readily how impracticable the idea of machine set tabs would be.

To say that the Government should be satisfied with anything short of the best would show a lack of pride.

In conclusion, if machines will create places for all by making a slug-cutter of one, a slugger-out of another, put more in time alleys, more on the make-up, etc., where will the saving come in?

A BIT OF ALL SORTS.

"Ajax" has been resurrected.

The divies from the various relief associations are now in order.

There are nearly fifty letter-press pressmen now employed in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

What's the matter with that committee to revise the laws of the Ex-Delegates' Association. Wake up!

Frank Hoover was instrumental in organizing a relief association in his division a year ago, and is very proud of its success.

J. Ligon King's "Spess" column last week covered the ground very thoroughly, and I am glad to see him enter the list of correspondents of our trade paper.

Charlie Davis, of the Harris Press Co., is in the city. He resigned from the office some three years ago, and has apparently made a success as a press salesman.

Promotions of Stanley Ziegler, Sam Kirby, Eddie French, Harvey Southwick, "Bud" Lowery, Miss Jessie Dumble, and others in the Spess division, are certainly rewards of merit.

A representative of a New York house which makes a business of buying and selling second-hand printing machinery informs me that he never knew the demand for second-hand presses to be so great.

One of the great pleasures to me of the move back into the Swamp is the many warm handshakes I get from friends from whom I have been separated many years and some of whom I have not even seen in a decade.

One cause of regret at leaving the Union Building is the separation from our friends in the bindery. There were many companionable ladies and gentlemen on that bindery force to know whom was to admire and respect.

The age of Ann is not causing near so much anxiety in press-room circles as the age of Forrest Thackera. He has been posing here as a young fellow, but some of his shopmates say they have proof that he started the first cylinder press.

Indications are that there will be no lack of aspirants for delegate to either the Pressmen's or the Typographical conventions this year, both to be held in St. Louis. The Stereotypers also meet in St. Louis, I believe, and the Bookbinders go to St. Paul.

The recent promotion of Fred Hall to the assistant foremanship of the Proof Room is, I am sure, a well-deserved recognition of faithful and efficient service. I have known Fred from his first appearance in Washington. He's all wool and a yard wide.

The newly-elected officers of Pressmen's Union, No. 1, are: Emil Petersen, president; H. C. Evans, vice-president; W. C. Dean, secretary; W. H. Weber, treasurer; H. R. Fellinger, sergeant-at-arms; C. E. Bright, F. B. Clarkson, and Wm. Dooley, members executive committee.

In the hustle and bustle of moving to the Swamp and getting things going I have had to ask a good many favors, and I want to express my thanks to Fred Powers, electrician, and "Cap." Taylor, machinist. Two more capable, efficient, and obliging gentlemen in their respective lines it has never been my pleasure to meet.

Pressmen's Union, No. 1, has decided that Emil Peterson shall hold the reins as president for the coming year. "Pete" has served one term as president, two as secretary, twice been elected a delegate, and has been in the harness in some capacity a good many years. He deserves all the Union can bestow in honors, and when he wants anything he doesn't hesitate to ask for it.

The Proof Room correspondent got unduly exercised over my criticism of the ad display in the Evening Star. He admits just exactly what I said—that the ads. are set by the ad. writer. I can't admit that the style of type used has much to do with it. There is also just about as much comparison between the same ads. appearing in the Post and in the Star as there is between Berryman's and Mahoney's cartoons.

Charlie Schulte, along with his other many accomplishments, has developed into a composer and has written a German opera for production at short entertainments entitled "Is Das Nicht Der Schnitzenbaum?" Charlie sings the leading role and the other characters are sung by two Irish bookbinders. I had the extreme pleasure of attending its rehearsal recently, and assure the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST they don't want to miss it.

Get Busy and Keep Busy.

After Congress adjourns there are always idle printers in town. This can be done away with by learning to operate a linotype. Operators are always in demand. Call at the Linotype School, 610 G street northwest, and see the names of people you know who are earning big wages as operators.

COLUMBIA HONORS ITS DEAD

Impressive and Interesting Service at Typographical Temple.

THE DEAD HELD IN REVERENCE

President Johnson's Address—Samuel Gompers Expresses Appreciation of the Event—Hon. E. J. Livernash Delivers Eloquent Eulogy—Choral Service of a High Order.

Typographical Temple was comfortably filled last Sunday afternoon on the occasion of the first memorial service to those members who died during the administration of its present executive, President Joe M. Johnson.

The order of exercises was admirably arranged and the addresses timely. The music was of a high order of excellence and the audience listened attentively to each number.

Samuel Gompers, jr., chairman of the Memorial Committee, presided and introduced the speakers, calling on President Joe M. Johnson, of Columbia Union, who made a brief address in which he called attention to the fact that while Columbia Union was not in the full sense of the word an insurance society, it had paid out $13,000 in the last eighteen months, and had given relief to needy members and their families to the amount of $1,000 in the same period.

Speaking for the Union he said that while we could not bring back the dead we could help smooth their pathway during life by kind words and actions to one another.

President Johnson paid a glowing tribute to the late Amos J. Cummings and George W. Childs, who in life were carried on the honorary rolls of Columbia Union and were considered by its members as worthy to be remembered in its first memorial service.

President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, expressed his great appreciation at the innovation made by Columbia Union in giving public manifestation of the honor it bore to its dead, and stated that it would mark a new era in the ranks of organized labor were other like organizations to do likewise. He extolled the I. T. U. for its progress as an organization in establishing the Union Printers' Home, and said that it was a monument that would stand for all time to its credit.

Mr. Gompers further said:

"There are times when we should leave behind us all that materialism and worldliness which plays so large a part in our daily lives. We should have opportunities to express the feelings and sentiments that are in our hearts. Today very few give the labor movement credit for the sentiment it does possess. But I tell you now that every effort we have made to get more pay, more rights, and more time for ourselves has been that we might enjoy the blessings of our family life and give to our people that which is high and good and noble.

"There is not today any other associated movement that has done so much for the upbuilding of men as the labor movement. It was the much-abused labor organizations that took the children out of the shops and factories and put them in their homes.

"As you know it is the custom of the people of the United States to comemorate the deeds of the soldiers of the civil war. I ask you why they should always be called heroes if those men who died giving their lives for the rights of labor are to be stigmatized as 'hobos?' You live your lives well and do your duty by your fellow-man and you will be heroes. It is better to know how to live than to know how to die."

Hon. Edward J. Livernash, of California, being introduced, delivered an eloquent address, in which he complimented Columbia Union for its thoughtfulness in paying respect to its dead. He was deeply impressed with the spirit of the occasion and spoke with a fervor that carried the conviction with it that his words were as sincere as they were eloquent.

Speaking of the dead, Mr. Livernash said:

"In thinking of your dead, remember that they were humble men, working men, and above all else, union men. In being humble they did right, for honest humility is, indeed, a virtue. It is well also for us to remember that they were working men, for whatever may be said about the dignity of work, we know that the world often forgets that labor is the excellent thing it is depicted to be. We are so forgetful, and nowhere more so than in this prideful Capital of ours. So let us remember the honest toil of the dead.

"But they were union men, and it is for you to remember that. Organized labor to-day holds the highest place it has ever had. Your dead helped to bring this about. And in this action what did they do? They simply assisted in applying the principles of justice to the working world and saw to it that morality was brought to the aid of toil. So in this hour we must remember to be grateful to this little band of dead for what they did to help the general cause."

The service was opened with the invocation of Mr. Philip S. Steele, who spoke fervently of the occasion that called the assemblage together, and asked the Divine intercession for the departed brothers.

The musical program was of an impressive and entertaining nature, being suited for the occasion.

During the evening Wiley H. Davis gave a good rendition of "Open the Gates of the Temple" in a sweet tenor voice, full of sentiment and pathos.

Mrs. L. C. Hover rendered "And God Shall Wipe Away All Tears" in a highly impressive manner, and betrayed considerable feeling in the rendition.

Arthur N. Gardner sang "The Plains of Peace" in a pleasing manner, and in a voice of good range and quality.

A duet by Mr. W. J. Galbraith and Mrs. L. C. Hover was rendered in a highly creditable manner.

The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Alexander Kent, who took occasion to commend Columbia Union for its mark of respect to its dead, and dwelling on the fact that a great good could be accomplished in all organizations where the sympathy of its members is shown in the hour of trouble.

Prof. Jos. B. Caldwell's orchestra rendered the numbers on the program in an artistic manner, while Mrs. Bessie N. Wild was the accompanist to all soloists.

The committee desires to return its thanks to all who assisted in the service, which was highly commended by all who were present.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1903.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

The Manila (P. I) Typographical Union accepted the following statement of a committee appointed to investigate the article printed in the San Francisco Examiner stating that George A. Tracy was discharged from the Philippine government printing office for being prominent in the formation of that Typographical union:

In view of the fact that Mr. Leech has for years been a pronounced advocate of unionism, and investigation by your committee discloses nothing in the correspondence relative to Mr. Tracy's resignation indicative of a departure by the Public Printer from his former principles, we find that the cause of Mr. Tracy's separation from the service was due to sources entirely foreign to those implied in the San Francisco Examiner, and until evidence more tangible than an unofficial interview is forthcoming we feel that simple justice demands this union the exoneration of Mr. Leech from the imputations that have been made against him.

Without taking any sides or knowing enough of the controversy to do so I am constrained to say that this is very much of a "Good Lord, good devil" verdict, partaking somewhat of the characteristics of the Scotch "Not proven." Of course we hear all sorts of reasons assigned as the actual ones, but at a distance of 11,000 miles the straight facts are hard to arrive at, if anyone feels sufficent interest in the matter to worry about it.

Mr. Parry's Citizens' Industrial Association, at a meeting recently held at Dayton, Ohio, set forth its desires and intentions, among which are the elimination of the walking delegate, insistence upon the "open shop," no sympathetic strikes, no restriction on the number of apprentices, opposition to the eight-hour law, refusal to use the union label, the establishment of a "blacklist" (called by them a "labor information bureau where will be kept a tabulated record of all law-breaking and undesirable workmen"), and opposition to the boycott. If all employers were Parrys and should insist upon such a programme as this I would predict breakers ahead for unionism; but it is a merciful fact that most employers see the advantages of trades unionism to themselves and will not help Mr. Parry and his little association. It speaks volumes for the Parry idea of fairness to denounce boycotts and recommend the blacklist in the same breath.

The way Willis L. Hall and some gentlemen who hide behind nome de plume go for my friend Pafflow is rough, but if they stir up his slow-to-anger Slavic blood it is probable that the fur will fly. All this took place because he expressed his doubts as to the availability of linotype machines to do the work of the G. P. O. as well and as economically as it is done at present, basing his doubts on his own experience with the machine. I have been expecting to have my own Hyperion locks combed by these gentlemen who are so anxious to have the bars taken down, and probably will sooner or later. I noticed that in referring to certain well-known publications the type of which is set on machines they did not specify that the machines are linotypes, and as a matter of fact they are not. There is no question that straight matter can be set as well on some monotype machines as by hand—so well, in fact, that even an expert can not tell the difference—but I never saw any linotype work that I could not distinguish as such as soon as my eyes fell on it. The only trouble with the monotype machines is that they have never yet been brought to such a state of perfection as to be economical; but that they will be there can be no reasonable doubt. In my self-appointed position as public mentor I want to call the attention of the gentlemen and others discussing this question to the fact that personal abuse of opponents is only a confession of poverty of argument.

The memorial service last Sunday afternoon in honor of the dead of Columbia Union was one of the best conducted and most perfectly satisfactory functions it has ever been my pleasure to attend. The vocal program was the work of Mrs. Bessie Noble Wild, wife of our "Pucky," and everything on it was well done. The quartet of male voices was necessarily omitted because the participants, by reason of the nature of their employment, had been unable to get together for purpose of rehearsal. The tenor solo by Wiley H. Davis, the mezzo soprano solo of Mrs. L. C. Hover, and the baritone solo of Arthur N Gardner, as well as the duet of Mrs. Hover and W. J Galbraith, which had been substituted for the quartet, were well rendered. Philip S. Steele offered a feeling prayer; Messrs. Joe M. Johnson, president of Columbia Union; Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; Hon. E. J. Livernash, M. C. from California, and the Rev. Alexander Kent, pastor of the People's Church, made eloquent and appropriate addresses, and Caldwell's Orchestra played their numbers most acceptably. Too much credit can not be given to the committee which had the matter in charge, by no means forgetting Mr. Goodkey, who first proposed this tribute to our dead brethren. That the services will be held annually hereafter the success of the initial service guarantees.

At the last meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary the following nominations for officers for the ensuing year were made by acclamation: President, Miss Laura B. Gordon; vice president, Mrs. O. D. Hyler; secretary, Mrs. Nannie M. McMichael; treasurer, Miss Carrie L. Whitehead; sergeant-at-arms, Miss Anna C. Wilson; chaplain, Mrs. A. W. Bowen. The Auxiliary made an appropriation of a sufficient sum to make a Christmas present of a $2.50 gold piece to each member of Columbia Union now in the Union Printers' Home—an act of charity that shows the noble spirit of these earnest women. Special efforts are being made to secure the use of the union label on all lodge printing in ladies' organizations—efforts which were successful with the work of the Daughters of America and the Patriotic Order of Americans. In every way possible union printers should encourage these ladies in their splendid work, which has the advancement of unionism as its sole object, and our wives and daughters should be impressed with the aid they can give by becoming members and giving such assistance as they can.

I recently met Pat Haltigan on the street, looking like a representative of the Gould interests. He told me that his magazine, the National Hibernian (now, I am not sure as to its title, but it is the national organ of the A. O. H.), has reached a circulation of 154,000 and that there is a proposition to change it to a weekly, it now being a monthly. He also told me some other things that I did not know—that Harry Pierce has been promoted to $1,400 in the clerkship in the Department of Commerce and Labor in which he started a few months ago at $1,000; that Dr. George C. Havenner has been made chief of a division in the Bureau of Statistics, and that D. L. Moynihan is prospering in his new job. Hurrah for our fellows!

Frank Lillie is now holding down a mill on the Star. His experience on the metropolitan papers of New York has made a valuable man of him.

* * * *

"Tommy" (Jerome) Kendall has been appointed "stripper" on the Record—that is the job of tying up the dead type for distribution, etc. He was in the Philippines for two years and returned to his old stamping ground because he did not like the climate of Manila. He has much of interest to relate of his experiences there which I will not undertake to tell for him, but says it is no climate for a white man. He left all the boys well and happy—Leech and Jones enjoying better health than ever before, Sam Musick and Jim Alford tickled with their jobs, Gessler chief proofreader, Carl Eckdoll bossing a gang of laborers at the wharves, and everything swimming merrily.

* * * *

President Joe Johnson made all his friends proud of his able and feeling address at the memorial services last Sunday. He quoted very effectively a verse of J. L. Rodier's beautiful poem, "Not Then, But Now," which Mrs. Wild had set to a very pretty air.

* * * *

I tackled a street-car conductor the other day as to the best mode of procedure to get cars run for the benefit of the night workers in the G P. O. and he said that all that will be necessary will be to demonstrate to the company that they will pay and they will be run. I suggested that we might get Congress after them, to which he replied that a member of Congress is the president of the company and that other members are large stockholders, and that they would probably have more influence than we would, which had such an air of probability about it that I did not dispute it. As none of the lines would do me any good if they did run, and I have been doing all this in the interest of my fellow workmen, who probably wouldn't ride anyhow as long as beer remains at its present fairly reasonable price, I don't care to buck against Congress.

* * * *

I had a look through the Specifications Division the other day, and while they are still pretty well bunched they have much better quarters, so far as light and room are concerned, than they had before. The recent promotions there—Hodes, Zeigler, and George Ramsey—all have my fullest indorsement, if anyone has been waiting for that.

* * * *

I don't see any merit in denouncing John L. Kennedy for lobbying (that is what he has been charged with doing) Congress to get machines put in the G. P. O. We have no union law against the use of machines nor against "assisting legislation" looking to their introduction, and as it gives a printer work, and as the longer the coming of machines is delayed the longer his job will last, why be so hateful? Some non-printer, or even non union printer, might have got the job if Kennedy had not taken it. There is a bright side to everything.

* * * *

John F. Connolly and the rest of a committee called upon Congressman A. L. McDermott, the President of the City and Suburban Railway Company, since I wrote the paragraph above on the same subject, and feel much encouraged over the prospect of getting all night service on the lines passing the office, Mr. McDermott having promised to comply with their request if possible. Incidentally he told the committee that he was formerly a printer and had worked at the trade in seventeen States. This encourages me to think that he will give the desired relief, for he probably knows how walking is himself.

The machine might and doubtless would increase the demand for proofreaders and revisers; but how about the "rank and file?" Has the time come when an injury to the many is of no consequence or concern to the few?

It may be positively asserted that some good jobs would not be endangered by the introduction of machines, else at this time a general alarm would be turned in and every mother's son would be instructed to "see" his Congressman at once

Those who are unwilling to allow full and free discussion of policies proposed or threatened fail to appreciate the value of the press or forum as an educative means. There is nothing so very good as to need the protection of secrecy, and an unworthy proposition should be refused that shelter or advantage which it would gain by silence.

"Let well enough alone," "stand pat," and other and similar expressions have served as the slogan against suggested changes, and why may not the injunction include the Government Printing Office, which under its present management and efficiency outclasses and gives employment to more people than any printing office on the face of the globe?

Pardon a suggestion from Shakespeare: "'Tis a common proof that lowliness is young ambition's ladder whereto the climber-upward turns his face: but when he once attains the utmost round, he then unto the ladder turns his back, looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees by which he did ascend." The reader will make his own application.

The principal argument of those who would hasten the introduction of typesetting machines in the Government Printing Office is from the standpoint of economy. It would not surprise us much if these would-be benefactors in their great zeal should yet come forward with a proposition to furnish the machines and operate them without cost to the Government. Think of the saving that would be!

The "Industrial Association" at its recent sitting at Dayton, Ohio, declared against the boycott, planned for securing a tabulated record of "undesirable" workmen, declared against the eight-hour bill now before Congress, and otherwise intimated that they are "again" organized labor, except as conducted along the lines approved by the divinely appointed. D M. Parry is still regarded as the second Elijah of the new movement.

The memorial services at Typographical Temple last Sabbath, under the auspices of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, will long be remembered by those in attendance. The programme was most happily arranged and reflected great credit upon the committee in charge. It was a season for reflection and an inspiration to those who are earnestly devoted to the work of securing still better conditions, both as a present help and as a legacy of value to those who shall come after.

The Standard Oil Company recently made $35,000,000 through an advance of one and one-half cents per gallon on oil, representing, in dollars more than one-half the native population of the United States, and John D. Rockefeller received as his share $11,000,000, or only about one million less than the entire foreign population of this country. We are allowing John pretty much his own way in the oil business and only occasionally refer to his transactions to encourage the poor boys who are just starting out in life.

Third Division.

It goes without saying that Miss Anna Wilson will be a successful candidate for delegate from Columbia union next year.

Messrs. J. C. Keelan, Edgar B. Meritt, E. G. Nalle, and Frank Warren were transferred from this room to the Spess last week.

Are not the powers that be showing partiality in supplying the Spess people with new sticks, while we of the Third Division need them so much?

Dan Hallock, of the ring alley, returned to work the 2d instant, after an absence in quarantine for sixteen days by reason of smallpox in his house.

"Ajax" now defies the lightning from frame 19. W. S. Griffith is his other name, and he looks very much as other men although his name is the name of a Greek god.

Gude, the florist, supplied the committee free of expense with flowers for decorative purposes at the Memorial Sunday services. Mr. Gude deserves the grateful thanks of every printer.

The following have subscribed to THE TRADES UNIONIST since last week: A. K. Williamson, F. R. McFayden, F. N. Hawley, W. S. Griffith. Only 15 are non subscribers. Gentlemen, it is a question of "plain duty."

Would it not be a good idea to paint "First Division," "Second Division," etc., on the doors leading from the hallways to the various rooms in the G. P. O. It is sometimes hard to determine what floor you are on.

We are apprised by "Pard" Julian that a mistake was made when we mentioned that he was in line for a present of a wheel. "Nothing short of an automobile," says the gentleman from Nebraska, "will satisfy me." Those who have the ex-sheriffs interests at heart will please take notice.

As for those who contributed last week to THE TRADES UNIONIST on the subject of type-setting machines, they are probably temporary men who stand a chance of suspension in the spring when Congress adjourns; what more natural than that one or both should make a strong bid for a position as instructor when the machines are introduced?

It is a very remarkable fact that Samuel J. Gompers, chairman of the Memorial Sunday Committee, who is the son of Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, is the grandson of the original Samuel Gompers; and lastly, Chairman Gompers has a little son named Samuel J. Gompers. This makes four generations, each bearing the same name.

Who talks of "race suicide?" Surely nobody in the Third Division would so far forget himself, so long as we can devote an item weekly to the announcement of births. This time it is C. J. McMurray, who proudly informs us that a new girl baby came to his house last Saturday morning. And we have no means of knowing whether the returns are all in yet or not. Meantime, we wish brother McMurray many happy returns of the day. Next!

Doesn't it appear to the reader that "Operator," whose letter about linotype machines appeared last week, is getting just a bit frantic? What was there to kick up such a rumpus about in what Brother Pafflow said? It is a fact that Mr. Kennedy, who openly avows that he is here for the purpose of pushing the introduction of the Mergenthaler machines into the Government Printing Office, was "honored" by Columbia Union in being elected its president.

Those who read in our issue of last week, about the strike of the Structural Iron Workers on all buildings under construction by the Geo. A. Fuller Construction Company doubtless felt deep sympathy with the strikers if they had kept track of the career of the said company. Some illuminating facts, of great interest in view of this last development, were published in McClure's Magazine for November in an article by Ray Stannard Baker.

The Berean Club and Bible Class attached to the Ninth Street Christian Church have issued a neat and attractive booklet of 28 pages, 26 of which are for use by a compositor in recording his daily average. The booklet will be issued free to the compositors in the various offices. The first and last pages contain a time table of services in the various churches of the Christian denomination and of the Berean Club and Bible Class, while at the top of each page appears a text from the Bible. The Club has placed us under an obligation in furnishing us with so helpful a little volume.

There are strange facts connected with the linotype machines. They are "time savers;" they are "economical;" their product is an "improvement" on hand composition; and yet more men are employed after machines are introduced than before. At least, so say those who operate them and who are in a position to know. There are at present about 100 compositors in this division. Suppose 50 machines were to be installed; would it not mean simply an additional appropriation of $3,600 for each machine, or $180,000, with no diminution in the number of workmen? If so, where whould it be to the advantage of the Government to spend the enormous amount of money that would be required to equip the whole plant?

Proof Room Notes.

Not wishing to make two bites of one cherry, I shall make one bite of two cherries and animadvert on the double barreled antagonism which my observations have elicited.

It is very strange, indeed, that both my critics—"Hall" and "Operator"—have suppressed the important and central point that I had made. I said that it was not becoming in a union printer to advocate the introduction of linotypes in the G. P. O. Do my critics contradict the equity of this statement? If they do, let them strike out straight from the shoulder and say so, and not shift the issue to unimportant matters, so far as any purpose in writing the item was concerned. And I want to ask these gentlemen, here and now, if they believe that it is consistent with the honor and obligation of a union printer to advocate an innovation which is bound to injure hundreds of union men? And I shall expect a reply. If they do not answer this simple question let them dry up.

I did not say that the machines could not do good work; I said that they could not do good work at a saving to the Government in its printing office. Any one familiar with the work here knows that, from the character of the copy and the changes that are made in it before the last satisfactory proof is taken, an entire reorganization would be necessary in the methods of the Departments, and of Congress, as well as in the Proof Room, to make the product of a machine acceptable. And it would be difficult and pernicious to make or enforce a rule forbidding or restraining the Department editors from making changes in proofs.

Why should the Government install these costly machines except to save labor? And if labor is saved, will not men and women have to be discharged? I fail, therefore, to grasp any sense or reason in the statement that the introduction of the machines will not displace labor.

Mr. Hall states that he does not wish to boom the machine, being only anxious to prepare the printers for the change! Prepare how? By learning to handle the machine, of course. But if every printer in the office was an operator, how many of them would get the jobs? And what is more, the better prepared all were, the greater would be the number displaced. By Jove, this remedy of "preparation" is Job's comfort.

With regard to "making good," I would beg the "operator" not to lose any sleep in worrying over my personal interests. I shall endeavor to look after them without the charity of aid or sympathy.

Our vice-president, Dan C. Vaughan, has again been honored by National Lodge, No. 12, by electing him by a unanimous vote to the secretaryship. Brother Vaughan is a past master.

The night force hails with delight the proposed change to have the ghost walk in the evening instead of the prevailing unsatisfactory method. Major Clifford will add much to his popularity by this much-needed reform.

Congressman W. O. Smith, representing the 27th district of Pennsylvania, a brother of our own Frank D. Smith, of the Night Proof Room, and himself an ex-employee of the G. P. O., paid us a visit last week, renewing old acquaintances.

Dr. James R. Armstrong was reelected chairman of the Day Proof Room chapel by acclamation last week. The doctor is a man of excellent qualities and has well merited this compliment. I do not believe that Maryland political tactics had any bearing on the result, as has been suggested to me.

The memorial exercises at our Temple last Sunday were the most impressive and inspiring that has ever been my good fortune to attend. Every one who was present must come away with an elevation of both thought and feeling. It should and must become a permanent function of our fraternity. The committee of arrangements is to be highly congratulated for its magnificent work.

Washington is certainly large enough and has night workers enough to enjoy the advantage of a night-car service. Such a service is the crying need of the large night force at the G. P. O. A committee of the "owls" has interviewed Congress on the subject, and the matter is now in the hands of the Hon. Allan D. McDermott, from the Tenth New Jersey district, himself a printer. General Harries, I have no doubt, will lend his aid to this movement.

Prof. Rhodes, of the Night Proof Room, presented me with a neat little blank book for printers to keep their averages. It is published by the "Bereans," a Bible club of this city, and has a verse from Holy Writ at the top of each page. Among other things the book is intended to make printers "good," and it cannot be denied that in this respect the enterprise "fills a long felt want." Personally, I appreciate this gift, although I feel that a turkey, or some other delicacy of the season, would be more apropos.

CHAS. W. PAFFLOW.

Bindery Notes.

This is about the season when the large borrower is inclined to make an assignment.

Johnny Burns worked last Sunday. This relieves him of working any assessment gag next pay-day.

The bindery in the new building is rapidly being brought into proper shape. It will be the largest division of the bindery.

Some of the swells of the Bindery in the new building are indignant because the hat shelves in the new lockers are not large enough for high hats.

The next thing to which the boys will turn their attention is the convention of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, which will meet in St. Paul, Minn., the second Tuesday in June. Delegates will be elected one month in advance of that time. Trot out your candidates.

Specification Notes.

Tuesday morning Miss Edith Hawk, of Columbus, Ohio, was assigned to cases in this room.

The many friends of H. J. Southwick were pleased at his promotion to a clerkship in Foreman Hodes' office. Merit tells.

It is reported that "Our Austin" won $900 on that 100-to-1 shot, Princelet. Well, I certainly hope this rumor will "stand up."

Here's a sad case: A. B. Proctor transferred from the Treasury Department to the Rock Pile! It looks like a case of life. Next!

Captain Hopkins, the old doorkeeper of the Union Building, is with us again. Now the Spess is united, and we no longer fear the collectors.

Edward Coleman and T. R. Puckett, much against their will, were ruthlessly transferred to the outer darkness of the Night Bill Force recesses last week.

The old First Division clock is evidently out of order and ought to be taken down and fixed—or donated to the Columbia line for the H street car service.

The Specification proofreaders have an average of 48 galleys to read now. And to think the editors are marking takes longer than usual! My, but there seems no rest for the Weary!

Several complaints have been made concerning the disappearance of little personal belongings from beneath frames since the removal from the Union Building. These personal effects were safe enough over night.

Capt. Dan Chisholm, of the Document Proof Room (a South Carolinian), and Judge Mabrey, of the Surgeon-General's Catalogue (a Missourian), are organizing a coon-hunting party. I'll bet the limit on these two and give you the field.

Our dear old friend "Pard" Bloomer stated recently that since the Specification Division moved into the Swamp all honest men had to go down town to get a drink at 4.30. What do we care about the others so long as "Pard" continues to remain?

Mrs. May M. Parsons, of the District of Columbia, and Miss Emma F. Conway, of West Virginia, are the most recent temporary appointees. Mrs. Parsons, I understand, can set eighty lines of Spess every hour. They will enjoy a long vacation here. At any rate, we welcome these lady compositors. The gentler sex are easily reckoned our best workers.

Tuesday evening the following "borrowed" printers were "returned" to their respective divisions in the new building: to the First—David T. Lloyd, Geo. C. Furbershaw, Glenn W. Buckingham, W. A. Ball, G. W. Shaffer, and Geo. Terwilliger; to the Second—Thomas J. Galvin, J. H. Swerdfiger, John A. Massey, Jesse W. Morgan, W. S. Cady, and Jesse M. Burton.

Miss Josepha Lange, who signed with the Official Gazette Company at the beginning of the show in the old G. P. O. building, has been promoted from the chorus to "act reading parts," and henceforth will be a lady of quality in the Specification Brainery Company. Miss Lange is considered one of the most popular young ladies who ever graced the Spess pay-rolls, and her co-artists are real glad of her deserved promotion.

It is now the Official Gazette, and no Specification employee dares to even whisper "Side Show" within the "enemy's lines. Its proofroom is neatly situated, partitioned, and furnished. Foreman Hodes—a most competent and obliging gentleman—has surrounded himself with very proficient assistants, while the caseholders of the Gazette are considered among the very best that could possibly be obtained, and a jolly good set they are.

THE TRADES UNIONIST of November 26 contained a highly interesting letter from George Colquitt, who was formerly a valued employee of this division, but is now sojourning in the Printers' Home, Colorado Springs. Georgie is very popular here in Washington and his countless friends rejoice that he is improving in health and hope some day to have him again with us. In the meantime the Specification chapel wishes him a merry Xmas and happy New Year.

The Specification Division lost a particularly bright correspondent when that polished gentleman and scholar, Mr. O. S. Webster—familiarly known in THE TRADES UNIONIST'S columns as "Fudge"—found it impossible to continue in harness. "Fudge's" paragraphs scintilated with good humor and sound sense. Mr. Webster being a well educated man, enjoying great personal popularity, and an ideal unionist, would make a splendid representative in our next annual convention.

I am pleased to acknowledge the receipt of a little "Record Book" for printers. It is adapted for vest pocket service, being just six inches long by three inches wide, and its title page states that it is presented with the compliments of the Bereans, a club and Bible class of young men (I understand composed chiefly of printers). This useful little record book was prepared and printed by a committee, of which Mr. Newsom is chairman, and is very neatly and conveniently arranged, and will be greatly appreciated by the printers of the Government Printing Office.

Last week some friend at Benning wired a Specification man a horse that "couldn't loose—a dead cinch." He was so particular that the name of the plug was withheld in the telagram for fear the telegraph operator would speak the glad tidings far and near and thus cut the odds on this "baby." It was with suppressed feelings that the Specification man spoke the name that was to "earn a bundle" for "popper." But everybody was "on" before 12, and some "got down" good and strong on it. The name? Hands Up! The price? 100-to-1—and it trotted in last in a field of about fifteen.

Among the many "war horses" of the Specification room who have enjoyed long and meritorious record is everybody's friend, Frank McDermott. When a caseholder, Frank was considered one of the swiftest and cleanest; as a "trusty" he developed to such value to the office that he served but a short term before justly earning a promotion as an imposer, which position he now fills. Frank's official duties bring him in close contact with the caseholders, being a sort of general utility man in charge—of everything. He is also very popular, and somehow or other when things "kinder get going wrong," a word or two from "Frank" sets everything right again.

The Specification room is certainly a place where the average printer has to work and work hard. That "forty-eight hundred" looks easy—on paper, and is easy for about half the force—the old employees, who, naturally being fast typesetters, have long ago adopted "systems" which best enable them to "produce the goods." It is of the other half that I especially refer—the "slow" man and the "new." Each morning that "record average" stares him in the face with increased size, for two or three hundred ems "shy" from day to day soon amounts to the impossible as far as catching up is concerned. Notwithstanding this, I believe everyone makes a strenuous and honest effort to "make good," and at the end of a "turn in" where there is recorded an official failure to produce the required number of ems, should—and could truthfully—be written in postscript: W. d. g. and f. s. While you have been dead slow at the Specification case, you have been most energetic in pushing your claims for proofroom, ring alley, and divers "trusty" jobs. You are too good for any of these. Enter ye into the Joo Room!

A chapel meeting was held Saturday in which measures were discussed havink a tendency to suppress the unearthly pounding of the bookbinders on the floor above. One nervous old gentleman declared that when he was a boy books were not bound with a pile-driver, while a sensitive young lady asserted that if those carpenters overhead didn't hurry up and lay the new floor she would die from nervous headaches. A young upstart jarred the meeting by stating that the pounding overhead had been going on for twenty years, and if the printers who had preceeded the Specification people stood it, by golly, others could and would have to. [He was fired into the Side Show as a jabbering idiot]. After taking up the allotted time in cussing the poor bookbinder, a committee of one—Mr. Marschalk—was unanimously elected to present the compliments of the chapel to Captain Ramsey, and request that he take steps to have the noise suppressed or the binders removed. Mr. Marschalk, donning his apparatus, dived into the Captain's office. He soon signaled the life-line. What Mr. Marschalk reported to Mate Melick hasn't bothered the sensitive printers near so much as the consistent and unmistakable hammering and pile-driving on the floor above—which has continued unceasingly, despite the chapel meeting, despite the interview. "O joy!"

"Here we are again!"

Mr. Simeon Johnston, our weather prophet, predicts a cold wave for some time this winter.

Wish I could win $900 on a horse race. But I am so timid in money matters, and I hate to lose.

The memorial services on last Sunday were a credit alike to the Union and to the committee having the affair in charge.

W. A. Griswold has been ill for about two weeks with an attack of "grippe." While he has not returned to work his condition had somewhat improved at last report.

It was a gracious act on the part of the Woman's Auxiliary to instruct its secretary to send a letter of condolence to Mrs. Bennett on the death of her little boy.

There has been quite an improvement in the condition of L. O. Knowles. About this time last year he could speak hardly above a whisper. Now he can howl as loud as any of us. More power to you, Louis.

M. G. Howe and Levi Brown were transferred to the Night Bill Force; S. B. Tilley to the Specification Division, and W. E. Dennison and P. H. Armstrong to Fifth Division. The loss of Mr. Armstrong caused several of the ladies to indulge in poetry.

It was thought by some people of immature understanding that the Lime Kiln Club would not survive changed conditions. Not so. Its members are made of sterner stuff. So far but one weakling has been discovered. Brer. Collins will be given a reasonable time in which to make good or merit the wrath of its membership.

Mr. C. A. Stretch acted as chairman on Saturday—in the absence of E. G. Myers—and he started in by issuing a forceful bulletin against the practice of picking "short sorts" from type and returning it to the "dead" rack. The chairman should always receive the sympathy and support of the chapel in efforts to correct evils of this character.

Nominations for officers for the ensuing year were made at the Women's Auxilliary to 101 at the last meeting, and two of the ladies of this division drew prizes, Miss Laura Gordon being nominated for president and Miss Anna Wilson being nominated for sergeant-at-arms. As there were no other nominees for these offices it is safe to assume that they will carry off the honors.

In the "Swamp" the Gazette has developed into a division, with a foreman, an assistant foreman, eight proofreaders and copy-holders, a copy preparer, makers-up, imposers, laborers, and last, but not least, about sixty typesetters who "do" the work. The foreman is Mr. Theodore Hodes. The assistant foreman is Mr. H. J. Southwick. Both of these gentlemen have been connected with the Specification Division for a number of years working in various capacities, and no doubt will meet and conquor all the requirements of advanced positions. The roster of November 26 had 84 names on it. I can remember when the "Side Show" had but ten or twelve names on its roster, and that is not much more than fifteen years ago.

Night Bill Force.

Thomas R. Puckett and Mervin G. Howe, are late accessions to this force. The "Spess" is the loser.

The absorbing topic of the night workers now is: Will the Major fill our stockings Christmas eve by paying off then instead of the following Monday.

As we dump our bill sandwiches, we hear the familiar words: "What number, pardner?" "Right here, pardner." Lentz is always on the spot to guide you right.

Fletcher Bowden is holding copy in the Proof Room now. Some time ago he scratched the back of his hand and poison—probably lead—set in. It has proved right painful.

In the "Signs of the Times" for December is an exhaustive review of the question of "Capital and Labor," with articles by the most prominent men on both sides. Among them are Otis, Parry, Gompers, Mitchell. Then the question is treated of from the standpoint of Bible prophecy. Some publishing house on Thirteenth street between G and H have them on sale. Read it.

One of the best numbers on the Memorial services program was missed last Sunday, owing to the indisposition of Dr. Perry, a member of the quartet, who were to sing, "Only Tired." Will Burchfield, the baritone is a member of this force, and has a grand voice. Also three of the soloists were pupils of Mrs. Bessie Wild, the accompanist, who is the talented wife of our well-known postmaster, Mr. E. S. Wild.

We are in receipt of a handsome average record book for printers of the G. P. O. It is published by the Berean Sunday School class of the Ninth Street Christian Church, and contains ads of the four churches of that denomination and of the Men's Club of one of the churches, as well as of the class itself. The most remarkable feature is the collection of bible texts—one at the top of each page. This class exhibits Twentieth Century enterprise.

A vote was taken in the night chapels Saturday as to the desirability of getting paid off at night instead of losing a half day in the afternoon. The Proof Room and Record were largely in favor of, but this room was equally divided on the question. A committee composed of the various chairmen will look after the matter. Three years ago, we understood, the paymaster was willing to pay off during our working hours, but too many feared being held up on their way home, and we are not all Oliver Bennetts. What chance would Edgar Bennett have with a couple of burly feetpads?

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. VIII. No. 27. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1903. Price, 3 Cents.

THE MACHINE QUESTION DEBATED

DIFFERENT OPINIONS TERSELY EXPRESSED BY SEVERAL ABLE CORRESPONDENTS.

The Thorne As a Job Creator—A Texan's Experience With the Machine—The Merganthaler Has Proved Its Utility—To Oppose Introduction of Machines Means Retrogression—A Trial of Several Makes Urged.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

I see that some of your correspondents are much perturbed over the question of machines in the G. P. O. and the mooted point seems to be whether their introduction will create more jobs or cause a flurry of white wings.

In my humble opinion it is merely a question of which machine, and through your columns I want to nominate my choice. Machines are like breakfast foods and nose paint, everyone has his preference.

I had a slight nodding acquaintance with a machine once that as a job creator was all the money. It was a very versatile machine, and the perpetrator of it claimed that it could do everything about a print shop but write the editorials and carry a route. Of course it had to have assistants, and my pal and I were elected to do things to the machine.

This machine was approprietely named the Thorne, because it stuck everybody, which is a trait also possessed by some people. It was advertised as "a machine that thinks" and if it thought very hard its opinion of my pal must have been that he was a shine operator.

This particular machine was the first mechanical typesetter that crossed the line into Texas, and was brought to Fort Worth for exhibition at the Spring Palace there about a dozen years ago. It was chaperoned by two very pretty girls from Hartford, Conn., and the Mail, an afternoon sheet that was running opposition to one of Mose Harris' mushroom productions, installed it, more as a novelty than anything else.

Frank Drake was my pal, and every tourist that ever traveled the Texas circuit knew him. Frank figured that if he could get the job as operator he could borrow money, and being blessed with an abundance of nerve he landed the place. The girls were to instruct him, and he, in turn, was to put me wise. I was chief justifier. Ordinarily Frank was a bright fellow, but he needed more coaching on that job than any would be operator has ever received since. He eventually learned to love his teacher and to look wise when the manager was around, and that was about all. One of the peculiarities of the machine was that the letters nearest the grand central terminal station had to be handicapped in order that the letters from the suburbs could get in on time. Frank was a bum handicapper, and none of the letters ran true to form, which made trouble for me. I made him up a dope sheet and had those letters doped out so "you couldn't lose," but Frank invariably spoiled my "good things" and I seldom landed a winner. Just like playing the ponies.

As the machine didn't produce enough type under our ministrations, the management created two new jobs, an official loader, and a general superintendent to watch the wheels go around. We did better after that, and could set about 3,000 an hour if we were feeling good.

One day the manager asked me when I was going to acquire speed. I told him that Drake and I were about the speediest Thorne operators in the State and if he wanted to get more work out of his iron type setter to put on another man. He took my advice and put on two—only they were girls—and we were pried loose from the pay-roll. That was six situations that machine created in less than a month, and I know that it created at least a dozen more before it was discharged. They are using it for a street sweeper even to-day, which shows its remarkable utility, and I suppose is still grinding out trusty jobs.

I am told that these machines are no longer on the market. It may be that the supply of girls run out; but whether they make them or not, it is a machine par excellence as a job creator. One never forgets the Thorne; you are as good an operator ten years after seeing one as you were when it was your constant companion. I am satisfied that with the proper assistance I could even now set 6,400 any day in the week. I have tried to forget it, but its memory haunts me like a creditor.

Far be it from my purpose to throw any hot-air hand-grenades into the ranks of the printers, but some sad day the wagons will back up to the door and commence to unload, and if we are not wise enough to show the representatives of the Government that the Thorne has 'em all skinned, I am afraid that there will be some loading up of unattached printers at the same time. The watchward of Mr. Hall is to "learn the machine." He leaves us in the dark as to which particular machine, so a Thorne for mine. It combines all the qualities that tends to greatness; it makes half a dozen jobs grow where one grew before; it is bright and cheerful looking and an ornament to the craft. Let us all sing its praises until there will be such a grand swelling chorus in favor of the Thorne that will cause the Goddess of Freedom on the Dome to totter, and the law-makers on the hill to wig-wag that all is well with the printers—there shall be none other than the Thorne.

CHAS. O'CONNELL,
Record.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Inexperience in writing for newspapers is the only excuse I can advance—if the brief comments signed "Operator," which recently appeared in your paper, can be construed into abuse. Probably for the reason that I hide behind a nom de plume — cowardly, wasn't it?—I seem to be more generally taken to task than my friend Willis E. Hall, who took the trouble to furnish facts which this writer anticipated were not desired.

Mr. Pafflow says both of his critics "have suppressed the important and central point" that he made; serves notice on Mr. Hall and "Operator" that they are expected to confine their remarks to this point or "dry up," and then tells "Operator" to "lose no sleep worrying over his (Pafflow's) personal interests." I will try not to.

Mr. Kennedy is capable of defending himself, but since there is no alternative other than to answer that which is expected or "dry up," it is my opinion that the gentleman violates no obligation he owes to the Union by doing that which he is alleged to have done, and the opinion that the innovation of machines would injure hundreds of union men is not entertained by all.

Along comes Rhode Island—by the way, is not he Mr. Nome de Plume, also?—a part of whose comments I, in my "frantic" efforts, am unable to understand. Who said Mr. Kennedy was not "honored" by being elected president?

This gentleman suggests that the contributors on the machine question are probably temporary men, who stand a chance of being suspended in the spring. As for myself, Rhodie, I was suspended from the service one spring about ten years ago, and gracefully walked away—as gracefully as I am capable of walking—leaving the big office to struggle along without me, and am now comfortably located on the Post, and the foreman has long since recognized the fact (????) that he can not get along without me, so there is no chance of my displacing any one in the G. P. O.

Now just a word for my old friend Bloomer. I say friend advisedly, for I have long known him through his interesting writings; helped to elect him delegate, beside knowing many of his old friends—"Jy" Ross, "Mike" Walton, and others—and want his influence when entering the race for the presidency. Would not think of combing your dear locks. Come down to the Post some Sunday night and we will explain the difference between a good-natured backcap and abuse. Don't give a rap whether the bars are up or down in the G. P. O. Am not in a position to accept a situation in the big office if I wanted to, for the reason given above. Now, "Pard," I will tremblingly sign my name.

J. H. BRODERICK.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

The probability of the Merganthaler machine being put in the Government Printing Office is giving compositors and proofreaders in the "Swamp" district much concern. It would seem that the Government had really consulted subordinates on the proposition. Probably they have, since so much exhibition of conceited ignorance.

Can it be recalled that the War Department consulted compositors and proofreaders in the Government employ as to the advisability of taking machines to Manila? Hardly. But if advice was sought it must be taken that it favored the proposition. The machines are in the Far East possession, and their success there is perhaps influencing Public Printer Palmer, who is always a practical man, to give them a trial in the big office. A product of the Merganthaler machine—a certain report of 1,200 pages—was recently received here from Manila, and it is such an excellent piece of work that the linotype's capabilities are at once commended by the people in authority in the "Swamp." These are facts and prove absolutely illogical the "argument" that the machine cannot do the work to the standard maintained in the G. P. O.

A reasoning in the matter that has some soundness perhaps is the argument that compositors will be diplaced with the coming innovation. (For awhile, yes.) But did not this occur in other offices in other towns and cities? Certainly it did. And how was it met? In an intelligent manner. Scales of prices were made, and printers quickly adapted themselves to their new condition. And the result? More men are now employed; more printing is done; higher wages are had; a greater number of unions are in existence; the membership has greatly increased and is more conservative and respectable, and the printer, as a rule, is in far better circumstances. To reason further it becomes evident that the longer the innovation of machines is put off, the greater the reduction, if a reduction follows, for each year the force is increased—and a new building was made necessary by this condition.

A certain Mr. Kinsolving is one of the hostile opponents of the machine's entry into the G. P. O. He labors vainly how unwise it would be to have machines in use. He speaks about the various characters and signs required in that office. Yet he fails to note that however difficult the making of the die it can as readily be cut into a brass matrice and its face on the slug will be just as perfect as the type.

One of the reasons the esteemed Pafflow, usually a very sensible and intelligent writer, advances against the introduction of the machines is the fear that "an entire reorganization would be necessary in the methods of departments and of Congress, as well as in the proof room, to make the product of a machine acceptable." His wonderful consideration for the "department editors" will evidently be appreciated by some. Hope so at least. Mr. Pafflow must know that labor-saving machinery is not necessarily a wage-earning destroyer. Let him look into the bindery department of the big shop and observe the many labor-saving devices in use. Do they destroy labor? Did the bookbinders "take up arms" against their introduction? I think not, and if they did it availed them nothing. Did the pressmen decry the innovation of the self-feeders? Not strenuously, if at all. But both trades men adapted themselves to the labor saving machines and made situations to offset the displacement of help by the newer methods of doing work. That is the more sensible way to meet the "iron printer" proposition and it is commended to the better judgment of those who are now opposing with various reasons the advent.

Probably the one cause which will govern the Public Printer to try the machines on certain work in the G. P. O. is to save time—make time is perhaps a better way to express it—in turning out hurried work, and as I understood it there is a steady increase of this class. The higher officials, it is known, desire expediency in printing reports, etc., and the Public Printer, to meet the demands made upon him, sensibly will want a quicker way to do the work. And it must be admitted that he is right in the premises.

Australia uses the machines, Canada also. Many States work is done on the linotype, and hundreds of publications are the product of the Merganthaler. From the viewpoint of practical experience, not as an operator, but as a maker-up, an imposer and locker-up for the electrotype foundry, the product of the linotype is solid substance for type.

Furthermore, the machine is a part of our organization, if for no other reason than the machinist must be a member of the International Typographical Union, and opposition to its introduction in the G. P. O. (that office is no different than a private firm or corporation) can easily be considered a stultification of the advanced position of our parent organization.

Forethought born of intelligence suggests the inutility of opposing that something which experience has demonstrated is of incalcuable value to the printer. JAMES MONROE KREITER.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

It is surprising that anyone should raise the question of whether or no a union man can consistently advocate the introduction of labor-saving machinery, when such introduction means the possible displacement of people earning their living by honest labor. Were that the only way of stating the matter there might be some justification in saying the advocacy of machine type-setting should be opposed. As it stands at present, with fully one-fourth of the members of the I. T. U. making their living at machine work, and such machines having been demonstrated to be successful, it is a conclusion inevitable that every progressive trade unionist should at least not oppose the further extension of this class of work if he cannot absolutely favor it.

The various arguments, fling, etc., in the last number of your paper follow the lines which were marked out centuries ago, and which oppose modern progress. If the argument is to be accepted and followed that the iron printer must not be used because it displaces many laborers, skilled workmen, etc., a few other propositions follow in regular order. It can be said with equally good faith that the folding machines, automatic feeders, perfecting presses, etc., should not be used because they displace many laborers. Proceeding still further in logical sequence, the cylinder press should not be utilized, because it displaces many of the old style hand presses; also the ink roller should be discarded because it makes possible a quicker inking process than the primitive ink ball or sheep's foot. That would restore printing to the stage of progress of Gutenberg's time. Just one more step. The invention of even primitive printing deprived hundreds of scriveners of their employment in writing books, and because of this fact the use of type and printing press should be discarded. In short, if the argument is sound, the entire art of printing should be annihilated, because it deprives millions of the opportunity of making a living as copyists.

One thing is lost sight of in considering the question. Every person engagd in making a living at any occupation must keep up with the latest ideas in his chosing calling. Failing to do this, he must inevitably give place to that one who is progressive and determined to be as near the head of the van of progress as possible. In the Government Printing Office, unfortunately, are many who have looked with contempt upon machine composition, even though it has been a success for at least ten years. True it is that much experimentation has been necessary, and the wants of those publishers needing enormous product at low cost, without the greatest regard to quality, have been attended to first. However, even that field is limited, and the demand there has almost been supplied. The makers of machines are shrewd. For the past several years they have been perfecting their product, until now they have the iron printers of such capacity and excellence as to be able to supply the wants of the most fastidious.

What earthly show has the hand compositor against a machine for speed? Can any printer do better spacing than can be turned out in a solid slug with words separated in absolute uniformity? And again, what can he hope to do against a mechanism that will cast individual type, set and spaced, from 5-point to 36-point, at a speed limited only by the capacity of an adept at manipulation of the keyboard? These are actual conditions to-day. Of course it changes the composition part of the printing business. It is the bounden duty of every person who expects to follow the business to get in line with this alarming state of progress.

No union, nor union man, nor any other man is justified in opposing this progress. That being so, any one, union or otherwise, is acting solely within his rights in every particular in making an effort to extend the use of the most advanced methods in the art of printing. He may regret the temporary discomfort to some individuals caused by the readjustment, but these individuals have themselves largely to blame if they are unprepared.

It has also been urged that change in style of copy and methods of handling the same would be necessitated by the machines, and that it would be cruel, unjust, heartless, or something else awful to require that copy should be furnished in such shape that it could be easily composed. Wouldn't that be a splendid argument to present to Congress? The Solons would shed many salty tears at the pathetic spectacle of copy preparers in the departments being compelled to follow some rules of common sense and grammar in getting manuscript ready for the printer. Their indignation would undoubtedly be raised to a raving pitch at the thought of the insignificant printer protesting against a proof where the changes marked required an entire resetting. No doubt they would prescribe punishment by death for the suggestion of a double charge for composition where matter had to be reset, and "boiling oil" would be the reward for even a thought that the extra printing expense should be paid out of the idiosyncratic official who caused the additional work.

In truth, hardly an employe in the Government Printing Office can be found who will not agree with the assertion that an enormous extra expense is incurred in the Government Printing Office by needless changes. An editor of a medical journal cured this complaint effectually. When asked to send a proof of an article he had it carefully copied by typewriter and allowed the author to read it that way—no other. In this manner he materially reduced his composition bill.

Local considerations have not entered into this matter so far as the writer is concerned. The question is merely whether a union of intelligent people at the capitol of the most enlightened and progressive people on earth can afford to oppose the use of one of the most effective means of diffusing knowledge and assisting progress. If the Washington printers want to make themselves absurd the best way to do it would be to adopt resolutions against the machines, send them to Congress, and then ask the printers in other cities to assist them in the movement. Do the Government Printing Office people dare to take that stand?

It was also asked why the names of the machines capable of doing the wonderful things were not mentioned. A press agent or employe of a business house would not let such a chance slip to get free advertising. It is the rule in newspapers and other journals, and strictly against the code of ethics of publishers to allow gratuitous notice of business concerns in the reading columns. Not being in the service of any machine house, and without desiring to boom any particular one, it was the aim of the writer to keep the names in the back ground. If any machine company wants to boom the merits of its own product it can advertise, and THE TRADE UNIONIST will not be imposed upon by me in giving any free notices.

In conclusion, when a controversy is being carried on, a little pleasantry may keep the parties thereto in good humor and perhaps elucidate meaning more clearly than a plain statement of fact. In the "jollying" process, however, rancor should not enter. If in what has been written by me there has been anything to which exception may be taken, sincere apologies are herewith extended. No reflections of any kind have beeen extended, only a little pleasantry.

WILLIS L. HALL.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

When the industrial history of the present generation is written it will deal largely with two topics—the controlling factors of that history—labor-saving machinery and trades unions. The impassioned historian will, dependent upon his point of view, inveigh vigorously against one or the other. The dispassionate will see that both are factors making for good while doing here and there more or less injury to individuals or to groups of individuals.

It is easy to philosophize when your neighbor is overtaken by a calamity. It takes a stoic to personally encounter calamity philosophically, and stoics are scarce. Hence the natural perturbation of the members of our craft when the last stronghold of the halcyon days of hand composition is threatened with an invasion of machinery and the very probable displacement—in the event the threat is executed—of many of the finest mechanics (yes, artisans) of the older dispensation, and there is great verbal hurrying to and fro and much didactic pro and con—all evoked by a political pot-wolloper with a commercial side line.

But let us reason together, and see if there is not some way of averting the evil consequences of a sudden introduction of machinery into the Government Printing Office without stultifying the craft at large by an apparent attempt to impede progress while yet preserving for the older part of the present generation of printers that haven which they have earned by years of service.

To begin with, opposition to the machine per se will avail little; it may, indeed, hasten its installation. But we can claim, as parties at interest, that it has not yet been demonstrated that the machine—any machine—can do the class of work, in manner befitting the Government, with a sufficient reduction in the cost of output to justify wholesale installation and consequent displacement of competent men.

Can we not demonstrate that?

Bear in mind that there are to-day in the market three distinct types of machines—the Merganthaler, the Monotype, and the Lanston.

May it not be well to suggest that say four of each type of these machines be installed in the Government Printing Office, and the three sets given a fair trial for a year, in a separate division, given all classes of work, place men now at work in the office (or outsiders, if you will) upon them, have a thorough test made under service conditions and the full cost tabulated, and the product thereof placed before the Congress of the United States in comparison with the output of hand composition?

Columbia Union could initiate that test as an act of grace, and it would be made. Then one of two things would happen. Either the blatant claims of the advocates of their wholesale introduction would be made good, or (as I know from a knowledge as wide as almost any man) it would be demonstrated that all things considered there would be either no material saving or the output would not approximate in appearance the present all but immaculate workmanship of our Government publications.

It is well enough to display samples set and reset in cost of time closely approaching hand work, which have

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1903.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

In contrast with the course proposed to be pursued by Parry's Citizens' Industrial Association, or Citizens' Boycott Club, in its warfare on trades unions, is that of a custom tailor who is doing a thriving business down town. Last Spring, at the time the union tailors were struggling with the bosses in an industrial contest, this employer was induced by the chairman of the Contract Committee of the Central Labor Union to enter into an agreement to employ union labor exclusively. The agreement with the union has been so satisfactory that the employer addressed a letter last week to the committeeman from the Central Labor Union, acknowledging the benefits to his business and his entire satisfaction with his relations with the union. Here is a business man doing business with his labor in a business way, just as he deals with the other component parts of his enterprise, and he is level-headed and honest enough to honorably acknowledge its advantages to him.

My admiration for Dr. Alexander Kent, the pastor of the People's Church, which holds its services in Typographical Temple, is unbounded. Here is a man who gave up a remunerative salary and a large congregation in order that he might deal with economic questions as they exist, which no clergyman dares to do if he wants to "hold his job." For a pittance he preaches weekly and performs the duties of pastor to a small congregation, and he deals with the wrongs of labor and the outrages committed by aggregated wealth with all the force of his great mind and his magnificent command of language. The ordinary preacher must truckle to the money power, explain away the condemnation of the rich so often found in the words of the lowly Nazarene, and dwell with especial emphasis on the text, "Servants, obey your masters," or he must step down and out. I can remember the intense indignation in Trinity Church, New York, when a carpenter was elected a vestryman, the fact that our Lord and Saviour was Himself a carpenter and the son of a carpenter being a fact that the congregation was desirous of forgetting. There would be many more real Christians in the world if more real Christianity was preached, instead of the creed of Mammon.

Can any one give a reason, based on the motives which ordinarily actuate mankind, why union men should not boycott—refuse to buy—goods manufactured by those who boycott—refuse to employ—union men? Would any business man buy of another business man who made it known by words or deeds that he would not buy of him? Would any newspaper buy its supplies of a man who refused to advertise in it, though advertising? Would any railroad company buy of a man who, when he had goods to ship, used another means of transportation when that company could serve him as well? Would any one, except a workingman, patronize a man who refuses to patronize him? Would you expect any one, except a workingman, to trade with a man in his line of business when he refused to trade with him in his line of business? These are a few conundrums for those to consider who think boycotting is un-American and wrong.

I hope to live to see the day when it will be in the obligation and the willing practice of all workingmen, except those moral perverts and degenerates who refuse to belong to unions or who betray their solemn promises, to refrain from the use of anything that is not the product of union labor, and in adopting this course organized workingmen will only be doing what ordinary business sense dictates.

Another Government Printing Office professional man has "branched out." Dr. W. L Masterson has removed his office to Connecticut avenue, and I have no doubt that from a business point of view he will find it a good move. Dr. Masterson was for a number of years an employe of the G. P. O., and his success as a practicing physician is a source of satisfaction to all his former associates.

* * * *

John R. McBride, of the Specifications Division, handed me a paper the other day that is another evidence of the business success that attends our boys when they go in to take a fall out of the world. It is the Bluffton (Ind.) Evening Banner, a very respectable-looking machine set eight column folio, with a fair advertising patronage. Its proprietor is George L. Saunders, whom many will remember as working in the Specifications and other divisions of the office a few years ago.

* * * *

Along with others, I recently received a copy of H Y ("Windy") Brooke's Crenshaw County Critic, published at Luverne, Ala. It is an eight-page weekly, with a very respectable advertising patronage, and in many places bears evidence of the strenuous personality of its editor, particularly in the concluding paragraph of an article entitled "Where the Money Goes," being a criticism on county financial management, reading as follows:

"By the bye, if not true this is wanton libel Here is a rare opportunity to send the editor of the Critic to a place where he could engage in making little lumps of coal out of big ones, to the profit of the State of Alabama."

He is making a red-hot paper, and if he keeps on at his present rate I predict that somebody will start something in the shooting line before long. But that is the way to make a paper that people will want to see.

* * * *

William Tipton Talbott has reached the pinnacle of fame, for one of his poems, and one of the best of his very good poems, has been copied by the Record—that is, a Member of Congress incorporated it into his speech. "Republics While You Wait" is the title of it, and it was published in the Post a few days after the announcement of the new Republic of Panama. I think I could say, "Now, Lord, let thy servant depart in peace," if I could be copied into the Record.

* * * *

I have received from Henry Rush Boss, president of the Chicago Society of Proofreaders, a copy of the Stylebook of that organization, and though there are a few things in it that I do not agree with (I can't even make a Stylebook myself that I agree with throughout), it is a very valuable little book to all engaged in printing, and is especially useful in maintaining a degree of uniformity among the readers and compositors of that city that prevents having to learn an entirely new "style" on going from one office to another. Mr. Boss expressed his surprise that we have not a Society of Proofreaders here and asked why it was. I don't know any good reason why we should not have one, and I believe it would do a great deal of good. The Chicago Society meets regularly, and at the meetings papers of an educational character are read and discussions are held on the technicalities of proofreading and cognate subjects, to the great advantage of the members. Shall we have one?

* * * *

Of course I don't know what was on "Cycle's" mind when he gave us that quotation last week about "young ambition's ladder," wherein it is narrated that on reaching the top "he then unto the ladder turns his back, looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees by which he did ascend," but my first thought was that perhaps some newly created foreman had stepped on his neck.

* * * *

The members of the Record proof room got together one night last week and decided that they were a chapel, proceeding after much travail to elect Albert Reid chairman. Then word came that Joe Johnson, the President of the Union, wouldn't recognize "the young republic," at which a great deal of disgust was expressed, bad blood stirred up, and bad language used. There seems a disposition at this writing to carry the matter to the Union, where, owing to the great natural popularity of proofreaders, we will probably get it where Adam carried his apple.

* * * *

Frank K. Foster, of Boston, is in the field for delegate from the I. T. U. to the American Federation of Labor, and if the members of this union can see their way clear to indorse him for that position I think they will not be making any mistake He has been a member of the I. T. U. for twenty-seven years and has held numerous local offices. He is at present and has been for the last seven years chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor and was secretary of the Federation of Trade and Labor Unions of the United States and Canada in 1883 84. He is a well known writer on labor subjects, being the author of "The Evolution of a Trade Unionist," "Trade Union Ideals," "The Philosophy of Strikes," etc; has for a number of years edited and published a labor paper, and has delivered trades union addresses in over twenty States. I shall be very glad to see Columbia Union indorse him.

R. E. Johnston, whom many of the older readers will recall as a proof reader in the main proof room from 1894 to 1897, and who after that was for several years in the Specification Division resigned last April, and after spending the summer at his old home in Virginia he went to Columbus, Miss., where he bought a two thirds interest in a drug store, the name of the firm being Johnston & Caine, doing a wholesale as well as a retail business, carrying a stock valued at $7,500 Columbus was the home of Mrs Johnston and is a city of 8,000 inhabitants. Mr Johnston will be remembered as a very gentlemanly young fellow and has many friends here who will be glad to learn that he has "branched out" for himself and will wish him all sorts of prosperity. A clipping from the Columbus (Miss) Commercial reads as follows:

Mr. R. E. Johnston, recently of Washington, D. C., has purchased the two-third interest of Dr. R. S. Curry in the firm of Curry & Caine, druggists, and after the first of December the style of the firm will be Johnston & Caine. Mr. Johnston is an elegant gentleman and a thorough business man, and the new firm will retain that reputation for honesty and integrity heretofore borne.

NEW YORK LETTER.

Newsy Items From A Prominent Member of Big Six.

Lewis Kreigner and Anthony Walsh, both members of No. 6 for over 30 years, died last week.

"Bill" McCabe, of the Herald, is devoting his spare moments to agricultural pursuits at his suburban home.

The Unionist, Rood & Sullivan editors, is increasing in circulation. They propose in a short time to change the name to the Union Printer.

Friends of candidates for International offices are already sending literature to New York. Frank Foster of Boston has his cards among members of No. 6, for delegate to A. F. of L.

Frank Morrison has also many friends who stand ready to work for him if he runs again. At a social gathering last week his candidacy was discussed and it was decided to place him in nomination at the February meeting of No. 6.

Local union politics are beginning to get active. McCormick will be a candidate for President for the second time, Healy for Secretary for the eighth term, and many old war horses are anxious to go as delegate to St. Louis.

Nearly all the papers have printed their Christmas numbers. From an artistic standpoint they eclipsed former years. A large increase in advertisements is also noted. For two weeks preceding the issue 12 and 14 hours per day was nothing unusual for the printer. Business as usual will chop off until February 1.

Henry McMahon, of Boston, was in the city last week to attend the funeral of his mother-in law. Henry is an old New Yorker and is being boomed for the Presidency of the I. T. U. His indefatigable efforts as President of Boston Union and I. T. U. organizer for the New England States has won him many friends and warm admirers.

A type making machine called the Compositype, which produces type from 6 to 36 point in a finished state is now in operation on the Herald, World, Journal, Daily Telegraph, J. J. Little & Co, Williams Printing Co., Economist Textile Co., Blanchard & Co., and many other prominent New York printing establishments. It is a simple and effective machine by means of which they can produce that class of type for which no composing or type setting machine was ever contemplated. It casts between 4 and 5 pounds per hour at a cost of less than 15 cents per pound, and any face of type in existence can be produced. It permits publishers and book and job offices to have a type foundry in his composing room. Machines will be shipped to intending purchasers on 30 days trial without cost. The price is $1500 and the matrices $20 per set. The Herald and Journal has been using the machine less than four months, and both have already saved the price of it in the type produced Messrs Oviatt and Farrell, St Paul Building, New York city, are the New York State representatives.

AFTER-DINNER DILATIONS.

By the death of Daniel Grady his every friend (and they were legion) will feel an irreparable loss. He was a man of strong convictions, yet moderate of speech and without reproof. He was a zealous and consistent union man, a helpful member of society, and as such his influence will remain as a pleasant reminder of a life well spent.

Anent the prospective choice of delegates who will represent Columbia Union at the next annual convention in St Louis, the name of Miss Carrie Whitehead has often been mentioned and with general approval, and Mrs. Nannie McMichael, the very efficient secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary, is likewise entitled to suggestions which place her in the list of those specially qualified and available.

The Washington Post could scarcely give a greater exhibition of charitableness than by allowing space for the gibberings of Lawyer Birney, who every now and then gives vent to an overwrought imagination and relates some of the horrid dreams he has had concerning some things which pertain to the labor movement. The greatest surprise that could possibly come to Lawyer Birney would be for some one to bring him to a true understanding of how little he knows of what is being accomplished in the world of labor or how impossible and impracticable it would be to confine those efforts and make them conform to the limits of his very narrow understanding.

Why not 5 per cent interest on your money instead of 2 per cent?
Our plan is slightly different from that of banks, but the vital fact that we pay interest and allow withdrawals on about the same terms as saving banks and offer the same sort of security, makes our 5 per cent interest payment very attractive.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Down Town.

Warren C. Browne, of Buffalo, N. Y., late editor of the New York Printer, was in this city last week on business. Mr. Browne is well known in the printing trade, having represented New York Union, No. 6, at the Colorado Springs convention.

A. R. Nathan, of California, has returned to the city, after an absence of eight months in Sacramento, where he had charge of the proof room in the State Printing Office at Sacramento. Mr. Nathan now signs the payroll in the Fifth Division, G P. O.

For Rent.

One or two furnished or unfurnished rooms with private family; with or without board; steam heat; convenient to G. P. O.; 29 M street N. W.

Second Division.

Have you seen Gould's new rule case? It's a dandy. Go and take a look.

F. H. Jones returned to work last Saturday after several days' seige of sickness.

P. J. McAuliffe, our rule man, is spending his annnal vacation at his home at Valparaiso, Ind.

And Bro. Eccles lost his quarter. Moral: Never talk back to the chairman or refuse to do his bidding.

Colonel Bailey has been suffering from an attack of rheumatism during the past week, but is now on the mend.

Hank Allen, our genial and most affable bank man, met with quite a serious accident last Saturday by coming into a "head-on-collision" with one of the large doors of the new building.

The temporary detail which was sent over to the Spess, a couple of weeks ago returned to this division perfectly satisfied to remain members of the Second Division. "Resurrected," was the way one of them expressed the change back to this diviston.

Mr. Kinsolving's article on machines in the G. P. O. in last issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST was the ablest of its kind that we have ever read. It was logical and sensible throughout, and proved conclusively, it seems to us, that machines are not practicable in this office.

The Second Division Symposium closed a very successful term of business the other day. The organization enters upon the ensuing term with flattering prospects for the future. We congratulate the officers upon their excellent business methods and bespeak for them another excellent record.

Nat Watts took twenty days' leave last Thursday and hied himself Westward to the busy Western burg of St Louis. Rumor had it that Nat will not return home alone. But, pshaw, this same thing was floated on Nat two years ago and he is the same dry old batchelor still. It will take more than rumor to convince us of anything serious this time.

The average books of the Bereans' Bible Class of the Ninth Street Christian Church, which was fully described by other correspondents in last week's issue were distributed in this division last Tuesday. The book neatly arranged and as a record to keep a daily average in is a very handy article for a printer, besides the Bible quotations, which appear at the head of each page, are a wholesome reminder of holy things.

Although the Second Division Assurance Association is a recent organization, having been organized only about a year, there is no other organization of like character in the G. P. O. with a better record. There is no doubt but what a large share of the past year's success and confidence which the organization has succeeded in inspiring is due to its excellent staff of officers. All have proved themselves worthy and able, meriting the confidence and esteem of the membership. As an expression of this esteem the association re-elected all the old officers for the ensuing term. The association began business December 22, 1902, and closed the first year's accounts on December 1, 1903, paying off its dividends on December 7, 1903, each member receiving the handsome return of $9.85, which we understand is considerably more than any other organization of like character in the G. P. O. was able to declare. There is no doubt but what the Second Division Assurance Association is on solid and substantial footing, and we extend to it our most hearty congratulations

Third Division.

Edward J. Hall is back at work after a siege of sickness. We are glad to have him with us again.

We regret our inability to report any increase in the census for the current week. There surely ought to be a couple of boys to match those two new little girls.

It was refreshing to read Mr. Pafflow's answer to his critics last week. He has the spirit of a true unionist, and believes as we all ought to believe, in the greatest good for the greatest number.

Titus F. Ellis, who was a member of the Committee of Arrangements for the I. T. U. Convention last summer, and who is known to every printer in Washington, is a candidate for delegate. His campaign manager for this division is Chairman Wm. N. Goldstein.

A program of the Memorial Service held on the 6th instant by Columbia Union was sent to President Lynch, of the I. T. U., by Mr. Jos. E. Goodkey, who originated the idea of a Memorial Service in Washington. President Lynch's answer was as follows:

"DEAR MR. GOODKEY:

"I am in receipt of your favor of December 9, with copy of the program of No. 101's memorial service inclosed. I think the idea of local unions setting aside a day upon which to hold a memorial service in honor of departed members is a splendid one. I shall undoubtedly use this subject for an item in the president's column in The Typographical Journal in the near future.

"With best wishes, I am,
"Yours fraternally,
"JAMES M. LYNCH."

We now need thirty five men to make the full number of slugs the division is capable of accommodating. We have seventy six compositors, including the correcting alley, rule man, and folio man. The complete roll of the division, including everybody from foreman down to laborer, foots up to 109 persons. Of these, 21 are temporary men, all having been appointed at a comparatively recent date. Their names follow: Paul M. Wallace, Harry W. Arthur, James A. McCarthy, Walter S. Griffith, John H. Saunders, William Y. Clarke, Willis L. Hall, Henry D. Wadhams, Robert Robinson, sr., James B. Huss, Joseph I. Keefer, J. G. Hickok, Arthur S. Morgan, H. T. Irwin, Dale C. Sheriff, Nathan W. Klopfer, Wm. D. Thornton, Eugene Strohmeyer, Wm. H. Harrison, Walter L. Brooks, James F. Stewart.

There was unusual wisdom displayed when the men in this room were assigned to their frames. The two sides of the room balance so nicely. To be sure there are but twenty men on the south side, and fifty-seven on the north side. (This sounds like a pickle ad, but it is merely a coincidence.) What we were about to say is, that although there are included in that noble fifty-seven such men of brain, brawn, and bigness as Max Knoble, J S. Garner, R. F. Julian, and Walter S. Griffith ("Ajax"), the room stands perfectly balanced with twenty on the other side; for "Blood" Thornton is one of the twenty; and this is probably the reason why the building don't sag a trifle on the Jackson alley side. And that reminds us. A day or two since, as Pard Julian moved ponderously and majestically toward the bank to empty his "take," he said, "There's goin' to be a duel!" "A duel? what about?" we asked him. "'Blood' Thornton called me a balloon!"

A BIT OF ALL SORTS.

The type founders are certainly putting up a good fight.

It must tax the Post and Times press facilities to get out those Sunday editions. A seven-day newspaper job is no cinch.

There is a bright little chap selling the Saturday Evening Post in the office every week who is a favorite with everybody.

The Inland Printer's technical school in composition and presswork is showing handsome results, and is doing a great work.

The folly of incorporating trades unions has been demonstrated by the court's decision against the Chicago union of press feeders.

The December Typographical Journal is a splendid number, and Johnny Bramwood is displaying editorial management of a high order.

Good job printers can command top prices here evidently. An employing printer told me last week he would not hesitate at $25 for the right kind of men.

The photo-engravers are doing some very excellent coarse-screen work these days, 65-to-the-inch being apparently just about the thing for newspaper work.

Mr. Hearst launched his Los Angeles Examiner on the 15th, and 20,000 union men in that country welcomed his advent into General Otis' territory by a parade.

Billy Garrett thinks the late A. F. of L. convention the greatest ever held, and is loud in his praise of the ability and hospitality of the union people of Boston.

There is some mighty aristic letterpress poster work put up on the walls nowadays, some of it coming up fully in design and coloring to the lithographer's art.

Foreman Robinson, of the Proof Room, has just about the swellest quarters ever furnished members of the printing crafts. Charley says his ambition is satisfied.

Philadelphia seems to be a Jonah town for strikes, I can't remember one of any importance to be won in that city. The latest failure is the strike of the newspaper pressmen.

A two-dollar and a half gold piece is the Christmas present sent to each of the Washington inmates of the Home by the local Woman's Auxiliary. What a glad heart it will give those poor fellows, and how commendable a thing it is for these ladies to do.

Why could not a club be formed by the employes of the G. P O. A club house secured and fitted up with reading room, billiard room, buffet, etc., and as successfully managed as some of the clubs down town. I believe it could and hope to see the effort made.

There is a decided improvement in the style and execution of the ball and entertainment hangers and programs put out in this city the past couple of years. The label is largely responsible, and there is evidence that committees don't always look for the cheap man when giving their orders.

The new press for the Congressional Record has been set up and proved in the Hoe shops, in New York, and Mr. Ricketts went over last week to see her run The press will have double the capacity of those now in use on the Record, and will be an up-to-date machine in every respect.

If there is no police regulation forbidding it, the heads of departments should themselves prevent the gathering about the exists of all manner of distressing-looking crippled beggars each day. No doubt some are worthy of charity, but the majority are simply disgusting mendicants, and should be suppressed.

Is there another city of the size of Washington where the merchants patronize the ad. columns of the newspapers as they do here? I don't believe there is. The Sunday edition of the Post was fifty two pages in size, the Times had fifty; and Saturday's Star had forty; and the proportion of advertising was equal to that of the leading New York and Chicago papers.

Another year's experience in the management of the relief associations in the G. P. O. has demonstrated the wisdom of having them formed in and confined to the various divisions of the office, the disparity in the dividends paid between the larger ones, whose membership covers all the different divisions of the office, and the smaller ones, whose membership is confined to one division being so great as to require no further argument.

"Booth" Thomson, who represented Cleveland here at the convention, I see by the Jonrnal, has gone to San Antonio, Texas, to reside. "Booth," Pat. O'Grady, and Mike Williams were chosen as a group of representative veteran printers by the Star when here, and the picture was a superb one. I had not seen either him or O'Grady for twenty or more years, and we had some fine old-time "joshing" matches.

Ex-President Martin Witter has been made chairman of the St. Louis Convention Committee. Mr. Witter was one of the ablest and most efficient officers the I. T. U. ever had, and his selection assures the success of No. 8's entertainment. He is the man who stemmed the tide when the Knights of Labor sentiment was running away with so many trades-unionists, and who checked Martin Irons in his drastic effort at compelling all unions to go out in sympathy with the great Southwestern railroad strike.

The Union Relief Association pays a dividend this year of $10.35; the G. P. O., a little over $8; the Equitable, something in excess of $7, and the Columbia, $7.55. The Job Composing Room, the Job Bindery, and the Third Division, I think it is, each have an association of their own, and their dividends were in excess of that paid by the Union, and I venture the opinion that each of them paid proportionally as large legitimate benefits as the older associations, the difference being in the economy of management and the more intimate knowledge of the membership.

A whisky still is so called because the moonshiner has to work on the quiet.

ALLIED BUILDING TRADES.

Meeting of December 15.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades was called to order at 8 15 p. m. Tuesday evening by Chairman Wells.

Roll call showed presence of 23 delegates from 19 unions.

Minutes of the previous meeting read and approved, after correction of word "suspended" being used in reference to action at last meeting in respect to Plumbers Union No. 5, Marble Workers Union No. 5, and Marble Workers Helpers No. 33.

CREDENTIALS.

From Paperhangers Union, No. 420, certifying D. W. McGee, vice Rodier.

The credentials were received and the delegates seated.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Plumbers Union No. 5, asking for information in regard to action of Council in manner of their suspension. Secretary was instructed to forward information desired.

From Paperhangers Union, No. 420, asking that strike on Duehay and Schneider job be called off. Filed.

From C. W. Winslow, secretary of Central Labor Union, notifying the Council of action of that body in taking theaters from unfair list and placing Woodward & Lothrop on the unfair list.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Auditing Committee reported that they had examined the books of the secretary and found them correct. The report was received and ordered spread upon the minutes, and a copy sent to all the unions affiliated with the Council.

Secretary Ratigan reported from the Central Labor Union.

The Business Agent submitted a report of his transactions for the week past, which was received.

ROLL CALL.

Bridge and Structural Iron Workers reported progress on Fuller job.

Paperhangers asked priviledge of the floor for a committee from their union. Granted.

The chairman of the committee, B. N. Friel, stated that their union had held a special meeting and appointed the committee to visit the Council of Allied Building Trades and ask that the strike on Duehay & Sons and Schneider be declared off.

Delegate Winslow moved that the communication from the Paperhangers be taken from the table. Carried.

It was moved that the request be denied. Carried.

Carpenters, 884, stated that the national officers of the Brotherhood and the Amalgamated Carpenters are in session at Buffalo, and asked whether this body would stand by the Brotherhood.

Delegate King moved that the Council wire the national officers of the Amalgamated Carpenters at Buffalo to call their men off struck jobs here, and that the secretary write the Executive Council of A. F. of L., in regard to the same.

A substitute prevailed that a committee of three consisting of Delegates Reilly, Wells, and Ratigan, with President Sherman, of the Central Labor Union, wait on the Executive Council of A. F. of L. and lay the matter before them.

NEW BUSINESS.

Delegate King moved that the secretary notify the Central Labor Union that Plumbers' Union, No. 5, Marble Workers Union, No. 5, and Marble Workers' Helpers, No. 33, have been suspended from the Council of Allied Building Trades, and ask that similar action be taken by the Central Labor Union until the unions mentioned make amends.

In the discussion that followed Delegate Reilly opposed the motion, while Delegates Johnson, Ratigan, King and Malone favored the motion.

Delegate Winslow moved to amend by including all building trades represented in the Central Labor Union and not affiliated with the Council of Allied Building Trades.

Division being called for and roll call demanded, resulted—ayes, 16; nays, 3.

The original motion as amended was then adopted.

Women's Bindery Union.

The reception and anniversary held on Tuesday evening, December 8, at Typographical Temple, was a decided success.

The ladies in charge prepared a program for the evening that was thoroughly enjoyed.

Hon. Edw. J. Livernash, of California, delivered the address of the evening, his subject being "Unionism." He was greeted with applause as he proceeded with his address, which was delivered in a scholarly and able manner.

Mrs. Ellen J. Foster spoke on "Organization," and eloquently portrayed the share that women have taken in life's work to better the condition of all mankind.

Mrs. Charles Pepper responded to "Women Abroad," dwelling on the changed condition of the women of this country as compared with Europe and Asia.

Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood gave a pleasant talk on the general good of organization to women, and spoke encouragingly of the progress made in the past decade in that direction.

Mrs. Hannah Sperry, District president of the Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke entertainingly of the work accomplished in the District and hope for still further success in the future.

Mr. W. B. Hyde, ex President of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, acted as chairman of the meeting, and by his ready wit and accomplished manner placed all at ease in the assemblage.

During the evening Messrs. F. W. Seyffert, James Hogan, Percy Loud, Furbeshaw, John A. Wiedman, B. Spellbring, and McEnaney rendered solos and instrumental music, which were enthusiastically received.

At the conclusion of the entertainment dancing was indulged in and the ladies furnished light refreshments to their guests.

The committee in charge desire to convey their thanks to all the gentlemen and ladies who so kindly assisted in making the reception and anniversary a success.

Christmas Cigars.

The alleged funny writers of the newspaper world are constantly working the old story of the good wife buying "punky" cigars for her better half, but like all stories it is about half fiction.

In making purchasers of cigars or tobacco for the lovers of the weed we can commend the establishment of H. T. Offterdinger, 504 Ninth street northwest, who has the largest and cleanest factory in the city, employs all Union labor, making by hand the finest grades of Havana and domestic cigars, giving careful attention to every detail in order to give his customers the best value for their money.

The leading brands from this model establishment are Deer Head, Offte's Bouquet, After Dinner, and Pluck, all carrying the blue label on the box, being superior in quality, workmanship, and purity than any other cigar on the market at the price. They are home made, Union made, and the best for the money.

McFadyen, of the All-Printers, was high man for that team, making 195 in the second game.

been underlaid and overlaid on the press because of the different heights of slugs at different castings. But service conditions alone can demonstrate a proposition of the magnitude proposed.

And morover, why should one machine be chosen at the expense of others merely because the one has present political backing? We can tell the Printing Committee a thing or two in this connection—for instance, of those hundreds upon hundreds of book-typewriters, which the erstwhile grafters foisted upon the postoffices and which are now clogging the cellars of the offices the length and breadth of the land.

If the captious shall urge that this proposition of a trial involves delay of a year or two, and is consequently a matter of craft selfishness, we can answer that the country can well stand a slight postponement—much better than we can stand any general displacement from our situations—though I abate not a jot or tittle of my position that machinery will eventually redound to the benefit of the craft. But if it is to come, it should and must come gradually, being installed—if found to be fitted to the work—only in such measure as the increase in the work and the dearth of hand compositors shall warrant.

Posterity owes us a heavy debt now, and while we are willing to do all in our power to reduce its tribute of toil to the world we should not be called upon to do it in such manner that we will have to sacrifice scores upon scores of our fellow-men.

If we are going to sacrifice the quality of Government work to quantity, at least let it be done gradually.

CONTRACT COMMITTEE.

Delegate Dietrich reported that Central Labor Union contracts had been secured from all theaters in the city, except the Empire, and that that house would sign during the week.

The committee reported progress on other matters before it for consideration.

Bindery Notes.

A new relief society has been formed among the bookbinders in the new building.

It was very pleasing to witness the smiling faces when Jim Fogerty paid out the pro rato for the G. P. O. Relief.

Ben. Sollers, a recent appointee from Baltimore, stole a march on the boys and went down to Alexandria, Va., and got married. The bride is also a Baltimorean.

George Barnes had his hand badly crushed and burned on a stamping press in the old building. It was feared at one time that he would lose the hand, but fortunately such is not the case.

While Wm. C. Connors was taking his customary stroll one Sunday afternoon recently, he was seen to stop and shake hands with two well-dressed men on Connecticut avenue. Upon being asked who they were your correspondent was informed that one was the new Mayor-elect of Greater New York and the other Charles F. Murphy, the successful new leader of Tammany Hall.

—DAVID GILLIN.

Charley Hawkes, First Vice President of the I. T. U., was recently sent to Cuba in the interest of the organization.

George Barnes had the misfortune to get his hand caught in a stamping press recently. Fortunately no bones were broken, but the accident was quite serious at that.

The job offices of this city appear to be busy, several of them running over time. I know of three offices who have put in new cylinder presses recently, and Washington is getting to be quite an up-to-date printing town.

It is evident that the various councils of the National Union have changed the style of entertainment this year, and the fellows who "just laid for" a chance at the free beer and "trimmin's" will have to seek some other channel.

Dave Moran has returned from New York, where he was called recently to attend the funeral of his mother. Mrs. Moran was an old and respected resident of the Lower East Side, where Dave was born, and where she had always resided.

During the publication year just closed there were printed by the Specification Division, Government Printing Office, 31,165 specifications of patents, 1,866 trade-marks, and 536 design patents, a total of 33,587. This is an increase of 4,000 in the matter of patent specifications alone over the year 1902, the largest heretofore in the history of the Patent Office.

Senator Hoar wants Record printed in larger type. The Record is quite a bulky publication now, but if the text were increased to 10 point and the extracts, etc., to 8-point, I much fear some of our lawmakers would soon find that leaves-to-print would be curtailed to an extent as to make the increase in size of type very unpopular.

Some recent trouble in the stereotype department of the New York Herald resulted in the office fully sustaining President Freel and the disciplining of the superintendent. James Gordon Bennett has had a great deal of trouble through selecting "pinheads" for foremen and superintendents, and it is nearly time for him to recognize that fact.

The December volume of Specifications comprises 6,079 pages, by 150 pages the largest volume ever issued. Taking into consideration the fact that the Spess Division was moved to the "Swamp" during the run of this volume, it will readily be seen that the force has had to hustle; but with the increased facilities, it is believed anything the Patent Office wants can now be handled.

The press feeders strike in Chicago has resulted in the Typothetæ offices putting in girl feeders, and they are claiming not only less friction in their press-rooms, but an increased output as the result. The majority of pressmen would, I believe, in most cases prefer the female feeder, as the average press boy is a pretty chesty article, and when he has a strong union like that one in Chicago at his back the pressman's task is not a bed of roses by any means.

A handy vest-pocket manual of information, issued by a well known local roller-maker, is much in demand in the press-room of the G. P. O. Finley Hayes says its the best thing of the kind he has ever seen, and "Huge-E." Webster gives it his unqualified indorsement. Charley Schulte is going to present John Cunningham with a copy as a Christmas token, and Jim Furbershaw says he will mortgage that new house he is buying on the indiscreet plan but what he will have a copy.

In the discussion in the Senate as to the appearance of the Record, Senator Gallinger was the one referred to as having a practical knowledge of printing. He and Senator Hansbrough are, I believe, the only printers in the Senate, while a few years ago there were quite a number who pointed with pride to the days when they handled the stick and rule. In the House, too, the same condition applies, there being only two or three practical printers, where some years ago a score or more could be gathered in that body.

Why all this fuss and feathers about machines in the G. P. O.? If the Public Printer desires to put in the machines to-morrow what is to prevent? Surely the union could not prevent their use if it would, and would not, I mean if it could, for their control in all or nearly all the offices in which they are used has been a great factor in strengthening the I. T. U., and for the local union to attempt to block the use of the machine in the G. P. O. would be an act of insanity the typographical unions are not permitted to indulge in.

The work of the Specification Division during the past year has increased fully 25 per cent and with the limited share permitted at the Union Building it was a herculean task for the force to get out some of the immense weekly issues on time; but that it was accomplished, and well done and appreciated by the authorities of the Patent Office, the following will show:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., December 18, 1903.

MY DEAR CAPTAIN RAMSEY:

I have your note of the 17th instant, summarizing the work done during the year 1903 in the matter of printing specifications, etc., for this office. It is simply immense; and it all has been done promptly, accurately, and courteously.

Your division and mine have traveled side by side many a year, and the pleasant and helpful relations existing between them have contributed in no small degree to the gratifying results which we have found in closing up a year's work.

This has been our hardest year; but the work has been accomplished, and I wish I could convey to you in adequate terms my appreciation of the efforts of your division to have it so successfully accomplished; but I can supplement what I say by an expression of the views of the Commissioner of Patents in a note addressed to me yesterday, a copy of which I inclose, which will show to you and your people that this office is fully cognizant of, and duly appreciates, the ability and efficiency of that branch of the Printing Office with which we are so intimately connected.

Very truly, yours,

J. W. BABSON,
Chief Issue and Gazette Division.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., December 17, 1903.

MR. J. W. BABSON, Chief of Issue and Gazette Division.

DEAR SIR: I have read with much interest the letter of Capt. W. R. Ramsey, Superintendent of the Specification Branch of the Government Printing Office, describing the volume of work performed for this Bureau by that office for the year just closing. The figures are enormous; and I assure you that I am very much impressed with the important part of our work for which we are dependent upon them, as well as the excellence of their work in this difficult class of printing. It is as pleasant as it is remarkable that the errors are kept down to the small number found at the present time, and this result is due to their efforts and those of your own division. I cannot imagine a more difficult class of work than that which patent specifications constitute; and I only hope that the Patent Office will always be able to enjoy such competent aid in this portion of its work as that which it enjoys at the present time.

I should be glad to have you accept for yourself and express to Captain Ramsey my sense of obligation in this regard.

Yours, very truly,

F. I. ALLEN,
Commissioner.

Proof Room Notes.

Bro. A. L. Patterson, who is president of the Unity Club, met a sad assembly when the club convened last December 14. Mr. Proctor, of the Civil Service Commission, was to deliver the lecture. For two years he had been prevented by unforseen circumstances from filling a like engagement. This time sudden death intervened.

Bro. A. H. Chase, of the Day Proof Room, delivered a lecture at the Men's Club in Northeast Washington a week ago last Monday evening on the immenses ubject of "Humbug" or rather, "The Age of Humbug." The poetic gift of imagination is not necessary to handle this topic. It is a characteristic of the times which one who runs may read—and write.

No one who reads the papers can fail to see that the battle of labor is getting warm and reaching out all along the line. The treasuries of the unions are in danger from judgments by the courts now, and it may be in order to think of some way of dividing the accumulations of our union among the members, which they could invest in a course at a linotype school.

Bro. E. H. Thomas, of the Night Proof Room, who has graced the chapel as chairman since time where the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, served individual notice on the gang Saturday night that the time for a re-election had "came." It is needless to say that he has been re-elected by acclamation to serve until he succeeds himself. Congratulations are in order.

The Record proof room boys could find no one willing to assume the responsible duties of chairman of that chapel. They evolved themselves out of the difficulty by ascertaining the choice of each member as to his preference, without any nomination. And the lot fell upon Bro. Albert Reid, who appreciates the compliment.

To call a trades union a trust and compare it with corporations which are organized in the interest of capital, as the daily press has fallen in a habit of doing, may cater to the prejudiced and deceive the ignorant; but its purpose is too aparent to deceive the honest-minded and intelligent man. The union is founded for the protection of individuals, as human beings, who, in order to keep alive must have for themselves and families food, clothing, shelter, and fuel. The next prime object is the relief of distressed members. Thus it is founded on humanity and religion. Is the commercial trust founded on this ground? Baer is the only man yet found who says so. The trust is for money profits and these only. Its sole purpose is the augmentation of its capital which grows from year to year at the expense of humanity. The working man can not increase his capital of labor power; but under the law of nature it grows weaker as he grows in years. The trust knows no humanity. This and its sister religion are unknown factors in commercial methods. In my next communication I shall show what the unions are doing on the lines of mutual aid and practical charity.

The meeting of Columbia Union last Sunday was one of the most interesting it was ever my good fortune to attend. Many important matters came up for consideration which I have not the space to mention. But I wish to state that the committee on the down-town scale merits the thanks of the craft for the yoeman service they have performed. The resolutions in reference to machines were wisely referred to the laws committee for action next Sunday. It is the part of prudence always to anticipate danger and guard against it, if possible. It is too late to shut the door after the horse is stolen. The introduction of machines may be prevented. If not, we will have the satisfaction of knowing we did what we could to keep them out.

To the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST, and to the craft in general, and to the G. P. O. folks in particular, and among those to the readers specially, the writer wishes the compliments of the season, with a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

THE TRADES UNIONIST of last week was specially interesting in its full discussion of the machine proposition. As my name has been used in this connection by most of the contributors, I shall take them up seriatim and close my participation in this controversy with this reply:

Brother O'Connell is sprightly and amusing all through, and, having worked in Fort Worth at the time he refers to, I know the Thorne is all he says it was—a thorn in his flesh. But I can hear a brigade howling with "thorns" in their flesh a good deal longer and sharper, and that stick deeper and will stay longer, when the iron monsters come to the G. P. O., if come they do.

Brother Broderick does not beat about the bush, but declares himself straight out without hesitation or reservation. He says that a union printer may advocate and work for the introduction of machines in the G. P. O. without any breach of his obligation. I do not pretend to be the keeper of any man's conscience or honor, but without questioning the honesty of this opinion, it is legitimate to reflect on the consequences of such an opinion if it were entertained by any considerable number of union men. I shall refrain from entering into an analysis of such sophistical and mischievous arguments beyond saying that were such doctrines really held and maintained by any considerable number of unionists it were time to disband the union and put an end to the farce.

The position of Mr. Krieter is plain and simple. He takes the ground and viewpoint of the employing capitalist. He says: "It would seem that the Government had really consulted subordinates on the proposition." To my mind such a thing as consulting a common workingman is absurd. Are not the workers wholly dependent on them? Then let them keep quiet and be thankful for what is given them. His advice to printers is to adapt themselves to the conditions, and his comfort is that things will adjust themselves. I have not space to answer such sweeping generalities as these, which are utterly destitute of all practical value by ignoring all differences. The introduction of the cotton gin created an enormously increased demand for labor. The introduction of the linotype has had and will continue to have just the contrary effect. Mr. Krieter sees no difference. He shows that he does not know the way copy is prepared in the departments in his criticism of my remarks. I said that it would be pernicious to restrict the writers of Government publications to make alterations in their proofs when and as often as they pleased. Does Mr. Krieter not think so? Even a chaplain of Congress changed copy on a petition which he offered to the Almighty on seeing the proof. Which prayer was recorded in the divine record above I do not know, but he clearly had a right to make the change.

Mr. Hall is surprised that anyone should question the right of a union man to force type-setting machines into the G. P. O., and charges me indirectly with trying to retard the progress of civilization. I fail to see how a union can profess to be bewildered over a clear-cut issue like this. I do not deny that labor saving machinery is destined to replace many workingmen now employed, and I do not oppose them. But Mr. Hall can not deny that it is the interest of every man who has mastered his trade and makes his living by it to oppose with all his power a change which will take the bread out of his mouth. While the advent of machines is perhaps inevitable, every year that it is put off is so much gained by the union men. Admitting, then, that the coming of machines is inevitable, I would submit if it would not be better for the interest of the craft to postpone the evil day as long as possible instead of laboring to hasten its advent? And in doing this the machine operators are not injured.

Brother Rodier's statement, from his own wide experience, that "all things considered," there would be no material saving on an inferior output in a change to machine composition is completely in accord with my views on the subject. His suggestion of a preliminary of different machines is wise, honest, and fair; but I am in favor of using every legitimate means to forestall their introduction into the G. P. O. as long as possible.

As 'twas of old, the stone ye'd rolled
But yesternight to mountain's crest,
Has fallen back, and in its track
Destroyed the path thy feet had pressed,
Poor, tired clay!

So day by day,
In care and pain to start again
The dreary treadmill's ceaseless round,
Until, at last, all sorrows past,
Thy journey ends beneath the ground,
Poor, tired clay.

Thou'rt foolish, clay,
To thus despond, nor think beyond
There dawns a brighter, better life,
Where care is done, where vict'ry's won,
And peace succeeds to earthly strife
In endless day.

Night Bill Force.

The Bill Force and Proof Room saw with tired eyes the rising of the sun Tuesday morning.

W. A. Kinsolving, of this force, had a sensible, impartial signed article anent the machines in last week's TRADES UNIONIST.

Now that the office is permanently arranged doubtless the alley and case numbers will be posted up as in the old building.

Mr. Wm. A. Uber has had the misfortune to be detained from his work almost since the Bill Force started this session on account of rheumatism. We wish him a speedy recovery.

Nowadays it is rare indeed to meet a Congressman who can not lay claim to having been a printer or closely connected with the trade at some time during his career.

While other divisions are making note of their Ajaxs do not forget that we have one of rather long standing—six feet or more. His favorite pose is "Ajax defying Pillsbury."

The boisterous and extravagant advocates and dependers of the typesetting machines should get together and select a press agent who will at least attempt to be consistent.

The question is often asked by visitors and others: Does the Government Printing Office have an emergency hospital room and a physician in charge. Surprise is expressed at the negative answer.

Mr. Hay is reported as saying that he has the finest job room equipment in the world, but Mr. Young was heard to say that the Bill Force was composed of the cleanest and swiftest typesetters this season than ever before.

Not the least of the attractions in belonging to the relief societies is their dividend at this joyous season. After being insured for a year the G. P. O. paid $8 45 and the Columbia $7 55 (out of the $12 paid into each) to those who had not been sick.

Something about "Spess" work always seems to make interesting correspondents. The present correspondent is no exception. For a number of years he was a dashing soldier, but evidently thinks "the pen is mightier than the sword."

Miss Anna Wilson is the original and logical lady candidate for delegate this year. Expressions of support are seen and read on every hand. The men look forward with pleasure to her canvass when the "glad hand" and cheerful smile will be enjoyed.

(Dr.) W. J. Manning, maker-up, who was transferred to this force from the Treasury branch, is a public-spirited benefactor. He has fixed up a chest of first aid to the injured, containing medicines, liniments, antiseptics, and bandages, which is kept in the "cage" ready for instant use. If Fletcher Bowden's scratched hand had received immediate attention he would not have become blood poisoned and lost so much time from work. "Doc" says the new method of sterilizing instruments and using antiseptics make wonderful modern surgical operations possible. Disease germs of various kinds are ever present in the air and enter fresh wounds unless promptly treated. The reason benzoine and liquid court plasters are so beneficial is that they seal up the wound and allow healing to progress.

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1903.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

There was quite a symposium on the subject of the intronuction of machines in the G.P.O. in THE TRADES UNIONIST last week, but I do not believe we have any immediate occasion for worry. That some kind of a machine will come some day, and perhaps all sorts of machines, for different kinds of work, I do not suppose anyone doubts, but their installation will be slow. The G. P. O. is not like a newspaper, where one kind of machine will do all the different kinds of straight typesetting to be done on it, but has a thousand different kinds of work, much of it entirely impracticable to do by any machine. Besides, in all machine offices the number of men employed at other work besides operating is generally as great as the number of operators, and that will be the fact to a greater degree in the G. P. O. than in newspaper offices, where "anything goes." The copy will have to be prepared to the last comma, cap, and figure, which will greatly increase the number of copy editors; the proofs will have to be read as closely as now, and the work of revision will have to be a rereading, if linotypes are used, for in making a correction there is always great likelihood of making new errors, such as transposing lines, taking out or inserting wrong lines, etc. Then the author will tear the life out of it on his proofs and it will have to be reset, reread, and again read by way of revision, after which the author will take another throw at it, when the same process will be repeated until it is finally ready for the shovel of the maker-up, after which the author will have a go at the page revises, necessitating passing through the proof room once more. In the meantime there will be all sorts of work for different degrees and grades of roustabouts in leading and unleading matter, setting heads and subheads, operating buzz saws, and using chisels, picks, crowbars, and other implements necessary in a machine office, all contributing to one great, universal, economical result. There is nothing to worry about, ladies and gentlemen.

I asked Jim Bright the other day, "Are you still a candidate for Trustee of the Union?" "Yes, you can state that I am," said he. I don't know anybody in the Union who is more deserving of the honor, and I'm for him, tooth an nail. He is an honest, capable, upright man, and he has done more than enough valuable service for the Union to entitle him to it.

* * * *

As Nat Goodwin exclaimed when a footman said, "Mr. Elliott, your carriage is ready," so I say now, "It has come—it has come! I knew it would come some day, and now it has come!" The Modern Woodmen of America the other day advertised a meeting "at A. F. of L. Building on G street, between Fourth and Fifth streets." What, then, has become of the Typographical Temple?

* * * *

Is it impossible for people to be actuated by any other motive than selfishness? "We've got machines in the newspaper offices—why should you not have them in the G. P. O?" And if you have the itch, why should not we have it also?

* * * *

Of all those anxious for a separate chapel in the Record proof room not one appeared at the Union meeting last Sunday to antagonize the report of the Committee deciding against it. I believe it to be a fact that those who most frequently kick against the action of the Union are those who never attempt to influence that action by attending the meetings and opposing it.

* * * *

The sincere and warm thanks of all employed on the Record are freely given to the authorities for the decision to continue the force at night instead of sending the men to day work during the two weeks that Congress is in vacation because of the holidays. It is almost an act of cruelty to require men who have become used to working at night and sleeping in the daytime to reverse the motion for such a brief period.

* * * *

The Union thanked by rising votes last Sunday the Convention Committee and the Memorial Service Committee—in both cases well deserved—the former for entertaining the I. T. U. in the most magnificent manner in which it has ever been entertained, and all at the expense of $3,085, without an assessment of a single cent on the individual membership, and the latter for so admirably conducting the service in memory of our dead that the Union also voted to make it an annual custom.

* * * *

There is one thing that the employer always seems to lose sight of—that as wages are reduced he must reduce the prices of work done by him. He always has competitors who make the prices the lowest possible, and then he has to cut his down to compete. If there were the same sense of honor among employers that there is among union men they would not cut each other's throats and their own by underbidding.

* * * *

"Look what tremendous newspapers we have since the machines came in," says the machine advocate. Would their proprietors have rejected the great wealth of advertisements that principally compose them merely in order to keep down their size?

* * * *

I am shaking hands with myself that my brief remarks caused sundry gentlemen to sign their articles and withhold personal abuse of their opponents in the machine discussion.

* * * *

I am glad you are making the fight you are against machines in the G P.O. It means loss of situations to at least two-thirds of the compositors, for a machine in the average man's hands is equal to four men every hour employed. The Government does not need them because of cheaper labor. Every one employed there in a way helps in supporting the Government, and it can not afford to take the same ground as a private employer. I have seen and see daily the misery the machines has brought to hundreds of good, competent printers here, many of them now beggars and panhandlers because of no hand work for them except a day here and there in one of the "ad" rooms of the daily papers. If anybody says there is employment for all who wish to work he does not know whereof he speaks. A visit to any one of the morning or afternoon papers and a sight of the numbers of worthy men who march out when "time" is called, unable to get a day's work, would surely open one's eyes to the fact that "prosperity," so far as printers are concerned, is not rampant in our glorious country at the present moment. Uncle Sam is the most prosperous old gentleman in the world to-day. He does not need to be penurious, and he can not afford to pass legislation that will make worthy citizens beggars and burdens for others to bear because of a desire, through cheap labor, to save a few measly dollars to help swell a now overflowing Treasury.

Do you recollect big, 6-foot Lou Kreigner, who once worked on the Record? He was from the South—a Confederate soldier, I believe. He was buried in the printers' plot here last week. He was a good old soul and liked by every one. But the machines "did" him and it is said that he actually died of starvation, although liver trouble was given as the cause.

Frank Rosencrantz ("Rosey," of the Record), was in to see me a week or two ago, looking "bang up" and the same old "Rosey." He is reading in a job office. Since he was employed on the Record he has been a clerk in the Poughkeepsie post-office, but left it to return to the print shop.

Joe Fleury is on the News. Charlie Spencer subs on the Press a day or two a week. Walter E. Chase weighs about 200, but I can go him 15 or 20 better.

The Evening Star of last Saturday presented each of its readers with a chromo which elicited interest only as it left the reader in doubt as to what the picture was really intended to represent. It was not up to the standard of curios which are said to hail from Manila, and yet for cheapness or as a product of labor-saving machinery it was a fair specimen.

The "lower" and "middle" stratas of society have very generally responded to appeals for help to send the gospel to the heathen of all lands to lead them to a knowledge of the lowly Nazarene, and for as many years, except in rare instances, encouragement has been withheld by the clergy, which would have lessened burdens and hastened better social conditions in lands supposedly Christian.

Real sorrow has again come to our friend, Mr. Walker Miller, of the Record, by the death of his wife, which occurred at Riverdale on Tuesday of this week. I. K. Friedman, discussing the business side of unions in the Saturday Evening Post, says: "All those who have studied the question are ready to admit that the way to the saloon is lengthened by shorter hours, and that overwork and overtaxation of the system cause more drunkenness than leisure and sloth," and Mr. Friedman is not much given to the habit of going out of his way to say things in favor of unionism.

Carroll D. Wright, Commissioner of Labor, who is in a position to know whereof he speaks, recently declared, in a lecture before a Philadelphia audiedce, that the present wage system is unsatisfactory and will pass away, giving place to something better. "Labor," declared Mr. Wright, "has been taught to feel that it is a social as well as an economic power in the community, and this educating process has gone on until the demand of labor is for a reasonable margin beyond that fixed by the iron law of wages." Slowly but surely, through organization, labor is approaching that condition which commands respect as a "world power," and all without invoking the prestige of army or navy. A just cause is its own defense.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

At the present rate of increase in the size of these publications, in a few years it will cost as much to mail a magazine to a friend as to purchase at the newstand.

These Sunday nights, after listening to the instructive discourse of Dr. Bristol, at the Metropolitan Church, keep awake with a copy of Ainsley's Magazine. One gets a complete novel, three special articles, fourteen short stories, and twelve poems—certainly their money's worth.

There can some good come out of Nazareth. Philadelphia has what they term a Trades League, to exploit measures economic, which proposes that each candidate for councilmanic honors shall declare whether or no he favors a franchise giving the Wabash Railroad entrance into the City of Brotherly Love.

In the protracted illness of W. H. Hickman, I wonder if that gentleman does not hear the voices of the long agone. David DeKnight, for instance, with his "Having dined sumptuously, we will now resume," or George Hummer's recital of the "bloody blooming sparrow that comes down the bloody blooming spout," or Steve Caldwell, with "Fifty-two, come and pull your slug!" When it is stated that "Fifty-two" was the irrepressible Si Dougherty, one can imagine the bedlam that followed.

Among the "sins" laid at the door of Washington's lord mayor—such by virtue of the chairmanship of the House District Committee—is that he possesses the laudable ambition for a seat in the Senate. To my mind, the framers of Columbia's first code could, with good judgment, have required an apprenticeship in the House of Representatives before an aspirant was eligible to a seat at the north end of the Capitol. Take the workers of the Senate—McCreary, Elkins, Bailey, Burrows, Dolliver, Blackburn, Hopkins—all graduates from "another legislative body," and they are proud of it."

While I leave to Brother Bloomer sole charge of the reminiscent column and endeavor to make my contribution of the vintage of to-day, I desire to note an incident to the effect that one night on the Record, on the eve of a holiday, the chairman made the rounds, from assistant to galley boy, with the announcement, "Mr. Hickman would like to see you at dinner at his house in Baltimore to-morrow." I don't suppose a half dozen out of the hundred men accepted the invitation, only it was courtesies like this on the part of a chief that endeared "Hick" to the force and furnished the incentive—the driving wheel behind the elbow—for the task.

My good friend, the "Advanced Artiste in Vaudeville," gives utterance to a number of bits of philosophy, among others: "Look for the absent button," which, translated, means that she can tell the manner of man by the insignia, or the absence of it, upon the lapel of his coat. If a young man, that he prefers the society found in the lodge room to that of the pool room; if married, that he is satisfied with his prize matrimonial, and invests in another ticket in the same lottery, to the end that provision may be had for the loved ones, when he shall have passed away. Aye, sisterhood, have a care; the absent button upon the shirt may mean the absent button upon the lapel.

MONEY IN LOW-GRADE ORE

It is the big low-grade mining propositions that appeal to the experienced mining man and mill operator. As a general thing it is the low-grade mines which pay the most dividends and whose existence are continued for years, where a really rich mine is of short duration

We know that high-grade ore appeals to the cupidity and imagination of the tenderfoot and the public at large, and that people will go into raptures over a few inches of exceedingly rich mineral; but, in the long run, the mine with vast bodies of milling ore in its workings will win out and maintain a paying basis long after the small vein of shipping ore has become exhausted, and it has been truly stated that a foot of ore that yields from $60 to $80 in the precious and baser metals is not to be compared in value and source of profit to the eight or ten-foot body of $5, $10 and $12 ore.—Salt Lake Mining Review.

Mr. John Alverson was recently promoted from the Record clerks' room to the office of the Chief Clerk. Salary, $1,408. Captain Brian and Mr. Alverson are both subject to congratulations.

Xmas is nearly here and I guess we are all doing about the same thing—trying to stretch the last pay so as to cover both the grocer and those whom we delight to remember on this most auspicious occasion.

Last year "Spike" Leonard used to vary the monotony of the "long pull" by yelling "I want to go home!" This year, however, it is: "Well I'll ter yer how it was!" Natures like "Spikes" are good for the "blues."

H. J. Redfied, of the Gazette, representing a much smaller division, naturally feels a delicacy in occupying more than a column in THE TRADES UNIONIST. But then, being a very intelligent fellow he makes up in quality what is lacking in quantity.

George Clark is the proud possessor of a piece of cane, a fragment of Professor Langley's "Buzzard." When that "bird" took its last "toboggan" some of the wreckage found its way on the decks of the U. S. S. Fern. A sailor presented the above souvenir to Mr. Clark.

Mr. Harry Miller, recently of this room, has been promoted to a desk in the Record clerks' room. Mr. Miller was one of the very best printers and proofreaders in our midst, and very popular, and his numerous friends, while sorry to lose him, extend hearty congratulations. Again merit tells. There are quite a number of us still left.

Chairman Homer Melick, and Mr. Samuel Gompers, Jr., both of this room, were elected president and vice-president, respectively, of the Men's Club of the Northeast. Two abler men could not have been selected to fill these offices—not even in the northeast—a much brainer section than the Columbia street railway corporation seems willing to acknowledge. The northeast section is to be congratulated in its wise selections.

Mr. John B. Jacques was graphically describing a cold winter experience of his back about 'steen years ago, and so naturally did he imitate the wintery gusts of wind as it moanfully cut the corners that our friend "Dock" Hauer, who was standing near by in his shirt sleeves, caught a severe cold, and nearly had to beg off on account of watery eyes. Really Mr. Jacques, you should be more careful in presence of very susceptible people.

Just after the wooden and steel upright supporters had been painted, the painters posted placards reading thusly! "No clothes on these posts!" A day or two afterwards two men from the Second Division were assigned with us temporarily and were looking for nails on which to hang their coats. Noting the signs, one said to the other: "Jess, anyone would know these "Spess" people are all d—— fools!" "How's that?" Queried Tom. "Because any one can see there are no clothes on those posts!"

Our time clerk, W. L. Gutelius, although a young man—and about the handsomest in the room, is another "old timer," when the latter day printers of the "Spess" are taken into consideration, for many's the year he has put in getting up the "average"—the same old forty-eight per with the same old type and seemingly the same old copy. And the wonder of it all is that he looks as young, and is as bright, cheerful and obliging now as when I first met him—about ten years ago. That's the use of a sunshiny disposition. Mr. Gutelius was successively elected chairman of the "Spess" for several years, and in severing his connection with this office finally, was voted the Chapel's thanks, I think a handsome silver service (it ought to have been gold) and was immediately promoted by the office. This combined action of both foreman and men showed most conclusively that Mr. Gutelius is a man of merit, possessing both brains and tact, and that it was appreciated.

Among the many modest gentlemen of the Spess proof room is one recently promoted from copyholder to the position of proofreader — Mr. Edmund Shaw. Outside of the fact that he is well educated, broad-minded, a good printer, proficient copyholder and proofreader, is most accommodating, quiet, and unassuming, very few are acquainted with any of his past history. For the edification of those who might be interested—and they are legion, I will state that Mr. Shaw was appointed the U. S. Consul to Asuncion, Paraguay, in 1890, a city of no little commercial importance, and served with honor and credit to both his country and himself for four years. In 1895 he was enlisted in the service of Treasury Department and stationed at Portland, Ore., as the U. S. Chinese inspector of that port. This office was also creditably filled, and at the expiration of his term he received a transfer to the Government Printing Office, and assigned to the Specification Division, where we are happy to have him with us. Mr. Shaw is a native of the District of Columbia.

Miss Laura B. Gordon, of this division, president of the Woman's Auxiliary, Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, and the ladies associated with her, are the recipients of hearty congratulations upon their very happy conclusion to remember the Washington printer boys in the Union Printers' Home by sending each a gold $2.50 coin and the following letter:

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 17, 1903.
CHRISTMAS GREETING.

Messrs. Jno. Robinson, J. W. Campbell, Otho Doughty, Charles H. Smith, and George D. Colquitt, Union Printers' Home, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

GENTLEMEN AND BROTHER CRAFTSMEN—We, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, have been racking our brains in the endeavor to decide what form a reminder to the absent members of Columbia Union should take. After going over the list of Christmas goods with the usual unsatisfactory results, we have consulted our fathers, husbands, brothers, and other girls' brothers. But being still undecided as to what is best, we have decided to cut the Gordian knot. So please accept our remembrance, with our best wishes for a Merry Xmas, a Happy New Year, and many happy and merry returns of the season. We rest assured that by this plan the selection of your Christmas gifts is placed in the hands of those who know best what will be appreciated.

AN INJUNCTION.

Whereas, government by injunctions is believed by us to be proper and desirable when its plenary powers are exercised by a proper court, within proper limits and confined to proper subjects;

Now, therefore, you and each of you are hereby commanded and ordered to accept our best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, and you are further ordered and commanded to banish the "blues" and accept your simple reminder and so to use it as to bring to each of you the greatest amount of comfort and happiness, and your future as bright as the gifts we send, are the sincere wishes of the

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY OF COLUMBIA TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION, NO. 101.
By LAURA B. GORDON, President.
BY THE COURT.

The Union Mutual Relief Association has just concluded another very successful year, and George M. Ramsey, its president, Ed. R. French, its secretary-treasurer, as well as each of its administrative officers, can not be commended too highly for faithful duty performed. The association has been in operation several years and is mainly composed of the employees of the Specification and Gazette divisions and of the Pressroom. Each succeeding year finds the association in a prospering condition, and having been of incalculable benefit to those of its members who were so unfortunate as to have become physically disabled for any length of time. During the past year $840 was paid out for relief purposes, and at its close the tidy sum of $1,938 80 was left to be equally divided among its members, netting individually $10 35. Several new members were elected to membership at the last meeting held and the present strength of the organization is 220. The following officers were also elected: George M. Ramsey, president; G. W. Hall, vice president; Ed. R. French, secretary-treasurer; George M. Ramsey, G. W. Hall, Ed. R. French, Miss Laura B. Gordon, Mrs. Irma Davis Palmer, Miss Fannie E. Levy, James W. Carter, Edward J. Hazen, and Fred E. Weber, directors. In speaking of the association, President Ramsey said: "Unfortunately it is true that certain members of relief associations get sick annually just as soon as leave of absence with pay is available. To protect itself against this class, the Union Mutual Relief Association has enacted a law empowering its Board of Directors, by a two-thirds vote, to drop any undesirable member at the end of the year, without preferring charges."

The Chicago Strike.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

If President Gompers has any influence with the striking cab drivers of Chicago, it is to be hoped that he will exert it to the end that the present indecent interference with the proper interment of the dead cease at once. No cause, however worthy, can hope for success unless public opinion is with it, and I know of no action so calculated to alienate the sympathy of all decent men and women as the course now reported to be pursued by the Chicago cab drivers.

AUGUST DONATH.

Horseshoers Elect Officers.

At the regular meeting of Horseshoers Union, No. 18, held at Hall No. 1, Building Trades Hall, Wednesday, December 16, 1903, the following officers were duly elected for the ensuing term: James P. Martin, president; Jacob Ressler, vice-president; Dennis McKeown, financial secretary; A. H. Lockhead, recording secretary; J. M. Horigan, corresponding secretary; M. Walsh, treasurer; William Hesson, sergeant-at arms.

Members of this union are advocating open meetings and a course of lectures on educational lines during the winter months.

Official Gazette.

J. W. Quigley has been transferred to the night force.

Stop knocking—unless you have a grievance. The habit may grow on you.

Our sick list is increasing. I have to add the names of Tondee, Brandon, and Gibbs.

Miss Alice Guild has been absent some time on account of her eyes being affected injuriously by the new type.

Miss Madge Evans spoke of using a bell to announce her presence with a handfull of type. Beatty is like a flea; you don't know which way he will jump.

The proofreading force of this division have been collected from various parts of the building, and are now installed in a neat, convenient, and commodious proof room.

The following compositors were detailed from the Fourth Division to the Gazette on Tuesday: C. C. Conlee, L. L. Dixon, J. W. Becker, J. O. Macallister, and L. D. Wheeldon.

The gentleman in charge of the lye department has consented to use a weaker solution on the type and distribution is less painful. It was fierce; but it certainly took the ink off.

The bicyclists sadly miss the convenience of a bicycle room such as they had at the Union Building. It is to be hoped that some similar arrangement can be made here for them by spring.

Sunday's Post gave an account of an entertainment in which Major Morgan sang a comic song entitled "Modern Spirits." The major is a comedian of the deepest dye when you get his confidence.

Gus Laing celebrated his silver wedding anniversary last Friday evening. He started in to celebrate last year, but his better half called his attention to the fact that he was a year previous in his reckoning.

Miss Carrie L. Whitehead has consented to act as treasurer of the Woman's Auxiliary for another year. She is painstaking and efficient, and has contributed her full share to making the Auxiliary as effective as it is.

The remarks of President Joe M. Johnson, at the memorial service, contained a good hint to the habitual knocker. He spoke of the practice of withholding kindly words and acts until after death had come to the one they might have helped.

It would be a good plan to have a group picture of this force made. George Gerberich has the facilities and the talent to do it right, and I know it would not cost much. I have a picture of this sort about twelve years old that I think considerable of.

A beautiful floral piece of roses—the joint contribution of the Specification and Gazette Chapels—was sent to the funeral services of the late Daniel Grady. It was but a slight token of the esteem in which he was held by all who knew him. Mr. Grady was one of two employes who have seen the longest service on Specifications.

The G. P. O. Mutual Relief Association held its annual meeting on December 13. All of the officers of last year were re-elected, as follows: A. W. Bowen, president; J. B. Dickman, vice president; E. F. Geyer, corresponding secretary; J. E. Keefe, financial secretary, and A. J. Arnold, treasurer. The president made a brief speech in which he thanked the officers and governing board for their attention to duty. J. B. Dickman called attention to the fact that this was the twentieth anniversary of the association, and made a very favorable review of the good that had been accomplished and the manner in which the funds had been handled. After a neat little speech, A. J. Arnold announced that the pro-rata dividend would be $8.45. The present membership is about 1,035. The amount returned to the members not drawing benefits exceeded $8,200; in the neighborhood of 75 per cent.

H. J. REDFIELD.

Death of Mrs. J. W. Miller.

The sympathy expressed by the many friends of J. W. ("Walker") Miller over the death of his wife, which occurred on Tuesday last, attest the esteem in which Mr. Miller is held by all who know him. Mrs. Miller was a sufferer for some years with tuberculosis and had spent some time in the South seeking relief, but to no avail. A patient, loving wife and mother, she met the summons of death with Christian fortitude, and passed away quietly.

The funeral took place from her late residence, Riverdale, Md., on Thursday afternoon.

COLUMBIA UNION MEETING

The Down-Town Book and Job Scale Amended Satisfactorily.

THE MEETING WELL ATTENDED

The Convention Committee Makes Final Report—Committee on Memorial Service Reports—Machine Question Goes Over Until Next Sunday—Down-Town Book Scale Amended.

The regular monthly meeting of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, was called to order at 2 30 p. m. on Sunday last, President Johnson in the chair.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Hon. John M. Farquhar, ex president of the National Typographical Union, and an honorary member of Columbia Typographical Union, being present, was invited to a seat on the rostrum.

The Nominations Committee, reporting favorably on the application of J. I. Belt, the gentleman was elected and obligated.

A communication from Frank A. Munsey, proprietor of the Washington Times, relative to colored supplement for that paper, was placed on file.

The Business Committee reported against the request of the Record proof room, to create a separate chapel for that room, and the report was concurred in by the Union.

The Relief Committee reported funds on hand as sufficient for its purposes.

Mr. Hall, from Allied Printing Trades Council, asked that the delegates to the Council be given permission to investigate the various laws governing the letting of printing contracts by the Government to the lowest bidder, and to employ legal talent necessary to have legislation on the matter. Permission granted, and delegates instructed to make report to the Union before final action is taken.

Mr. Whitehead, from Committee of Arrangements of recent I. T. U. convention, submitted a final report from the committee, showing that receipts from all sources amounted to $7,622 75, which was added to by an appropriation of $5,000 set aside by the Union, making a total available fund of $12,622 75, and that the expenditures were $10,626 53, leaving a balance of $2,036 22 unexpended, which being turned back to the treasury of the Union made the total cost of the convention to the Union of $2,963 78.

On motion of Mr. Kreiter, the committee was extended a rising vote of thanks for the manner in which they conducted the affairs of the late convention.

The report was then referred to the Auditing Committee.

The Committee on Memorial Service submitted its report, showing that the entire cost to the Union was inside the appropriation asked for by the committee ($50). The committee recommended that the service be held annually, and asked that the officers extend the thanks of the Union to all those who contributed in making the service a success.

Mr. Brockwell moved the adoption of the report and a rising vote of thanks to the committee, which was agreed to.

Mr. Bynum made a report from the Cumming's Memorial Committee.

Mr. Brockwell, from the special committee having charge of the investigation of financial conditions of the Union, looking to advisability of reducing the dues, asked that the report be made a special order for 2 30 p. m. at January meeting. Agreed to.

Mr. Kidd, from Special Committee on Down-Town Scale of Prices, submitted a reply from the Typothetæ in answer to further request for increase in book scale, and resubmitted the report of the committee as amended at the October meeting.

The Union, after considering the report of the committee, adopted it, and the scale for book work was increased to 45 cents per 1,000 ems, an increase of 3 cents per thousand over present scale, while the hours of work for piece or time hands was guaranteed to be at least 4½ hours.

Several resolutions being introduced relative to the introduction of machines in the G. P. O., and being discussed, Mr. Rodier moved that the Laws Committee be directed to take the resolutions and report back a substitute for the same, which was agreed to.

Mr. Kreiter moved that when the Union adjourned it adjourn to meet Sunday, December 27, at 2.30 p. m., the first order of business being the report of the Laws Committee on resolutions referred to it. Agreed to.

Mr. Doyle moved that the introducers of the several resolutions meet with the Laws Committee for consideration of the resolutions referred to it. Agreed to.

Mr. Rodier introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Laws Committee is instructed to examine the constitution, laws, and resolutions pertinent thereto of the Central Labor Union and report to the Union whether said Central Labor Union has arrogated to itself any authority or power not granted to it by its constituent bodies.

Mr. Bonney submitted an amendment to strike out "average computer," sec. 2, Art. II, Constitution, which lays over to next meeting.

Adjourned.

AGAINST THE MACHINE.

A Well-Known Proof Reader Enters a Disclaimer Against Its Use.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 16, 1903.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

I have been interested in the discussion of the question of the introduction of Linotype machines into the Government Printing Office.

Personally, from the standpoint of self-interest, I am perfectly indifferent whether the machines are put in or not.

From the standpoint of the printer, of one who likes decent work and a clean page, I say: Don't put in the machines.

I believe I am competent to give this advice, for tens of thousands of pages of the output of the machines have passed through my hands during the past six years. I am not an operator, but I have had the handling of the output of a number of machines either as a reader or press reviser—principally the latter—during this period.

The output of the machines is crude and unsatisfactory from any standpoint except one—that of cheapness.

Machine-set tables are monstrosities.

If anything like the standard of typographic excellence prevailing in the Government Printing Office is to be maintained the machines should not be introduced.

If machines should be introduced and anything like decent work is required, the output will cost more than composition by hand.

For crude work, requiring neither accuracy nor fair printing, the machines are undoubtedly cheaper than hand composition.

ROBERT K. YOUNGBLOOD.

Third Division.

Just a word with the brethren who discussed the machine question last week. I owe thanks multiplied to Charles C. O'Connell, who is the prince of jolliers, having the grace not to take himself too seriously. Long life to him and his kind.

Replying to J. H. Broderick, let me say that the reason why he was unable to understand my comments on his previous letter was becaase the editor cut out the very part of my contribution needed to make sense of that which was printed. For this I am not responsible. Regarding the nom de plume, I am proud to say I hail from Rhode Island; my name will be found signed to this article. Mr. Broderick should be absolved from the imputation that he is a temporary man. I am pleased to see that my conjecture was incorrect, and hope sincerely that he is now permanently located to his entire satisfaction.

As to Mr. Kreiter, the following quotation from his article in the Typographical Journal for December will be of interest:

"The Evening Star has put in two double-deck machines. They are marvels of perfection, and as timesavers their usefulness is only recognized when you see the stuff they turn out. Much as they produce and wonderful in their handiness, it is singularly a fact that the force of men is not lessened."

The italics are mine and their application is evident.

Then comes Willis L. Hall. Mr. Hall has mistaken his vocation. He ought to be a spellbinder; the beautiful sequence of his knock-down arguments is absolutely fascinating. The simple difference between him and the vast majority of compositors in the G. P. O. is that while the "comps" would like to keep their jobs, he would oust them in favor of operators of machines. Some "operators" are also hand compositors; many operators know the machine, and only the machine; to this class the idea of installing machines in the G. P O. will appeal strongly.

The able and sensible letter from J. L. Rodier commends itself to all who are in favor of fair play. After all is said, we must admit that typesetting machines are here to stay, and that some form thereof will eventually supersede the place held so long by hand composition. It is, as Mr. Rodier suggests, the too sudden introduction of machines, with attendant evil consequences to the many hundreds of workmen who would be displaced thereby, that we would avert.

Most of last week's contributors on the subject of machines seemed to think that it is our bounden duty to act on the command of Nebuchadnezzar, Daniel, iii-5: "That at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sakbut, psaltery, and all kinds of music, ye fall down and worship * * *."

To which the subscriber makes answer, Not on your life.

JOSEPH W. BELCHER.

ALLIED BUILDING TRADES.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8.15 p. m. on Tuesday evening by Vice-Chairman Winslow.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

From Carpenters' District Council, relative to action of joint meeting of Carpenters on Plumbers, Marble Workers, and Marble Workers' Helpers. Read and placed on file.

From Carpenters, Local Union No. 1651, relative to statements made at previous meeting about one of their members working on Fuller job, bossing non union iron workers. Read and referred to Bridge and Structural Iron Workers.

From R. A. Lanis Association of Steam Fitters, inclosing bill for rent, and asking that error be corrected. Referred to secretary, with instructions to correct error.

From E. C. Graham, secretary of Employers' Association of the Building Trades, relative to differences existing between the Master Steam and Hot Water Fitters' Association, and the R A. Lanis Association of Steam Fitters over the rate of wages to be paid helpers when they are working under steam fitters' permits. Read, and after considerable discussion, referred for investigation to a committee consisting of L. A. Sheetz, W. E. Thompson, and Jos. A. Daly.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Delegate Daly reported from Central Labor Union and G. W. Seiben, Joseph Reilly and Jos. A. Daly (the committee who investigated the charges preferred against the Plumbers, Marble Workers, and Marble Workers Helpers) were requested to appear before the Central Labor Union committee Monday December 28, at 7.30 p. m. in the interest of the Council of Allied Building Trades.

Delegate Ratigan, from the committee appointed to appear before the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, relative to Amalgamated Carpenters working on struck jobs, made a report which was accepted and the committee discharged.

Delegate Sheetz, from By-Law Committee, submitted draft of by-laws prepared by the committee. Discussion on same was made a special order of business at 8.30 oclock at the next meeting, and the secretary directed to have sufficient number of proof sheets prepared for the use of the delegates.

Business Agent made a report which was accepted.

ROLL CALL.

Carpet Workers called attention to Peter Grogan Company as being on the unfair list, and tendered excuse for the non-attendance of their delegates, which was accepted.

Pipe Coverers stated that plumbers were putting on covering at Stoneleigh Court apartment house.

Elevator Constructors asked that strike on Duehay & Sons and T. F. Schneider be declared off. Moved and seconded that the request be denied. Delegates Boyington and Streets spoke in favor of declaring the strike off.

Delegates Hollihan, Leiben, Sheetz, Winslow, and Johnson favored the motion. The request was denied.

NEW BUSINESS.

The secretary was directed to communicate with the Building Trades Council of Pittsburg, Pa., and F. E. Smith, business agent of the Painters District Council, of Pittsburg; and notify them of the action of the Plumbers, Marble Workers and their helpers in Washington. Also to communicate with all affiliated locals and ask them to write their national secretaries acquainting them of the action of the Plumbers, Marble Workers, and Marble Workers Helpers, and asking them to instruct all locals to refuse their support to the above-named unions until they make amends to the Council of Allied Building Trades.

AN ORISON.

JAMES LACOSTE RODIER.

Lord, give me heart to live another day,
If I may live in mine accustomed way—
Unmurmuring the burdens of my state,
Nor railing at the just decrees of Fate.

Lord, give me strength to work another day,
If I may work in mine accustomed way—
Shaping the course of some ennobling thought,
Nearing the Truths I earnestly have sought.

Lord, give me grace to love another day,
If I may love in mine accustomed way—
Kissing Thy rod, e'en though it chasten me,
Loving Thy law, whate'er its sentence be.

Practice! Practice!—Merganthaler keyboard for practical practice will be on sale January 1, 1904. Printers who want to learn to operate have good chance after practicing on this key board at home and are sure to learn. Order now. Price 75c prepaid. WM. INGRAM, Clayton, St. Louis County, Mo.

WILLIAM TIPTON TALBOTT.

Oh, new born Year,
Crowned with the wreath of plenty, you appear!
What burden do you bear—
What gift
That shall uplift
Mankind, and which Shall even enrich
The treasure by the Centuries amassed?

Even as your brothers of the past
Freed earth from fatal damps and lurking beast,
So that mankind increased;
Dispelled earth's primal gloom
With sweat-drops glittering on the toiler's brow,
With fecund furrow on the plow,
And with the song of spindle and of loom—
Oh, let our souls be freed
From self-destructive greed,
And fill the halls of state
With that same vigor that shall conquer hate
And quench the sordid fever of the mart.
Redeem the desert places of the heart;
Make glad the earth
With childish mirth
Where children's laughter was not heard before.
Let men grow wise,
And learn to prize
Not more
The fateful glitter of their hoarded store
Than golden deeds,
Far-reaching—seeking how
To bear the staggering weight of human needs;
To vivify the Now
With fires potential that at last shall glow
Through customs, laws, and creeds
In long-sought brotherhood.

Oh, year, be good!
Be good all through,
And set a good example to
Your Twentieth Century brothers yet unborn,
Nor scorn
The good example set by other years for you.

THE IRON PRINTER.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

The machine question in the G P O. was very ably discussed in a recent issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST. Mr Rodier, however, in our judgment, had much the best of the argument. The machines should be first introduced as an experiment if they are introduced at all, as Mr. Rodier suggests. Let each machine, the Merganthaler, the Lanston, and the Monotype, prove its capabilities in Government work before the Government is inveighed into the scheme of installing all of one kind. It has been demonstrated beyond a shadow of a doubt that the Linotype will not successfully do the most of the work in the big office Although in an imperfect way, compared to hand composition, it might be possible to set the Record, the specifications, and other ftraight matter on the iron monster. yet when the tabular matter is attempted every one who has even an ordinary amount of practical knowledge of printing knows that it is an utter failure. Then when it is considered that the vast majority of the Government work is of a tabular nature and necessarily requires hand composition and a large and skilled force of men to accomplish the work within the required time, where is the economy of the machines?

As an illustration, suppose it was necessary to publish the United States Census, the Weather Bureau reports, the tariff schedules, the Comptroller of of the Currency's annual report, the customs house receipts, and many other jobs of a tabular nature, which in order to do standard work must be done by hand within a prescribed length of time, how could the work be done if half, or even a third of the present force be discharged? As it is now the small jobs of straight matter serve in a way of filling up the gaps between these large tabular jobs, enabling the Public Printer to retain the present force for just such emergencies. Now, if the machines were present to set all the straight matter it would seem reasonable to suppose that all the present force could not be retained, or enough of it to set this tabular matter by hand within the required length of time. If a large part of the force was discharged during the lulls, do you think it would be possible without due notice for the Public Printer to secure enough men to perform this work? We think not. Any compositor who would lay around Washington just for these periodical jirks of work and successfully meet his monthly grocery bills would be a man after Bernarr McFadden's (the physical culturist) own heart—live on one meal a day during the week and fast on Sundays. No, sir; it would never do.

The gentlemen discussing the machine question in the G. P. O. must remember that there are conditions in that office that are not to be found in any other office in the world. Let them beware of innovations that would revolutionize the present perfect system of the office, reduce the standard of the work, and throw hundreds of honest men and women upon the cruel mercies of the world

The present style and system of the office has been adopted after forty or fifty years' experience, and it would be an inexcusable—yes, an unpardonable sin, to introduce a new system, in order to install a heartless and in many cases useless machine, that would detract from the present almost perfect and incomparable style and system of the G. P. O. F. E. W.

A Presentation.

At the last meeting of the Allied Label League, at the conclusion of the order of business, the members of the League pleasantly surprised President Jere F. McCarthy by presenting him with a signet ring with the initials of the organization that Mr. McCarthy has so ably served since its inception in this city—the I. B. L.

Secretary Pfau made the presentation speech, dwelling on the results accomplished by the League during the year past under the guidance of President McCarthy. The President responded in feeling terms, and while completely taken by surprise, thanked his colleagues for their manifestations of good will and esteem, and desired to retain it for the future.

Sometimes the breaking of an engagement enables the parties to live happily ever after.

Specification Notes.

What is "scrap-dough"—two words or compound? Some have marked it both ways.

J. M. Rissler has been transferred to the Job Room. "Well done, good and faithful servant!"

The office room of Foreman Ramsey is all that one could wish if the authorities would supply a steam radiator.

Jimmy Rodgers is getting to be quite a valuable acquisition on the floor. He is arranging new and old type. Busy Jim is he.

Mr. Harry L. Colestock was recently transferred to the Agricultural Branch, and Mr. Colestock puts in many hours after work in study. He has a future full of promise.

Billy Howlin is nobody's idle boy these days. The new type chance keeps him on the jump. Owing to his good nature Billy should be dubbed "Sunny Bill."

Good-natured and obliging Major McBride is again enjoying health sufficient to permit of daily attendance upon his manifold duties as clerk in Foreman Ramsey's office.

We worked last Sunday, but Proofreader Hanley didn't know it. He devoted himself so closely to his duties that he entirely overlooked the posted notice. Loss, $7.02. Unprotected.

Mr. B. W. Butler is doing a pleasant little "stunt" in the Proof Room nowa-days. Major Dodge knows the good readers and the copyholders, too, and he made no mistake in Mr. Butler. Merit again.

All the "trusties" that I have "boosted" to date have come forward and acknowledged that I am "the best correspondent THE TRADES UNIONIST has ever had from this Room." I am still working for a cigar, however.

The next issue of the Spess will be in new long primer type. The force took to it—the new type—like a cat does to water. No use ducking, however; for you are here, and so is the shiny and sharp mettle—and both to stay.

A great number of people have suggested two ladies names that I should boost for delegate—Miss Irma Palmer and Miss Carrie Whitehead. They are very popular, and should either or both care to make the race, would poll a large vote.

Dr. Samuel L. Battles was recently transferred from this room to the Library Branch, I understand, by request. As the day's work there ends with 4 p. m. it enables the doctor that much more time to devote to his studies. Sam is a fine printer, and we miss him.

The Ring Alley has been promoted very recently in having the temporary services of so good a printer as Miss Mary A. Connolly. As this little lady usually sets "O. K." proofs, correcting errors will be a new departure to her. But she will overcome any trouble first engendered. Merit will tell!

Charley Koehl, the obliging and popular messenger who does "stunts" between this division and the Patent Office finds his duties greatly increased. But he does not complain. I doubt if he would even complain did the authorities decide he was entitled to a little more salary.

Mrs. Ida M. Copenharve took a little "peep in" at her father's home in Michigan, during the holidays; and to all those who know Mrs. Copenharve even slightly the fact that her father and other members of the family doubly enjoyed Christmas is not in the remotest way doubted.

Messrs. Duffy, Easterbrook, Putnam, and King were the final handlers of the old long primer type, Charley and Harry "dropping" the forms, Johnny tying up, and your humble servant wrapping and stacking it up for shipment. By the way, I wonder if these are not also examples of merit?

Thanks, Mr. N. B. F. correspondent, both for the Spess and myself. The Specification Division isn't near so bad as painted, and for my part I'd rather work there than in any other large division. A gentleman always appreciates gentlemanly treatment, and the Spess folks only deal in that kind.

The Spess stylebook is something that awes the new man. He is confronted on every technicality with 'It's in the book!" This so disgusted a fellow "slug" recently that, on some other similar "mark" calling: "Whose got a 'rundown' for Slug ——?" he replied: "Aw! look in the book!"

After a recreation in the cities of New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, during the past ninety days, Miss Louisa Gunton, compositor, returns to duty and receives a well-merited promotion in position, if not pay. She is now a copy-holder. Her father is the publisher of the well known Gunton Magazine.

After three days' use, l. c. "p's" and "h's" gave out—so far as the "sort" boxes were concerned, and from that time until the arrival of a plentiful supply, the "comps" were "fed" three or four at a time from Mr. McDermott's vest pockets. Mac foresaw the shortage, and being resourceful—but pshaw! this is but another instance of where merit tells!

Mr. Kauffman says that when he was "sent down" to the Spess—in July—he weighed only 168 pounds, but after taking Captain Ramsey's "Strenuous Pills" for six months he now tips the scales at 182. Now there! You fellows who have been "hoping against hope" on the plea of "growing thin" will have to admit that the "jig's up." Why not try out the "good behavior" plan? Merit will tell!

Miss Hattie McDaniels, of Greenville, S. C., a sister of Dr. McDaniels, of this Office, died at her home last week after an illness of very short duration. She was a beautiful girl, quite talented for one of her tender years, and would have graduated next year at Converse College had she lived. Dr. McDaniels has the deep sympathy of his many friends not only in this division, but in the entire office.

Just prior to the holidays the Spess was at its highest water mark, figuratively speaking, for its force consisted of 153 regulars and 35 detailed men—a total of 188. This is the largest force ever employed on specifications proper. Including details from other divisions (known as "temporary," but should be "permanent," not only in the composing room, but in the press room as well) there was a total force of 268, and not diminished greatly by the cutting off of the Gazette Division.

W. L. Evans (familiarly known as "Windy") is back again at the same old stand, after having spent a most pleasant Christmas holiday at his home in Charleston, S. C. Dame Rumor has it that Mr. Evans took unto himself a "better half" while in the "City by the Sea." He himself is non-committal. "Is he, or is he not?" can be heard on all sides from the girls. If the rumor is true, Mr. Evans is to be congratulated. The only proof is his having produced two Pullman sleeping car tickets.

Mr. F. F. Bates died at his late home 1622 14th street N. W., on Friday, December 11th, at 9 15 p. m., of acute Bright's disease. His funeral occurred Sunday, the 13th., and was interred in Rock Creek Cemetery. Mr. Bates was ill only three days and his sudden death was a distinct shock to the large community in which he lived. His long life was a useful and honorable one, and his untimely end will be moaned by not only those of his immediate family, but by friends whose number is legion. A son of the late Mr. Bates is Mr. Frank Bates, of the Fourth Division, and Sergeant-at-Arms of No. 101.

A recent addition to this force—Mr. Griffith, but better known as "Ajax"—was about to be introduced to one of our ablest proofreaders—Mr. Waterman—by another like celebrity, Proofreader Walsmith, but before doing so the latter, just for fun, said to Ajax: "Mr. Griffith, you have met the gentleman before, but as it occurred years ago, I'll bet you have forgotten him." Mr. Griffith's mind rapidly turned back a number of years and he did remember having met Mr. Walsmith's eldest "hopeful," and he paralyzed the latter when he nonchalantly remarked, "Sure I know him. He's your son." Step up and get a cigar.

One of the Washington base ball magnates recently confided in me the secret that the management had decided to sign Mr. Healy as a pitcher for next season. The Healy referred to is our Government Printing Office pitcher. It seems that this player has been under surveillance by "Ban" for sometime, and it is thought that with a little coaching Healy can be developed into a "wonder." "He has splendid curves," says my informant, "that high indrop being a beauty. His change of pace is wonderful for an amateur, and few professionals can lob them over with better results than he." Good! I have been watching for some magnate to gobble up several of our amateurs for a long time. Now that the cat is out of the bag, step forward, boys, and congratulate our pitcher, Mr. Healy.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Now is the time to make good resolutions.

THE decision of Justice LEVENTRITT, of the New York Supreme Court, denying the application for an injunction against Stereotypers' Union, No. 1, of that city, brought by the foreman and assistant foreman of the stereotype room of the New York Herald, marks a wide departure from the learned judges of other sections, principally in the West, where unions have even been ordered to stop holding meetings to consider questions bearing on the matter covered in the injunction. The trouble on the Herald was occasioned by the discharge of President FREEL, of the Stereotypers and Electrotypers' International Union, who was employed in the stereotype room of the Herald. On his discharge he preferred charges against the foreman and assistant foreman, who were subsequently expelled from the union. The Herald management were notified that members of Stereotypers' Union, No. 1, would refuse to work with the foreman or assistant foreman, but the Herald management refused to take any action until it was passed upon by a court. The injunction was then asked for by the expelled members of the union, and was refused on the ground that "their relations with the union made them amenable to its rules, and that the plaintiffs should exhaust all other means by an appeal to the general body (the International) which their union is affiliated with, making a condition precedent to the right of maintaining an action to invoke the aid of the court of equity."

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

My friend, August Donath, calls upon President Gompers, if he has any influence with the striking cab drivers in Chicago, to exert it to the end that "the present indecent interference with the proper interment of the dead cease at once." I have always hesitated to criticise the acts of a labor organization with no better information to go on than that conveyed by the public press, for it notoriously misrepresents labor organizations on every occasion, and so far I have no reason to think that the cab drivers have done anything more lawless than to quit work. But as showing that there are different views held on every question, I will relate a conversation that I heard on the platform of a street car a few days ago.

"These conflicts between capital and labor," said one, "are getting to be a nuisance at the best, and when they interfere with the burial of the dead it is going too far."

"I agree with you perfectly," said the man addressed.

"What do you think of that Chicago business, any way?" asked the first speaker.

"Why, I think," said the other, "that the man who would take a contract or make an agreement to bury the dead and then fail or refuse to do so because he could not hire his drivers on his own terms is so dirty a dog that no one but his own kind could defend him."

That was all of the conversation that I heard.

I have not heard enough about the case to form an opinion, having only read what is in the newspapers, which indicate that all is now quiet.

The affection for their old foreman, who has been for several months writhing on a bed of pain, manifested by the employes of the Third Division on Christmas Eve, by a gift of a splendid basket of fruit, surrounding a bottle of champagne, is not the kind that is dictated by expectation of favor in the future, for Mr. Hickman has been superseded by Mr. Bass, but is unquestionably actuated by remembrance of his kindness in the past and sincere sympathy for him in his affliction. That Mr. Hickman is deeply moved by the many tokens of good feeling from his old force that have come to lighten his suffering need not be stated.

The Official Manual and Constitution of the Government Printing Office Mutual Relief Association, issued recently from the press of the Henry E. Wilkens Printing Company, consisting of 104 pages of illustrations, text, and advertisements, is a splendid piece of work. There are two well written articles in it, "Washington City" and "The Government Printing Office," from the pen of Charles W. Pafflow, of the Night Proof Room, the work of whose pen is familiar to readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST, both well covering their ground and beautifully illustrated. "Our Association," being a history of the society, well narrated, precedes the "Constitution," "By-Laws," and a list of the officers and members. The illustrations are views of the principal public buildings of the Capital City and portraits of the officials of the Government Printing Office and of the officers and committeemen of the association, which now has 1,035 members.

The deepest sympathy of his fellow-workmen of the Record, as well as throughout the membership of the Union, goes out to J. Walker Miller in his recent distressing bereavement, an account of which was contained in last week's paper.

* * * *

The "Average Record" presented to the compositors of the G. P. O. by the Bereans is a very handy little book, but the night forces must have been lost sight of when the first text was selected, which reads:

I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day; the night cometh, when no man can work.

* * * *

J. L. Rodier's little poem, "Sic Itur ad Astra," in last week's TRADES UNIONIST, is one of the best of the many real poems that he has written, and I have heard many compliments regarding it from those whose compliments are worth having.

* * * *

I think that we can expect candidates to get busy in the delegate line within the next few weeks. Mike Maher, of the Star, told me at the Union meeting last Sunday that he intends to make things hum in a few days, and one of the defeated candidates of last year indicated to me the other day that he will take another throw at it the coming year. It will be a nice trip, girls and boys, but awful hot and dusty.

* * * *

Philip W. Wiley, of the Record proof room, who has been sick for about four weeks, is so far recovered that he hopes to be able to resume work in a few days. His fellow-workmen will gladly welcome his return.

* * * *

I am glad to see that everybody is calm on the machine question, as getting excited over what is in the remote future only disturbs the digestion without accomplishing any good results. For some years I have made it a rule to never worry about anything that is as far as two weeks off, nor to continue my worry more than half a day, and though I do not set myself up as a model, I have succeeded in getting and staying reasonably fat in carrying out my principles.

* * * *

The man who insists on the union label on everything he buys practices his union principles; the man who asks no questions on the subject or is satisfied with the simple statement that the goods he buys are union made gives his consent to the "open shop" idea; the man who preferably buys non-union goods because they are cheap would be a "rat" or a "scab" himself if he had the courage and opportunity.

Brother Pafflow, of the Night Bill Brainery, is spending the holidays in St. Louis, his former home. He is a constituent of Hon. Richard Bartholdt and a warm supporter of that gentleman's scheme for the restoration of the canteen in the Army. But it won't pass—not during the present session of Congress, for there is too much fear of the effect it will have on the minds of ultra-temperance people of the country—the class who will have nothing less than prohibition and consequently get nothing. (This is not intended to stir up my friend, Johnny Kierman.) Since the abolition of the canteen the desertions have increased in the Army only about several hundred per cent. However, I still remember the answer given by the old National Republican to the plaintive question by the then Secretary of War, "How can desertions of enlisted men be prevented?" that answer being, "By making their positions as desirable as are those of the officers, who practically never desert." Some time I am going to write an article on the common soldier that will probably startle the country from circumference to center if it ever finds it out.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Bright and Interesting Budget of News From Gotham.

The following communication, written to a well-known member of "Big Six," practically leaves the candidacy of the I. T. U. presidency to the present incumbent, President Lynch, and C. E. Hawkes, now first vice-president. Mr. McMahon was looked upon as holding considerable strength in the East, and his withdrawal will make a clear-cut race for supremacy between Lynch and Hawkes:

BOSTON, MASS., December 29, 1903.

Mr. NATHAN NEWMAN:

Friend NATE—I desire to thank you and my many friends in New York whose signatures are attached to the petition requesting me to make the race for the I. T. U. presidency. I am agreeably surprised to think my humble efforts have been appreciated in New York, where I have, I know, many friends, but I have practically made up my mind not to enter the presidential contest. I have so much work on my hands in the New England States that it would be hard for me to devote the time necessary for such a campaign.

I feel grateful for the complimentary allusion to my fitness for the position, and assure you that I will always esteem your confidence in me as a recompense for any service I may have done in the past, or may do in the future.

Again thanking my New York friends for their appreciation of my humble efforts, I remain,

Yours fraternally,
HENRY MCMAHON.

New year greeting to John Macksey, Joe Babcock, A. F. Bloomer, and Frank Morrison.

The union at its last meeting voted $100 to the Christian Home for Intemperate Men.

Holiday business is over and work is very dull, both on the newspapers and in book and job offices.

Munsey's Daily News will move to his uptown office, East Twenty-fourth street, early next month.

John Sammis, Burgoyne's; Thomas H. Blake, City Record, and John J. Lyons, Iron Age, are the deaths reported last week.

John L. Kennedy was in town last week looking after his Merganthaler proposition. As yet no interest is manifested here regarding this new G. P. O. proposition.

The annual reception and ball of No. 6 will be held on Monday, April 18, at Terrace Garden. A young and energetic committee which has the arrangements in hand promises big results.

Ex President Samuel B. Donnelly is holding down a $3,000-a-year job as labor secretary to the Board of Arbitration of the Building Trades Section, comprising both employe and employer.

Joseph A. Vibbert, an old member of Typographical Union, No. 6, forty years connected with the International Typographical Union, and a veteran of Phil Kearney Post, G. A. R., died suddenly of apoplexy Monday. The body was taken to Chicago for burial.

Rumor is again current that the Journal will move uptown, probably occupying the old Virginia Hotel site, which is at Fifty-eighth street, just opposite the entrance to Central Park.

Samuel J. Philipps, who was president of the Press Wheelmen, a morning newspaper organization with a membership of about 300, for three terms, is now taking a well-earned rest. He devotes most of his time at home now, instead of the club rooms. He left the club in a flourishing condition.

Patrick Tracy is a candidate under the Tammany administration for supervisor of city printing, a position which carries with it a salary of $5,000 per year and many appointments. Mr. Tracy is an old member of No. 6 and was a schoolmate of Mayor McClellan. His chances for the position are very good.

Delegates to St. Louis are coming from under cover. National and local politics will be agitated after the holidays; McMahon and Lynch's friends will fight for indorsement at the February meeting. Delegates to the American Federation of Labor mostly spoken of are Frank Morrison and Frank K. Foster. The former has many friends in New York and will poll a large vote.

George G. Ailinger was elected president of Stereotypers' Union, No. 1, and William E. Harper president of Typefounders' Union, No. 1. The Federation of Women, an organization composed of wives and sisters of members of No. 6, are doing excellent work in visiting business houses urging them to use the label on all their goods. Mrs. Snover is president and Mrs. Kofer is secretary. The Federation is an auxiliary to No. 6.

The foreman and assistant foreman of the Herald stereotyping department were expelled from their unions last month. Both have resorted to the courts for reinstatement. A charge of conduct unbecoming a member of the union was brought against them, which included many specifications, and the union by a two-third vote turned them down. The decision of the courts is awaited with interest, and the particulars will be given you later if you wish to print them.

The Board of City Record awarded the bid for printing the City Record, a paper published daily by the city, to Henri Rogowski for $137,500. The Mail and Express got it last year for $203,000. Martin B. Brown & Co. and The Mail and Express were the other bidders. Rogowski's bond for $37,500 was investigated by the Mayor and a defect found which might invalidate his bid. The Mail and Express was ordered to continue printing the City Record while the matter was more fully investigated, which carries it over to the Tammany administration and may never be heard of again.

Samples of Porphyry and Quartz Gold Ore

Have just arrived from the "Printer Group," near Dixie, Idaho, which were sent to the Company by its President, Mr. Bailey. This ore can be seen at the Company's office in Room 312, Colorado Bldg.
This Thunder Mountain formation is said to be the World's Most Curious Ore

It really looks like it was the product of volcanic eruptions, which it is supposed to be. Call and examine it for your own information.
These samples were taken from the tunnel on the "Pica" claim, which is now in about fifteen feet. Mr. Bailey says that "At every shot the ore looks more alive, and my hopes rise accordingly." This ore carries values now of $10 to the ton, which is already beyond our expectations Samples have been sent to an assayer in Boise, Idaho, and results of same will soon reach Washington.
Stock is selling very fast and many will be surprised when we announce in a few weeks the small amount we have left of the 100,000 shares now offered. Prominent business men and investors are convinced of the stability and future outcome of this investment.
Stock is selling at

while this first allotment lasts, but it is practically certain that if any more is offered to the public it will be at a higher figure, owing to the fine showing made by deep development and the new claim recently added.

It is the big low-grade mining propositions that appeal to the experienced mining man and mill operator. As a general thing it is the low-grade mines which pay the most dividends and whose existence are continued for years, where a really rich mine is of short duration
We know that high-grade ore appeals to the cupidity and imagination of the tenderfoot and the public at large, and that people will go into raptures over a few inches of exceedingly rich mineral; but, in the long run, the mine with vast bodies of milling ore in its workings will win out and maintain a paying basis long after the small vein of shipping ore has become exhausted, and it has been truly stated that a foot of ore that yields from $60 to $80 in the precious and baser metals is not to be compared in value and source of profit to the eight or ten-foot body of $5, $10 and $12 ore.—Salt Lake Mining Review.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Second Division.

We wish the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST a Happy New Year.

A. L. Lowe is always the winner in the 2.30 race to the wash room.

Dr. J. B. Trudgian has been on the sick list during the past week, suffering from rheumatism.

J. B. G. McElroy drew the Christmas turkey that was raffled off in this division last Thursday and W. C. Beddow the fruit cake.

H. S. Edington, the jolly silent man, is superintendent and general overseer of the electric lights of this division. He loves to shove the electric button.

There are four Joneses, two Williamses, two Lowes, two Millers, and only one Smith—just think of it—and ninety-eight other men in this division.

C. L. Nace is a candidate for chairman of this division, subject to the suffrage of its membership at the next election, which comes off on the first Wednesday in January.

J. E. Colton was called to the city of New Orleans recently on account of the very sudden death of his sister. Bro. Colton has the sincere sympathy of the entire division in his sad bereavement.

G. W. Shaed, who, during the past three months, has been suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism, has now about recovered and is again able to perform his daily routine at slug 82.

The subject of electing the chairman of this division by a majority instead of by a plurality vote is being discussed quite extensively. It would no doubt be a fairer method of electing than the present one.

The handicap race between V. F. Howard, Charles Indermauer, and Courtney C. Thayer is still on the boards. We can't say exactly, though, when it will come off or what the "steaks" will be.

David Eccles, J. H. Swerdfiger, T. J. Galvin, A. S. Jones, Jesse W. Morgan, J. M. Burton, J. A. Massey, and H. S. Cady were temporarily detailed over on the Spess last week. We look for them back soon.

This division made the three laborers, Frank Bell, M. M. Peace, Courtney C. Thayer and Messenger D. R. Hallers a neat little Christmas present last Thursday, in the shape of a silk stocking containing $1.65 to each man.

F. A. Tuck wishes it generally understood that he is not a candidate for chairman at the next election. Ditto "Deacon" Wright. It looks like Nace will have a clear field, or as matters now stand, a battle royal between the giant and the dwarf. Our money is on the dwarf.

Joe Silverberg took possession and snugly locked up his coat and hat in a new fangled-locker the other day. When the whistle blew, the lock failing to work, he was unable to secure either coat or hat. Consequences: No coat, no hat, no lunch; a much preturbed and very mad Joe.

C. J. Sheriff, secretary of the Second Division Assurance Association, with modesty and timidity both personified, took exception to the flowers that were thrown at the officers of that organization by your correspondent. Well, we couldn't help but throw them, and all of them were but a small tribute, indeed, to sterling honesty and faithfulness.

Frank Hoover met with a severe accident several weeks ago in a runaway, injuring his right arm and shoulder so severely that it has been impossible for him to work at the case. The proof room authorities very kindly gave him a temporary position in the proof room during his convalescence, which he has ably held. The members of this division all wish that his promotion to a seat among the solons would happily prove to be permanent.

Senator Hoar introduced a resolution in the Senate recently in which he objected to the kind of type in which the Record is set and instructed the Committee on Printing to ascertain if it would not be possible to have it set in type that would be easier to read. If it is difficult to read the Record as it is, it is reasonable to infer that it could scarcely be read at all if it was set on machines and printed from electrotypes made from machine slugs.

Third Division.

A happy New Year to all!

E. G. Nalle and "Ajax" Griffith returned from the Spess Monday morning.

The little lunch lady visited the division last Thursday to wish everybody a Merry Christmas, and was liberally remembered by the boys.

Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, was an interested listener at the meeting of Columbia Union, No. 101, last Sunday.

The following has been handed in as a likely ticket for delegates to St. Louis in 1904: John R. Berg, Titus F. Ellis, Miss Anna M. Wilson, and T. C. Parsons.

James Jenkins, laborer, and Richard Taylor, helper, our efficient colored press hands, were the recipients of a liberal donation of cash the day before Christmas.

There is imminent danger that the building will sag on the south of the room, for the north side has lost two of its heavy men—and "Blood" Thornton is still with us.

It isn't wise to crow too much, we know. But we have it on the authority of a well known proofreader that the proofs submitted by the Third Division are the cleanest, on the whole, of any day force in the office.

There is a movement on foot among the down-town men to push the claims of T. C. Parsons, of the Times chapel, for a place among the delegates to be chosen to represent this city in next year's I. T. U. convention.

There were six transfers to the Specification Division recently: John Delahunty, Harry W. Arthur, Edward A. Hall, Walter S. ("Ajax") Griffith, W. L. Washburne, and Joseph I. Keefer, making ten in all from this division.

Here's hoping that the turkey was young and tender, and done to a turn; that all had good appetites for the toothsome dainties that were spread before them; and that no poor sinner inquired for Bromo Seltzer "the morning after."

At the meeting of G. P. O. Council, No. 211, National Union, held last Saturday night it was ordered that a testimonial suitable for the occasion be presented to William H. Hickman on New Year's Day, with the kindest wishes of the Council for its former officer and charter member.

The great popularity of William H. Hickman, foreman of the old Second Division, now confined to his home by illness, is continually in evidence. The day before Christmas he was presented with a basket of choice fruit and a bottle of champagne, with hearty good wishes, by the boys of the Third.

Joseph I. Keefer, who held down frame 96, is said to be a lineal descendant of the Washington family, tracing his ancestry to the wife of the Father of his Country. There is still held as one of the choicest possessions of Mr. Keefer's family the cradle in which Washington was rocked when a child.

Reduced to its lowest terms this machine matter is simply a strong bid by the Merganthaler Company for business. No more, no less. And what under the heaven these down-town operators mean by trying to offer advice to workmen in the G. P. O., is more than I can conceive. They profess to be well and happy and to have good jobs. To quote Mr. Pafflow, "Then let them dry up!"

A rattling bowling game was played December 22 by two teams representing this division. The score follows:

FIRST TEAM.	1st.	2d.	3d.
Sherman	....	160	126

As 'Manuel passed down the room the other day, he was "interviewed" by one of the boys. It transpired that his name—the one he uses on state occasions—is Mr. Thomas. Some curiosity being expressed as to the exact spelling of his first name, our sable friend remarked, "Most people call me Manyul, but dat ain't right. Mah proper name is E-man-u-EL. It's a Bible name, and the last end wants to be spoke hard, like dis, E-man-u-EL. Dat EL means strong!" And 'Manuel waltzed down the room, crying, "Milk ma-an!"

We have all heard the expression "bughouse." Well, last week I saw one. It was in the possession of the only real expert on bugology to be found in the division, Chas. S. Davis, the slug man, and it contained a very fine specimen of the American silk-worm moth, which Mr. Davis had mounted and inclosed in a box with a glass top, so you could look in without disturbing the bug, which also has another unpronounceable name that I can't remember. The moth was surrounded with other specimens, showing its original form as a worm; then in the act of spinning its cocoon; lastly, when quite ready to shed its overcoats and delight the beholder in its brilliant butterfly costume.

Curtin gave a free feed Christmas Eve and all the regulars on such occasions were present. Joe Meehan ate more pigtails than ever before, which is saying a great deal; George Barnes, though having only one good hand, maintained his usual reputation, while Johnny Burns dispatched more pig than was believed possible for one man.

Wm. C. Connor received a number of presents from his friends, both male and female. One of his presents was a live turtle which he carried home and deposited in the bath tub. He is feeding it on celery and lettuce, in the meanwhile looking about for a chef properly qualified to cook it for him. It is feared that some evening he may come home and, forgetting there is another occupant of the bath tub, step in it. The probable result is too horrible to contemplate.

This is the day of the duns as well as good resolutions, among others, "all cash transactions in the future." Just here let me interpolate that the second greatest curse—kindly put second in italic—with which the world of Washington is afflicted is the credit system.

From a reputable Illinois source I learn that Senator Cullom, of that State, will in the near future introduce an arbitration measure looking to the betterment of the conditions of labor and capital. The difficulty about the majority of these blanket cures is they fail to hold water. Before the ink is dry some fly lawyer comes along and picks them full of holes. However, the constitution and by-laws of the Territory of Hawaii were drafted by that gentleman, and the interstate commerce act—that intermediary between the shipper and the carrier—born, I believe, in the brain of the late John H. Oberly, was piloted to success by Judge Reagan in the House and Governor Cullom in the Senate. With this knowledge in mind, there is reason to hope that the measure in question will not suffer the fate of its predecessors.

An Old-Time Printer.

The following lines were written by an old time printer, now in his eighty-sixth year, a veteran of two wars, and now employed in the Treasury Department:

Perhaps not many of the typos now living commenced the "printers' devilship" like myself, some sixty five years ago

During that period of time it has been my good—or evil—fortune to fill, as best I could, every position in a printing office.

The troubles of "the devil," the ups and downs of the compositor, pressman and foreman, have all been mine; and, for some time following, the responsibilities of an edition were mine also.

Like many of the printers of "ye ancient times," I was one who always tried to get a hundred cents worth of fun out of a dollar—and I believe I succeeded.

Thank God, in taking a retrospective view of the past, I find much it is a a pleasure to remember and but little to regret.

I pray that such, with more of pleasure and profit added—and less of the reverse—may be your portion.

Sitting a few days ago among some typos (many of whose span of life did not reach the half of mine) swopping reminiscences of our past, the following occurred to me:

THE PRINTER'S DEVIL.

Has time from any typo hid
The days when he was but a kid?
Or Printer's devil.

How when he wished to "learn a trade"
A friend for him the contract made.
The Printer's devil.

When every printer puts him through
The chores he always has to do.
The Printer's devil.

He feels he has no chance or say
And thinks he soon will run away.
The Printer's devil.

He wishes he had stayed at school
And not been such a cursed fool.
The Printer's devil.

Before a month of time has turn'd
He's sorry that "damned trade he learned."
The Printer's devil.

He soon finds out when he can seize
A little time to take his ease.
The Printer's devil.

He sneaks away one side to smoke
While thinking up some scaly joke.
The Printer's devil.

All liking cake yet hating "pi"
When made in "hell" he sticks so sly.
The Printer's devil.

And when the rascal's work is done
Away he goes in search of fun.
The Printer's devil.

Just watch him when the boss is by
Twigging him with roguish eye.
The Printer's devil.

And when the time comes on apace
That he is put to work at case.
The Printer's devil.

He is the imp by all reports
The very worst at "stealing sorts."
The Printer's devil.

He's sure to get by hook or crook
The "fattest take upon the hook."
The Printer's devil.

But that's a trick they all will learn
Before their grub they have to earn.
The Printer's devil.

Men seldom give a single thought,
How much of brain their money bought;
And few are they who care to think,
How much they owe to printer's ink.
And—Printer's devil.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

From the New York Press.

Once a widow, always willing.

A nice thing about Leap Year is that the girl can say yes before the man asks her.

Some men are so lazy they couldn't move fast even to keep from freezing to death.

The best a man can do in explaining to his wife why he hadn't any love for her relatives is that she has it all.

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. VIII. No. 30. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, JANUARY 7, 1904. Price, 3 Cents.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order last Monday evening at Typographical Temple by President Sherman at the usual hour.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and approved.

The semi-annual election of officers being a special order of business for the evening brought out a large attendance, the various candidates being groomed by their friends, and a general mixing with the delegates made the contest an exciting one.

The Legislative Committee reported having appeared before the Commissioner in the hearing for application of the Great Falls Railway entering into the city. They also reported that they were assured that in the construction of the road none but union labor would be employed upon the road.

The election consumed the rest of the evening, and resulted in the election of the following officers:

President—H. W. Sherman (re-elected).

Vice-President—John H. Brinkman.

Recording Secretary—Chas. W. Winslow (re-elected).

Financial Secretary—R. G. M. Ross.

Treasurer—J. M. Heisley (re-elected).

Sergeant-at-Arms—Samuel Becket.

SKETCH OF THE OFFICERS ELECTED.

HARRY W. SHERMAN, now filling his second term as president of the Central Labor Union, is general secretary of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, with headquarters in this city. He has few superiors as a debater on the floor, and is a good parliamentarian. That he has given satisfaction in the chair is shown by his re-election over John H. Brinkman, a man who has many supporters and is a close second to Mr. Sherman in the choice of the council.

JOHN H. BRINKMAN is one of the old guard in the Central Labor Union, having served as its secretary in the past and seen its growth from a few unions to its present roll of nearly 100. He is a representative from Local No. 72, Carriage and Wagon Workers' Union, and is always willing to go on the rostrum to aid struggling unions to better their conditions, being gifted with a clear, strong voice and a pleasing address, and well-posted on the questions of the day.

CHAS. W. WINSLOW, the recording secretary, is a representative of Local No. 5, Bridge and Structural Iron Workers. He is serving his fourth term as secretary, and as a worker in his union his worth is recognized, having been its delegate to the Kansas City convention, where he was chosen as a representative of the International to the American Federation of Labor.

R. G. M. ROSS, the financial secretary, is a representative of Local 102, Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers. He is a close student of questions bearing on labor and political economy and has received many evidences of the regard and esteem in which he is held in by his local union.

J. M. HEISLEY, the treasurer, enjoys the distinction of being re-elected to that office so often that no one has kept "tab" on him any longer. He is the guardian of the treasury and received his election by acclamation. Mr. Heisley is one of the oldest union men in the city, and he is held in the highest esteem among his fellow craftsmen, the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

SAMUEL BECKET, the sergeant-at-arms, is a member of Ceramic, Mosaic, and Eucaustic Tile Layers' Helpers' Union, No. 2, and has been a delegate to the Central Labor Union for several years.

JERE F. MCCARTHY, president of the Board of Auditors, is well known as the representative of the Bartenders' League. He has a host of admirers in the Central Labor Union and in his own organization, having served his union at the last meeting of the International at Philadelphia, where he was chosen one of the National Executive Board.

MOSES PEYTON, of the Board of Auditors, is a representative of Local No. 21, Hod Carriers and Building Laborers' Union, whose business agent he is, and that he is well regarded by his union is shown by the fact that he is trusted implicitly by it in all business transactions between the union and employers.

JOHN G. SCHMIDT, of the Board of Trustees, is a representative from Bakers Union, No. 118, and also serves his union as secretary and business agent. He is an ardent unionist and is a fighter for the label on all union products, being an active member of the Allied Label League.

ON PARK ROW.

One of the features of New York City life is the number of places that cater to the worker in the business section, and none are so plentiful as the restaurants and chop houses, some of which have a history going back for a half century or more.

Park Row, with all its wealth of associations with affairs that pertain to the printing of great metropolitan dailies, has one establishment that has a reputation known across the continent and from North to South. That place is Dolan's.

Starting over thirty years ago on the Row, near Ann street, Pat Dolan established a business that grew with his popularity, particularly among the printing craftsmen, on account of his warm interest in their welfare.

The old place being too small for his increased business, Dolan moved up the Row near Beekman street, where he has been for the past twelve years. Here he has retained the same measure of popularity that always marked his dealings with his printer friends, the walls of the establishment being covered with handsome engrossed resolutions from various labor organizations attesting their gratitude for favors extended, two being from "Big Six." He is, and always has been, a warm friend of trades unions, and at a time when friends counted—in the old dark days before the era of the A. F. of L.

That the reader may understand the growth of Dolan's, it may be stated that when he started in business three waiters could handle his customers, while to-day he caters to 5,000 persons daily, and his receipts amount to $300,000 yearly. That he is well off in this world's goods can be attested by his rating in Bradstreet's, which places him above all other men in his business.

The establishment is now in charge of John Meehan, a nephew of Dolan's, who also enjoys a large acquaintance among printers. He served as a school commissioner under Mayor Van Wyck and retains the esteem of all the Old Guard in "Big Six" for his many acts of kindness and courtesy in aiding the union on more than one occasion.

Treasury Division.

Miss Mary I. Morgan, temporary, was dropped from the rolls some time ago.

James B. Williamson (Uncle Jimmie) has been on the sick list for the past two weeks.

Miss Emily C. Shaw, temporary, was assigned to the folding room of this division Saturday.

Miss Ellen A. Featherstone is absent from the office on account of the critical illness of her mother.

A. L. Bodwell, C. W. Herzinger, and C. C. Semmes were transferred to the main office about three weeks ago.

Ed. L. Winne entertained a number of his old friends New Year's night. There were about forty present and all report a jolly good time.

George H. Healey, the Government Printing Office pitcher, who the Specification correspondent says the Washington management has decided to sign, is maker-up in this division.

John W. Martin was called to his home, near Asheville, N. C., about a month ago on account of the illness of his sister, who died shortly after his arrival. He has the sympathy of all in his loss.

E. S. Van Norman and George H. Healey returned from leave this week. They have been spending the holidays with relatives and friends at their homes in New York and Indiana, respectively.

Arthur P. Ferl, for several years an employe of this division, now assistant foreman of the Government Printing Office, Manila, P. I., remembered his old friends during the holidays by sending the ladies pieces of fancy work made by natives and good cigars to the boys. It is needless to say that this annual treat from Arthur is highly appreciated by all.

SUBSCRIBER.

Woman's Auxiliary, No. 13.

Woman's Auxiliary, No. 13, of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, elected the following officers at the regular meeting held Wednesday, December 30, 1903: President, Miss L. B. Gordon; vice president, Mrs. O. D. Hyler; secretary, Mrs. N. M. McMichael; treasurer, Miss Carrie Whitehead; chaplain, Mrs. A. W. Bowen; pianist, Mrs. C. H. Slack; sergeant-at-arms, Miss Anna Wilson.

President Gordon will announce committees at next meeting.

That the action of the Woman's Auxiliary in sending a Christmas gift to the inmates of the Printers' Home, at Colorado Springs, is fully appreciated, the following letter testifies:

UNION PRINTERS' HOME,
COLORADO SPRINGS, December 30, 1903.

Woman's Auxiliary of Columbia Typo. Union, No. 101, Washington, D. C.:

At a chapel meeting, held by the venerable printers of this institution on the 25th day of December, for the purpose of extending their most sincere thanks to the different Auxiliaries and Unions who were so generous and thoughtful as to remember the boys out here by sending to each some very appropriate and appreciative Christmas present, I was chosen as a member of a committee of three to represent the members of Columbia Union, No. 101, who are now residents at the Home, in that capacity, and I am authorized by each of said members to express their appreciation to the members of the Auxiliary of Columbia Union for the neatly-designed present presented to each one, and the gift itself shows that our fair sisters and their sex are capable of designing.

The faithful old knights of the "stick-and-rule" fame of bygone days who are now in the Home recognize the true worth of that august body known as the "Women's Auxiliary," and it is their earnest desire that such an organization may soon be connected with every local Union throughout the country, and that in the near future they may have a Home for their worthy members who have served their days of usefulness as wage-earners.

We also desire and would appreciate the earnest co-operation of the different Auxiliaries in regard to the proposed Cummings Memorial Building, which is to be in the shape of an annex to the present building, with a library, and increased capacity for thirty or forty inmates (said annex now being a case of absolute necessity), and bearing a suitable inscription of our late champion and fellow-craftsman, Hon. Amos J. Cummings, and we feel assured your organization can render much valuable assistance for this worthy cause.

Again thanking you for the Christmas greeting, I remain,

Yours fraternally,
GEO. D. COLQUITT.

Third Division.

Night work seems to be the rule now.

Joseph E. Goodkey has announced himself as a candidate for delegate to the American Federation of Labor.

Chairman Goldstein returned Tuesday morning from a trip to Tammany town, where he had been staying since New Year's Eve.

When I see in the paper the news that the mercury has dropped to 36 below zero in Rhode Island, I fancy I did a wise thing when I emigrated.

Mr. E. C. Saltzman, the blond young man who officiates as a sort of president of our banking system, spent Saturday in the wilds of Brookland.

One evening a week or ten days ago we had four kinds of "hurried copy" on our frames at once. While we were in the thick of it, I heard Mr. Bass say as he passed me, "If we keep on this way, I guess we'll have a grand stand finish."

Eight of our men were transferred to the Night Bill Force on Monday of this week, as follows: F. T. Razey, F. M. Claflin, Frank R. McFadyen, W. J. Phillips, Theodore Gerber, Warner L. Wilmeth, Wm. H. Harrison, and James B. Huss, the two last named being temporary men.

A report was circulated Tuesday morning that Razey had made the race for chairman of the Night Bill Force chapel, with the result that he got 17 votes and the other fellow got all the rest. Whereat Slug 45 (new) remarked in deep voice, "You don't want to buy chips till you take off your overcoat."

Kindly allow me to suggest to those who are in too great a hurry to let the dirty water out of the wash-bowls after they have finished washing their hands, that it looks as if they had had been accustomed to washing in a mud-puddle before coming to the G. P. O. I am confident that such is not the case, and that the erring brethren are only careless; but it ill becomes any employe of this great printery to leave his dirt for his neighbor to clean up.

There appears to be much ignorance concerning the proper pronunciation of our chairman's last name, many addressing him as Mr. Gold*steen*. If those same people were buying beer, for instance (we say "for instance," as the Third Division boys are remarkable for abstemious habits), they wouldn't have to ask the growler-man what he was drawing the beer into; they would say "stein" and end the matter. Just remember that it rhymes with "fine," and having pity on our affable chairman, call him by his right name.

Know all men by these presents, that T. Frank Hall is the Third Division's own candidate for delegate to St. Louis. Mr. Hall deserves well of Columbia Union. He has been employed in the Government Printing office so long that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, and has worked in nearly every division, including the Spess. He has been a sensible, consistent Union man with large ideas upon current topics of interest to the craft, and has always worked for the good of the membership. We bespeak for him a large vote. His undoubted popularity will go far toward placing him at the head of the list when the ballots are counted.

"Si" says—what, don't know who "Si" is? Why, Simons, to be sure—that if I don't mention his name this week he will quit taking the paper. He should know that one should do something out of the ordinary in order to be "mentioned." But "Si" merely keeps jolly under any and all circumstances, and insists upon keeping everybody else jolly. Rapley Milton says (if you think that is too much of a mouthful you may call him "Rap" for short) that "Si" is a cheerful idiot; but I think he is jealous of Si's happy disposition. No matter how sulphurous and over heated are the comments on Si's savings and doings, he never loses his temper; the worst thing I ever heard him say was "Gol ding it" even when in the throes of a toothache. "Si" is the light of alley 7. More power to him.

Good Reading.

We received a copy of Country Life in America, a high-class publication of 72 pages, published monthly by Doubleday, Page & Co., New York, N. Y., and Harrisburg, Pa.

The publication is a credit to its printers, the J. Horace McFarland Co., of Harrisburg, Pa., the highest standard of excellence being maintained throughout. It is printed on coated book paper and profusely illustrated, the half tone work being brought out to perfection. The publication treats of outdoor life and conditions and is well worth its price to its readers.

In purchasing goods from advertisers in this paper, do not fail to mention the fact that you saw the advertisement in THE TRADES UNIONIST.

Bindery Notes.

"Pop" (Joe) Burns says the celebration of New Year's day in Philadelphia was great.

Frank Poulson has been transferred from the job department to the map-mounting room, filling the place of the late lamented Thos. D. Murphy.

Ed Roche, of the caseing-in department, has been elected a member of the arbitration board to succeed Henry Shureman, whose term has expired.

Dick Wolf, of the job finishing room, after squeezing his ashes and pulling all all the heat he could from the cinders, decided to buy another ton of coal at $4.25.

Since George Reynolds gave Major Fredericks a cigar the other day the Major has been spitting fire, brimstone, and rubber, not to mention what he swallowed. The Major says George is no gentleman.

Joe Berger, a "cow puncher," has the slickest way of making a "touch" for a "V" that could possibly be conceived. Joe first gets the "V" and then, from the goodness of his heart, makes you an empty pocketbook.

Johnny Burns, better known as "Baldy Pickles," one of the cow punchers, says he can't understand why the "Major" gives him such a large drove of cows every time he doesn't feel well. Johnny, the Major is on to you.

"Billie," said Al Summers to his friend Billie Gallagher, as he slipped a twenty-five cent band over a two-for-five cent cigar, "Smoke one of my imported Flora de fumes." Billie did so, but says if he had any leave coming to him he would take it to recuperate.

"Shorty" (Billie) Welsh expresses himself somewhat in this fashion: "De only regret what I got is dis: I ain't got no chance to holler fire! fight! etc., when de gents play a quiet game of cards at noon time since de bunch came down from de Union Building."

What might have proved a disruption between friends happened in the finishing room on Tuesday last. Charley Knockey claimed a straight edge from Sam Wakefield by reason of marks he had placed there before the war. The contention was settled by Charley gracefully (?) acknowledging the ownership to Sam Wakefield, chief of the Takoma fire department.

"Cap" (George) White, although terribly afflicted, has always been considered harmless, and St. Elizabeth's, in his case, has always been a remote idea; his recent attack on Ed Pumphry's eye, however, has given the impression that he is becoming dangerous and should be looked after. Ed says he is perfectly willing to drive the closed carriage if any one will have the courage to get in and hold "Cap" until he gets across the Anacostia.

An Innovation.

Chicago Typographical Union, No. 16, has amended its law governing the charge for initiation fees. Applicants not over twenty-three years of age will pay $10 initiation fee; over twenty-three years of age, $10, and $1 for each additional year added to applicant's age.

Registered Drug Clerks, No. 240.

At the next meeting of Registered Drug Clerks Union, No. 240, R.C.I.P.A., Friday, January 8, 1904, the following officers will be installed: Samuel H. Deckman, president; J. S. Gallagher, first vice-president; F. T. Hafelfinger, second vice-president; M. Herndon, recording secretary; F. B. Ketchum, financial secretary, and C. F. Collins, treasurer.

Since its institution in this city there is no organization that has accomplished so much for the well-being of its members as No. 240, and in doing so they have also secured the active co-operation of their employers, who have in many ways aided the new organization and are in perfect accord with it.

This office desires to acknowledge the receipt of two invitations to the first annual ball to be given by No. 240 at Masonic Temple, Tuesday evening, January 12, 1904. We feel assured that the ball will be a success in the hands of the members of No. 240.

ALLIED BUILDING TRADES.

Meeting of January 5, 1904.

Meeting called to order by the secretary. In the absence of chairman and vice chairman, Delegate Stevens was chosen to preside.

Minutes of previous meeting read and approved.

Credentials from Carpenters and Joiners, No. 884, certifying to Joseph Reilly, vice C. R. Richardson, were read, received, and delegate seated.

Delegates Silver, Ratigan, and King reported from Central Labor Union, which report was accepted.

Delegate Sheets, from special committee on Steam Fitters, reported progress. Accepted.

ROLL CALL.

Granite Cutters reported the employment of building trades men (on the new union depot) working ten hours; also, that Miller had worked on struck job in ignorance of their being anything wrong on the job.

Delegate Reilly moved that it be the sense of the Central Allied Building Trades that the man Miller worked on job through ignorance.

Whole matter laid on the table one week.

Delegate Seiben asked to be granted the privilege of floor to make report of meeting relative to Plumbers, Marble Workers, and Marble Workers' Helpers. Agreed to.

Delegate Seiben asked that Delegates Thompson and Ratigan be requested to appear before Central Labor Union committee Thursday night. Request granted.

Hod Carriers reported that the Business Agent had rendered them some little assistance, and asked that the secretary send copy of agreement to Master Builders' Association.

NEW BUSINESS.

Delegate Ratigan moved that the Council of Allied Building Trades go on record as being opposed to the admission of Amalgamated Carpenters to Central Labor Union until such time as the Amalgamated Carpenters make amends to Council of Allied Building Trades by withdrawing all their men from struck jobs and abiding by rules of Council of Allied Building Trades. Carried.

Moved by Delegate Reilly that the secretary prepare a letter, giving the causes of the strike, for the use of secretaries, and send to the national officers of the Plumbers and Marble Setters, asking their aid in the settlement of the strike. Carried.

Delegate Thompson moved that the secretary notify unions to send fair list. Carried.

Secretary was directed to ask that John H. Nolan's case be brought to the attention of the board of arbitration.

Adjourned.

Little Union Cafe.

The Little Union Cafe, No. 16 G street northwest, is the latest lunch room in the Swamp desiring to cater to G. P. O. employes. Mr. Hummer, the manager, is desirous of doing what he can to please his patrons, and has had his little experience with the label on printing that shows he is awake to the opportunity. On learning its necessity, he promptly consigned all printed matter not bearing the label to the flames and orded a new lot of label printing.

Hall No 1, "Building Trades Halls," 610 G street northwest, is open daily from 8 o'clock a. m. until 5 p. m. as a reading room to all members of building trades unions affiliated with the Council of Allied Building Trades.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

The beautiful remembrance sent by Government Printing Office Council, National Union, on New Year's Eve, to William H. Hickman, late foreman of the Second Division, whose long illness has brought him the sympathy of all, deeply affected him. The token consisted of a splendid box of roses and a dozen of champagne, accompanied by a card, in the copperplate hand of Joe Dierken, containing the greeting, good wishes, and sympathy of the council. He commissioned me to extend his deep gratitude not only to G. P. O. Council, but to all who have shown such kindly interest and sympathy during the long period of his suffering, and to give his assurance that these evidences of friendship and good feeling are appreciated to the fullest extent.

Again I have been honored with an invitation "to attend the nineteenth annual banquet and ball given by the Old Time Printers' Association, Monday evening, January 18, 1904, in honor of the birthday of Benjamin Franklin, at the Sherman House, Chicago, at 7 o'clock." The Committee of Arrangements, many of whose names are familiar to me, and many more of which will be recognized by our people whose Chicago experience is more extensive than mine, is composed of the following: Samuel Rastall (chairman), William Mill (secretary, 623 Hoyne avenue), Oliver H. Perry, D. J. Hynes, James A. Bond, Wm. Hack, Nicholas Welsh, Abraham McCutcheon, Fred K. Tracy, William Pigott, A. B. Adair, John W. Troy, John S. Burke, John Anderson, Charles N. Bond, P. J. Cahtll, Fred Barnard, M. J. Carroll, M. H. Madden, Jos. C. Snow, John Canty, Chas. Brown, C. M. Moore, and James J. Schock. These annual banquets and balls of the Old-Time Printers' Association are among the most delightful of all printerdom, and I would wish nothing better than to be able to attend.

Dr. DeWitt C. Chadwick was the recipient on Christmas of a beautiful cut-glass water set, accompanied by a card indicating that it was from "a few personal friends in the G. P. O." That the Doctor is highly pleased by this manifestation of the regard of his friends and late associates need not be stated, and the friendships begotten during his long years of association with them are not weakened because of the fact that his life work brings him less in contact with them.

From the fact that immediately on the occurrence of the terrible disaster at the Iroquois Theater in Chicago the cab drivers voted to go back to work for a short period regardless of hours, wages, or whether they were to receive any wages whatever, and from the further fact that one of the most prominent "bosses" at once said, "Now we've got 'em just where we want 'em—no more pleading the union as a reason for doing this or not doing that," I am inclined to think that my friend August Donath was unduly excited about "the present indecent interference with the proper interment of the dead" a couple of weeks ago. He had only made the unfortunately too frequent mistake of believing what the Associated Press said, forgetting that that organization does not fail to misrepresent the facts on every occasion regarding organized labor, having in that way arrayed a public sentiment against unionism in the past that is disappearing as its mendacity becomes understood. Private advices from Chicago regarding the cab drivers' strike show the falsity of the Associated Press reports.

J. Harry Malees, who worked on the Night Bill Force last session, made a trip to this city one day last week, and on returning home found an appointment awaiting him, whereupon he at once came back, arriving last Saturday. He comes from Warwick, N. Y., a town that is also responsible for Joe Babcock and Jack Edsall, who were apprentices under him thirty or forty years ago or more. He worked for many years on the New York Tribune in Greeley's time and was familiar with the old man's famous peculiarities. I hope he will become a permanency with us—as permanent as any of us, I mean.

Did you ever notice how much funnier other people's bulls are than your own? I can still remember Billy Dunn's glee over "Hick's" date line, which read "Thubsday," on the old National Republican, and how his own "arrears of snow" in a weather report in the same paper caused the rest of us to double up with laughter, but didn't seem a bit funny to Billy. I can also remember how I smiled over Sam Phillips's and Boss Wheat's "wild animals" for "rare minerals," a long time ago, and what little amusement I got out of my own "Blessed are the poor in heart" later on. Come to think of it, a joke on the other fellow is always more amusing than one on me.

* * * *

I heard the other day that Tom Bynum and Edgar Merritt are getting into training for the presidential race this year. Each "led the ticket" in the delegatorial races, respectively, of 1902 and 1903, whatever that may be worth, though, if both run, that fact, of necessity, can not be a guaranty of success when the presidency is the goal. I have heard of another probable candidate, whose name I am not at liberty to mention, who will give them a run for their money if he decides to enter the field. We also have Dan Vaughan to hear from, for it is not yet definitely known what direction his ambition will take. It is a free-for-all event and I would like to see a number of entries. It is a little early yet, but I would like to start something.

"Now is the winter of our discontent"—
Of snow we must keep our walks clean,
Pay big bills for coal and also for rent,
And worry about the machine.

I met John L. Kennedy the other day and had a long talk with him. But pshaw!—let's not talk any more about the machine.

* * * *

My friend J. Ligon King seems anxious to spring another lady candidate for delegate, but it's useless. Miss Anna Wilson has the inside track by being the first in the field and by having the support of our lady members themselves. The safest and only way to guarantee that no lady will be elected is to get another into the field, if that is what Ligon wants, which I don't think it is.

That's a cracking good letter we're getting in THE TRADES UNIONIST from New York, and I hope my friend will keep it up. His New Year greeting to the undersigned is warmly reciprocated.

I hear that Charlie Hawkes will contest Jim Lynch's re-election to the I. T. U presidency. Charlie is a bright man, but Lynch is too big a man in every respect to be traded off for any other at this juncture. He has demonstrated his ability in every emergency that has arisen.

All the legal holidays this year will come on Monday, except Christmas, and we would add as a warning to gentleman that this is "leap year."

It is well that the Government controls its own printing, and there is a feeling abroad that the people would be benefitted if the telegraph and other public utilities were brought under similar control.

The times are improving, if anything, for with the very liberal appraisement put upon the office of President the list is growing larger each day of those who come up to the standard of Presidential possibilities.

We might envy the country editor if we did not know that those exceptionally large eggs which are laid on his table by country subscribers call for a fifty-cent "puff," and that at a time when eggs are selling at fifteen instead of thirty-five or forty cents a dozen.

Public interest is aroused whenever John L. Webster, of Nebraska, is mentioned as a possible candidate for Vice President, for the name suggests a quality of statesmanship which prevailed at an earlier period. To those who have learned to lisp the name of Sullivan the selection would at once enlist the sympathy and support of all who swore by John L. so long as there was anything left of him; and, too, Nebraska is a good State to hail from.

I see no harm in suggesting names as they occur of those who have performed valiant service in Columbia Union, and who by reason of said service are entitled to consideration which would be a recognition and at the same time reflect creditably upon the membership. I have a hat full of names suggested, and the first one from the bunch is that of W. N. Brockwell, though not in his handwriting. Capital delegate timber, and this is the year for a strong and active delegation.

The Carnegie Steel Company of Homestead, Pa., turned over an old leaf the first of January by announcing a reduction of wages to its employes, and following this came the harrowing intelligence that resistance to the reduction by employes is liable to upset all plans of export trade which the Steel Company had been figuring on, to say nothing of the embarrassment which may come to our good friend Carnegie in his work of library building and other schemes of great public phianthrophy, and all at a cost of great personal sacrifice. What a shame!

Compliments of the season between Captain Ramsey, foreman of Specifications, and Mr. Babson, chief of Issue and Gazette Division, took the range of something more than mere pleasantry, and the indorsement of Commissioner Allen as to the excellency of the completed year's work was high praise when it is known that Mr. Allen, besides writing his own legal opinions and who is engrossed with the higher duties of his office, gives personal attention to every detail and has raised the standard of efficiency to a mark which calls for the very best results obtainable. The laity of the Specification Division realize the exactions of the work and are pleased when acknowledgement is made by those in authority and who bear the greater responsibility, but who are too often lacking in words of appreciation.

CYCLE.

JOE BAMBERGER'S ANNIVERSARY

Twenty-five Years of Faithful Service on the "Baltimore Herald."

The following, taken from the Baltimore Herald of recent date, will be of interest to many of our readers:

"Mr. Joseph W. Bamberger, foreman of the Morning Herald's composing room, completed his twenty-fifth year in the service of the paper last night. He joined the force on New Year's eve, 1878, when the Herald was a small four-page journal. He has remained at his post ever since and witnessed the gradual growth of the paper to six pages, to eight, to ten, and to twelve. When he entered the office the linotype was unheard of, daily illustrations were curiosities, and colored supplements never appeared to a printer or editor except in dreams. Journalism has been revolutionized in his time and he has kept pace with it. To-day there is no more thoroughly competent and up-to-date composing room chief in the country, as the typographical appearance of the Herald testifies.

"After seven years' service at the case Mr. Bamberger was made assistant foreman, in recognition of his excellent work. He served in that capacity for about six years, when he was given charge of the composing room. He is its foreman still.

"Mr. Bamberger is a member of the Baltimore Typographical Union. His home is on Greenmount avenue, near Preston street. Last night, in recognition of his long and valued services, he was given a bit of testimonial plate, suitably inscribed, in the name of the Herald Publishing Company.

"Despite his long service and patriarchal beard, Mr. Bamberger is still a young man, with his fiftieth birthday comfortably distant."

A. F of L. Headquarters.

The officers of the A. F. of. L., finding it necessary to acquire more room in their present quarters in Typographical Temple, have secured the basement on the west side of the building for a stockroom, and have extended the secretary's office into the room formerly used as a stockroom. This will give more room for the conduct of the work of the secretary, who has been cramped for want of room to properly handle the ever-increasing volume of work that the growth of the organization

The A. F. of L. now use fourteen rooms in suite in the Temple, being the sole occupant of the first floor and basement, and it is probable that more room will be needed at the pace in which the organization is growing.

At the Boston convention a resolution was introduced authorizing the Executive Council to report on the advisability of securing a building in this city for the sole use and occupancy of the A. F. of L., and report their findings to the next convention.

Washington "Post" Greeting.

The members of the Washington Post chapel have sent out a novel and artistic greeting to all union chapels of newspapers in this country, and prominent publications in Europe.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 6, 1904.

A New Year's greeting from the Washington Post chapel was sent to chapels throughout the world. Many of our local friends mistook it for a supplement to the Post's New Year's edition and called at the business office to make inquiries why it did not accompany their paper of that date.

We desire to inform our friends that the greeting was purely a chapel matter.

Journeymen Tailors' Union, No. 5, have put the ban on "open shops" by refusing to work for employers that employ non-union tailors The complaint on that score was that some of the employing tailors employed a few highly skilled union men to do their best work and gave out the rest of their work to non-union men.

Death of Henry O. Shepard.

Henry O. Shepard, of the Henry O. Shepard Company, publishers of the Inland Printer, died in Chicago, on December 31, 1903. Mr. Shepard had been in ill-health for the past two years, and his death was due to a complication of diseases.

As publisher of the Inland Printer, Mr. Shepard enjoyed a wide acquaintance among printers and publishers, and the high standard of excellence which the Inland Printer attained and still maintains is credited to his insistence on better conditions and results in conducting the publication.

Mr. Shepard went to Chicago from Norwich, N. Y., in 1871, and established a business that was second to none in high class printing, and many printers throughout the country can attest to his worth as a publisher and master printer.

Mr. Shepard was mentioned as a possible successor to Public Printer Palmer in the event of a change, but desired it understood that he was not seeking the position unless a vacancy was created in the office.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Attention, Ex-Delegates!

The Ex-Delegates' Association, of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, will meet next Sunday, January 10, 1904, at 2.30 p. m., Typographical Temple. Report of committee on by-laws and permanent organization.

W. R. RAMSEY,
J. T. HERBERT, President.
Secretary.

At the present writing it looks like the down-town delegate race will be a friendly contest between M. J. Maher, of the Star, and T. C. Parsons, of the Times.

Geo. P. Nichols, of Baltimore, made a flying trip to this city last Monday. As a past master in matters typographical, both local and I. T. U., "Nick" is in the front row.

Homer Dooley, of the Times, who has been dangerously ill with typhoid fever for the past three months, is greatly improved, and his complete recovery is shortly expected.

The many friends of Major John T. Herbert, of the Post, will be sorry to hear that the genial Major has been under the doctor's care in the past month. Here is hoping he will be about soon.

Tom C. Easterling, a well-known newspaper man of Charleston, W. Va., spent the holidays in this city. Mr. Easterling was a G. P. O. compositor a few years ago, having severed his connection with the office while on Specifications.

According to the Colorado Labor News, J. H. Schoepf, well known to many G. P. O. employes, was in that city recently, visiting his wife, who is sojourning in the "City of Sunshine." Mr. Schoepf now holds a responsible and lucrative position with the Cincinnati Consolidated Street Railway Company as purchasing agent.

Ladies' dining rooms. R. A. Driscoll, N. Cap. and G. Oyster pan roast, 10c.

Second Division.

The defeated candidates are all looking bright and cheerful.

It is given out on good authority that Francis H. Hopkins got a full turn in to his credit last week. Congratulations!

Dr. J. B. Trudgian is still upon the sick list. Doc. is having quite a severe tussle with an attack of inflammatory rheumatism.

Chas. C. Cassell, Eliot O. Clement, Geo. N. Proctor, and Lewis R. Thompson, were added as temporary employes to the roster of this division last Monday morning.

W. A. Cady, A. L. Wilhoit, Jas. B. Canfield, T. E. Frank, C. W. Williams, and Jesse W. Burton, were transferred from this division to the Night Force last Saturday evening.

Wm. H. Cornish and family spent the holidays at Jersey City, N. J., visiting home folks. Mr. Cornish returned to work last Monday and reported an excellent holiday time.

J. H. Swerdfiger was a promising candidate for the chairmanship in the beginning of the campaign, but later on during the heat of the battle he got faint hearted and withdrew his name.

"I told you so" is the way most of us express our sentiments on the recent chairmanship race in this division. But, then, there has to be some "I told you so's" in every election sequel, and ours is no exception.

J. W. Vanarsdell has been spending the past two weeks visiting his relatives and friends in Kentucky. We are certain Van is having a good time, for no one ever had a dull experience in "old Kentuck" during the holiday season.

"Report back at 5 o'clock" has been a very common order during the past two weeks. In fact, this division has been working under high pressure during the entire holiday season, but the boys all smiled when pay day came, so I guess there is no kick coming.

Chas. L. Nace had the banner campaign card for the chairmanship in this division. A neatly printed card, with his name in the center, covered with the union label in a pink tint made a very neat appearance. It isn't every chapel that can afford so much interest in its elections.

Hank Allen, our good natured bank man, has posted in the most prominent place on one of the banks the following very suggestive sign: "Be sure you are right and then dump," just as though any of us would ever think of dumping a "take" without first deciding that we were right. Why, Hank, you surprise us beyond measure.

The boys were sadly disappointed last Monday morning when they discovered on entering the room of our daily toil that the new clothes lockers had all been locked and the keys taken away. A general resort to the old-time hook or nail or any old place to hang your coat and hat was the only alternative. Never mind, we will all have a key some day.

Titus F. Ellis returned to work last Monday, having spent the holidays in the city of St. Louis. Titus reports having had an excellent time and every thing on the boom in the Exposition City. The large buildings are almost all finished and everything nearly ready for the big show to begin. The Exposition authorities have set aside a day to be known as the International Typographical Union Day and the St. Louis Union have given out that they will publish a souvenir convention book that has never been equalled in the history of the craft before. Surely a royal time is in store for those who will be so lucky as to be members of that convention.

Official Gazette.

Wish you a Happy New Year.

Mr. E. G. Myers was reelected chairman of the Official Gazette chapel on Monday.

Sam Edmunds has been transferred to the Night Bill Force, and Street to the Day Proof Room.

Mr. J. D. Ligon has returned to his desk after spending a pleasant holiday visit with relatives and friends in Pennsylvania.

Miss Mamie Hayden was in Brooklyn, N. Y., during the holidays and no doubt had an enjoyable time as there is much to entertain and amuse one in Greater New York at that season of the year.

The compositors loaned to this division for the holidays have been returned to their respective rooms. I have no complete list but here are some of them: Johnson, Conlee, Bickler, Wheeldon, Wheeler, Dixon, McAllisher, Griffis, and four or five others whose names I can not remember.

Miss Marion Booth and Miss Anna Wilson, visited Philadelphia to spend holiday week with Miss Booth's brother, a clergyman. The ladies enjoyed their visit hugely, except for one thing. The Philadelphians are not familiar with the slothful eight-hour day and turn out early in the morning, and our visitors were not permitted to break the chapel rules, but were compelled to arise at 6 a. m., no matter how late they had retired the night before.

The customary singing was not indulged in in the Specification chapel the day before Christmas and the omission was spoken of and regretted by many. The day before New Years' day, however, some of the leading spirits assembled and produced a splendid brand of harmony, although it lacked the volume of some of the concerts given in the Union Building. It is to be hoped the esprit de corps of the Spess Chapel has not been frost-bitten by its move to the Swamp. One of the extra men, on hearing the singing, remarked to me: "Well, these fellows seem to be happy. Whether they are or not; I don't know."

If the Entertainment Committee of Columbia Union would undertake the organization of a Glee Club they might evolve one of the finest male singing societies in the city. The hardest voice to secure in this climate is the tenor, and I can name about ten, of very good quality, among the typos without trying very hard—and there are others. Jones, Green, Galbraith, Fennell, Connolly, Handiboe, Moyer, Wiley Davis, Laing, Montgomery, and any number of good baritone and bass voices. Tom Jones is the boy who could do it, if he cared to, and with backing of the Entertainment Committee—as our friend Trimble says—it would sure succeed.

Specification Notes.

At the present writing it looks like this division will work every night this week until nine o'clock. This will cause a big slump in my weekly grind.

The chairman has trouble now and then with persons who forget to pass "rundowns" as well as those who renege on dissing sigs. No fines as yet.

William Beringer, Charles A. Read, John A. Handiboe, and W. S. McKean, Jr., were transferred to the Night Bill Force Saturday last. All fine printers and good fellows.

The use of copper and nonpareil hair spaces will not be permitted in the future. The ban has been likewise placed on thin commas, points, and hyphens, I understand.

Mr. R. W. Burkhart had a nasty fall on the ice while making his way to the office Monday morning, and sustained an ugly cut on his left knee. Monday's loss on the "average," however, was partially protected by a hold-over take of Saturday.

Owing to the lack of type for distribution twenty-five men were transferred back to their respective divisions last week. When additional sorts arrive, however, these same gentlemen will probably be called upon to again assist in getting out the Spess issue.

Monday was the twenty-fourth anniversary of the marriage of Mrs. Nannie M. McMichael, of this Division, and about 7 o'clock p. m. she received a message that she was "needed at home immediately." There a great number of her friends had gathered to make the occasion a happy one, among those present being her daughter, Miss May, who is attending college in Massachusetts. After refreshments had been served Mrs. McMichael was presented with a cut-glass water service of real beauty and value. Her friends in this Room wish her many happy returns.

R. W. Burkhart, secretary, and one of the promotors of the Nonpareil Mining and Developing Co., and who is a member of this chapel, has on exhibit at his frame this week some samples of porphyry and quartz ore sent to him from the company's claims in Thunder Mountain, Idaho. He also has an official return of an assay recently made in Boise, Idaho, which shows a gold value of $12.40 to the ton, with a trace of silver. The secretary is also showing photographs of the cabin, blacksmith shop, tunnels, etc., of the company on their claims. We believe their stock will make a fine investment for the craft.

Mr. J. D. Ligon visited friends in Johnstown, Pa., during Christmas week. He gives a glowing account of the business of that once flood-stricken place, then a town of seven or eight thousand inhabitants. Now there are few traces of the flood disaster, as only one or two vacant lots remain, and the place has grown to a city of about 40,000 inhabitants. When Mr. Ligon left for the return trip the snow was all of two feet deep on the level. The parents of Mrs. Ligon were among those who suffered by loss of property and the entire household very narrowly escaped with their lives, being for seven hours at the mercy of the flood and were rescued from the roof of their dwelling which floated like a raft upon the waters.

Mr. William Henry Drayton on Christmas Eve night became the happy father of a very healthy little baby boy. It will be named William Henry Drayton, thus perpetuating the name which has continued for several generations. Mr. Drayton is a native of Aiken, S. C., where his late father was a distinguished journalist and prominent citizen generally. Mrs. Drayton is a native of Charleston, S. C., and their hosts of friends of both sections will be pleased to hear that William Henry has an heir. The compliments of the season generously extended our co-worker on Saturday, and several "seals" were broken in honor of the youthful descendant of one of the most honored names in South Carolina history.

J. LIGON KING.

Night Bill Force.

Some definite news about the proposed pay-day hour is daily expected.

What has become of that all-night street-car service our committees went after?

Election in the new night Second gave "Funny" Roberts, 33; T. T. Razey, 17.

A. M. Willingham exjoyed Christmas on his farm in Georgia with his interesting family.

Will A. Morris unfortunately spent the holiday season wrestling with the grip but is now recovering.

The bowlers of the Bill Force should report to Tommy Dougherty, who is getting up a team to play the Record.

Mr. John Kiernan, this force's impetuous Boston Englishman (or Irishman?) has made his annual holiday visit to his family in the city of culture.

Pat O'Brien, the obliging apron man, is confined to his home, threatened with pneumonia. During his absence Mrs. O'Brien very creditably and pleasantly fills his office.

Mr. Geo. R. Merriam spent the holidays with his family on their farm in Vermont. He says maple syrup is scarcer up there than it is in other sections where maple trees do not exist.

The Second Division now has an auxiliary night force, composed of a few men from the day side, our "floaters," and some of our "trusties." Most conspicuous among the latter is our little Bennett, who now presides over a "bank" of his own.

Frank K. Foster, of Boston, comes out in a nice card and cut of himself, announcing his candidacy for delegate to the A. F. of L. and sets forth his qualifications. He is unanimously endorsed by his home union. We, also, have two men of our own in the same position.

As Harry Merrick, the Post's late paragrapher used to say, "Human nature is doing business at the same old stand," is exemplified in the effort to install machines in the G. P. O. The desire for gain at any cost is the sole object of the manufacturers, stockholders, lobbyists, etc.

Some supporters of the army canteen—men who are not total abstainers themselves — slander the American soldier when they say that the way to prevent desertions is to cater to their base appetites. Why not go farther and provide all the other temptations which abound in civil life?

While the various year-books published by the union, relief societies, etc., do great credit to the publishers, contributors, advertisers, etc., is it exactly fair to perpetually assess these same business men for our friendship? In cases of distress to our organization we fly to them for moral support. It also injures legitimate advertising publications.

With all due respect to Mr. Johns' commendable efforts at giving us a better arranged style book, we are constrained to say that many long for the old book. Parts of the new style seem ambiguous and parts obscure. It is more cumbersome. The old style proper, contains sixteen pages, the new, twenty-eight pages, four of which, though, is new tabular matter. Let's have a committee or board appointed to compile a compact, handy style.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Dec , 28, 1903.

As everybody knows, December is the best advertising month in the year, and Los Angeles is one of the best advertising towns in the United States, yet during the month now drawing to a close the Los Angeles Times has lost in local advertising alone, 932 inches, or six pages and three columns, by actual measurement. Between Sunday, December 13, and Sunday, December 20, there was a falling off of 530 inches or more than three and one-half pages, notwithstanding the fact that December 20 was the last Sunday before Christmas, which should have been the best Sunday in the year for advertising.

In addition to the pronounced decrease in the local advertising, the following out-of-town advertisers have withdrawn from the union hating Times since November 1, 1903:

"Gorham Silver Polish"—The Gorham Co., Broadway and Nineteenth street, New York City.

The Tarrant Co.—21 Jay street New York City.

The beginning of the end has set in and it is now absolutely certain that organized labor again will prove to the world that once it is forced into a fight there is no cessation until labor is accorded its rights.

Machine Composition.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Having read with much interest the views of different correspondents on the machine question, I beg to be allowed an expression of my own.

Twenty years ago (how time does fly) I was an apprentice boy on the Elizabeth (N. J.) Herald. Mr. John Drake, father of Horace F. J. Drake, (who worked hard for the success of our official home on G street) was at my side on the case. The old gentleman founded the sheet, but in his later years sold out his interest, and more to pass the time than otherwise, set type. I said to him one day: "Mr. Drake, before you die, a machine will be invented that will set type." "Oh, nonsense," the old man replied, "a machine to do that would have to have brains, like a man."

It seemed like inspiration, but before he died the linotype was invented and his son, Mr. Herbert Drake, who was an apprentice with me, became an operator.

Now, the question has come up, "Shall machine composition come into vogue in the Government Printing Office vice hand composition?"

There is one important point that your various correspondents seem to have overlooked. and that is, style. What was the first thing done in an office where a machine was introduced? Style was abolished. Why? Because machine composition, handicapped by "style," would be a flat failure.

If the printing fraternity had had the shrewdness and foresight to forestall the introductory of machines into an office by an abolition of style, hand composition would so nearly compete with machine work that it would not pay an office to put them in.

The difficulty is that ancient superstition will prevail till modern methods, like railroads in China, force into vogue a different condition of things.

As one of your correspondents has stated, it is a pitiable sight to see men, when time is called in a private office, turning sadly away without a chance of earning a day's livlihood.

The question to-day is: "What is to become of the desperate sub-strata of society, struggling for existence, and hoping only to live?"

Suppose for an instant that three out of four of the reputable men and women (that is the ratio to be displaced by machine composition) in the great Government institution were, "on the outside" tramping the streets, what would be the result?

In France at a certain period, the pleasure loving nobility said: "After us the flood." Unfortunately the flood came before and not after.

To-day, the wholesome lesson taught the nobility of France bears fruit, and the Fourth Estate at least is regarded as a factor in national affairs.

It seems to me that a wise course might be pursued. The railroad, the telegraph, the telephone, the electric motor, the Marconi transmitter — all evidences of the triumph of man's intellect. The law of nature is constant evolution. But beyond and higher than that law is the law of love. What man, calling himself a man, will strike down the parent animal protecting its young? Man is a higher form of animal, and as such is entitled to the chance to work out his evolution. I leave to more practical minds than mine the wisest course to be pursued.

Specification Notes.

Messrs. Gutelius and McCormick, the chess, and Messrs. Melick and Gompers, the checker experts, entertain quite a number at lunch time by their masterful "moves." If I am not mistaken, Chairman Melick is the best checker player in the G. P. O.

A certain laborer in the Bindery is endeavoring to organize a "Millennium League, and in a widely-distributed handbill announces this fact, the reasons therefor, and his "Commandments." Whatever else can be said of this young fellow, judging from his printed matter, personal contact is sure to leave an indelible impression that he is harmless.

The largest, blackest, and, as a consequence, the most conspicuous markings on the proofsheet does not always reflect the greatest discredit—to the printer. A big black lead pencil in the hands of a Novus Homo, so far as Spess proofreading is concerned, is principally distressing to himself—after the "blue pencil" man has taken his turn at the bat. Qui docet, discit.

Imposer Duffy says Mr. Tilley is a "heart-breaker," and that I must warn the fair maidens of the Spess and Gazette of the fact, but must not use his (Duffy's) name. And I won't—again. I can't say that my acquaintance with Mr. Tilley warrants the fathering of the above assertion, but "Charley" is a very truthful fellow and I do not care to contradict him, either. Therefore it may be wise to leave the matter entirely in the hands of the ladies most concerned.

Of course we all know that Miss Margaret A. Evans, of the Gazette, toured Europe last summer; that she had a fine time, and possesses many interesting souvenirs. However, the one she prizes most, probably, is a 1904 German calendar sent to her Christmas by a hotel proprietor in Germany. It is a very neat and interesting design, prominently displays in opposite corners the beautiful flags emblematic of Germany and the United States.

Last Saturday's Star produced an excellent likeness of Edward W. Morcock, of this room, and had the following to say of this excellent gentleman:

"Edward W. Morcock, the new chancellor commander of Decatur Lodge, No. 9, K. of P., is a native of Georgia, where he was formerly engaged as a newspaper publisher. He is now employed in the Government Printing Office. He joined Oconee Gem Lodge, No. 93, K. of P., at Dublin, Ga., in 1898. He was vice chancellor in 1899, and transferred to Decatur Lodge of this city in 1902. He was chosen prelate of that lodge in 1903. He has just been unanimously elected chancellor commander for 1904. He is also a member of Morning Star Lodge, No. 27, F. A. A. M., of Thomaston, Ga., and Thomaston Chapter, No. 29, Royal Arch Masons.

Miss Carrie L. Whitehead, copyholder in the Gazette proof room, will soon leave for New Orleans, where she intends visiting friends and, at the same time take in the sights of the Mardi Gras Carnival. Miss Whitehead is to be envied in having the opportunity of visiting the fair Southland at this time, especially that particular locality embracing the fine old Louisiana town, as well as for the privilege of witnessing the greatest fun-producing spectacle of this country. However, there is nothing too good for Miss Whitehead, and her many friends wish her a very pleasant visit and safe return.

Mr. Mord. Hyams, the Spess bank and press man, occupies a most responsible and trying position, and dignifies it by his calm and diligent attention to duty and even politeness to one and all. The overanxiety of the new men, the sullen moods of those who tarried a wee bit too long the previous night, the "rushers," as well as those who are slow, each in some way during some way during some portion of the day, by word or deed, or both, would rattle most any individual in a similar position. But there is always an exception to the rule, and in this instance, Mr. Hyams booms up most flatteringly.

Mr. Cornelius A. Connor brings his lunch to the office. Ditto Mr. Dan J. McCarty. In the former's lunch box recently was turkey; the latter's contained roast lamb. Mr. Connor had so much to say about his particular fondness for turkey, and ditto Mr. McCarty for roast lamb that Mr. F. M. Lewis, before lunch time, just for the fun of the thing, slyly exchanged the similar looking lunch boxes, and watched developments. The result? Why Connor ate McCarty's roast lamb and McCarty ate Connor's roast turkey, and after "licking" their respective fingers declared that what each had consumed was the best specimen of their likes ever tasted.

A certain young lady of the Spess was the recipient of some very nice candy last Thursday, and her extremely generous nature asserted itself, and, as a result, Messrs. Zeigler, Gutelius, and Garrells were made very happy. In the same section with the above-mentioned gentleman sat one lonesome soul. He, too, is the possessor of a sweet tooth. Sorrowfully, hungrily, he watched his "chums" enjoying the aforesaid lady's conversation and bonbons alike. While having been overlooked in the first passage he was not entirely cast down. Surely, he thought, he would be remembered on the return trip from the desk. But his hopes were short-lived. With head erect, and a far-away look, the lady gracefully passed him by! Another act of charity had been overlooked; another soul made sad; and those who "took out" copy during the remainder of the day were puzzled at the joy of the usually silent three and the glumness of our "Sunny" Jim.

In answer to my esteemed friend, Pard Bloomer, whom we all respect, and whose pencilings are always interesting and instructive, I'll say, in reference to the statement of my seeking a candidate to contest with Miss Annie Wilson for honors as delegate, that my space in THE TRADES UNIONIST will not be used in behalf of any particular candidate where there are more than one contesting, or desire to do so. I do not hold that because a certain young lady first announced her candidacy that she only is entitled to recognition. If there are other ladies who desire to announce themselves (and I hear that there are one or two possibilities), they certainly are privileged to do so. There are no restrictions on the number of male announcements. The line is drawn "because opposition will defeat both," you say. True enough. But don't you suppose the ladies know this, and that at the proper time the "survival of the fittest" will be left alone to contest? It isn't so much in the fact that any lady desires to really enter the race, as to virtually be given to understand that she "would not be in it" from any point of view with some other lady who might be heralded as unexcelled for the position. The minute that impression takes root in a woman's mind there is born Jealousy. And deep rooted jealousy in this particular case will injure the chances of any particular woman. I do not think there is a lady who really expects to finally contest with Miss Wilson. Miss Whitehead's name has been mentioned, and so has Mrs. Irma Palmer's, but without authority from either; and neither are seeking the honor of election to my knowledge. Personally I am certainly not opposed to Miss Wilson. She is an estimable young lady and has many friends who will do their utmost to "land her a winner." I certainly am in favor of a lady delegate—if the ladies themselves desire representation. In the meantime if any of the gentler sex desire to announce themselves and so inform me, I shall certainly print the news—and nothing more.

Proof Room Notes.

St. Louis is now the most prosperous city in the union for wage-earners, though there is no lack of typos at Jim Early's reception rooms looking for jobs.

I found the Miller and machine questions everywhere lively topics of discussion, but managed to keep out of arguments by declaring them to be dead issues.

Messrs. Kreiter's and Bloomer's letters in the Journal make interesting and entertaining reading. The complimentary remarks of the former are appreciated.

The committee of No. 8 for the entertainment of the International convention are determined to do the superb, surpassing even our own splendid performances here last August.

The Fair will be the greatest ever seen in the world. The main buildings are practically complete, and the realization of the entire plan will be a dream of beauty and everything besides.

I was glad to learn of the transfer of my friend, R. A. Nelgner, to the Library Branch. Brother Nelgner is a man of scholarly attainments and an earnest and deep student. The Library has been his home for years, and he will improve his opportunities for self-culture by virtue of the transfer.

I spent the holidays at my home in St. Louis, where I met Bro. Titus F. Ellis, who knows everybody and is popular everywhere in his home town. This advantage, together with his other splendid qualifications, would make him a most excellent delegate, and one who would reflect credit on No. 101.

I attended a meeting of the Trades and Labor Council and was surprised to find so many ladies present. There was an election and the nominees were of opposite sexes. The man withdrew, because he said he did not wish to be known as a "woman beater," besides, he believed in letting the women do the work. I hope a like sentiment of chivalry will prevail when nominations for delegate are in order next spring.

There is constant trouble between the contractors and the employes in building operations. A strike is not only justifiable, but is a duty under certain conditions. But it should not be rashly resolved on. Still less should the whole body of skilled laborers be called on to support a strike with funds when divisions who can easily turn their hands to other labor not requiring skill determine on a strike. Some new regulations are in order which will prevent unnecessary trouble in this line.

The order to enforce the seven-hour day in the Departments again reminds me that the printers and the Navy Yard employes do a great deal more work than the clerical contingent and yet get less pay and have fewer privileges. This should not be. A steel pen in the end of a stick is not a more respectable tool than an anvil or a composing iron. Indeed, the latter would seem to be more worthy and manly. Is it intellectual superiority? Hardly; for the best clerk is the best mechanic, while the mechanic is constantly required to use his brain.

On my return trip I met an engineer from the seat of war in Colorado, where Cæsar Peabody, banker, exploiter, and strike-breaker, had declared martial law, is running things like a Turk, and doing more to bring law and government into contempt than all the anarchists who ever lived. This engineer said that the strike would have been settled in short order if Peabody had let things alone. His ambition was to totally extirpate organized labor by instituting a crusade of lawless violence and dragonades.

Louis P. Negele is doing good work for unionism with his new-fashioned newspaper. The times called for a change in both the form and the contents of the newspaper. Brother Negele's newspaper is a little monthly magazine that can be carried in the side pocket, and it contains all the news of general interest, the labor news, schedules and names of all labor organizations, and is an abbreviated city directory besides. It is much more than this, but I cannot enlarge. It is a success, and that is the best evidence of a "good thing."

Mr. Baker is foreman of the Republic, vice McSkining, who has an editorial place on the Post Dispatch. Coghlan, a nephew of "Hoch der Kaiser" Coghlan ("Gott und mich") divides his time by working on the Republic and composing music for the Fair. Wyrick is in charge of the ad department. Tom Reed sends greetings to his friends here. Old man Waite looks as natural as ever and is as lively as a cricket. Wells is still in harness, and sends regards to the boys in general and to Colonel Stone in particular. Connelly is reading on the Post. Raithel is on the Republic and is master of his lodge.

The following additions have been made to the proof-reading contingent since my last communication: Night Proof Room—Messrs. S. W. Edmunds, F. W. Gist, J. D. Gustin, J. L. Holland, R. M. Hugdal, W. F. Leatzow, F. Overman, W. A. Peffer, J. H. Schaffhausen, C. H. Slack, and C. B. Tomlin. Day Proof Room—F. A. Chapin, H. F. J. Drake (copyholder), C. Fisher, M. Hackett (in charge of clearing house desk) C. D. Ross, M. V. B. Stevens, F. W. Street, and W. H. Sweeney (reviser in H. L. Murray's place, who is advanced to second revisership). Silas Phelps, for several years assistant maker-up to Colonel Sweeney, was advanced to the position of maker-up of the Second Division.

The following was handed to me by Bro. E. F. Latham, with a request to ask for its publication. It contains a number of obsolete words worked up in a letter. These words are all in the dictionary. They show English "as she was spoke." There are thousands of words used now which will appear quite as barbarous to our successors at the end of the century. I am too busy to render it in English:

"SIR: You have behaved like an impetiginious scrogle! Like those who, envious of any moral celsitude, carry their ungicity to the heights of creating symposically the fecund words which my polymathic genius uses with uberity to abligate the tongues of the weetless! Sir, you have crassly parodied my own pet words, though they were trangrams!

"I will not coascervate reproaches. I will oduce a veil over the atramental ingratitude which has chamfered even my indiscerptible heart. I am silent on the focillation which my coadjuvancy must have given when I offered to become your fantor and adminicle. I will not speak of the lippitude, the oblepsy you have shown in exacerbating me, one whose genius you should have approached with mental discalceation. So I tell you, without supervacaneous words, nothing will render ignoscible your conduct to me.

"I want you that I will vellicate your nose if I thought that any moral diarthrosis thereby could be performed—if I thought I should not impignorate my reputation. Go, tachygraphic scrogle, band with your crass inquinate fantors! Draw oblectations from the thought, if you can, of having synchronically lost the existimation of the greatest poet since Milton."

The Bookbinders' Entertainment.

The entertainment to be given by Bookbinders' Union, No. 4, Wednesday evening, January 20, 1904, bids fair to equal if not surpass anything heretofore given by that organization. The high standing and first-class reputation of these entertainments have been fully established long ago, and when the program is presented to patrons of this entertainment it will at once be seen that such an array of talent will admit of no adverse comment. Among the artists secured is Mr. J. Walter Humphrey. As a bass singer Mr. Humphrey stands second to none in his profession, and those who have heard him pronounce his renditions a rare treat.

La Petite Alma has been secured by the kind permission of Mr. Chase, who pronounces her the "child wonder". Mr. Chase speaks of La Petite Alma in the very highest terms as to her accomplishmehts and ability.

Mr. N. Floyd Featherstone, the musical mote, is an entertanment in himself. He is also highly recommended by Mr. Chase as a rare artist, who seems to be thoroughly acquainted with every musical instrument that has been invented.

A rare treat is promised in a one-act sketch, entitled, "A Letter From Home," by Mr. Chas. F. Weston, and Miss Evelyne V. Forsythe. The standing and reputation of these performers need no comment from those who have already been fortunate enough to hear them.

Mr. Milton Clark, "the whistling wonder," similar to the rest of the collection of rare artists, claims to be the champion of the world in his line, having contested with and vanquished all competitors with whom he has come in contact.

The rare and talented tenor singer, Mr. John A. Finnigan, will sing a new song written especially for the occasion by Mr. James L. Feeny, entitled, "Sttck to the Union, Jack." This song will be sung for the first time in public at the Bookbinders' entertainment. The reputation of both writer and singer is an assurance that the song will be well received.

The Committee have also secured the services of Miss Edna Scott Smith, a contralto of rare and exceptional ability. Those who have never heard Miss Smith should sieze this opportunity.

Last, but not least, is Mr. James E. Cogan, song and dance artist. Whenever Mr. Cogan appears a ripple of merriment invades the whole audience from start to finish, and when he retires. There is always that "come-again" sort of feeling, which takes possession of everyone before him.

The music for the occasion is furnished by Mr. Ed. McCarthy's orchestra. Those who have heard Mr. McCarthy's music pronounce it of the highest order.

The General Committee is composed of Messrs. Leonard Kukart. Wm. W. Taylor, R. T. Frailey, Chas. B. Welsh, Allen M. Russell, J. Ed. Burkhardt, J. Ed. Lowe, Guy Leonard, H. F. Warneson, J. St. Clair Hambly, Chas. A. Phillipps, B. O. Sivertsen and Jas. Duffy who have spared no efforts to make this occasion an event of the season. The pleasure and comtort of the patrons, has been their chief object. A supper under the supervision and direction of the Committee will be served directly after the entertainment in the banquet hall.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary will be held on Monday evening, January 18, at 8 p. m., in the lodge room at Typographical Temple. It is hoped that every member will endeavor to attend and make the first meeting of the year a large and successful one. The quarterly dues will be collected at this meeting and other important business taken up for consideration.

The Machine Proposition.

The recent agitation concerning the proposed introduction of machines in the Government Printing Office has caused apprehension among some of our friends in the labor press that Columbia Union may be making a mistake in its attitude on the question.

As a matter of fact Columbia Union has taken no action in direct antagonism to the machine. The Union is merely doing what was done here and in every other jurisdiction when the machines were first introduced. It has placed the matter in the hands of a committee to safeguard the interests of the Union and its members. Simply this and nothing more.

There was no resolution passed by the Union opposing the introduction of the machines in the Government Printing Office. It is perfectly natural that the one thousand and odd members of the Union employed in the Government Printing Office should feel interested in the proposition, when it is considered that the great majority of them are over the age limit for machine work. And again, looking at the matter as a purely economic proposition, who are better able to determine whether the the machine can be made practicable in the Government Printing Office than the men who have been in that office for years and know the possibilities of the machines?

That machines will be placed in the Government Printing Office is probable, but that it will do all that is claimed for it is denied. In any event there is no good reason for getting alarmed over the matter, for it is a problem that will adjust itself in the Government Printing Office like it has in every other large establishment.

But what we desire to emphasize is the fact that No. 101 has not gone on record against the machine, even if it did consider the proposition in a "closed" meeting.

THE Washington union held a special meeting and appointed a committee to fight the introduction of machines in the Government Printing Office. THE TRADES UNIONIST has nothing to say about it. I don't blame it.

The above from "Sadie Maguire" shows evidently how he views the subject of the introduction of machines in the Government Printing Office. From a disinterested standpoint it is hard to understand why we should feel elated over the possibility of such a change, after reviewing the history of the iron monster in other large establishments and its consequent effect upon the older members of the union.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

A meeting of the Ex-Delegates' Association was held at Typographical Temple last Sunday, President W. R. Ramsey in the chair, with all the other officers in their places. The constitution and by-laws were revised to suit the purposes of a permanent institution, and then officers for the ensuing year were elected. Captain Ramsey declining a re-election, Z. T. Jenkins was unanimously elected president, and Dexter S. Hussey unanimously elected vice-president, while Maj. J. T. Herbert, C. W. Otis, and H. S. Sutton were with equal unanimity re-elected, respectively, secretary, treasurer, and sergeant-at-arms. Each of the officers of the past year and J. H. Platt, chairman of the entertainment committee, were thanked by a rising vote for faithful services during the year. A resolution of condolence with ex Delegate Don Murray on the death of his father and with Mrs. H. O. Shepard, on the death of her husband, late of the Inland Printer, were passed and communications thanking the organization from Columbia Typographical Union, the Musicians' Union, and from the convention committee were read. Committees were ordered appointed to make arrangements for an entertainment of some kind in the near future, and for the Associations' attendance at St. Louis next August. The new by-laws provide for meetings on the first Sunday in April, July, October, and January, and as much oftener as the president shall see fit to call them, and the dues were fixed at 50 cents per quarter. There was a very respectable attendance.

Poets among our members are being discovered every day. The latest discovery is Will Kenworthy, of the Record, who handed me the following, which is the more remarkable from the fact that he wrote it on one of the hottest days of last summer, while trying to quiet the baby with a string of bells:

HEAR THE SLEIGHBELLS JINGLE!

For pleasure rare none can compare with sleighing o'er the snow!
With good steeds strong we speed along,
singing as we go,
Or laughing at some pleasant jest or story
some one tells—
Oh, there's a charm, when snug and warm, about the jingling bells!

Jingle, jingle, jingle! Hear the sleighbell jingle
Jingle, jingle, jingle! Hear the sleighbells jingle
As we sleighing go—
As we sleighing go
O'er the pure white snow!
Jingle, jingle, jingle! Hear the sleighbells
jingle.

O'er hill and glen, 'long winding streams,
'midst woodland's leafless show,
O'er open plain, through ornate lane, oh,
merrily we go!
The sights we see, the joyful glee, our every care dispels
With mirthful chime and tuneful rhyme of happy jingling bells!

There's joy at night, when stars are bright and twinkling, all aglow,
Or moon her radiant beamlets send, a-sparkling o'er the snow;
And during the day, though cold and gray,
Old Sol's warm luster swells.
Oh, there's a joy without alloy in merry jingling bells.

What is to become of the Central Labor Union? At least, where will Columbia Union stand in the galaxy of confederated unions which form that august body with Dickman, Everett, and Gerber on the Night Bill Force and Babcock and Dietrich on the Record—our entire delegation all night workers? It has been suggested that it was a foxy move on the part of somebody to change our representation in that body.

* * * *

Dan Vaughan authorizes me to say that he is a candidate for delegate to St. Louis this year, and I feel warranted by the appearance of things in saying that he will be a strong one. He has a wide and favorable acquaintance throughout the Union as a perfect gentleman who has the ability to represent the Union satisfactorily, and the handsome manner in which he acquitted himself in welcoming the I. T. U. last August, in the unfortunate, unavoidable absence of President Joe M. Johnson, added to his popularity. Whether the field be large or small, Dan may be put down as one of the winners.

* * * *

Mrs. C. E. Dietrich, wife of Charlie Dietrich, of the Record, has been awarded a judgment for $5,500 against the District in her suit for permanent injuries received by falling on a defective sidewalk. This is probably the largest amount of damages ever awarded against the District for personal injuries. The case will be carried to the Court of Appeals, and possibly to the U. S. Supreme Court, but with little likihood that the judgment will be reversed.

"Mr. President, how much money have we in the treasury?" asked "Funny" Roberts, at the meeting of the Ex-Delegates Association last Sunday.

"Fifty-one cents," answered Secretary Herbert, on being appealed to.

And "Funny" sat down without another word.

Jim Kreiter got in ahead of me in announcing the candidacy of John Berg for the presidency, and Berg is my boss, not Kreiter's. This seems to me a lack of that comity which should subsist between newspaper men. But this does not shut me out from saying that Mr. Berg's long familiarity with the business of Columbia Union eminently fits him to fill the position and that his large acquaintance with its members makes him a formidable candidate for others with similar ambitions to go up against. By the way, Tom Bynum tells me that he has so much other business on hand that he could not give proper attention to the duties of the presidency if he were elected, and therefore he will not be a candidate. While on this subject, there's Zach Jenkins just aching to be president of the Union, and a splendid one he would make; but he is so good-natured that he won't announce himself if any of his friends is out for it, and as pretty near everybody is his friend and there's always a lot of them that want office he gets shut out every year. I think I'll help him to overcome this difficulty by announcing him now as a candidate for president in 1905, and let's cut out this silly practice that has grown up of late years of giving every president a second term, having its origin in the piggishness of certain gentlemen and the pliability of their friends. Berg in 1904, Jenkins in 1905—hurrah!

Mr. Nathan, of the Night Bill Force, who came here from Sacramento, Cal., brought fraternal messages from W. B. Thorpe to his old friends, of whom he has many who remember him in the long (about sixteen years long) ago. He is in charge of the job department of the California State printing office.

* * * *

I don't know whether my brother Philip S. Steele has been scared off the track or not, for I have not heard him say anything in a long time on the subject, but I understood last summer that he would surely be a candidate for St. Louis this year.

* * * *

By misstating the facts last week I am due to apologize to Harry O'Donnell for saying that Merritt led the ticket last year, that honor being Mr. O'D.'s. It was the case of my mixing up what I wanted with what happened.

That was a very neat little story that George M. Ramsey had in the Typographical Journal this month. I believe in things that point morals and adorn tales, as the facts of that story do.

AFTER-DINNER DILATIONS.

THE FLAT OWNER'S FATE.

All modern and complete;
A velvet lawn stretched out in front
Along the dusty street.
And then he tacked a sign up high
Above the passing crowd:
"These handsome modern flats for rent;
No children are allowed."

He garnered rents in golden store
And riches high he piled,
The while his building never rang
With laughter of a child.
No childish feet went pitty-pat
A down its marble halls;
The roomy echoes never rang
With children's loving calls.

The owner died, as all men must,
And neared St. Peter's gate,
And o'er the glowing arch he saw
The words that sealed his fate.
The words he read were writ in flame
And filled his heart with woe:
"This place is full of little ones—You'll have to go below."
—WILL M. MAUPIN.

Meeting of Ex-Delegates' Association

The Ex-Delegates' Association of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, held its first meeting under permanent organization last Sunday and adopted by-laws for its government.

The meeting was well attended and considerable enthusiasm prevailed over the assured success of the organization.

After adopting the by-laws election of officers for the ensuing year was held and the following officers chosen: President, Z. T. Jenkins; Vice-President, Dexter S. Hussey; Secretary, John T. Herbert; Treasurer, Chas. W. Otis; Sergeant-at-Arms, H. S. Sutton.

The retiring President, Capt. W. R. Ramsey, received a unanimous vote of thanks for his devotion and work in the interest of the Association, and the officers who were re-elected were likewise commended by the Association.

The meetings of the Association are to be held on the first Sunday in the month, quarterly, the next meeting being called for the first Sunday in April.

Resolutions of sympathy to Don L. Murray, a member of the Association, in the loss of his father, was read and spread upon the minutes, after ordering inu their publication.

The officers of the Association were directed to extend the condolence of the Association to the widow of the late H. O. Shepard, of Chicago, publisher of the Inland Printer, a man whose life work was to advance the art of printing and to better the condition of the workers in his establishment.

The Association directed the officers to perfect arrangements for having a smoker on the night of February 22 (Washington's Birthday), and all members were urged to make the affair a success.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Down Town.

Union meeting Sunday.

A letter from Billy Watson, now in Chicago, to a friend in this city, says Billy Raymond is laid up with rheumatism. He also says that Longfellow and "Star" Cotton are still in the Windy City.

John M. McGowan, ex-delegate from Chicago Typographical Union, No. 16, to the recent convention in this city, lost his wife by death last Saturday, in Chicago, after a brief illness, from diptheria. The remains were taken to her old home in Canada for interment.

M. P. Canty, second vice president of Bricklayers and Masons International Union, John G. Wolfe, Michael P. Lynch, and Joseph A. Hutton, delegates from Bricklayers Union, No. 1, of this city, to the convention of the International Union, are attending the sessions of that body this week at New Haven, Conn.

Official Gazette.

Q. "Say, Trimble, what do you know?" A. "Nothing much; and I'm trying mighty hard to keep that from Ruff."

W. E. Grimes presented several of the Gazette force with calendars for 1904 which were very much appreciated. Incidentally Grimes is all right.

Miss Alice Guild returned to work on Monday much improved in health and spirit. She enjoyed the visit of a couple of friends during the holidays.

Since the lower case "g" has ceased to be a scarce article Geo. Brandon has cut off the supply of little red apples and we must try and corner some other sort.

A few paradoxes—A joyous Payne, a pleasant Smart, a live Shott, an humble Knoble, a short Stretch, a gently Ruff, a frank Schley, a Hoes without rubber(s).

Ever noticed Miss Nellie Theaker's apron? It would take the talent of a society reporter to suitably describe it. It is very becoming and she has had numerous requests for the pattern.

Miss Carrie L. Whitehead will visit her sister, who resides at Mobile, Ala., about the first of February. She will also visit New Orleans and enjoy the festivities of the Mardi Gras carnival.

Don't Butt In," is the sign our affable and patient bankman, Andrew Turnbull, has pasted in a conspicuous place. Although that is the only way you can land a "take" when the folks are numerous in that vicinage.

Trimble referred to the Lime Kiln Club as the Sanhedrim and Frank Wilkins retaliated by calling him a cosmopolite. Later Trimble was seen prowling around the proof room waiting his chance to see the dictionary.

Mrs. Samuel Ramsburgh (nee Alice Dixon), of Woodstock, Va., called on old friends in the office a few days ago. She was employed in the old Second Division some years back, and she advised her lady friends to get out of office and be happy.

James E. Hoes, of New York, was married to Miss Estelle M. Reyer, of Indiana, December 29, 1903. It was tantalizing in him to delay the important step till within two days of leap year. Several of the girls had their eye on him and were inclined to look upon the announcement as only a joke.

On New Year's day I lined up with two or three hundred thousand other patriotic and loyal citizens to shake hands with "Teddy." As I came near the portico I took my right hand glove off and put my hand in my overcoat pocket. When about to enter the doorway a policeman in citizen's clothes took me by the arm, and I thought he was going to yank me out of line as a suspicious character; instead of doing so he gently whispered in my ear: "Please take your hand out of your pocket," thus showing that the authorities were on the alert and did not intend that a "bug" should repeat the tragedy at Buffalo if they could prevent it.

Second Division.

The only Colt-on the track
Won out on the race,
Though Snyder came after
At a mighty fine pace;
While the third and last on the list—
Too short to be tall—
Came within a N-ace of not Being in it at all.

—Second Division Poet Laureate.

"Work through" is the slogan.

The latest from Dr. Trudgian reports him convalescent.

R. F. Simms and D. A. Smith, Jr., were promoted to cases on the Spess recently.

Wm. C. Beddow has been at home several days doctoring a disordered stomach.

Sam Elwood went to the Night Bill Force and C. B. Nelson to the Sixth Thursday.

W. J. Harris' many friends feel deeply for him over the loss of his mother and extend their earnest sympathy.

A. F. Lowe wears "the smile that won't come off" these days, a dainty little female having arrived at his home several days ago.

All members of the chapel having items for THE TRADES UNIONIST are requested to hand them to Mr. Walters, our genial messenger, or the secretary, who will see that they are forwarded.

Nat Watts took up the stick Thursday after a three weeks' pleasure trip to St. Louis. Nat withstood the charms of that city's fair ladies and returned a bachelor. Rumor committee, please note.

Colonel Sweeney was assigned a reviser's desk last week, and Silas Phelps received a well-merited promotion to the position held by his former chief—maker-up, C. J. Sheriff acting as his assistant.

A spirited campaign for chairman of this division resulted in the election of J. E. Colton. The contestants were J. E. Colton, 45; D. J. Snyder, 40, and C. L. Nace, 11. Wm. H. Cornish was elected secretary by acclamation.

While returning home with an oil stove Sunday afternoon Frank Williams was unexpectedly assailed by a trio of ruffiians. The leader of whom, Slippery Ice, tripped him up, whereupon Oil Stove and Feeder viciously assaulted him. Mr. Williams, suffering from shock and a slightly sprained ankle, was unable to work Monday. His alley mates became greatly excited when the news reached them. "Hang the Oil Stove!" was the least direful of their threats of vengeance.

Third Division.

When, oh, when are we to have the use of those lockers?

Col. H. F. J. Drake was transferred to the Proof Room last week.

Jas. A. McCarthy and Max J. Knoble were transferred to the Spess Monday morning.

Nail the banner to the mast! For delegate to St. Louis, T. Frank Hall. Vote early and often.

Campaign manager Goldstein is leaving no stone unturned to make votes for Titus F. Ellis for delegate.

The Star published on Monday evening several columns of newsy and interesting items about the Government Printing Office.

Messrs. Charles F. Blett, W. C. Krause, and Charles H. Lynch, all temporary men, reported for duty Wednesday morning.

J. C. Sowers, who has been on leave for 30 days, is expected back before we go to press. His familiar form has been missed from the "correcting alley."

Brother Bloomer has been misinformed. Edgar Meritt says he is not a candidate for president or any other office at the coming election. But how about Tom Bynum?

It is noticeable that since attention was called to the mud-puddles in the wash room they are not so much in evidence. There is nothing like encouraging people to do right.

Have the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST noticed that the electric light service in the new building is not so good as it was in our old quarters? Several have spoken to me of it, but I was already painfully aware that the light over my frame was rather dim.

Through an oversight I neglected to chronicle the fact that at the regular quarterly meeting of the Third Division Chapel, held December 30, 1903, Messrs. Wm. F. Goldstein and J. W. Belcher, were re-elected by acclamation as chairman and secretary respectively for the ensuing three months.

Our old friend, Hubert Newsom, ran in just a moment the other evening to see the boys and incidentally to leave some cards urging us to "Come and See" what the Bereans are. Whoever they are they are lively and up-to-date in the advertising line. No doubt it would do some of us good to concern ourselves more about our spiritual welfare.

There used to be a wire stretched over the frames on each side of the alleys in the old building, on which, by sliding his electric light to the right or left, one could focus the rays where they were most needed, now we are compelled to resort to almost any old way to get the light where it will be of use. I suppose that if we have patience we will get relief some day. "It's a long lane that never has a turning."

On January 17, 1888, I attended the annual banquet of the Franklin Typographical Society of Boston, held in honor of the birthday of Benjamin Franklin. Personally, I would be willing to contribute a dollar or two toward the success of such a celebration by the printers of Washington. It is too late to pull the affair off this year, perhaps; but there would be genuine pleasure in such a function for many of us. What do you think, brother printers?

"Blood" Thornton communicates the sad news that owing to the fact that the G street elevator was not running one morning last week when he arrived he was compelled to walk up stairs and thereby lost a pound and nearly lost his breath. It is certainly a wearisome jaunt up those long flights of stairs, even for the best of us, and it would seem that there ought to be some way to keep the elevator running continuously during the rush just before the whistle blows.

The former employes af this division keep coming in to see us. Last week Bunker made his appearance and the cry was "look out for your rules!" Not that anybody would think of insinuating that "Whissy" would make way with composing rules to which he could not show legal title; but he certainly has a fine collection of them. Then along came Newsom, the hothouse geranium; and Tuesday Benny Wolfe distributed breezy greetings around the room. They can't keep away.

Willis L. Hall (slug 36) has an interesting article in this month's Typographical Journal about the way things are managed at the G. P. O. The article recounts the printer's progress from the time he first applies for the Civil Service examination until he finally receives his appointment and goes to work, and then goes on to describe the machinery, the location of the various divisions, and other details, all calculated to be of the greatest interest to printers in other cities, the whole making, as has been said, a very interesting article.

It is becoming more and more apparent that one of the delegates from Columbia Union, No. 101, to St. Louis will be a woman. As far as can be judged at this time, the consensus of opinion seems to be in favor of Miss Anna Wilson, of the Specification Division. Miss Wilson worked hard and faithfully last summer to make a success of the arrangements for entertaining the ladies who visited Washington during the convention of the I. T. U. When there are offices to be filled preference should be given, in my opinion, to those who do the work and do it well, as in this case.

Goodkey is going to have a "blowout" when his new house is entirely finished. The "blowout" was announced to occur Christmas Eve; then New Year's Eve; now the event is "in statue quo," Mr. Goodkey says. But when the blowout does occur it will be a "bon-ton affair." Nothing but repeated disappointments handed out by the electrician, the carpenter, the waterpipe man, the painter, and others have prevented the proper celebration of so important an event as the completion of Mr. Goodkey's new house. The prospect now is that friends of the O. K. G. will have the time of their lives just before Lent. So look out.

What at first looked like the long-deferred and anxiously-awated "Message from Mars" came from above last Thursday night. As Poe says in "The Raven:"

Suddenly I heard a tapping,
As of some one gently rapping,
As of some one gently tapping,
Tapping at my chamber door.

But the rapping came this time at the window of Alley 7. Upon investigation it proved to be a piece of cardboard hanging at the end of a string, and weighed with a primer doc. slug. On the card was the inscription, "Poor old Si!" And then followed some undoubtedly well-meant but wholly unnecessary advice which I will not repeat. With his usual imperturbability, "Si" remarked, "They don't know me, do they, pard?" and it was a closed incident.

The President has invited to the World's Fair King Menelik, of Abyssinia, lineal descendant of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. Having established a precedent, he should not slight Richard D. Goodman, who cleans the electric light bulbs and shades in the G. P. O. In the course of an interesting conversation with Mr. Goodman he informed me that he was the direct descendant of an African king who was captured by slave dealers and sold into slavery at Elizabeth City, N. C., about the close of the Revolutionary War. The owner of the proud-spirited king found it impossible to subdue him, as he refused to work, defending himself with a scythe, with which he killed several people. He was finally captured and suffered death at the hands of the law. His son, inheriting the unquenchable spirit of his royal father, purchased his freedom, and his descendants have since been free. Mr. Goodman possesses more than the usual intelligence of his race, and at sixty-nine years of age he has few gray hairs, and is hale and hearty. Needless to say, he is proud of his distinguished great great-grandfather, but appreciates fully his position as a sovereign American, realizing that

"The rank is but the guinea's stamp
The man's the gowd for a' that!"

J. W. BELCHER.

The Post Greeting.

The Laborer acknowledges receipt of an elegant group of the Washington Post chapel printed on the front page of that paper. It seems like a dream to see so many faces—so many good faces, again. I have hung it up in the office to drive away the blues—I don't need it at home.—Sadie Maguire in Western Laborer.

Seven photo-engravers employed at the National Engraving Co. went on strike last Monday. The men are all members of Photo-Engravers' Union, No. 17. They claim that a practice in vogue with the National Engraving Co. in making the men pay for defective work is a violation of union rules and customs in the trade. While the strike has not received the sanction of the union it is understood that the course of the men will be sustained. The national organizer of the International Photo-Engravers' Union will come here and take charge of the strike.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Items of Interest From Our Special Correspondent.

"Big 6" now has 340 chapels under its jurisdiction.

Mayor McClellan, only a short time ago, was City Hall reporter for the Journal.

John Eno, George F. Greene, and T. S. Dwight were the deaths reported last week.

During these stormy days the Journal has been sending out wagons with hot coffee and sandwiches to feed the poor and hungry.

President James M. Lynch and Chas. E. Hawkes, first vice-president, were in town last week. It is presumed that both were looking after their fences for the Presidency.

Hugh McAtamney, foreman of the Tribune proofroom, got an increase of $10 per week some time ago, having prevented a libelous article from appearing in that paper.

Nominations for I. T. U. officers will be made at the February meeting. Lynch and Hawkes are mentioned for President and Morrison and Foster for A. F. of L. delegates.

The Morning Newspaper Bowling League tournament has ten clubs participating for the various prizes. The Herald and Tribune are tied for first place with a score of seven games won and one lost.

The phenomenal success of Hearst's Los Angeles Examiner has given rise to rumors that he is going to start other new papers. Washington, Boston, New Orleans, and Pittsburg are some of the places selected.

The new overtime law for newspapers is working smoothly. If a man gets eight hours overtime in one week he must take off a day the following week. If he has say four hours a week for four weeks he is compelled to take off two days at the end of the month.

"Big 6" pays out weekly about $300 to the unemployed and incapacitated. This money is derived from a 1 per cent assessment that has been cheerfully paid by the members for the past ten years. About $4 per week is the amount paid to each member on the relief list.

A new typesetting machine is to be installed on the Herald. A room has been built expressly for it and no one is allowed to enter. There is only one key to the room and the foreman carries it. Rumor has it that it will produce better results than the Merganthaler.

John J. Pallas, President of the State Workingmen's Federation and delegate to the Central Federated Union, was appointed President of the Park Commissioners by the Tammany administration. The salary is $7,500 per year. Mr. Pallas is also organizer of the Pattern Makers' Union.

Jerome F. Healy, the efficient Secretary-Treasurer of "Big 6," is now finishing up the seventh year in that office. His majorities grow larger at every annual election. His close attention to his duties from 7.30 a. m. to 6 p. m. every day, his abstemiousness, and his benevolent acts has endeared him to the membership.

Charles Carter, chairman of the New York delegation to the Washington convention last August, writes from Colorado Springs that he is gradually gaining strengih. On his return from the convention he was compelled to take to his bed with a bad throat trouble. The boys raised quite a tidy sum to send Mrs. Carter along with him.

Patrick Tracy has been made Supervisor of the City Record at a salary of $5,000 per year. It is the first time in the history of the city administration that a union printer fills this position. Besides looking after the daily paper published by the city, the Supervisor passes on all bids and on all departmental printing. Mr. Tracy was an operator on the Law Journal and a member of No. 6 for the past fifteen years.

Two years ago William J. O'Brien organizer of the Granite Cutters' Union, was elected Sheriff on the Fusion ticket. The office carries with it a salary of $12,500 per year and a fat amount in fees. Mr. O'Brien was succeeded January 1 by the Tammany candidate. During his term of office he attended all the meetings of his union and took an active part in committee work. Referring to the tirades of the press against organized labor, he said that while Sheriff he railroaded to Sing Sing only two trades unionists against seventeen lawyers.

The G. P. O. Veteran Club.

A business meeting of the G. P. O. Veteran Club was held on January 7 for the purpose of electing officers and transacting other necessary business. The officers chosen were:

President, Charles F. Garrette.
Vice-President, John D. Russell.
Secretary, B. W. Bonney.
Treasurer, George H. Stone.
Doorkeeper, J. C. Morgan.
Executive Committee: C. M. Robinson, W. R. Ramsey, Briscoe Goodheart, D. W. Beach, and Oliver Shaw.
Auditing Committee: H. F. J. Drake, William Lawlor, and Ira E. Cole.

A resolution was unanimously passed thanking the ladies of the Auxiliary for their presence at and interest in the meetings of the Club, and for the entertainments they have provided at many of the social gatherings during the past year. Their reception on New Year's Day at the hall has been quoted by many ex-soldiers and citizens as being second to none in this city.

A resolution of condolence was tendered Comrade McCormack in his bereavement—the loss by death of his wife.

The next social meeting of the Club will be on January 16, when the Rebew Orchestra, as usual, will furnish part of the entertainment.

Hall No. 1, "Building Trades Halls," 610 G street northwest, is open daily from 8 o'clock a. m. until 5 p. m. as a reading room to all members of building trades unions affiliated with the Council of Allied Building Trades.

Ladies' dining rooms. R. A. Driscoll, N. Cap. and G. Oyster pan roast, 10c.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

From the New York Press.

No man who has a torpid liver can look on the bright side of things.

Some men's popularity are due to their ability to conceal their thoughts.

A two-dollar bill goes a long way toward changing some men's political opinions.

When a woman knows she is homely she isn't ashamed to boast of her ability as a cook.

Bookbinders' Souvenir.

The Souvenir Book of the ninth entertainment and ball of Bookbinders' Union, No. 4, is a well printed and tasteful publication. It is from the press of the Sudwarth Printing Co. and gives evidence of care in its compilation. It is a credit to the committee in charge of its compilation and the publishers. It is handsomely illustrated with halftone engravings and the advertisements are well displayed.

The poem "How to Bind a Book," by J. L. Feeney, is well caricatured by W. H. Figg, the artist-binder, and betrays a depth of humor that speaks well for the artist. His illustrated story of "Tommy" is good, but his story of the hobo bookbinder is better. Mr. Figg has cause to feel proud of his capabilities as an artist, and we look for still greater success for him in that field.

Mr. J. L. Feeney has a new song, "Stick to the Union, Jack," which will be sung for the first time at the entertainment next Wednesday night. It is dedicated to Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Feeney has written many songs in the past, but in his latest one he certainly has surpassed all previous efforts.

Pointed Paragraphs.

From the Chicago News.

Beware of the tireless worker who is always trying to work you.

A bachelor says it's woman's art to deceive and man's folly to believe.

A woman never really enjoys hurting a man's feelings unless she loves him.

Love that has nothing but beauty to keep it alive is very apt to be short-lived.

A man who never abuses his partner or his employer has the true Christian spirit.

When lovers sit in blissful silence it may be owing to the fact that there isn't room between them to get a word in edgeways.

First Division.

Night work has been the rule for some time.

Albert D. Rust, late of the Geological Survey, has been transferred to this division.

Clothilde has been delinquent for such a long time that it began to look as though he had quit us for good.

George Ball, of the correcting alley, was laid up with the grip for some time, but has recovered sufficiently to be at work again.

Ed. McCormick, of the supply division is organizing a ping pong club, and will soon be in shape to challenge anything in the shop.

John Wheeler is building a house boat for the purpose of taking a long summer trip. Don't forget to take plenty of ammunition.

E. M. Root, our popular and genial slug man, has been on the sick list, but is back again, wearing the same old smile and a new blue necktie.

W. A. Bodenhamer, Charlie Mullen, George Sylvester, and "Mitch" Mitchell were transferred to the Second Division Night Force recently.

The duet work of Harry Templar and Samuel Lenoir is attracting a great deal of attention throughout printorial circles. Such stars are scarce.

Bob Starr now has a beautiful crop of silky black whiskers, and there is much speculation as to what disposition he will make of them when summer comes.

The recent chapel election resulted in a unanimous vote for Wm. R. Love, chairman and N. J. Lillard, secretary. In the language of J. Ligon King: merit wins.

R. L. Davidson ("Davy") formerly of this room, but now on the Night Bill Force, is thinking of buying real estate with his surplus money. Davy always was enterprising.

C. A. Honaker, who worked in this division something less than a year ago, and who resigned to engage in business at Honaker, Tenn., has returned and been reinstated in the First Division.

Don't it make you tired to hear the night force telling about the clean proofs they set? For the love of Heaven come down some day and ask Mr. Bellinger, our head corrector, to show you a few.

The report of the committee on the advisability of reducing the dues was certainly a very creditable report and one that they may feel well proud of. It lays the matter of receipts and expenses bare and nothing but a narrow-minded, low-bred, good for-nothing person can see that our offices are HONEST and in good hands. Now let this agitation cease and if you have a knock coming, come up like a man and say it.

From F. E. Smith, Business Agent of Painters District Council of Pittsburg, Pa., relative to Plumbers, Marble Workers, and Marble Workers Helpers. Placed on file.

Specification Notes.

Miss Brook Yowels has been promoted to the ring alley.

So far the Specification Room has no candidate for any office. But there will be some.

I believe Jimmy Carter has a "bee in his bonnet," but I cannot figure out what kind as yet.

Rumor — George Seibold, of the Times, is to contest for the office of Secretary of the Union.

Proofreader Edmund Shaw was off several days last week on account of illness. We missed him in Alley 6.

C. I. Leonard was absent several days last week on account of illness. We missed his "Home was never like This!"

Slug 112—Daniel J. Marvin—reads proof so well that it looks like he is a fixture in the proofroom. Merit again asserts itself.

Dr. Frank Welch, of Alley 11, thinks alley 7 is a very nice one. I think "Doc" would move if he could get properly placed.

Austin says that when a youngster gets to be seven feet tall he ought to be called "Mister." Mr. Austin D. DuGanne it is—in full.

I am creditably informed that Joseph Stelle, of the Job Room, is to announce himself for delegate. All right, Joe, the Spess will treat you right, I guess.

Of the new 10-point dress of the Spess 23,000 pounds are on hand, with 2,000 pounds to come. The old dress—long primer—amounted to 28,000 pounds.

O. W. Humphrey had a narrow escape of a disastrous fire in his home last week. His cool head and willing hands prevented what might have proven a serious loss.

We are getting used to the noise overhead, but the bookbinders will never be able to popularize themselves with our fair ladies, just the same. See if you do, you Knockers!

Alley 5 has organized a "Suicide Club." Those who are tired of this life can apply to any member of the alley, who will give him any poison he specifies, from laudanum to "horse dope."

"Doc." Hauer and "Jimmy" Montgomery are rival leaders in the song and chorus of "Jersey Sam." The entire force enjoys their attempts to excel, and assist with all the lung power possible.

B. E. Harrison and H. D. Easterbrook had cases assigned them when we moved from the Union Building, but I am glad to chronicle that business has been such as to keep both busily engaged on the floor—at more pay.

The proofreader that makes a mark on Mr. Jaques' proof-sheet had better be sure of its correctness, for if he isn't, figuratively speaking, the Bogie man will catch him. Mr. Jaques is a fine printer and knows the style pretty well.

The "Report of the special committee on the feasibility of reducing the dues" is a concise and intelligent one. It could not have been otherwise with Messrs. Brockwell, Dickman, Stelle, Parsons, and Gompers composing the committee.

Timekeeper Gutelius has the candidate "bee in the bonnet," and it won't surprise me if his many friends finally persuades him to announce himself for honors as delegate. He can carry the Spess and Gazette almost solidly.

"Pard" Bloomer and Monroe Kreiter are probably the most entertaining contributors the Typographical Journal have—that is, to Washingtonians. Their styles of writing are similar, being free and easy, and successfully covering a very large and intelligent community. Ahem!

John A. Handiboe has been transferred to another room, and his geniality is greatly missed. Mr. Handiboe has a miniature typesetting machine that he hopes to get patented, and successfully place on the market. John is very resourceful, and if energy counts for anything he will make a success of this life.

Col. W. R. Burgess fell down on the ice recently, and skinned himself severely I understand. The Colonel is so popular that what concerns him concerns us all; and it is with pleasure that I announce that the authorities are letting him earn an honest living in the Proof Room while recovering from his wounds.

Rumor has it that Charley Holmes, of the Night Bill Force, will contest for the office of Treasurer of the Union. Charley is very popular, intelligent, competent, and trustworthy. The man that beats Arnold or Holmes (I do not think both of these gentlemen will contest—a case of "Alphonse" and "Gaston") will about be the winner—and "busted."

Distinguished company was sent us Monday in the personages of Chairman Billy Love of the First Division; Prof. Arthur B. Barringer, from the Fifth, who is a musician of known quality, and Willis L. Hall, a versatile contributor of THE TRADES UNIONIST and Typographical Journal. Gentlemen, you are just now in your proper element. We congratulate you.

James M. Montgomery (familiarly known as "Monty") has another grandson. This makes the second. As "Monty" is the father of about "'steen" himself, it can be truthfully asserted that the little one's father is a "chip of the old block." Montgomery celebrated his fifty-second birthday Tuesday, and his co-workers wished him continued happy returns.

I heard a caseholder say the other day that H. W. Whittaker was one of the best proofreaders in Spess Proof Room. This is saying a great deal, for he has only been in harness as a "railroader" and "comma fiend" a few months; and then again, Major Dodge's coterie of proofreaders are among the most competent and obliging in the Government Printing Office service.

A. J. Arnold's friends are besieging him to run for the office of Treasurer. He hasn't finally consented as yet, but I think from the assurances he is receiving he can be counted upon as a contestant for the office aforesaid. Mr. Arnold is a man peculiarly fitted to creditably fill this most important office, and his legion of friends will make a very strong fight to place him where his ambition lies.

Miss D. DaVega, for some years in the stitching department of the Bindery, has recently received an appointment as clerk in the office of Superintendent of Public Documents. Miss DaVega is well suited by birth and education to fill most creditably any position that could be assigned her, and her many friends are just as pleased as she that the Hon. Public Printer appointed her to a clerkship.

Louis Carroll was entirely responsible for the discovery of the death of Mrs. Ellen M. Gallagher, who passed away, all alone, in her home—445 M street northwest—last week. Louis, being a next-door neighbor, naturally noted the absence of the familiar figure going to and returning from office. It worried him so much that, calling a policeman to assist him, he made an investigation of the dead woman's premises, with results as above stated.

E. H. Tabler, of this room, together with his son, enjoys a large Governmental "rake off" in the form of royalties derived from the manufacture of an army blanket strap. The War Department readily adopted it, and the army and National Guards throughout the country are being equipped with it as fast as it can be manufactured. Foreign governments are corresponding with Mr. Tabler regarding his patent, and Japan desires to purchase the patent outright.

When Slug 192 gets his head off of the galley to correct he must walk down the room to the chairman (Slug 86) and so inform him. The chairman then will take up the race, as it were—the relay—and chase down to Slug 1, and let him know that the heads are "up to him." Prior to this compromise, the chairman wanted the "head" dispenser to wait ten or fifteen minutes between the last and first man so that matters might satisfactorily adapt themselves. But what the chairman says "don't seem to go"—as he would like.

I suppose it has been noticed that I've had little to say about the slogan "Merit will tell." Just for the fun of the thing, I have used the expression many times. But owing to the fact that so many people have taken me seriously, the phrase will be virtually discontinued until the density of the atmosphere is somewhat more cleared. Why the other day a young lady friend of Edgar's "jumped" me as soon as I landed at the office. She "wanted me to understand that she had known Mr. Merit a very long time, and she had never known him to tell anything yet." And the young lady in question refused to listen to explanations. Say, Edgar, for the Lore's sake, don't tell!

Proofreader W. F. Walsmith showed up for work Monday suffering with a very badly inflamed neck, and which, it seems, got painfully stiff. Mr. Walsmith declares his troubles were caused by sitting in a damp church last Sunday. His many friends were quite solicitious regarding his health during the day, and each one suggested a different remedy. Here are some of them: Turpentine, witch-hazel, camphorated oil, iodine, whiskey, porous plaster, mustard plaster, stop rubbering, change your brand, don't go to church, bromo-quinine, Old Reserve, chloroform, Peruna, wormwood and vinegar, Salva-cea, Antiphlogistine, Malay oil, omega oil, six feet of rope, and a flaxseed poultice. He is still living.

Night Bill Force.

All of the lights went out last Thursday night for about fifteen minutes.

J. A. Simas was transferred from the First Division to the Bill Force this week.

J. C. Lightcap is in Sibley Hospital suffering from a complication of diseases. We wish him a speedy recovery.

Harry B. Judson is a new accession to this force from the First. He served his probationary period with us a few years ago.

The clothes lockers are aptly named. They were nicely labeled, the keys called in, and were securely fastened up for over two weeks.

Mr. Young was showing his wife and a lady friend of hers visiting here, and Mrs. E. S. Wild through the building last Thursday evening.

Benny Reed, formerly on the bank in this room, accepted a position in Roanoke. In his place Voler V. Viles presides with the ease of a veteran.

While we expected a change in the time of paying off, still we have no particular complaint at present as we are getting paid promptly at the specified hour.

The blushing young swains had better be careful now for the Leap Year girl has her inning after a long wait of eight years. Don't fail to embrace the first opportunity.

We view with a great deal of complacency the discomfort of the department clerks at having to work another half hour, because we have to work eight hours now insead of seven.

Jack Luitich was through this room Monday night getting names of Texans with a view to organizing a Texas social society. We predict success for him, as Texans are very sociable.

I wish to heartily indorse Mr. Belcher's suggestion to organize a Franklin Society. At least, we could get together socially once a year and have an interchange of sociability.

The following temporaries were assigned to this force Tuesday night: J. J. McDonough, Waldo R. Mowen, S. H. Madden, Frank W. Prather, Evan T. Sheerer, William R. McKinley.

The late aspirants for the office of president of No. 101 are playing Alphonse and Gaston with each other when it comes to running against Mr. Berg. All of which goes to show that Mr. Berg is pre-eminently fitted for the place and will make an effective race.

John Greene, jr., it is rumored, will run for the office of treasurer of Columbia Union. While chairman of the Printing Committee he made a profit of about $500 on the Year Book for the Union, and his friends think this shows enough business acumen to help him win the race.

James W. Rodgers, of Baltimore, better known by his many friends as "Jimmy," was again welcomed to this force Monday night. He has worked a number of years in the G. P. O. at different times, and is well known. His home union has honored him twice as delegate—to Albany and St. Louis—and twice as president.

The ring alleys of this force seem to be a stepping stone to the Night Proof Room. Messrs. Frank Smith, Orth, Leatzow, J. P. McDowell, and E. A. Huse being first chosen; and on January 11 J. H. Schaffhausen and J. L. Holland were transferred. Ralph M. Hugdal, who worked in the alley adjoining, was also included in the scoop.

Messrs. Knapp and Peake, of this force, as representatives of the G. P. O. night street-car service committee, after waiting on numerous officials, finally appeared before the Business Men's Club, which is preparing a bill to be introduced in Congress, empowering the Commissioners to regulate these companies. This club is also conferring with the different citizens' clubs and intends to incorporate our request in the bill.

SECOND DIVISION ANNEX.

George A. Tuttle presides at the desk.

E. N. Trainham is the all round "trusty."

"Gus" Wisener is on the make up bank. G. G. Klinknett is his assistant.

E. O. Clement and F. W. Kihlborn were transferred from the day Second to the Night Second Annex of this force.

The fact that A. N. Venable was unanimously chosen secretary of this chapel was unintentionally omitted last week.

Walter H. Mules, of Baltimore, came to this force from the Spess. "Mules" is a synonym for good fellowship and ability in the Monumental City among the printing craft.

H. NEWSOM.

PRANDENNIAL CLUB.

Charles E. Hawkes Indorsed.

Chicago Typographical Union, No. 16, has indorsed the candidacy of Mr. Charles E. Hawkes for president of the I. T. U. in the following resolution:

Resolved, That we indorse the candidacy of Chas. E. Hawkes, of Chicago Typographical Union, No. 16, for president of the I. T. U., and reaffirm our confidence in his integrity and ability as a member and officer of the union. The uniformly successful outcome of many grave and delicate matters intrusted to him as first vice-president of the I. T. U. are an assurance that should he be elected president the affairs of the International Union will be administered by an able and experienced officer and for the sole benefit of our members.

A Clever Story.

George M. Ramsey, foreman of the Specification press room, has a clever story in the current number of the Typographical Journal, entitled "The Conversion of Hosea Martin." It is a story of latter-day organization, and the moral is clearly shown in the conversion of the old man to the necessity of changed conditions.

CARRIE L. WHITEHEAD, Treasurer.

Mr. Steele, from the Relief Committee, reported funds of committee at a low ebb, and an appropriation of $100 was made for the use of the committee.

The amendments to the constitution relative to membership, was, on request of the author of the amendment, laid over to the February meeting.

Willis L. Hall moved that the Laws Committee be authorized to make necessary changes in the scale of prices and other amendments to conform to the action of the Union at its last meeting. Agreed to.

The Union then took up as a special order of business the report of the special committee on feasibility of reducing the dues.

The report being considered seriatim, and being further amended, was adopted as amended, and the committee discharged with a rising vote of thanks from the Union.

The Board of Trustees of the Union were requested to consider the advisability of making certain changes and repairs to the Temple and to report on the feasibility of purchasing property in rear of the building.

Mr. Vaughan introduced an amendment having for its purpose the reduction of dues from 1 per cent to three-fourths of 1 per cent.

Mr. Love introduced a resolution having for its purpose the inhibition of members holding regular situations being eligible to act as Secretary of the Union while the regular Secretary is on leave of absence.

Mr. Love also introduced a resolution ordering the employment of a member of the Union as an assistant secretary.

Amendments and resolution went over to next meeting.

Adjourned.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

It is with my accustomed diffidence that I utter a scream of anguish at the dammable (that is, stoppable) grammar used by some of the young gentlemen who assist me in filling this paper each week. If there is one of them who does not know that two or more things can't "was" or "has" or "does" anything, he ought to do something for it. There were so many of such lapses from grammatical decency in last week's paper that I am impelled to suggest that the offenders are earning a bad name for all of us. Of course I know it is customary to sneer at the man who stands up for grammatical correctness, the finest answer in the world to such criticisms as this of mine being to show that the critic himself has been guilty of a solecism at some time in his life; but at the risk of that I am taking this throw at the "has-ers" and "was-ers" and "does-ers" who in last week's and other issues of this paper have brought printers' educational acquirements into contempt, without mentioning any names. Possibly many of us did get most of our education in the cornfield, but let us not make our alma mater blush to the ears because of our ignorance.

* * * *

I received a letter one day last week from the irrepressible James Emil Faukembourg Schmidt (otherwise "Texas Smith"), who is vegetating in the little town of Corning, Ark. He tells me that he recently stayed in Oil City, Pa., sixteen months—the longest he has remained in one place in thirty years. I merely mention his letter because there are many here who have known him in one place or another, for he has been calling there with more or less regularity for a third of a century, and they will undoubtedly be glad to hear of his whereabouts last week, though he may have different ones by this time.

Waudby is gathering the labor statistics of the region roundabout Allentown and Bethlehem, Pa., and acknowledging the receipt of indorsements by labor organizations of his candidacy for Commissioner of Labor on the retirement of Colonel Wright, who probably is only waiting for Waudby's appointment in order to let go.

* * * *

Probably the next great labor saver connected with the printing business, now alleged to be nearing practicability, is the combination of the telegraph and the linotype, by means of which, from three or four central stations, all telegraphic and syndicate matter will be set in every newspaper office in the country simultaneously. It is said that it will be cheaper to have all the telegraphic matter set and cut, slashed, and otherwise edited on the proofsheet than by the present practice of editing it and having it set separately in each office, and it is claimed that this system will save the wages of about one-third the number of operators now necessary in each office. The new machines are so arranged that the telegraphic connection can be detached at once if the machines are required for other work; but that will rarely be necessary, as it is calculated that about a third of all matter published can be set automatically, not counting the syndicated stuff, that being about the proportion of the telegraphed news. It will probably hurt us some on the go-off, but it will not result in any fewer men being employed in the long run. Our Union long ago learned that it is impolitic to resist the improvements of the age in the way of labor-saving machinery and no opposition to the introduction of the teleotypes, as the new machines are called, may be expected.

* * * *

The task of making up the mails for the Record since the number assigned to each Senator and Member was increased is no small one. The galleys of names are set up and proofs taken on gas-bill paper by George F. Halsey and C. Cam Brodie, after which the work of George S. Carroll (and recently Howard W. Young, as assistant) comes in. They take the galleys of names and addresses, cut them into narrow strips for the mailing machines, paste them into long ribbons, and then the machines cut and stick them on the wrappers, after which they are carried to the Record folding room and the papers put up when the edition is printed. From start to finish this is a "rush job" and the hustle that Carroll and Young have to get on themselves sometimes makes me real excited. Carroll, notwithstanding his Milesian name, is a Louisiana Frenchman, and Young, notwithstanding his, is an old Fourt' Ward rounder from New York.

* * * *

J. Ligon King's explanation of his numerous announcements of lady candidates for delegate is satisfactory, coupled as it is with the statement that none of those whom he has named are really candidates. Joe is all right, and his daily column of G. P. O. news in the Star is a peach. He is really a very warm supporter of Miss Wilson, and when he mentions other ladies for delegate it is only a matter of news, for as a newsgatherer he is always Joe King.

* * * *

I hope it is true that my friend Theodore Frank Hall is a candidate for delegate, for he will make a cracking good one. He can count on my support from now till the jig is up, if he is, though I give him and all others notice that I am generally a Jonah.

* * * *

From several sources I have heard that Miss Teresa McDonald, of the Post, is likely to be a candidate for the down-town delegateship. If she succeeds in her very laudable ambition, she and Miss Anna Wilson will make the delegation the most creditable Columbia Union has ever had.

* * * *

At my birthday celebration last Friday night I was kindly remembered by presents of many articles of bric-a-brac and parlor ornaments, testifying the taste of the givers, as well as a hat that can not be duplicated in any store in the city. Such testimonials greatly assist one in welcoming the approach of old age.

* * * *

Anti trades union stories are having a great run in the magazines just now, as though the writers thereof were not workingmen and had no occasion to sympathize with them, whereas they are the worst abused of all the wage-earners I know and more in need of the protection that a union gives and they deride. Story writers have to take the chance of their work being approved after they have done it, waiting weeks for a decision to be arrived at, and then waiting until it is used (sometimes months) before getting their money if it be approved. There is not a trades unionist in the world who would submit to such contemptuous treatment, and these now fawning sycophants of the man of money will some day acquire sense enough to get together and insist upon fair treatment. In the meanwhile their attacks on the principles of unionism by gross exaggeration and misrepresentation will set men to study those principles who hitherto have not done so, and such study will make converts of any honest man.

* * * *

Harry C. Knapp of the Times, is in the race for the down-town delegateship, and it looks as though it will be at least a three-cornered game if not one of "four old cat" like we used to play when we were boys. Harry learned his trade on the old National Republican, with which I was connected twice upon two times, and I have know him as boy and man ever since. He will make an able representative of Columbia Union if elected, and nobody in the field is more deserving.

* * * *

They have a new messenger in the office of the foreman of printing, J. W. Bond by name, discovered somewhere near Laurel, Md., and as a story teller he is a lallapaloosa, vastly superior to Morrison, of sainted memory and the story of the jackass who wanted to get across the crick. The faculty of telling a story well is rarely possessed, but Bond has it to the queen's taste as Morrison had to the jack's.

* * * *

The Chicago Record-Herald of January 10 had a portrait and a well-written sketch of August Donath, giving in detail much of his strongest work in behalf of the interests of organized labor. Of course his work is all well known to the older members here, and the Union showed its appreciation of it last spring by placing his name on the honorary roll. But it is gratifying when a great paper like the Record-Herald shows its admiration of the merits of our able men.

* * * *

At the February meeting of the Union action will be taken on indorsement of candidates for I. T. U. offices. While I have never been much of an I. T. U. politician I hope the vote of this Union will be cast indorsing James M. Lynch for re-election as president. He has given us an admirable administration during his incumbency—our progress has heen greater than during any similar period of the I. T. U.'s existence—and as a presiding officer he is without a peer in the craft. He is open, honest, and above board, and there is never any doubt as to his position. I do not believe that the members of Columbia Union will need my advice as to the the advisability of voting to retain so able an officer,

My friend Philip S. Steele writes me that as a candidate for delegate he is up and a-coming. I stop the press to say that "I am fer him."

The discussion of the machine question brings to mind the thought that it would be a good idea to subscribe to THE TRADES UNIONIST. It is an exclusively hand-composition office and maintains a number of "berths" for the typesetter. The pressmen's union has a maxim, "Live and let live," the beauty of which grows on one by the application of it.

Bids were opened for the printing of the G. P. O. Mutual Association Manual at the last meeting, held January 16th, and Mr. A. J. Arnold was awarded the contract. The contract is for two years and the parties who published the book last paid $525.00 for the privilege, which more than paid the current expenses of the Association. The last manual is a beautiful book and its publishers should feel proud of bringing it up to so high a plane of fine workmanship. No advertiser can look through this book and honestly say he has given something for nothing.

Belinda bought a bargain
Black net to make a dress;
Marked down from something fearful
To half the price, or less.

It only cost four dollars,
The lining cost fifteen,
And fifteen more for chiffon,
The silk and net between.

Then forty yards of ruching
And thirteen pounds of jet,
Some lace, a little velvet
To brighten up the net.

Then twenty for the making—
It is a bargain gown—
It only cost four dollars,
Because it was marked down.

When a man has to work for a living he cannot regulate his surroundings entirely to his liking and he must have a large fund of good-nature and patience to draw on. Wouldn't this irritate you:

Himmelman—Well; what is it?

Gris.—Save a penny the first day, two cents the second day, four cents the third day, and so on for thirty days, doubling the amount every day.

Him.—I have a prescription for you.

Gris.—What is it?

Him.—Take a drink of whiskey the first day, two the second day, four the third day, and so on for thirty—Well; I agree to attend the funeral.

The dearth of mortuary statistics, transfers, and leaves—my co-workers on this important publication being all vulgarly healthy at this writing—compels me to cull a few posies from the garden of thought, and in order to make a showing will try what my friend J. Ligon King terms jollying. Sam Kirby will do for a subject. He is our copy preparer. You know a copy cutter can make a day's work harder for a fellow than it should be. I remember, and refuse to forget, a he-devil who took me for his victim many years ago. He would let me get my hand on a "pick up" and then take it away and give me something "hurried." You have been there; haven't you? All I ask is a chance to wield the scissors on Zion's Herald with that chinch at the case. However, Sam Kirby's power for mischief is curtailed, as there aint no "pick up." And as everybody speaks well of him it would be stupid in me to knock.

The Woman's Auxiliary of Columbia Union held its regular meeting last Monday evening. Considerable interest was manifested in the coming contest for delegate, and it is likely that the Auxiliary will send two ladies to St. Louis this summer, as they intend to reduce their dues to 25 cents per quarter and they will not need many members to increase the membership to 150, which will increase their representation in the convention. Mrs. E. H. Thomas and Mrs. J. A Huston announced themselves as candidates and there may be several others in the race to make it interesting. Miss Laura B. Gordon, the new president, announced the following standing committees:

Business—Mesdames A. W. Bowen, chairman; C. L. Nace, Jos. E. Goodkey, W. K. Martin, C. A. Durno.

Entertainment — Mesdames E. H. Thomas, chairman; F. C. Roberts, J. A. Huston, T. J. Rowe, Joe M. Johnson, C. H. Slack.

Relief—Mesdames O.D. Hyler, chairman; Carrie L. Kidd, Clair D. Barnes, H. J. Redfield, Miss Daisie E. Cummins.

Rallying—Mesdames T. A. Bynum, chairman; E. T. Stephenson, John McCormick, E. W. Morcock, Delos Carter.

At the last meeting of Columbia Union the report of the past year was submitted. It shows a healthful condition of affairs.

The souvenir of the Washington Post Chapel has not attracted the attention and received the notice and praise that it merits and is entitled to. Some persons made application for them at the business office, thinking it was issued by the paper. This may to some extent, explain the lack of attention it has received at the hands of the different chairmen and correspondents. It was issued, about New Year's time, by the Post Chapel, and was to be sent to every union chapel in the country. The Gazette chapel has not received one; but that can be accounted for by the fact that being a newly-created division we have not been placed on the list. The souvenir consists of a group picture of the entire chapel with a full-sized copy of a first page of The Washington Post for a back-ground. The promoters of the idea deserve great credit for bringing the idea to a reality. It is no small task to infuse sufficient enthusiasm into sixty or more people to induce them to contribute their pro rata for expenses and have their picture taken. The foreman, Mr. C. C. Thompson, is the central figure of the group, and he is to be congratulated on his selection of a corps of assistants—such as indicated by the picture—a large majority of whom are personally known to me. There is one lady in the group, Miss Teresa McDonald, and she is surrounded by an intelligent and conservative body of men. The absence of the Herr Most type of physiognomy in this collection makes one feel that union principles are in safe hands in this office and will be advanced in a sensible and proper manner.

Perry Heath always possessed a deserved reputation of being a Johnnie-on-the-spot. One of the guild now retails a story how he was discovered, during the Charleston earthquake, busily dictating his dispatches to a telegraph operator whom he had induced to set up an instrument in the middle of the street.

Charlie Bookwalter, a graduate from the case, and who has been repeatedly elected mayor of the Hoosier capital, with labor votes, is seeking a nomination for Congress from the Indianapolis district. Mr. Bookwalter has always kept in touch with his craft associates, being nominated for trustee of the Childs-Drexel Home on the organization of that institution.

It is impossible to pick up a magazine nowadays and not be met with the query, "Do you know Joe Chapple?" Answering it, I would say he is one of the boys who, tired of founding and foundering country papers in Jim River region of the Dakotas, came East to establish a magazine national in its nature; and the best part of the story is, he succeeded therein.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

John A. Simas was transferred to the night force Saturday night.

Henry T. McConvey and George A. Webster were transferred to the Spess Saturday.

J. F. Gambrill, J. P. Mawbray, and J. R. Charles, temporaries, were given cases in this room Monday morning.

"Cap." Barringer must have disposed of his stock of canines, as his old familiar cry of "Who wants to buy a dog?" is heard no more.

W. R. Love, our chairman and symposium treasurer, was transferred to the Spess Saturday evening. Bill made a good chairman and will be missed.

Any one having items for this column will confer a favor on the correspondent by handing them to our messenger, Fred Berger, or the chairman, who will see that they are sent in.

Charles F. Purdy, who is stage manager for the Criterion amateur theatrical company, took the part of the butler in a play called "The Prince of Liars," at Alexandria last Friday evening, and the papers give him a very flattering notice.

As a result of the transfer of W. R. Love, a meeting of the chapel was called Monday at 12 30 to elect a new chairman. Phil Nachman and Louis E. Vogt were the candidates. A very close vote resulted, Nachman receiving 82 votes to 78 for Vogt.

The many friends of Frank Miller are glad to see him at work again after a long absence. Mr. Miller had a long and hard siege of typhoid fever, being taken sick early in October and only being able to return to work a week ago. He is located in the day Record.

J. L. Getman is helping out in the "Y." Frank Lloyd and P. M. McCallum have been doing the same for several weeks. The rush of work during Congress and the absence of Kinney, who was transferred to the day Record as maker-up, makes this extra force necessary.

Fred Penn, the big man from Alexandria, is very proud of that burg and never tires of talking about the fine fried oysters served there. He is always ready to entertain any of his friends when they make the journey across the river, and they are assured of a hearty welcome and royal entertainment.

Our clothes lockers are not ready yet, but they would have been some time ago if some people who were evidently afraid they would be left out when lockers were assigned hadn't carried off the keys. In order to pass inspection each locker must have two keys, and the locker man is having all kinds of trouble chasing up the missing ones.

The G. P. O. Veteran Club, of which Mr. Charles F. Garrette is president, gave an entertainment on Saturday evening, January 16. Among the interesting numbers on the programme were an address by Charles Hornbeck, songs by Mrs. Justin Loomis and music by the Rebew orchestra. Refreshments were served by the Ladies' Auxiliary to the club.

F. H. Hopkins, jr., met with an accident last week, which laid him up for several days.

Dr. Trudgian returned on Saturday from a four-weeks' illness. The boys were glad to see him back again.

The skilled manner in which Chas. L. Nace executed the figures on the "hurry copy" balls deserves a world of thanks, and here it is.

Wm. G. Glenn was off two days last week performing the last sad rites over a deceased brother Mason. Our fellow-workman has a large heart in the right spot.

Mr. Moore, our ex postmaster, drops in occasionally, and his bright smile and pleasant word makes us wish more of the old force would come round and say "howdy."

Some interesting notes have been passing between Colonel Cady, on the night side, and Messrs. Allen and Dwight. We miss the Colonel's breezy visits very much.

Through the courtesy of A. J. Poston, general agent for California excursions, Titus F. Ellis has been distributing some very artistic calendars done in colors, representing a shapely Indian maiden garbed in raiment typifying the seasons. Bring around some more.

In considering I. T. U. delegates it is well for all voters to bear in mind that the Second has a worthy candidate for representative in the person of Titus F. Ellis. We hope, expect—in fact, are sure—that he will be sent by Columbia Union to the great Western city next August.

The Berean Bible Class and Club of the Ninth Street Christian Church held its annual banquet in the church basement on Tuesday, January 12. The Bereans are noted for their progressive spirit, and these annual feasts are but one of the many pleasant features connected with the work these young men are doing, many of whom are printers employed in the Government Printing Office. The tables extended around the entire room and accommodated about 150, every seat being occupied by young men—and some old ones—who have solved the problem how to do good deeds in the happiest and most cheerful way. The young ladies of the church volunteered their services and served the repast. President Pirtle, of the Berean Class, presided, and acted as toastmaster. Short talks by the Rev. Mr. Bagby and the Rev. Mr. Harris, and Messrs. Kitchen, Rhodes, Brewood, Steele, and Stevens; bass solo by Ben A. Lineback; selected readings by the Rev. Mr. Harris; original story by Mr. Foultz, and several other interesting numbers served to make the evening one of double interest and entertainment. The Bereans are a wide-awake, progressive body of young men, have merited the success achieved, and should be encouraged to continue the good work they are doing.

Another column of interesting reading about "Uncle Sam's printery" was published in the Star of the 13th instant.

All the boys had fat envelopes last Monday, and the prospect is that if we can stand the strain we will be able to add still more to our "pile" in two weeks.

I take off my hat to the public printer. The electric lights have improved perceptibly of late, as I have had occasion to find out by working evenings until nine o'clock. "For this relief much thanks."

Since last week Messrs. Frederick O Whitman (father), Edgar O. Whitman (son), and Samuel B. Ragland have reported for duty, while William Y. Clarke, Willis L. Hall, and Nathan W. Klopfer have been transferred to the Specification Division.

Quite a number of the Woman's Auxiliary were in attendance at the Union meeting Sunday last, among whom were Misses Laura Gordon, president; Anna M. Wilson, sergeant-at-arms; Carrie Whitehead, treasurer; Josepha Lange, and Mrs. Joe M. Johnson.

The report for the year submitted to Columbia Union by Miss Nannie McMichael, secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary, shows that organization to be in excellent financial condition. On February 9 the Auxiliary will celebrate its first birthday by a reception and dance at the Temple.

As an evidence of the increase of the banking business in the United States, I am informed by J. W. Dillman, who sets up the folios for the Report of the Comptroller of the Currency, that up to and including the State of Rhode Island, there are 121 pages of bank statements more this year than last year.

During the absence on leave of J. C. Sowers, head corrector in the time alley, his place has been ably filled by Edward J. Wood, ably seconded by Messrs. Branham, McUmber, and Hallock. These gentlemen save the rest of us many "pink slips," and we should all feel due appreciation of their kindness.

Instead of building an addition to the rear of Typographical Temple to accommodate the increasing business of the American Federation of Labor, would it not be a better idea to negotiate a sale of the building to the A. F. of L., and use the proceeds for a new building for Columbia Union? Let us hear what you think, fellow printers.

One would hardly suppose there are elevators running on the Jackson Alley side of the building at noon, judging from the crowds descending by way of the stairs. Those who work on the sixth floor are restricted to the use of the G street elevator in descending, and as long as we have but 30 minutes for lunch there is not sufficient time for one elevator to handle the large crowds that descend to the street from both sides of the building.

Willis L. Hall's article in the January Typographical Journal brought the following letter from Thomas E. Morse, a former employe in the G. P. O., which I am allowed to print through the courtesy of Mr. Hall:

MEDFORD, MASS.,
January 11, 1904.

MR. WILLIS L. HALL,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The article of yours in the last number of the Typographical Journal on "The Largest Printery" was interesting to me, and especially so as I was for a brief time employed in that place.

The circumstances of my going and coming were somewhat peculiar. It was in 1895, November and December, when I was just 23 years of age. I had not learned the printing trade, but when quite young, attending school, I had an opportunity to set type in the Mirror office, Manchester, N. H., and on leaving school was given a case and earned a living setting news matter. In '95 the machines were put in and I was the first to run one there, but the pay given us was so small that I determined to look elsewhere for something, and took the Civil Service examination in September. Much to my surprise I had an excellent percentage and was appointed very soon. Now, I was always a boy tied to his mother's apron strings and knew almost nothing of the world in general or of printing in particular and from the minute of receiving news of the appointment I began to tremble and have all manner of doubts. But I reached Washington safely.

They led me through the large expanse of the G. P. O. It was the old building, the bricks then being laid in the inner partitions and floors of the new. Over next the wall, looking out into the cavernous interior of the new printing office, in the Fourth Division, they located me.

I forget the name of the kindly foreman of the division (it may have been Edwards or Edmunds); in fact, the only names I do remember were two—King, who was my good friend in "showing me things," and an "old soak" named A——, a temporary appointee, who stood beside me until he received, one day, a letter saying (as King read it aloud so I could hear), "Your probationary appointment is hereby cancelled." Added to the difficulties of typesetting in such a place was the matter of joining the union, something that, in my ignorance, had not occurred to me until the chairman came around and told me to go out at once and consult the secretary. This greatly added to my perturbation, as the application was not acted upon for two weeks or so.

About this time a man called at my lodging house on Thirteenth street northwest, and interested himself in me and invited me to take an outing with him some Sunday. I haven't a clear idea what his name was (Mitchell seems to suggest itself to me), but he said he came from Dover, N. H., and lived in the vicinity of the G. P. O. We walked out to Cabin John Bridge and back and he took me to call on some friends in the evening. He talked politics considerably, and to my confused mind he seemed then and for sometime afterward to be spying on my partisanship, and for that reason I did not put the faith in him which seems now would have been proper.

During this time the Manchester Mirror started a morning edition to take part in campaign, and offered me a machine at nearly as good wages as those paid me in Washington. So, after six weeks in the G. P. O., I was much relieved to be able to get back home again. While it proved better to be nearer home I have often wished that I might have stayed longer in Washington, and I would be much pleased if in some way I could learn the name of the man who so kindly showed me around that Sunday. If he was within hailing distance I would send to him and to King, of the Fourth Division, my best wishes and more hearty thanks than, perhaps, I accorded them at that time.

I notice in your article you say the new arrival "merely distributes type and gets a hold on the routine of the office." My experience was not so easy, for I was set to composing tables and what not the very first thing, and I remember distinctly saying to an alleymate that I wished they would give me something easier till I got used to things. (I had never set a table before in my life, so you may imagine how they scared me).

The pay each two weeks was $38.40, or $19.20 a week. Has it been increased?

An article of mine to the December Typographical Journal, entitled "Proofreaders Not Infallible" (p. 612) may interest you. I am now employed as an operator on the Boston Herald.

Cordially yours,

THOMAS E. MORSE.

In the last issue but one of this paper and again in the Star of Wednesday, January 13, it was suggested that there is "enough really good musical talent" in Uncle Sam's printery "to interest the Entertainment Committee of Columbia Union in the formation of a glee club." It is hardly to be doubted that among such a large body of men there should be many who would be capable of doing themselves credit in such an organization. But a glee club cannot exist successfully without a competent director, who must be a man of abounding personal magnetism as well as the possessor of musical talent. If we have such a man among us, and he is ready to undertake the responsibility of conducting rehearsals to a successful finish, he will find plenty of material to work upon, and the result of his labors will pay us for whatever trouble or expense we may have. Without such a leading spirit no musical organization can hope to succeed.

Texas Anti-Trust Law.

A decision rendered by Judge Dwyer, of Texas, states that the anti-trust law of that State does not apply to labor unions, where members agree among themselves not to ride on street cars.

This first test case of this phase of the law was decided when the indictments against the six members of a local Brewerymens' Union were quashed on the ground that the acts charged, combining for the purpose of not riding on street cars, did not constitute a restraint of trade, and further that the anti-trust law of Texas did not contemplate labor unions, which were legalized by a previous legislature, but was aimed to prevent capital and acts for illegal purposes.

PRANDENNIAL CLUB.

Post Chapel.

W. H. Knowles has been on the sick list during the last week.

W. M. Byerly left last Sunday for his home in Meadville, Pa, on account of the serious illness of his mother.

The Post chapel held its semi-annual meeting on Monday and re-elected yours truly, chairman, and J. T. Bradley, secretary.

George Fleishell, our genial bankman, is wearing "the smile that won't come off." His wife recently presented him with twin daughters.

Fred Ferber, one of our apprentices, celebrated his twenty-first birthday a few weeks ago, and has since been confined to his home by serious illness.

From present indications, the Post chapel is apt to be heard from when the nominations for delegates are being made this year. The race down town promises to be a lively one.

The post-office authorities evidently do not know what a printing office chapel means. An acknowledgment to our greeting just arrived at residence of the chairman, and was marked "Not at barracks." It was addressed to Washington Post Chapel.

Now that the machine question has been discussed with considerable feeling, let us shake hands and be good. Future developments may determine who is right. If machines were introduced in the G. P. O. and would result in such dire calamity as some of our friends predict, we would sincerely regret it.

Three deaths in the families of members of the chapel have occurred quite recently. The father of Don L. Murray died from shock of amputation of one of his limbs, made necessary from gangrene. C. F. Ferrell's mother-in-law passed to the great beyond, and James Sprucebank's mother also passed away. She was aged, 71 years. The sympathies of all members of the chapel goes out to these fellow-craftsmen in their bereavement.

Bindery Notes.

William Brady, with his fine baritone voice, is in great demand at social functions.

This being leap year, Bob Stack is in great danger, as the ladies are casting admiring glances at him.

The ladies, having discovered that James Duffy is a single man, are making "Goo Goo" eyes at him.

Theo. Baldeneker, whose poetry would makes Byron or Burns blush in shame, wants to know "Vat is wonder?"

John J. Noonan, who boasts of his long line of American ancestry, is about to produce a new book entitled, "We Americans." It is understood Dan Fallon is collaborating with him.

James L. Feeney's new song, "Stick to the Union, Jack," is being highly praised by music lovers all over the city. Many wonder why Jim "sticks" to the union when he might shine as a song maker.

Phil Deakins is somewhat at a loss as to what to talk about these days when baseball is so dull. It is understood that he regards the order requiring the clerks to work a half hour later as a very serious matter, because it means that the games will have to be called at a later hour.

President Tatum, of the I. B. of B., has appointed a Shorter Workday Committee of which William H. Kelly, of Local No. 4, is chairman, and it is expected that they will work in harmony with a similar committee of the I. T. U. in order to bring about a universal eight-hour day in the near future.

A new truck was furnished the other day for the use of the operator of the rotary board cutter. Some one with a habit of eccentric spelling marked it "Rotterary Machine." The services of three civil service graduates and Webster's Unabridged had to be brought into requisition before the culprit was convinced of his error.

Anent Machines in the G. P. O.

The able writer of "Chat of the Craft" in The Unionist, New York City, says:

"Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, Washington, D. C., decided at a meeting held Sunday December 27, 1903, to oppose the introduction of typesetting machines in the Government office. A committee was appointed to represent the union before the House committee having the proposed change under consideration."

It is presumed the information received in the above item was taken from the Associated Press, which, of course, is always ready to give organized labor's true position on all questions.

Ex-delegates and members of Columbia Union having an interest in this matter are cordially invited to be present for conference and suggestion.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades of the Central Labor Union was called to order at the usual hour by Chairman Wells.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read, and the secretary directed to correct statement in minutes relative to Amalgamated Carpenters and Brotherhood Carpenters having formed an agreement, after which the minutes were approved.

From Glaziers' Union, No. 1021, certifying to W. W. Wright, Geo. Bendall, and W. E. Sedgwick.

From Carpet Workers' Union, certifying to Samuel Rauch, F. P. McGuire, and Chas. Booker.

The credentials were accepted and the delegates seated.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From District Council of Brotherhood of Carpenters stating that a joint District Council had been formed with the Amalgamated Carpenters and asking that representatives of the Amalgamated Carpenters be seated in Council Allied Building Trades. Request complied with.

From District Council of Carpenters stating that they had placed Gonzaga College on unfair list. Returned to writer on request of Carpenters.

From Amalgamated Carpenters, stating that the communication from secretary of the Central Labor Union had been received at too late an hour to have delegates at meeting. Placed on file.

ROLL CALL.

Bridge and Structural Iron Workers stated that members of their sister local, No 64, had been locked out by a Mr. Gichler because the men refused to work on Duehay jobs and the secretary was directed to inform the Employing Contractors Association that the shop was unfair.

Carpet Workers asked for information relative to one of their members who was at work on struck jobs, and the secretary was directed to forward information to the union.

The amendments to the by laws were then taken up and considered. After consideration of several articles and sections, further action on the by-laws was deferred to the meeting to be held February 2.

THE ALLIED BUILDING TRADES

Enters Protest Against Agreement With Brewers' Association.

ALL THE OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

Amalgamated Carpenters and Joiners Received—Granite Cutters Request Action on New Railway Station—Pipe Coverers To Ask For an Advance.

The regular meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades was called to order at the usual hour by Chairman Wells.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

From Washington Lodge of Machinists, certifying to J. C. Schooley and J. J. O'Brien.

From Carpenters, No. 190, certifying to A. J. Cooper, vice C. C. Clark.

[illegible]redentials were accepted and [illegible]ates seated.

[illegible]ORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Delegate Sheetz, from committee on Steam Fitters' differences, reported progress.

ROLL CALL.

Granite Cutters asked that a committee of three be appointed to act in conjunction with like committee from Central Labor Union on union station. Request was granted and chair appointed Delegates Reilly, Ryan, and Lewis as committee.

They also stated that their union would take issue with any union that encroached on their jurisdiction.

Painters reminded the delegates that R. A. Golden was still on the unfair list.

Paperhangers reported Haller & Haller as being on the unfair list of their union.

Pipe Coverers stated that they would ask for $3.00 per day February 1, 1904.

At this point the regular order of business was suspended and the election of officers for the ensuing term taken up, which resulted as follows:

Chairman—J. H. Wells.

Vice-Chairman—C. W. Winslow.

Secretary-Treasurer—E. J. Ratigan.

Sergeant-at-Arms—Moses Peyton.

Trustees—Jos. A. Daly, J. D. McKay, and W. Silver.

Business Agent—E. J. Ratigan.

NEW BUSINESS.

Delegate Reilly moved that it be the sense of this Council that it disapprove of the contract entered into between the Central Labor Union and the Brewers' Association, and that the secretary be directed to notify the Central Labor Union of same.

Delegates King and Sheetz opposed the motion.

Delegates Reilly, Winslow, and Desmond favored the motion.

Delegate Ratigan moved to amend that the secretary be directed to inform the Central Labor Union that the contract entered into with the Brewers' Association is detrimental to the interests of the Council of Allied Building Trades, and to ask the Central Labor Union to reconsider its action on same.

At the request of Delegate Reilly the amendment was withdrawn to allow vote on original motion.

The original motion was then put and carried.

Delegate Ratigan's amendment was then taken up, put, and carried.

Delegate Ratigan moved that the name of Samuel J. Prescott & Co. be taken from the unfair list.

The chair sustained the point of order as well taken, and Delegate Reilly appealed from his decision.

The chair was not sustained in his ruling, and the request was referred to Carpenters' District Council.

Considerable discussion was then indulged in as to whether the Council had been officially informed as to whether a joint District Council had been formed between the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners.

The secretary stated that such communication from District Council of Brotherhood Carpenters was on file.

Delegate Reilly stated that such a council had been formed, but that the plans had not been perfected.

Delegate Reilly then moved to adjourn. Carried.

Third Division.

I always thought Pard Julian was an American. It seems, however, that he is a German; he eats black bread.

Last Saturday and Monday we got out the largest installment of copyright catalogue for a long time, there being 4,549 cards.

Robert J. Mears, of Delaware, a temporary appointee, reported for duty Thursday, the 21st inst., and was assigned to slug 32.

Joseph I. Kiefer, who held a frame with us last fall, and Chas. Abernethy, were transferred to this room from the Specification Division last week.

The canvass for Titus Ellis for delegate shows remarkable vitality. One hears his name on every hand. He is early in the field and seems determined to win.

This was perpetrated by Chas. S. Davis, the slug man:

The secretary of the symposium says business is pretty dull. When working twelve hours a day the boys can't get a chance to spend their money, and so have no occasion for borrowing.

Harry Knapp, of the Times, called on us Monday and was introduced to everybody in the room by Chairman Goldstein. Mr. Knapp has our good wishes in his contest for the position of delegate.

Jack Childress, of the Proof Room, and Tom McEneany, indulged in a rather spirited wrestling match last Friday noon. After a "tussle" lasting five minutes both contestants were willing to call it a draw.

Of course this helps out not only the "intelligent compositor," but also the proofreader, whose duty it presumably is to mark such things as Brother Bloomer complains about. Everything goes; it is "Colloquialism."

James F. Bright, at present chairman of the Board of Trustees of Columbia Union, No. 101, and who has held the office of trustee for the past six or seven years, announces himself as a candidate for treasurer of Columbia Union.

The number of sick in this Division reached high water mark on Saturday last, when eight were reported absent from that cause. On Tuesday the number had decreased to three. As long as night work continues, we may expect more or less sickness.

It was nice for J. Ligon King to come out at last in favor of Miss Anna Wilson. He just had to do it. Washington has the banner Woman's Auxiliary of the country, and we should and will recognize the fact by electing Miss Wilson to represent us at St. Louis.

Dan C. Vaughan has already begun his canvass for delegate. He visited us last week to arrange for proper campaign management, and henceforth may be expected to conduct an aggressive fight. He will need to, as the candidates will be legion this year.

I am pleased to see that Bloomer is out in favor of his "friend, Theodore Frank Hall," for delegate. Mr. Hall is an honored member of the Third Division, and barring something decidedly unforeseen, will receive every vote in the room, not to mention a few outside. Make no mistake, friends: Hall is the coming man and may be picked for a winner.

August Donath offers the timely suggestion that the salaries of the president and secretary-treasurer of the International Typographical Union be increased. Surely we can not afford to be niggardly in this respect. The duties of these two officers are such as to demand ability of a high order; and the present incumbents, as Mr. Donath suggests, are fully worth $3,000 apiece.

* * * "one of our apprentices celebrated his twenty-first birthday a few weeks ago, and has since been confined to his home by serious illness."

It is a long time since I was twenty-one, but my memory is good, and I don't recall any such experience. Seriously, however, I hope the young man will soon be able to resume his work.

Both T. C. Parsons and Harry Knapp, of the Times chapel, have announced themselves as candidates for delegate. I learn on good authority that Mr. Knapp proposed to Mr. Parsons that they should allow the chapel to decide as to who should be the candidate, but Mr. Parsons preferred having his destiny settled by the larger constituency of the Union; so Mr. Knapp is in the race for good. May the better man win.

The kindly sentiment expressed by Mr. Broderick, the Post correspondent, concerning the possible evil consequences to many employes that would surely follow the introduction of the linotypes in the G. P. O., are sincerely appreciated. As he says, time will show who is right; and in the meantime no good can come from writing letters to the papers. In expressing himself as he has, our down-town brother has acted in manly fashion. Let us "shake hands and be good."

I suppose that what we have seen sticking to the feet of country residents during the past week is what is known as the "sacred soil," which we used to hear about so much in old war-time days. But the residents of Lonesomehurst seem to take it cheerfully. Last Saturday morning, while waiting for the car, I heard a woman say to her companion, "I suppose he" (indicating an old man with very muddy feet) "wants folks to know we've got real estate out our way." Then they both chuckled.

What a "dreadful visitation" this night work must be for the numerous gin mills scattered about the office. One thing is certain: there is a disgracefully large number of thirst parlors in close promixity to the Government printery: and one can not help hoping that some of them will get tired and quit the business, especially when the great harm they do is considered. Men have been discharged who would be with us today if the liquor habit had not demoralized them, and there are others still on the rolls who are booked for dismissal from the same cause. The time to stop drinking is now.

One morning about a week ago our eyes were gladdened by the sight of a bright, new, and therefore clean sample of "Old Glory" floating over the old building. The flag of our country is always beautiful; but the author of the "Star Spangled Banner" did not feel more elated when he wrote that immortal song than the employes of the G. P. O. felt when the new flag was substituted for the dingy one that had done duty for such a long time. "The old flag" sounds sentimental and patriotic; but when a flag gets as dirty as the one mentioned above its proper place is either a wash tub or a museum.

There is a man now working with us who once performed the astonishing feat of working twenty-five hours in a day. When asked where he got the extra hour shown on his time slip, he replied: "I worked during the noon hour!" "This reminds me," as Old Abe used to say, of Johnny Cummings, formerly of Providence; present address unknown (as was said of the man who had been gathered to his fathers). One time when summer was upon us, a chum of Johnny's remarked to him: "The days are getting a good deal longer, now, ain't they, Johnny?" To which he responded, "Yes, they are; I have more time for my dinner now, for it's about ten minutes longer between 12 and 1!"

Now and then we hear a word from the bedside of our old foreman and friend, William H. Hickman It will be sad news to many, not only in the Government Printing Office but among all who have ever met him, that he will soon be

> Beyond the smiling and the weeping,
> Beyond the parting and the greeting.

His mind wanders constantly through the dreamland of his past life; now he is busy with the last "takes" of the Record, now running out the copyright catalogue, now looking for a piece of lost copy.

His most devoted friend, known to us all as "Pard" Bloomer, never misses a night at his house; no matter how late the hour, no matter how stormy the weather, he is sure to call and inquire about his old friend "Hick" and see him if possible. R. M. Cheshire and George Sherman, of this division, are also frequent callers. We can say that these friends only reflect the spirit of the many who do not call, fearing to cause inconvenience to the household. All unite in commending him to that merciful Father whose children we are and in whom we all trust.

"Pard" Bloomer's "scream of anguish" at the "has-ers" and "was-ers" and "does-ers" came just in the nick of time, and was placed, by a happy inspiration, at the head of his contribution to last week's issue of this paper. I think I hear another "scream of anguish" as Brother Bloomer peruses the columns of THE TRADES UNIONIST of the 21st inst. In the account of the proceedings of Columbia Union we read that "The amendments * * * was * * * laid over to the February meeting." And on the last page we find: "The sympathies of all members of the chapel goes out * * *." But a light breaks through the clouds. Perhaps we have found the cause of this apparent lack of knowledge of the first principles of English grammar. In the Post of last Sunday, under the heading "Woman About Town," reference is made to a certain very widely circulated journal for ladies, which publishes every month a whole page of instructions in correct speaking and in writing. "Good grammar," says the learned authority on correct speaking, "allows the use of 'but me' for colloquial purposes, where in dignified phrase one might prefer 'but I.'" Then "Woman About Town" adds:

"I don't know when any thing has ever taken a greater load off my mind than that has. For years I have perceived that there is something inherently inelegant about the accusative of the personal pronoun of the first person. I have writhed in silence when people said, 'Everybody but me was late,' and I have shed tears secretly because my clergyman invariably says, 'Nobody but me.' I couldn't say to myself that these misguided persons were speaking colloquially, because I didn't know what colloquial license was. I thought they were using 'dignified prose,' and it saddened me. I know now how it was. In colloquial English you can use the accusative where it belongs, but in dignified prose you must stick to the nominative. One must make some concessions to dignity, and even if it involves the violation of a fundamental rule of grammar, let's do it. Let's say 'than I.' Let's say, too, 'between you and I.' It is ever so much more dignified than 'between you and me.'"

Specification Notes.

Mr. Charles E. Holmes is a positive candidate for Treasurer, I hear.

Mr. A. J. Arnold has withdrawn from the race as a candidate for the office of Treasurer.

The printers are handicapped by the shortage of lower case t's and g's. We certainly need a larger supply than is in sight.

Mr. O. L. Webster suffered severe indisposition for several days, but am glad to chronicle the glad tidings of his recovery and return to work.

Grandfather Twotimes James Multiplication Montgomery desires the correction of his age, as printed last week. He is fifty-seven—not fifty-two—years of age, and proud of it. In the language of that old sage, Louis Cartrack-Walker Carroll, Vaps dlo na eb ot gnitteg si eh!

I congratulate the First Division on electing one so eminently fitted to grace the office of chairman as my friend, Phil Nachman. He knows the style; also when "phat" is next "take" out of the box. He is a great little "hustler," and unusually popular, or he never could have defeated that prince of good fellows, "Louie" Vogt.

The continuous pounding by the bookbinders overhead, and the nailing of the carpenters underneath was distracting enough, but when the several "tar" pots were set to boiling outside the Office our cups of discomforture was indeed filled to the brim, for the black smoke, coupled with the accompanying unpleasant order of the softening stuff, choked and nauseated many of us. And the end is not yet.

Some malicious person on this floor has for two week's purposely discolored Mr. O'Brien's white aprons with tobacco expectoration. It is showing a low-lived spirit by even taking a "shot" at them—stacked up, as they were—on a table completely out of every person's way, but to lift them apart and discharge tobacco liquid so as to spoil the greatest number is scarcely above the conception of a hog.

Prof. Arthur Barringer has been suggested as a most capable person to organize and properly instruct a glee club, composed of members of Columbia Union. The professor is well versed in vocal and instrumental music; and one only has to hear him give "Doc" Hauer a single lesson in the proper way to sing "Jersey Sam" to be convinced that he can produce harmony where only discord had once existed. The professor is a natural leader. Any afternoon after 4.30 he can be seen in the lead.

Anent last week's reference as to whom I am in thorough accord regarding the election of a lady delegate, I must say there was vastly more reading between the lines than otherwise. "Pard" Bloomer is indeed a "Wise Old Owl!" However, I hasten to disdain authorship of the Star's G. P. O. items. A regular staff correspondent is entitled to all the honor and praise that is deserved in the premises. I know him, and on his last "round" informed him that he yet has the pleasure of meeting the most learned and accommodating newspaper contributor in the G. P. O.—"Pard" Bloomer. He is desirous of the honor, "Pard."

I am authorized to state emphatically that Mr. W. L. Gutelius, timekeeper of the Specification Room, is a candidate for delegate to the I. T. U. It goes without saying that this room as well as that of the Gazette, will not only vote, but resolve itself into a committee of the whole and work for the election of this ardent unionist. Mr. Gutelius is too well known to Union women and men in Washington for me to attempt any enlightment as to his eminent fitness to honorably and intelligently represent us in the National body. The Specification Room commends him to the favorable consideration of the other divisions of the Government Printing Office, as well as to those chapels situated without its domain.

THE TRADES UNIONIST is taking rapid strides as an advertising medium, and is not only patronized liberally by the business men of Washington, but by the church-men as well. In a recent issue is published a card of the Centennial Baptist Church, situated on Eighth street between F and G streets northeast. The pastor, Rev. U. S. Thomas, is a native of Tennessee, and an eloquent, earnest, and forceful speaker. His church, naturally, is well attended. Mr. Robert Christian is deeply interested in all church work, and especially this one, and extends a cordial welcome to the employes of this room to attend. Remember that Sunday school begins at 9.30 a. m.; preaching, 11 a. m., and 7.30 p. m., and Junior Christian Endeavor, 3.30 p. m.

Miss Katherine K. Spencer, copyholder in the Gazette Proof Room has announced herself as a candidate for delegate to the national convention of the Ladies' Auxiliary. This means that she will be one of those ladies who will be rewarded with a sufficient number of ballots to win for her the coveted honor. I cannot conceive of anything else, for while possessing a most charming personality, and rare intelligence, Miss Spencer is most deserving of every voter's support, owing to long and untiring energy and labor in behalf of the interests of everything appertaining to the welfare of Columbia Union. In the Specification Room and Gazette Division it often happens that men and women work side by side. And be it said to the credit of all concerned that the utmost harmony and good will prevails in every case. The man who is so fortunate as to be thus pleasantly situated receives the full benefit of his "partner's" superior feminine mental ability and nature. He, in return—and as generously—exerts his strength in lightening her daily task by "shaking up" and lifting her heavy cases of type, and carrying the galleys to and from the "bank," as well, should indisposition prevail in the weaker body. Now this kind of a man is familiarly known as "Buddy. Now, in the canvass of votes among those who are to cast them, every union printer I know will want to be Miss Spencer's figurative "Buddy"—not that she will need the assistance, but just to show their appreciation, and additionally to honor themselves.

State Department.

E. D. Klopfer, Frank M. Hatley, and W. C. Noll are recent acquisitions to this force.

It will not be long till they will be biting again, and bottled and other bait will be in demand.

This office has been very busy all winter, but there is no overtime, and most of us are glad of it.

At a special meeting of the chapel, held in December last, Wm. H. Duling was unanimously elected chairman.

We were bereft of our chairman, John B. Dickman, some time ago, who is now on the Bill Force, First Division.

Mrs. H. H. Brooks, of the Bindery here, who has been sick for several weeks, is still unable to perform her duties here.

Since the 4.30 order went into effect the members of this chapel have improved in table manners. We don't eat lunch "like d——d hogs" now.

Several changes in the membership of this chapel have taken place this winter, about half a dozen having been transferred to the Bill Force and as many more coming here from the main office.

Gold Crumbs.

Lovers of good smoking tobacco are requested to try Gold Crumbs, the product of union labor, made under good, wholesome conditions and of best material available.

The F. R. Penn Tobacco Company, of Reidsville, N. C., is a thorough union establishment, and is represented in this city by Chas. A. Mash, 433 Tenth street northwest.

Leaves of Absence Bill.

Senator Platt, of New York, in the Senate last week, reported favorably on Senate bill 2665, giviug employes of the G. P. O. thirty days' leave, exclusive of holidays and Sundays.

The bill being further amended to make its operation only in future and not to be considered retroactive, was passed by the Senate.

An effort was made to secure to employes of the G. P. O., through a test case in the Court of Claims, the four days withheld each month on account of deduction for Sundays, and which had been decided by Comptroller Tracewell adversely to the employes, but the Court of Claims sustained the decision of the comptroller. It is understood that King & King, the solicitorr in charge of the case, have taken an appeal from the Court of Claims.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

My friend "Texas" Smith, of whom I have often written in these columns and others, recently mentioned an experience he had once in a little town in Kansas, the name of which he had forgotten. Finding the printing office, he was distributing for his dinner, when he heard the conversation which comprises the story. The old fellow who run the shop had two nieces working for him, aged probably 14 and 16 years, who were very jealous of each other and continually quarreling. The younger left the room for a few minutes, leaving her rule on the stone, near a sponge, and when she returned, not finding it in her stick, immediately jumped at the conclusion that the other girl had taken it.

"Now, miss, I want my setter," she exclaimed. "Uncle, make Nellie give me my setter. I know she took it."

"Nellie, give Sadie her setter," said the old gentleman.

"Uncle, I haven't got her setter," said Nellie, but I'll help her find it," and the two busied themselves looking around for the lost implement.

Just then "Texas" went out for another handful of type and found the rule lying on the stone by the sponge. When he called attention to the discovery the elder girl exclaimed triumphantly:

"You see, uncle! She's always making a fuss at me. This tramper man ound her setter on the table by the wetter!"

With all his experience in different parts of the country "Texas" found a new set of printers terms in Kansas.

* * * *

One of the fellows in the office (I have really forgotten who it was) recently told Frank Stratten a story of an adventure that took place in Falmouth, Va. One of the "bloods" of the town had become acquainted with a couple of young ladies visiting there, and as they were "from the city" he felt that it was up to him to do the grand. After showing them around he took them to a restaurant, and he was so lavish an entertainer that he discovered that he had ordered more than he had the money to pay for. As the young ladies had given him their purses to carry, he quietly abstracted enough from one of them to make up the deficiency, an act which had not escaped their observing eyes. Before leaving them, however, he excused himself for a moment and hailed an acquaintance, from whom he borrowed enough to restore what he had taken from the purse. Stretton told this story to his wife, who replied:

"Yes, I know all about it. I was one of the young ladies."

* * * *

Charles E. Holmes is the latest of whom I have heard as a candidate for treasurer. He is well known as an active member of the Union and was honored by being sent as a delegate to Detroit in 1899. If he is so fortunate as to land the place he will make a good officer. The other aspirants of whom I have heard so far are James E. Bright, now chairman of the board of trustees; A. J. Arnold, of Specifications, and John Greene, jr., of the Night Bill Force. If all remain in the race it will make a very spirited contest, and, in keeping with my custom, I am free to express the opinion that any one of the four would be the best man that the Union could possibly select.

* * * *

W. I. Reed, of the Record, made a cartoon of your humble servant in the enjoyment of his birthday presents that betokens so much artistic talent that I predict a Homer Davenport career for him if he will devote himself to that sort of thing. When good cartoonists are worth $50 a week at a moderate calculation, I am worried when I see one of them wasting his time working for the much more modest Columbia Union scale.

* * * *

Mr. William H. Hickman, late foreman of the Second (now Third) Division, is at this writing very near his end, and if he shall live until this issue is printed it is more than his friends expect. For about six months he has been languishing with a sarcoma of the right leg, the victim of most excruciating pain, without at any time the slightest prospect of recovery, during which he has had the unremitting attention of Dr. DeWitt C. Chadwick, who was the first to diagnose the true cause of his illness, which had existed for some months before he had become bedridden. The facts regarding Mr. Hickman's disease have been well known to his friends for several months, but no publication of them was deemed advisable because it was not desirable that the patient should know his condition. All that medical skill and careful nursing could do to ease his pain and contribute to his comfort has been done, and his friends have in many ways shown their deep sympathy with him, especially the employes of his old division and G. P. O. Council of the National Union. If he be living when this is printed, there is no hope of more than a few hours of life for him.

* * * *

The Woman's Auxiliary of Columbia Union, composed of the lady members and the wives and daughters of members of our Union, will give an entertainment, with dancing, at Typographical Tempel on February 9, the talent consisting of those connected with the organizations. The programme has not yet been formulated, but will undoubtedly be of such a character as to make an enjoyable evening. The Auxiliary is such an admirable organization and such a valuable adjunct of Columbia Union that the ladies composing it will without doubt be complimented by the attendance of as many as the hall will contain.

* * * *

So far John R. Berg has no competitor for the office of President of Columbia Union, though, of course, it is yet early in the game. No one at all has shown an ambition to be vice-president that I have had a "peep" from. There are faint and untraceable rumors that George G. Seibold will contest Billy Garrett for the secretaryship. Four candidates for the treasurership are spoken of elsewhere. So many are in the field for delegate that I fear to enumerate them lest I omit somebody's name and make a mortal enemy of him, and no scramble is yet indicated for the other offices.

* * * *

Last Saturday night, under the able guardianship of Secretary Garrett, Mr. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and the greatest man in the labor movement of the day, made a visit to the Government Printing Office. He told me that it was the first time he had been in the office since the A. F. of L. headquarters were removed to this city, and he expressed himself as pleased with the arrangements for the comfort and convenience of the employes.

* * * *

The rumors have it that Joe Stelle, of the Job Room, will again try to win in the delegatorial contest. As he is one of my old boys whom I started in life as printers, I naturally feel a deep interest in him, and if elected he will be a credit to the Union.

* * * *

W. L. Gutelius is spoken of for delegate this year, as he has been in other years, without anything coming of it. If he decides to come out, nothing will give me greater pleasure than to go down the line for him, for he is the one man of all others who would make a delegate of whom we can be proud. With the solid Specifications behind me, I believe I can pull him through if he will run.

* * * *

"The shallows murmur, but the deeps are dumb." All kinds of rumors are floating around about President Joe Johnson becoming a candidate for delegate this year, but I can't trace any of them to Joe. To go to St. Louis as the representative of the Union over which he has so ably presided for the past two years would splendidly round out his career and leave nothing more to be desired. But his candidacy would leave but two G. P. O. delegateships to compete for, and Miss Anna Wilson has a mortgage on one of them.

* * * *

Dan Vaughan, although with a practical cinch on election as delegate, keeps piling rails on his fences in his idle moments. But he is wise. Nobody ever got too large a majority yet.

* * * *

* * * *

We will hereafter have what the law orginally intended we should have—thirty days' leave of absence with thirty days' pay—if the bill passes. While the prospects are good, it is not up to us to get chinchy about it, however.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Bright Budget From Gotham by Our Special Correspondent.

Candidates seeking indorsement will have to get busy before February 7, as Big 6 meets on that date.

"Dick" Minshull, foreman of the Evening Journal, slipped on the ice last week and broke his arm. He is back to work.

A strong rumor is current that the Herald will pay all its union help in the composing room $30. The scale at present is $27.

The proprietor of the Press has voluntarily increased seven of the employes in the composing room from $27 to $30 per week.

August McCraith, ex-Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, is operating a machine on the "lobster" shift of the Journal.

The literary bureaus of Messrs. Lynch and Hawkes are flooding New York printers with "personal" letters asking them for support.

A banquet will be tendered to Supervisor of the City Record Tracy by his friends in Big 6 at Shanley's in the early part of February.

The Richmond County (Staten Island) Herald was captured by the Union last week. The Brooklyn Record was also added to the list of chapels.

The newspaper business continues dull. A sort of financial depression seems to have struck the town and business concerns are away behind last year in advertising space.

Deaths reported last week: R. H. Bell, 43 years, of J. J. Little & Co.; Michael F. Butler, 60; Philip Ryan, 40; George Steiner, O'Keefe's chapel; G. A. Hastings, 45, and F. J. Keller, 46.

The New Haven (Conn.) Union held a ball and reception last Tuesday evening in honor of Organizer Henry McMahon. About two weeks ago Mr. McMahon succeeded in securing an increase of $3 per week for the book and job men. During the evening Mr. McMahon was presented with a handsome diamond ring by the members of the New Haven Union. The Stamford, Conn., book and job men also got an increase of $2 per week through McMahon's efforts.

On February 15 Mr. Chas. H. Govan, of No. 6, will deliver his special illustrated lecture on "Sir Walter Scott" at the meeting of the Dr. McGlynn Monument Association at Hellenic Hall, 138 East Twenty-sixth street. A concert reception will also take place, Miss Arnold, Alfred E. Kearsall, and Miss Burwick being on the programme. At the meeting of January 28, in the lecture course, J. W. Sullivan, editor of The Unionist, will speak on "Reminiscences of Dr. McGlynn."—The Unionist.

Growing out of the settlement of the difficulty between the United States Printing Company and the Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Unions of this city, an appeal has been made to a court in Brooklyn by non-union men for an injunction restraining their employer from discharging them under the terms of an agreement made by the printing company with the unions. The claim is made by the counsel for the non-union men that the agreement is a conspiracy and illegal. The appeal was made to Judge Dickey, who reserved his decision. His opinion is awaited with great interest by employers and trade unionists in the printing trade.—The Unionist.

The index compositors have new nonpareil to work with.

Mr. Jos W. Palmer returned to work on Monday. He was confined to his home for several days with a severe attack of grippe.

Mr. Charles Garrels, of Illinois, copy-editor of the Specification Division, and Dr. Edith Jewell of the District of Columbia, were married January 13, 1904.

Whoever is responsible for the neat and handy ventilators for the windows is a benefactor. They should be used whenever the weather is not unfavorable.

There are five representatives to the Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., which met last week, who are employed in the Specification and Gazette chapels. They are Andrew Turnbull, E. C. Grumley, J. H. Hogan, Geo. Gerberich, and H. J. Redfield.

Messrs. Charles Abernethy and Joseph I. Keefer were transferred to the Third Division. Abernethy left a window frame, and as soon as it was discovered he would go there was a mad stampede for the desk to secure the prize. Garrett got the frame.

Mr. A. P. Beatty dropped in on us for a brief visit on Monday. He has been absent for some time on account of boils and fear of carbuncle was spoken of by his friends. His condition has improved and he hopes to return to work in a few days. If we can only keep Charlie Warren from visiting him all will go well. Brockwell tells a good story about Charlie visiting him when he was afflicted with carbuncles.

* * * * * * I regret that a copy of our greeting had not reached your chapel previous to your complimentary allusion to it through THE TRADES UNIONIST. Your conclusion why it had not been sent is correct, and after we were enlightened we intended to send one, but shortage of tubes in which to mail prevented that up to date. I will send two copies to you through the courtesy of your son, one for yourself and the other I will ask you to kindly present to the chairman of your chapel.

With all due apologies and wishing the members of the Official Gazette a happy and prosperous 1904, and many succeeding years, I am,

Yours fraternally,
J. H. BRODERICK.

At the last meeting of Nonpareil Council, National Union, the following officers were installed for the ensuing year: G. P. Dowell, president; R. H. Myers, vice-president; C. H. McMullen, speaker; A. C. Webb, recording secretary; Geo. Dunnington, financial secretary; M. N. Serrano, treasurer; G. W. Hall, chaplain; J. M. Kemper, usher; E. R. Sprague, sergeant-at-arms; C. E. Harwood, doorkeeper; J. E. Keefe, F. P. Wilkens, and Ivins Davis, trustees; G. P. Dowell and J. M. Kemper, delegates to Cabinet; W. H. Fisher, delegate to Immediate Relief.

The officers of G. P. O. Council No. 211, National Union, were installed Saturday, January 23, at Scottish Rite Temple: President, C. T. Hendler; vice president, J. E. Colton; speaker, G. A. Seaman; ex-president, T. A. Bynum; chaplain, Isaac Haas; secretary, Jos. Dierken; financial secretary, Chas. Leeds; treasurer, T. L. Jones; usher, H. J. Redfield; sergeant, J. E. Goodkey; doorkeeper, H. A. Lavisson.

After the installation of officers interesting speeches were made by Mr. Wm. Briggs, Mr. Biddis, and Mr. C. T. Hendler. The Rebew Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Henry Weber, furnished the instrumental music and a quartet composed of Messrs. Finnigan, Jones, Hicks, and Holland sang a number of selections in an artistic manner. The speaker, Mr. Fred Hall, invited the council and its guests to the lower hall where a fine repast was served. The evening's entertainment was closed with an exhibition of moving pictures.

H. J. REDFIELD.

Hearst's Boston Examiner.

Boston Typographical Union, No. 13, through President McMahon, has signed a scale with the managers of Hearst's new paper in Boston. The Examiner is to be an evening paper with a Sunday morning edition. It will start on or about March 15. The building the paper is to occupy is being pushed to completion to have the plant installed in time for publication.

From a Union standpoint the scale is considerably above that now in force in Boston, and President McMahon is being congratulated on his tact in handling the proposition.

The material is being secured as rapidly as possible, and the usual result is being looked for on the establishment of another Examiner—a wider and better field for newspaper work, and Boston, for its size, needs a little touch of Hearst push and enterprise.

Personal Mention.

Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, left for Pittsburg and points West on Tuesday.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Attention, Ex-Delegates!

The Ex-Delegates' Association, of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, will hold a special meeting next Sunday, January 31, 1904, at 2 30 p. m., Typographical Temple, to consider the report of the Convention Committee; also to consider report from the officers regarding the smoker to be given on the evening of February 22.

Post Chapel.

The largest newspaper chapel in town.

Looks as if the down-town printers are getting closer together. Happy thought.

Subscriptions for THE TRADES UNIONIST and news items for this department solicited.

It is rumored that another morning newspaper is soon to make its appearance. Not from Missouri, but "show me."

If you meet a man on the street who is anxious to make himself agreeable, make a guess that it's our "Pete." May be you'll be right.

There are indications that the temporary lull which usually follows the holiday rush in the advertisement department has about passed. We'll soon be on the jump again.

W. M. Sinclair has severed his allegiance to this chapel's substitute corps to accept a situation with the Howard Publishing Co., on Twelfth street. If the latter establishment wants a good operator it made no mistake.

I would suggest that our chapel organize a football or some other athletic club. The aggregate estimated weight of an even dozen of our heavier members is something over 2,400 pounds. Pretty good for printers, isn't it?

In acknowledging the receipt of the Post chapel New Year's greeting the Auburn (N. Y.) Daily Advertiser chapel returns thanks and adds that their composition is done by "young ladies exclusively." Good union girls, these.

Recently an editorial appeared in the Post giving information in connection with the adoption of the 2-cent postage stamp by the Post Office Department. The composing room had this topic under discussion some time previous. Co-incident, or cue?

Mr. Berryman is not the only artist connected with the Post. "Jake" Stadtler produces merriment in our room frequently by drawing humorous, as well as true likenesses, of different bewhiskered and otherwise distinguished members of the force.

When the roll was called last Sunday night the following, although not members of this force, answered to their names: Patton, Eddie Charles, Frank Lane, "Bill" Mattock, Harry Bradley, and others. "Which Patton?" "Of THE TRADES UNIONIST." Diagram?

Announcement is made in the local press that Secretary Garrett will have an opponent in the coming election of Columbia Union. It is probably for the betterment of all concerned if this be true, if for no other reason than to show the present incumbent that his services are appreciated.

An error was made last week in stating that C. F. Ferrell's mother-in-law had passed away. It was his father-in-law instead, who had reached the advanced age of 72 years. Mr. and Mrs. Ferrell attended the funeral services, which were held at the deceased's home in Pennsville, N. J.

Mention was made in this column last week that W. M. Byerley had been called to his home in Meadville, Pa., on account of the serious illness of his mother. We are grieved to learn that the beloved parent has since died. To this bereaved fellow craftsman the members of the chapel extend sincere sympathy.

We predict that Mr. Bloomer's suggestion that Columbia Union abolish the custom of giving a complimentary term to its presidents will meet the approval of many. There are too many eligibles on the list to permit of such a practice. Then, again, a down-town man might occasionally have a chance under the new dispensation.

An ex-official of the Post chapel composed this, therefore I'll make no comment:

DOWN-TOWN CANDIDATES.

Just a word or two about the candidates
Who wish to be made into delegates.
Now, there's Parsons, who is known as "Spadg,"
Thinks it's up to him to wear a delegate
badge,
And see the sights of the great World's Fair
At ten dollars per and railway fare.
Another aspirant from the Evening Times,
Who is willing to spend many dollars and dimes
For the privilege of wearing the badge
Which is so much coveted by "Spadg,"
Is our great and good friend Harry Knapp,
Who seems to be looking for a right good scrap;
And there is also the genial Michael Maher,
He who hails from the Evening Star;
Mike isn't campaigning much just now,
But says in the stretch he'll show them how
To jump in and do the thing up right,
And they'll certainly know he's been in the fight.
A down-town job printer has also been announced
As itching for a chance to get well trounced;
His name is—well, I don't know what,
But what he'll get, I think, is a swat.
The Post at present has two candidates
Who are itching for a chance to tempt the Fates;
But if one or the other don't change their plans
Both will finish among the also rans.
These two aspirants with the delegate bee
Are named Teresa McD. and Orton T.

J. H. BRODERICK.

D. J. KAUFMAN, 1005-7 Pa. Ave.

First Division.

Pull the plug when through washing-up.

Lockers were assigned Thursday, and everybody is happy.

Don't forget the fact that Jim Bright is a candidate for treasurer.

D. R. Lyons and Billy Ball were recently transferred to this division from the Spess.

Judge Brewer says he can't tell whether the papers praised Purdy for being a good actor or a good liar.

Chas. S. Ginn has been on the sick list for a week, suffering from grip. C. W. Radley is performing on the press during his absence.

Corwin Zimmerman, J. T. Gambrill, and Robert T. Fletcher did a very pretty musical stunt last Saturday night at a smoker given by Gen. Lawton Council, Brotherhood of the Union.

Our chairman took out a sheet of copy recently marked "Spanish," but in his hurry he read it "Special," and had every man in the alley helping him set it before he discovered his mistake.

Harry Gunn had the misfortune to mash his thumb Thursday last. He caught it between the truck handle and the bank. This accident happened only about a week after Ed Bennett, bank man on the night force, caught his hand in the press. Seems to be pretty hard on bank men lately.

Congressional Council, No. 809, National Union, at its last meeting installed officers for the ensuing year, the retiring president being presented with a magnificent jewel. The banquet served after the ceremonies was one of the finest of its kind ever served by any council in the city. The turnout was large, and the short musical program and supper were thoroughly enjoyed by all.

We have one candidate for delegate in this room, Philip S. Steele, and so far he is the only one who has announced himself. Mr. Steele is deserving of high honor at the hands of Columbia Union. He has ever been an earnest and faithful worker, a wise counselor, and a staunch union man. That he will poll a large vote goes without saying, but every man in this division should try to add as many to that vote as possible.

Notwithstanding the fact that June is a long way off and Jack Frost still holds us in his icy grip, Manager Fred Berger is carefully looking over the division for possible phenomenal ball tossers. He managed the team which won the pennant in the G. P. O. League last year and is anxious to duplicate the feat. There is some good material in the room, with Tommy Solan, Bruce Bielaski, Fred himself, and a few others whose names I can't recall, and the First will undoubtedly have a strong team.

Billy Love, our erstwhile chairman, who was recently promoted to the Spess, has made a study of the style there, and the other day he confided to his alleymates and matesess that he would show them how to set an O. K. proof. In course of time the proof came back. Bill gave one horrified look at it and hurriedly stuck it into his drawer. But he wasn't quite quick enough, however, as some one else saw it and in consequence Bill held an informal reception all afternoon. The O. K. proof contained three outs, nineteen marks on punctuation, four turned letters, and a doublet.

Second Division.

Sam Davies has returned.

Messrs. Bray and Smeltzer have joined our quota on Specifiations, and the end is not yet.

Noel B. Marriott received a telegram announcing the sad news of the death of his mother last week.

What is the matter with the bowlers, Hank? There has been nothing of interest in this line for some time.

Melvin J. Page, J. Fred Roxbrough, and W. W. Ingram are the latest arrivals in this room. Mr. Ingram was formerly located in the First and later on the Night Bill Force, from which he resigned and went West.

In an idle moment Jesse Morgan solved a rebus, and thinking it pretty good, wrote and told the magazine proprietors he was "on." As a reward for his astuteness—plus a small sum of cash—they sent him a handsome gold brick—watch, I mean. And now the Naval Observatory ball time and Printing Office whistle are regulated by Jesse's watch.

The suggestion of organizing a glee club among our members is eliciting favorable comment, and if a call was issued there would doubtless be enough responses to warrant organizing and taking up the work in earnest. It is to be regretted that many of the best voices are now on the night force, but there still remain a number of trained vocalists who are competent to act as leaders. Let's have the call.

Now that we are at last enjoying a fair return on the money invested in our building, I do not think it advisable to dispose of it, as one of the correspondents suggested in the last issue. The building is centrally located and conveniently reached, which could not be expected of the proposed new one unless a large sum was expended, real estate in the down-town districts being high, in fact all sections of the city command good prices. Then, too, a large percentage of our membership are in favor of reducing the dues and there are also a number who do not approve of the Union owning a building at all. These two classes would not favor the project and would make formidable opposition. Build the addition if it is a necessity, but let us be certain of the latter first.

George H. Healey has finished his checker board and is ready to meet all comers at lunch hour. He knocked Ira Taylor out the first game.

At the chapel meeting held the first of the month W. Brice Coston, chairman, and T. F. McKeon, secretary, were re-elected for another term.

Miss Gertie Stern, of the folding room, was absent from the office the greater part of last week, suffering with a severe attack of acute indigestion.

The Treasury Branch Relief Association was reorganized the first of the month by electing the following officers: E. T. Stephenson, president, and George H. Healey, secretary and treasurer.

A letter to a friend in this division from J. W. Hays, of Minneapolis, Minn., states that he will be a candidate again this year for First Vice-President of the International. Mr. Hays carried this union last year by a large majority.

J. B. Williamson ("Uncle Jimmie") is still very sick at his home, No. 737 Thirteenth street northwest, where he will be pleased to see his friends. "Uncle Jimmie" is probably the oldest member of Columbia Union, being nearly 86 years of age.

Miss Isabel M. Long, of the folding room, was called home the early part of the month to attend the funeral of her sister, who died in the Adirondack Mountains, New York State. Miss Long returned to work Tuesday. She has the sympathy of all in her loss.

Bill Glover's high silk hat has not been seen lately. What has become of the silk dicer, Bill?

Charley Ecker is willing to go to the next convention at a reduced figure. Charley's figure is somewhat reduced, anyway.

George Barnes, whose hand was badly injured some weeks ago, has resumed work. His injury has not affected his genial disposition, nor his appetite.

Lewis W. Hart when attending dances usually selects a lady partner much taller than himself. Lew should take some of this new-fangled medicine to increase his height.

Jimmy Burns made a vigorous kick because he claimed that there was limburger in the potato salad at the ball luncheon. John should not object as he was not required to pay for his ticket.

J. St. Clair Hambly had to accompany a lady home from the bookbinders' ball, and as the lady lived in Tennallytown and the cars had stopped running, the couple arrived about breakfast time.

It is learned from an authoritative source that the consideration of the Miller case at the White House has been deferred pending the settlement of the question of social precedence that has arisen between the Judiciary and the Diplomatic Corps.

Talk of prospective delegates to the next Bookbinders' International convention to be held in St. Paul, Minn., June 15, is now on. Among those most prominently mentioned is Billy Hyde, who has creditably served the local and International on several occasions. This is the convention that should contain our most brainy and industrious men, and Hyde measures up to the best of them.

Cummings Memorial.

Denver Typographical Union, No. 49, has a strong committee at work on the Cummings Memorial, of which Harvey E. Garman is chairman. They have prepared a circular letter and sent it to all sister unions with the request that the resolutions given below be indorsed and the method outlined in the resolution carried out.

While Columbia Union has a competent committee at work, and the amount that each member is called on to pay under the plan of the local committee is greater than proposed in the resolution, the Denver proposition can be considered also. In any event No. 101 will be heard from in the matter.

The Denver resolution is as follows:

Resolved, By Denver Typographical Union, No. 49, that on the anniversary of the birth of our late brother, Hon. Amos J. Cummings, Sunday, May 15, 1904, each member of this union contribute the sum of 50 cents for the purpose of erecting an addition to the Union Printers' Home at Colorado Springs, to be known as the Cummings Library addition.

Resolved, That the result of this action be communicated to each subordinate union in the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union, and that we urge and earnestly request that all of said unions take similar action as speedily as possible, to the end that the occasion can be made a memorable one in typographical circles as an evidence of the liberality of the members of the art preservative.

THE GONZAGA FAIR.

Resolutions Adopted Relative to Differences With Carpenters' Union.

The following resolutions, adopted by Carpenters' Union, No. 190, are self-explanatory:

WHEREAS, It has become known that a grievance existed between Local No. 190, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and the officials of Gonzaga College, in reference to work being done for said college fair; and

WHEREAS, Same might prove detrimental to the success of said fair; and

WHEREAS, Said grievance was amicably adjusted when properly presented; therefore be it

Resolved, That all members of organized labor are hereby requested to give said fair such patronage as may be in their power; and be it further

Resolved, That a vote of thanks be hereby tendered to the Rev. E. X. Fink for the favors received at his hands, and we commend him for his prompt action and the agreeable qualities which characterize him as a friend of organized labor.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Central Labor Union, and the Delegates requested to take the same to their respective organizations, and that a copy be sent to THE TRADES UNIONIST, and the daily press of this city, and a copy to the Rev. E. X. Fink, S. J.

METAL WORKERS IN SESSION.

Important Meeting For Purpose of Settling Trade Jurisdiction.

A conference of the executive officers of the Metal Workers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor has concluded its labors after a four days session, held at Typographical Temple.

The conference was called by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, after the matter was placed in its hands at the recent convention in Boston.

The conference has been productive of great good, more progress having been made than was anticipated at the outset.

President Gompers has presided during the entire conference and has been of great aid in settling questions arising on account of his wide experience as president of the A. F. of L.

Night Bill Force.

Mr. V. M. Boyd, his cheerfulness, of alley 4 was sick one day last week.

J. H. Hooper is now assisting Mr. W. F. P. White on the make up bank.

Wm. A. Uber, is still on the sick list. He is having quite an unfortunate siege this session.

W. J. Fuhrman, the sweet Tyrolean yodeler, has moved across the room into the ring alley.

J. C. Lightcap, who was in the hospital for some weeks is now temporarily holding copy in the Night Proof Room.

Hindman Doxey, from the Fourth, and H. W. Arthur, from the Third, are late additions in the Bill Room.

Messrs. Alfred Aldrich, John N. Race, and C. C. Ferguson, are three temporaries who came on Thursday, and were assigned to the annex.

Oliver Bennett was soliciting 100 trial subscriptions to Public Opinion some time ago. The paper has been received and is more than worth the money. He does a favor to the one who is persuaded to subscribe.

Mrs. Ed. Thomas, wife of the chairman of the Night Proof Room, and Mrs. President Joe Johnson, paid this division a pleasant call last week. Mrs. Johnson used to set the leaden messengers and honored alley 1 by setting some type out of case 1, occupied by Mr. Durno.

A number of friends of Mr. Frank A. Kidd have suggested that he would make a good vice-president. All who attend union meetings have noticed his energy in union affairs, his cool headedness in debate, and thorough knowledge of whatever matter was in hand. He is well qualified as a presiding officer should occasion arise.

Wide Discussion Over Calling Men Off Duehay—Schneider Jobs.

THOROUGH BUSINESS MEETING

Steam Fitters Settle Their Differences With Employers Without Any Trouble—Sheet Metal Workers Withdraw Their Charges Against John H. Nolan—Lathers Experience Trouble With Speir & Co.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades of the Central Labor Union was called to order at the usual hour by Vice Chairman Winslow.

Roll call disclosed the presence of 46 delegates representing 19 unions.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Credentials were read from Local Union, No. 10, Elevators Constructors' Union, certifying to Frank Hay, vice B. Umhau, resigned. The credentials were received and the delegate seated.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Painters' Union, No. 368, stating that the union disapproves of the agreement entered into by the Central Labor Union and the Brewers' Association. Placed on file.

From Wood, Wire, and Metal Lathers Union, No. 9, asking that the Board of Arbitration be called to consider grievance existing between their union and a Mr. King, an employing plasterer. Laid on the table to come up under head of unfinished business.

From Local Union, No. 21, Hod Carriers and Building Laborors, containing list of fair employers. The secretary was directed to foward copy of same to Master Builders' Association, Employing Contractors' Association, Employing Bricklayers' Association, and place copy on file.

From Elevator Constructors' Union, No. 10, denying rumor that their union had permitted members to resign in order to work on jobs of Duehay & Sons or T. F. Schneider. Placed on file.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The minutes of the meeting of the Executive Committee of February 5, called for at the request of Wood, Wire, and Metal Lathers' Union, to consider grievance against job on M street northwest, were read, and their action indorsed.

The minutes of the meeting of the Board of Arbitration, held January 29, were read and placed on file.

Delegate Daly, from Committee on Steam Fitters' Grievance, stated that the matter had been amicably adjusted between the Steam Fitters' Union and their employers without assistance of outside parties, and asked that the committee be discharged. The request was granted.

Business Agent reported his action relative to lathers on M street job, which was concurred in.

Secretary-Treasurer Ratigan submitted statement of financial condition of the Council for quarter ending December 31, 1903, showing that the total number of cards issued for quarter was 3,543; receipts, $998.91; expenditures, $975 01, and bills uncollected amounting to $78. The report was referred to the trustees.

ROLL CALL.

Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers asked if the secretary had forwarded charges to Board of Arbitration covering case of John H. Nolan. Answered in the affirmative by the secretary. Considerable discussion followed, and the secretary was directed to forward duplicate charges to Employing Contractors' Association.

Delegate Reilly asked if after a matter had been thrashed out in the Council it had to be again thrashed out before the Board of Arbitration, and was answered in the affirmative by the chair.

It was then moved and seconded that the Nolan matter be referred to the Board of Arbitration.

Delegate Daly stated that as the jobs in which the Sheet Metal Workers had a grievance were completed, and Mr. Nolan had been furnished with a list of their employes, he would, on behalf of his union, withdraw charges against Mr. Nolan. The request was granted, and the chair then ruled further discussion out of order.

Hoisting Engineers asked assistance of Business Agent on job of Murray Bros.

Hod Carriers stated that Boss Bricklayers' Association had entered into an agreement with a rival union of hod carriers, composed mostly of former members of Hod Carriers and Building Laborers' Union, No. 21, and had been disciplined by their union, and asked that the Council protest to the Boss Bricklayers' Association. Amended that the secretary write the Bricklayers Union asking them to use their good offices to have bona-fide union hod carriers deliver the material to bricklayers. Carried.

The secretary was further directed to notify the Master Builders Association of the action of the Boss Bricklayers Association.

Bridge and Structural Iron Workers stated that after investigating charges of Stone Laborers Union they had found the charges unfounded, but had withdrawn their men.

Steam Fitters stated that they had renewed their agreement with their employers for another year, with no changes in present agreement, except that when helpers work under permits issued by Steam Fitters' Union they would receive $3 00 per day.

They also asked opinion of Council as to doing repairs and changes on new work on struck jobs after same are in hands of real estate men.

The chair stated that in his opinion if the job was in the hands of an agent or had been sold by the builder, the job should be considered fair.

Delegate Reilly moved that it be the sense of the Council of Allied Building Trades that no member of an affiliated union be permitted to work on the struck jobs for a space of one year unless a satisfactory agreement be effected within that time.

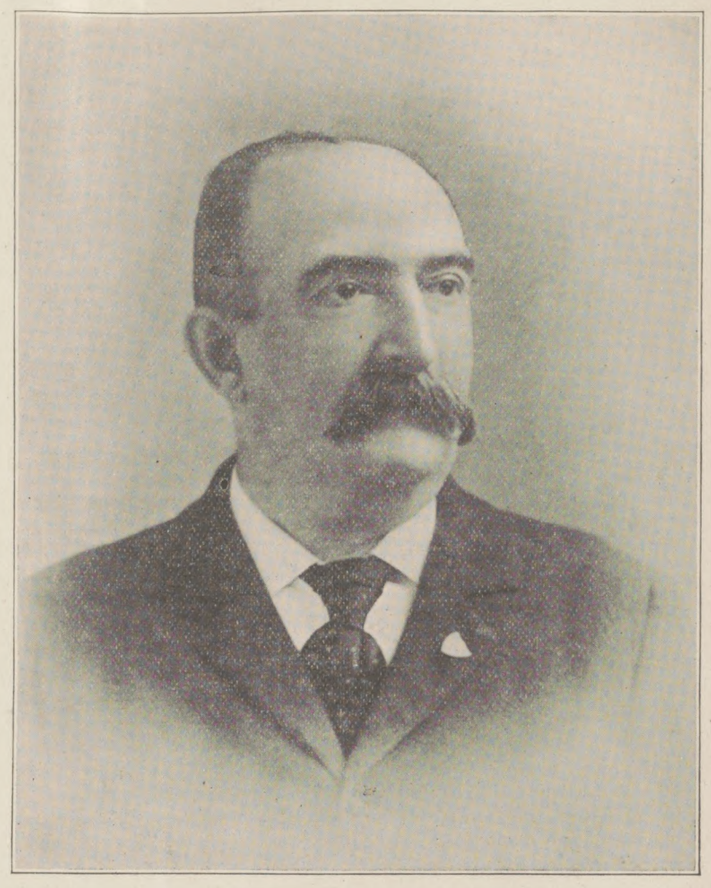
Delegates Peyton, McCrackin, and Gilmore opposed the motion.



Delegate Ratigan amended the motion to include all jobs of Duehay & Sons and T. F. Schneider. The chair declared the motion out of order.

Delegate Gilmore asked if it was the sense of the motion that the union men on Duehay & Sons' work be called off.

The chair stated that it was.

Motion was then put and carried—

WILLIAM H. HICKMAN.

Mr. Hickman was born in 1841 in Washington County, Md., and learned the printing business at Hagerstown and Boonsboro, going to Baltimore as soon as he had completed his apprenticeship, and was working on the Sun when the war broke out, when he enlisted in the Second Maryland Infantry, with which regiment he served through all the intervening grades up to first lieutenant. In 1864 he was severely wounded in the left leg at Petersburg, Va., and was discharged the service because of disability Had not this misfortune of war overtaken him he would undoubtedly have reached at least the rank of major, as the officer did who succeeded him.

After the war he returned to the Baltimore Sun office, on recovering sufficiently to be able to work, and remained there until 1869, when he received an appointment in the Government Printing Office, which he resigned in 1877, returning for a few months to Baltimore, but later taking the foremanship of the old National Republican when ex-Public Printer A. M. Clapp became its principal owner, in October of that year. In 1879 he returned to Baltimore and again went to work on the Sun, going back to the Republican in 1881. In May, 1882, he was appointed assistant foreman of the Congressional Record, which position he held until the incoming of Mr. Benedict, in 1886, regaining the position again under Mr. Palmer in 1889, losing it again under Mr. Benedict in 1894, and being again restored to it in 1897, and soon after was promoted to foreman. In 1901 he was transferred to the foremanship of the Second Division, his failing health no longer permitting him to undergo the night work of the Record, holding the latter position until compelled to relinquish it by his illness.

His army record was a splendid one, he having been in all the battles in which his regiment was engaged until disabled and discharged by reason of his wound. He was a member of the District of Columbia Commandery of the Loyal Legion, of Encampment No. 69 of the Union Veteran Legion, and of Lincoln Post, No. 3, Grand Army of the Republic

Mr. Hickman was a delegate to the I. T. U. at its Boston session of 1875, when his colleagues were August Donath and the late A. F. Randolph, and was vice-president of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, in 1882, under the presidency of William H. Sweeney. Though unobtrusive and never pushing himself forward, he was always an uncompromising, steadfast union man, and on more than one occasion had "gone out" with his associates in obedience to the union and to resist reduction of wages.

After an illness of nearly a year he died February 5, 1904, mourned by his late associates in the Government Printing Office and a legion of friends throughout the country who knew him through association with him in past years on the Congressional Record.

WILLIAM H. HICKMAN DEAD

Universal Sorrow Over the Death of a Printer of the Old School.

RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE

Many Members of Columbia Union Pay Last Tribute of Respect—Eulogy Pronounced by Officiating Minister, "He Was a Square Man"—His Old Division Passes Resolutions of Sympathy.

After an illness which originated over a year ago, and by reason of which he was totally incapacitated and bedridden for more than six months, William H. Hickman, lately foreman of the Second (now Third) Division, passed away at 2.45 a. m. last Friday. His trouble first began with severe pains in the right thigh, for which he was treated for many months under the diagnosis of rheumatism, without obtaining relief. The pain continuing, accompanied by a swelling of the limb, Dr. DeWitt C. Chadwick, on taking charge of the case, diagnosed sarcoma, the correctness of which was demonstrated by the application of the X-rays. The location of the disease rendered amputation of the diseased leg impracticable because of the age of the sufferer, and there was nothing to do but mitigate his suffering as much as possible and await the end. Living with his son and daughter-in-law since the death of his wife, some thirteen years ago, in addition to all that medical skill could do, he had the tireless, unremitting care of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Harry B. Hickman, whose devotion could not have been greater had she been attending her own parent. At times Mr. Hickman's sufferings were intense as the dread malady progressed up the limb, the only relief being in frequent injections of morphia, and at the end the bones of the pelvis were involved and the cancerous growth extended three inches into the abdominal cavity. To add to his tortures, during the last few days of his life many renal calculi were passed, producing insupportable anguish. For weeks before his death actually occurred it was momentarily expected, but he exhibited an astonishing vitality. His extremely emaciated form showed the great suffering through which he had passed, and when death finally came it was a blessed relief.

During his weary months of suffering the sympathy of his old associates was manifested in many ways, his old division, subsequently changed to the Third, testifying their regard at his birthday and at the holidays by sending baskets of fruit, flowers, and wine, and Government Printing Office Council of the National Union at Christmas sent him a basket of champagne, accompanied by sympathetic messages. He had been a member of this council since its organization in 1886.

As a foreman no man ever occupying a similar position in the Government Printing Office was more sincerely respected and loved by his men, and in all parts of the United States he had friends, made such in the old days, when the Record was something of a haven for "birds of passage," and when asking about Washington none of them ever failed to ask about him. He had a cheery way of "jollying" the men on "rush" nights on the Record that never failed to bring response in the best efforts of which they were capable, and his sympathetic nature always caused him to be lenient for infractions of discipline when leniency was possible, while cases of suffering or bereavement always appealed to him and brought results.

The family of Mr. Hickman, left to lament the decease of a kind, always indulgent parent, consists of a son, Harry B. Hickman, a machine operator on the Star, wife, and two children, aged fifteen and seven years; a daughter. Mrs. Arthur Wallenhorst, of Baltimore, and another son, Edwin L. Hickman, an employe of the Stereotyping and Electrotyping Foundry of the Government Printing Office, wife, and infant son. An elder brother, affectionately called "Uncle Cy" Hickman, of Cumberland, Md., also survives him.

The various chapels held meetings, selecting delegations to attend the funeral, Mr. Hickman's former division, now the Third, resolving to go in a body, and all sent magnificent floral offerings as testimonials of their affection and deep grief at his decease.

The funeral was from McKendree M. E. Church, in this city, and was attended by the officials and hundreds of his fellow-workmen of the Government Printing Office. Rev. Mr. Hubbard, the pastor, spoke feelingly of his life as that of a true Christian, though not a communicant of the church—a man who in every walk exhibited all the traits of manhood—and alluded in words of kindest praise to the pathetic devotion of his daughter-in-law in particular, and his family and friends in general, during his long period of suffering. The honorary pallbearers were Capt. Aven Pearson, Captain Marsden, and other members of the different veteran associations to which Mr. Hickman belonged, the active pallbearers being Capt. William R. Ramsey, foreman of the Specification Room; Wallace Brewer, of the First Division; Milo Shanks, foreman of the Second Division; William M. Bass, foreman of the Third Division; William L. Schmallhoff, of the Proof Room, and Albert K. Mundheim, of the Treasury Branch.

The interment was made at Arlington National Cemetery, the body being placed in a vault until Monday, when, in the presence of members of the family and immediate friends, the actual interment was made.

A. F. B.

THIRD DIVISION.

It is with the deepest regret that we write the words, William H. Hickman is dead. The sad event happened Friday, February 4, at a little after two in the morning. Though it had been expected by all for weeks, the death of Mr. Hickman caused a feeling of gloom among his hosts of friends in the Government Printing Office, where the news was announced shortly before 8 o'clock, and on all hands were heard expressions of sorrow at the loss of our friend and brother.

In the Third Division, with which Mr. Hickman had been more intimately associated by reason of having been its foreman, notice of a chapel meeting to be held at 9 o'clock was immediately given out. The meeting was attended by every member of the chapel, which, after authorizing the chairman to appoint a committee of three in addition to himself, with full power to act for the chapel in making the necessary arrangements for the funeral, passed the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to call from this life our beloved friend and former associate, WILLIAM H. HICKMAN, whose kind heart, loving disposition, and thoughtfulness for the welfare of others during all his long and honorable connection with this office has so endeared him to all his associates; therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the Third Division Chapel, over whom he formerly presided, extend to the grief-stricken family our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of their bereavement.

Resolved, That as a last token of respect to our late friend this chapel attend the funeral.

J. W. B.

Resolutions of the "Congressional Record" Chapel.

WHEREAS, Though "it is appointed unto all men once to die," it is none the less deeply felt when a beloved fellow-workman receives the dread summons, bringing from the heart the cry, "Why he and not another?" when to our darkened minds any other could be better spared than him who is taken; and

WHEREAS, Though the ties between those of earth seem formed only to be broken, yet their parting is no less painful because they are ephemeral and but "ropes of sand," to be sundered by blasts against which we have no defense; and

WHEREAS, We realize that in the hands of "Him who doeth all things well" it is our duty to receive unmurmuring the dispensations which we can understand as little as we can influence; and

WHEREAS, We feel that it is but another evidence of Divine mercy when the unsuccorable suffering are released from throes of mortal agony in the only way in which release can come; therefore be it

Resolved, That in the death of our kindly friend, our great-hearted associate, our former just and impartial foreman, William H. Hickman, we bow to the will of the Ever-Merciful Father, though in the deepest sorrow at the loss from among us and of us of one whose heart went out to his fellows with the truest Christian charity, with the kindliest helpfulness, and with the warmest affection and friendship for his fellow-men because they were his fellow-men; one whose hand was as open as his heart was free from guile; one who never pretended what he was not, but was always more than he pretended—a loyal friend, an unselfish patriot, a devoted parent, and that noblest work of God, a man.

Resolved, That three copies of these resolutions be made and presented to his bereaved children and that copies be furnished THE TRADES UNIONIST and the Typographical Journal for publication.

Specification Notes.

No dictionary yet. However Mr. Jacques is still with us.

Quite a number were off last week on account of unbalanced health.

Major Herbert, of the Post chapel, is spoken of as the down town candidate for President.

The Ladies' Auxiliary entertainment was an acknowledged success and thoroughly enjoyed.

In the absence of news of any consequence this week, I'll have to compromise with a bunch of Jo-vials.

There's nothing doing in the way of news. Even "Monty" refuses to become a father or even a grandfather this week.

Frank A. Kidd is likely to be a candidate for Vice-President, says the Star. Frank is a good unionist, debater, and a general all-round good fellow.

Well, here's hoping the "Leave of Absence Bill" will pass both houses. It is officially designated as Senate Bill 2665, and was introduced by Senator Cullom.

Next week another Spess candidate for delegate will be entered—that is, if his many friends can so persuade him. Who is he? Well, I'll guess Chairman Homer Melick.

From all that I can hear, T. C. Parsons, one of the down-town candidates for delegate, would make a model representative. He is certainly an intelligent and popular man.

Chief Trusty McDermot brought to light some l. c. t's last week. They complete a long-felt want, for we were getting wan for the lack of t's. Awful! The fact is we need more t's, g's, and p's and a dictionary.

Slug 88's copy called for the following: "the wheels, as shown in the dotted lines, revolving in harmony." He put it in type as follows: "the wheels, as shown in bottled lines, revolving in Germany."

John T. Schram, the ten-year-old son of Martim Schram, of this force, was successfully operated upon for appendicitis on Wednesday, February 4, at the Sibley Hospital, and under the skillful treatment of Dr. Dewitt C. Chadwick is rapidly recovering.

According to the subcommittee of the Senate Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, two wings—the H and North Capitol street—are unsafe and ought to be torn down. I always thought so, but refrained from giving utterance, lest a s-ampede be caused.

Miss Mollie E. Ragan and Miss May D. White daily enjoy hot cocoa for lnuch. I had the honor of assisting, in so far as the necessary heat was concerned, in the first trial of the heating apparatus. Dr. Welsh and Mr. McCormick informed me after lunch on that day that "the cocoa was very fine." Thanks!

Mrs. Effie C. Davis, aged 52 years, mother of Mrs. Irma Palmer, died suddenly while visiting friends in Omaha, Nebr. Mrs. Irma Palmer left Washington Tuesday on the 10 50 train over the Pennsylvania Railroad for Omaha, where the body of Mrs. Davis will remain until her daughter's arrival. The interment will probably be made at the family homestead, Yankton, S. Dak. The sympathy of the Specification and Gazette chapels are extended to Mrs. Palmer, in this her hour of bereavement.

The Star reporter who is "doing" a triweekly "stunt" through the G. P. O. is creating a most favorable impression among all interested in the big printery. His descriptions of the various departments are not only interesting, but instructive; and the personal chroniclings of minor occurrences are strictly up-to date and fully appreciated by those who like to see their names in print. This popular and intelligent scribe is none other than Mr. Samuel Milton. He was employed in the G. P. O. in 1877 under Public Printer Defrees' administration, and had a splendid record. Preferring a wider field in which to display his many talents, he chose the West, engaging in the profession of journalism. He was successful in his ventures, and spent 20 years educating the people in the sections in which he lived through the columns of his publications. Mr. Milton's efforts are not confined to the G. P. O., however. The other departments are also deriving the benefit of his gifted pen and trusty camera.

The Baltimore Fire.

The recent disaster in Baltimore, terrible in its aspect and far-reaching in its effect, calls for action on the part of all good citizens. Organized labor can become a factor for good in the rebuilding of the devastated city by showing a temperate and conservative course in the attitude of the unions in the building trades to the owners of property desirous of rearing new structures where now all is in ruins.

The first step in the period of transition will be the necessity for financing the rebuilding of the business section of the city, and this will be accomplished through the banks and the trust companies of Baltimore and other cities. It goes without saying that these institutions will get all that can be secured for the use of their funds. But with the trade union the present scale should be sufficient, and thus show to the business world that they are not desirous of taking any advantage of the situation.

As to relieving the present wants of the great army of unemployed thrown out of employment by the fire, the unions in this city and throughout the country will see that the members of the organized trades of Baltimore are not to be considered a charge on the bounty of the general relief committee in Baltimore, but will take care of them while also assisting to a certain extent in aiding the unorganized and unskilled sufferer. In this connection the Central Labor Union, of this city, took action before the burning embers of the fire had cooled looking to caring for the unemployed workmen of Baltimore, irrespective of affiliation with unions or not. Columbia Typographical Union also took action placing the funds in its treasury at the disposal of Baltimore Typographical Union in the hour of trouble.

Let PARRY and other union haters rave at the unions, but in the providence of GOD they have a mission to fulfill in this world, and in the present emergency they will not be found wanting in the virtues of charity, benevolence, and brotherly love.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

By the death of William H. Hickman I have lost one of the most loyal, disinterested, unfailing friends that a man ever had, and I say this after an experience of over twenty-nine years. During those years we have eaten together, slept together, worked together, been "flush" together, hard up together, and intimately known each other's lives. He has been my foreman and I have been his. He has borrowed money of me and lent to me—oftener the latter. Whenever and for whatever purpose I have needed his good offices he never failed me. He was a man absolutely free from mean traits and malice. However bitter he may have felt at times at men who had injured him, when change of fortune gave him opportunity he took no revenge. To no one did distress appeal more keenly; none were quicker to proffer aid; none were more sympathetic over others' griefs.

When I first knew "Hick," as every friend always called him, he was bankman on the Record, in December, 1874, and in that position he had every opportunity to be annoying or generous to the "stranger" who for the first time undertook a work that has no counterpart in the country. Perhaps "calling down hard" for negligence those acquainted with the work, the novice, on offense, was kindly cautioned and made acquainted with the rules which he was transgressing. On the old National Republican we worked together, he as foreman and I as assistant, and later on (on redeeming the office from the "rats") I as foreman (because of his absence from the city) and he later as assistant. Again on the Record we were associated for long years, he as assistant foreman and later as foreman, and I as proofreader, until, the seeds of death already in him, he procured a transfer to a less exacting position because of failing health, since when our relations, no longer official, were none the less cordial. We never had a disagreement that rose to the dignity of a quarrel. No man ever had or lost a truer friend than have I in William H. Hickman.

* * * *

My friend George P. Nichols, of the Baltimore Sun, informs me that he is a candidate for trustee of the Union Printers' Home, and I know of no other candidate who would make a more acceptable one. As the firm friend of Columbia Union in whatever she has wanted George Nichols has earned whatever favor he may ask at our hands. When, in 1902, we wanted the I. T. U. convention of 1903, nobody worked harder to gratify our ambition than George Nichols, and when we got the convention the assistance which Baltimore Union gave us, the result of no one's work so much as George Nichols's, added greatly to the enjoyment of the delegates and lessened this Union's expenses by at least $1,000. So why would not Columbia Union be for George Nichols in whatever he wants? I believe I can safely promise that she will be.

* * * *

For several years, perhaps more persistently than anyone else, I have been prattling my opinions (some of them) and preferences in THE TRADES UNIONIST, giving them merely and simply as my own opions (some of them) and preferences, without a suspicion that there could be a lobster in the world who would object to my doing so. But I had overlooked my good old friend, Uncle Johnny McCormick.

* * * *

John A. Huston, of the Record (sometimes called "Kid Huston" because he was a "kid" up to about twenty-five years ago), has authorized me to deny, and I do hereby deny, and hope that such denial will forever set at rest all such hopes and fears, that he will be a candidate for delegate to St. Louis this year. He will undoubtedly go to St. Louis this year—as who will not who cuts any figure in Union politics?—but it will be by his own election and at his own expense.

* * * *

While I am denying things, let me also deny that my good friend Joey B., Old Josh, Foxy Joey Bagstock—otherwise Mr. Joseph Hackensack Babcock—contemplates reaching out and pulling in a delegateship. He assures me that he has not the remotest intention in the world of doing anything of the sort, and I feel warranted in saying that I believe him.

* * * *

I was told by George G. Seibold the other day—this is no second-hand business—that he will be a candidate for secretary of the Union. While I am frank enough to say that my vote will go to Billy Garrett, who has served us so long and well and in whose nomination I have assisted by seconding in the past, Mr. Seibold is an entirely capable and commendable gentleman, against whom no man can say a word. He has served the Union as a delegate and in other ways, and always to the greatest satisfaction of the membership; is honest, honorable, upright, "sober and industrious," and a man of a high order of intelligence. But Mr. Garrett has the work "at his fingers' ends" and has shown an efficiency and business capacity that should make one pause before he votes to "throw him down."

* * * *

A few days ago I received a letter from poor Clarence Langan asking that I send him some reading matter to while away the long, dreary hours, and stating what we know who are acquainted with his circumstances—that he is unable to procure it for himself. For a number of years he worked in the old Fifth Division, until stricken by the dread foe, consumption, since when he and his mother have been living in Texas, eking out a livelihood as best they could with the help of friends. I intend to comply with his request, and I believe he has many other friends who will be glad to contribute in this (to us so small, to him so great) way to make his poor life brighter. Send whatever you are willing to send to "Clarence Langan, Sabinal, Tex."

* * * *

I hear that my compagnon du voyage of two years ago, Major John Tamale Herbert, of the Post, is a candidate for President of the Union this year. Now, as my foreman, John R. Berg, is also a candidate, I can hardly be expected to assure the Major of my intelligent support, as is my custom, but I assure him that if I conclude to vote for a down-town man for that great office he shall have my warmest efforts.

* * * *

I. T. U. First Vice President Charles E. Hawkes made a visit to the office one day last week, too late for chronicling in last week's issue, and incidentally did a little something in the interest of his candidacy for president. From what I hear he made a favorable impression, and as an able man he deserves consideration.

* * * *

I am getting into the Pursy Rhodes class. I've moved again—this time by request of my neighbors.

* * * *

A private letter from Ed Jones received a few days ago indicated his desire to take some of that offer of mine of a new bonnet to a hairpin that Mr. and Mrs. Ed Gessler will not go back to the Philippines if they come home on a visit this summer. I'm getting a little weak.

* * * *

I had a chat with John L. Kennedy one day last week, winding up in his setting up the sarsaparilla. I think I am good for one of the first machines.

* * * *

It certainly is an evidence of great good sense in Mrs. Bussius, in setting up the best 11 o'clock lunch in the Swamp to the worst gang of backcappers in that same bailiwick, that she considers it no part of her contract to listen to their "slabbing" and persistently refuses to do so.

* * * *

The family of the late William H. Hickman desire me to express their sincere thanks for and appreciation of the kindly aid and sympathy of friends during the long illness and at the death of their father.

A. F. BLOOMER.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

"Big Six" Makes Its Selections of I. T. U. Officers.

Last Sunday was a cold, rainy day, and the meeting of "Bix Six" was held down by about 500 members.

Nominations and indorsements for officers of the I. T. U. to be elected next May resulted as follows:

President—James M. Lynch.

Vice-President—John W. Hays.

Secretary-Treasurer—John W. Bramwood.

Trustees Union Printers' Home—G. P. Nichols and Thos. F. Crowley.

Agent Union Printers' Home—Wm. Kennedy.

It was one of those cold-blooded meetings that lacked interest or enthusiasm, and the dismal weather outside made nearly all those present, except the few workers for their special favorites, feel languid. Even the announcement of the result that Lynch was indorsed failed to elicit applause.

Wm. S. Waudby was again indorsed and a committee will visit President Roosevelt in his interest.

A motion to spend $100 for tickets for the Socialist fair and appoint a committee of two to advise with the Socialists in starting a daily labor paper was voted down.

A motion was introduced urging the the officers to request morning newspapers to abolish overtime by increasing the force of the "lobster" shift, and it was carried.

The union also voted $25 to empower W. J. Sullivan to pursue an investigation and try and rid printing offices of tuberculosis. His article in last month's Typographical Journal has created widespread interest, and the $25 is only a starter.

The officers of the union were instructed to sign the scale for another year with the Brooklyn Standard-Union and Citizen, and a vigorous fight is going to be put up against the other two Brooklyn rat papers, the Eagle and Times. The officers were given power to act in the matter, and developments may be expected shortly.

Hearst's Boston Examiner will make its debut on March 21.

From a reliable source the statement is made that the total expenses from all sources to print the Herald is $60,000 per week.

The Printers' Benevolent Association, an organization started in 1880 as a sick benefit association, has 150 members with nearly $5,000 in bank.

The Socialists are again agitating the establishment of a daily labor newspaper. They have a fund of about $15,000 now on hand, which was nearly all subscribed last year by labor unions.

Warren C. Browne and Charles E. Hawkes were in town for a few days previous to the meeting and both attended it. Mr. Browne will manage Hawkes' campaign. Both visited many of the chapels.

Both photo engraving unions have adjusted their differences and are now amalgamated. An increase of scale unanimously carried and it was presented to the proprietors, who have the matter under advisement.

Geo. Green, who came from Toronto, committed suicide by jumping from the roof of the Methodist Book Concern building on Fifth avenue. He was engaged to be married to a copyholder, the niece of an ex-delegate.

Stephen Little, a well-known character in printing circles throughout the country, met with a violent death last week. A jealous husband shot him three times, from the effects of which he only survived twenty-four hours.

On February 16, the Chinese New Year, at No. 5 Mott street, will be issued the first Chinese newspaper published in this city. Seven Chinese compositors from San Franscisco arrived last week. It is to be issued weekly.

Over 60 per cent of the men employed on newspapers get $30 per week, which is $3 over the scale. This includes operators and hand men. The World, Press, and Herald lately increased the wages of a portion of their forces.

About a month ago an old-time Washingtonian, James Middleton, passed away. He caught a cold which led to pneumonia. Mr. Middleton was superintendent of Burgoyne's at the time of his demise and was highly esteemed and respected. The two hundred men employed in that establishment held a chapel meeting and passed resolutions of condolence.

The Central Federated Union has 210 unions affiliated with it. Three delegates from that body in the last two years secured lucrative political jobs. William J. O'Brien, representing the Granite Cutters, was elected Sheriff, with salary and fees amounting in both years to about $60,000; D. J. Pallas, delegate from Actors' Union, appointed President Park Commissioners at $7,500 per year; P. J. Tracey, of Typographical Union, No. 6, Supervisor City Record, at $5,000 per year. There are also many members of organized labor scattered in the various departments holding subordinate positions with fairly good salaries.

Boston Printers' Strike.

The strike of book and job printers is progressing favorably. Of the 900 printers involved in the strike over a week ago less than 300 are now out, most of the employers having conceded all demands.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION.

Action Taken Relative to Recent Fire in Baltimore.

At the meeting of the Central Labor Union, held Monday last, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, By the Central Labor Union, of Washington, D. C., that we extend our sympathy to the suffering people of Baltimore, Md., on account of the terrible disaster that has fallen on their city.

Resolved further, That a committee of nine members of the Central Labor Union be appointed with power to assist our fellow wage workers who may be in distress; also to render any assistance to any public movement for the relief of the people of Baltimore.

In accordance with the adoption of the resolution a member of the committee visited Baltimore and reported that from thirty-five to forty thousand wage-earners are out of employment as a result of the fire.

The committee has prepared and sent a letter to all unions affiliated with the Central Labor Union in this jurisdiction, asking that financial aid be given and placed in the hands of the committee for disposal.

Mr. R. G. M. Ross, as secretary of the committee, has devoted all his time this week in advancing the work of the committee. He has received several communications from unions in Baltimore in which they report that all paraphernalia belonging to the unions mentioned have been destroyed.

Attention, Ex-Delegates!

The Ex-Delegates' Association, of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, will hold a special meeting next Sunday, February 14, 1904, at 3 p. m., Typographical Temple, to consider the report of the committee regarding the smoker to be given on the evening of February 22.

Z. T. JENKINS, President.
J. T. HERBERT, Secretary.

Post Chapel.

Joe Walsmith, after many weeks of suffering with a peculiar affection of his knees, started as a sub. on the Post Monday night.

Another dentist, making three in all, has been added to the force. The late accession is J. M. Ramsay, who fills the gap caused by the departure of "Bucky" Rigg.

Guess "Pard" Bloomer will feel timid since he has been attacked by the veteran, John McCormick. "Mac" usually oits the nail on the head when it is visible.

M. E. Mehrten, who lately arrived from Pittsburg and had been working in the advertisement department here, will help the Weather Bureau, temporarily, at least, to do its printing.

W. L. Perkins, probably the heaviest man on our staff, has also the distinction of carrying two working cards, being a member of the Carpenters and Joiners' Union, as well as Columbia Typographical Union.

Charles E. Hawkes, candidate for president of the I. T. U., paid this chapel a visit one night last week. Considering what sometimes takes place in Alexandria, the gentleman shows bravery in coming so near the lynch territory.

The chapel during the past several weeks has been threatened with internal strife, owing to the fact that two members wished to enter the race for the delegateship. A more pacific feeling now prevails, since Orton T. Pierce, not caring to be classed as a woman beater, consented to withdraw. Orton will no doubt be heard from later.

The Post chapel will this year have in the field a candidate for delegate—Miss Teresa McDonald. In former years individual members of the chapel made aggressive campaigns, and in the last three years their efforts were successful, and last year the Post candidate received more votes than did his opponent in the latter's chapel. This year, with our popular little woman in the contest, if you hear peculiar sounds at all hours of the day and night, just make up your mind that the members of this chapel are at work seeking to maintain the triumphant record of the past three campaigns.

The argument may be advanced that the Post chapel, having had three successive delegates, should be content to step aside this year. On the other hand, let it be said the other down-town chapels have been favored by prominent committee appointments and have also had nandidates in the field for delegate each year. The mere fact that they could not see fit to support their own man should not mitigate against the Post chapel candidate this or any other year. The friends of Miss Anna Wilson, I have heard, are fearful that for another of the gentler sex to enter the race would materially lessen their favorite's chances. In the case of Miss McDonald that contention can not hold good, because the latter will not be in competition with any of the G. P. O. candidates and her candidacy may really help the other woman candidate. Some of us hope so, at least.

W. B. Prescott, formerly our very efficient I. T. U. President, has an interesting article in the Inland Printer touching the machine question. His experience, although not an operator himself, is probably "as wide as any man's" and his views will no doubt have some weight.

I had resolved to say nothing further on this vexing subject; but, then it is better to thoroughly understand each other before we part. I still have visions of my first sight of the iron monster, and also a vivid remembrance of what at that time impressed me as being my "finish." I at last awoke, however, and found myself yet on terra firma, my condition bettered through shortened hours and increased pay, considering the hours worked.

From my own experience I can readily appreciate the feeling of the employes of the G. P. O. A number of these gentlemen have had experience on the machines in former years before the iron typesetter had been perfected. What more natural, then, than to conclude that good work on them is an impossibility? Last, but not least, is the uncertainty as to whether or not the individual will lose his job. Who would not oppose the adoption of something he believes would deprive him of his livelihood? Let us shake hands again.

ECHOES OF BALTIMORE FIRE.

The ghost will be heavily laden on pay day.

If perchance I am profuse this week, the Baltimore fire is the cause. Don't blame me.

"Vic" Hurley showed that he can easily cut copy for two papers at the same time.

Guide lines were the caper early Monday morning—Post then Herald, And "adds" in plentifulness.

The isolated operator was pressed into service in order to fill the machines the past week. It's nice to be an operator. See?

Jimmy League, a former Washington operator, was a part of the News force. He is as dandy-like as ever, and shook hands with many acquaintances.

The capabilities of the Mergenthaler have been thoroughly established. At least from a newspaper viewpoint. And they will likewise prove efficient whenever they are put to use.

After "nosing" around, Foreman Bamberger came quickly to the conclusion that the Post is a thoroughly equipped newspaper plant, and complimented two "C" Thompson, the foreman.

The Baltimore fire perhaps will stay the coming of machines in the G. P. O., because the Mergenthaler Company will supply the demand by using the machines had in stock (?) to furnish the Government.

"Now, I will buy," said Joe Bamberger on Monday morning as the last form of the Baltimore Herald went into the stereotyping room of the Post. Those who declined the suggestion thought the "drinks" were meant, but it was breakfast for a few.

The Washington newspaper offices, fitted out as they are with Mergenthaler machines, were of great service to the newspaper owners of Baltimore when fire swept away their plants. The Post aided the Herald on Monday morning to issue a four-page edition and in the afternoon the News was printed in the Post establishment. Foreman Bamberger, with a corps of editors, came to Washington at 3 30 a. m. Monday, and in three and a half hours the Herald was being printed. Later in the day Foreman Johnson of the News, with several editors, started to work, and by 2 o'clock the edition of the News was ready to ship to Baltimore. The Sun force went into the Star building. They brought with them matrices, the type having been set up in the Sun building before the fire reached that structure. Unable to mold them in the Star plant, they came to the Post office and used the Post stereotyping plant to make it possible to use the Star outfit.

R. L. Davidson (Davy), who has been on the bill force since Congress convened, has been confined to the house with rheumatism the past week. Davy is back on the day force now, having successfully applied for a transfer, and is holding copy in the Proof Room, as his arm still bothers him.

Backward, turn backward, oh time in your flight—
Make it July again just for tonight.
Soften the earth where the snow king has lain,
Oh, let me hear one mosquito again.
I am so tired of snow-drifts and ice,

Tired of paying the coal trust its price.
Tired, so tired of frost-bitten pie—
Give us a slice of the Fourth of July.

I am so weary of freezing my nose,
Weary of chilblains and corns on my toes.
Weary of trying to sleep with cold feet—
Turn on the heat, mister! Turn on the heat!!

Why is it that there is always hard feeling between the night and day man? Mr. Day Man comes in at 8 a. m., looks at his case and says —— —— —— ——,!!! repeats it three times and reverses it. I don't know what Mr. Night Man says, but it's probably just as spicy. It's a good thing they don't meet oftener. I certainly don't know of a night man who would steal sorts—at least they wouldn't take the frames. There is an alley 'way down beyond the last elevator, near the "Y," containing six frames. No night men are on these cases, but judging from their condition every morning they must be more popular than the font. Remember the commandment: "Thou shalt not swipe!"

Thanks, Mr. Bramwood, for mailing the Journal flat. It is a great deal handier to read than the old way of rolling it so tight that it never would lay flat again.

Several checker boards have appeared lately during lunch hour, and although not drawing the crowds that gather around the players of the Fifth, some hotly contested games are played.

In describing a race for the box between two of our swifts, recently, an onlooker remarked: "At the far turn daylight separated them, but when they rounded into the stretch they were running neck and neck, and as the judges' stand was neared Deacon came away and won, pulled up, by a "head," Doc finishing second with a "sink."

The Journal is always full of news, but the February issue just received seems brighter than ever. The exhaustive report of wage scales (minimum) of the unions throughout the country is of interest to every member and well worth having at hand as a reference. This is the result of one of the many good laws enacted at the Washington convention.

The funeral of that revered gentleman—the associate and friend of many of the older and newer generations—William H. Hickman, took place last Sunday from McKendree Methodist Church. A sorrowing concourse gathered at the home of the deceased and formed a lengthened cortege to the church, where added numbers assembled to pay tribute by their presence to the memory of a good man. The touching words of the pastor of the church, the Rev. Edward Hubbard, and the exquisite beauty and pathos of hymns rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Loper, will be enduringly and helpfully treasured in the minds and hearts of the sorrowing throng. The interment was in Arlington. the last rites there being conducted by the officers of the G. A. R. post of which Mr. Hickman had been a member. The floral offerings were tasteful and beautiful. The Third Division of the G. P. O. (of which, when it was the old Second, Mr. Hickman was the foreman), contributed distinctive, appropriate gifts of flowers, emblematic of their esteem for the superb man, whom they loved and mourned. The other divisions of printers in the Government office united in bestowing a magnificent floral design. The Second Division was creditably represented at the house, church, and cemetery, Milo Shanks being one of the active pallbearers. From no one's tongue or pen does Mr. Hickman need praise or portraiture. His life was his eulogy. He lived his life well—in kindness, gentleness, fidelity to duty, thoughtfulness of his fellows. Thought of him brings to mind the familiar lines of Byron written of Sheridan. Men of the likeness of Mr. Hickman are rare in this world teeming with beings of narrow souls, frigid hearts, and expanding selfishness. Members of the committee from this room were J. E. Colton, T. F. Ellis, D. J. Snyder, and J. B. Trudgian.

The large congregation at the funeral services of the late Wm. H. Hickman, on Sunday, February 7, was an evidence of the high esteem in which he was held by those who had worked with him, and no doubt will be a pleasant memory to the bereaved relatives and friends.

Elmer E. Shott thinks he is the champeen-bowling-alley-ball thrower in the Patent Office Official Gazette chapel. Anyhow (comma) he invited a select group of alleged friends to rendezvous at a certain fashionable bowling parlor down town one night last week and witness his exploits with the pins. He hoped to keep five or six of the "help" busy picking pins up from all over the hall. An observing eye-witness of the "doings" describes it thusly: "At the appointed time Elmer stepped jauntily out into the glare of lights, and acknowledged the thundrous applause with which he was greeted in a dignified bow. He was becomingly garbed in a suit of light material which displayed to advantage his athletic and graceful figure. Selecting a huge sphere about the size of a small barrel and skillfully poising it on the end of the forefinger of his mighty right hand he stepped into position. With bated breath and anxious eye the crowd awaited his next move. For a few seconds he stood with eye to the front, nostril distended, chest expanded to the full, and sinewy right arm raised aloft; then, a sudden, quick movement. The ball makes one revolution. It (the ball) commenced its second revolution and, as it describes half the circle, Elmer is seen to leave the floor and loop the loop in the most approved manner and land a la spread-eagle ten feet to the front. But right here is a good place for the mantle of charity to be spread. The ball embedded itself in the side wall of the building thirty feet away, and it took 12 minutes by the clock and the combined efforts of three men, with crow bars to remove it." Shott says that a jealous rival tripped him.

Carpenters, No. 190, stated that their union had no knowledge of any blacklist in force by carpenters' unions, and asked that the secretary ask for a meeting of the Board of Arbitration, to be called to consider grievances against John H. Nolan. Referred to Conciliation Committee of Carpenters.

Carpenters, No. 884, asked that Delegate Thornton be dropped from roll for non-attendance and their union notified. Request granted.

Elevator Constructors stated that the Machinists were infringing on their trade rights and asked the assistance of the Council to adjust the differences.

Moved and seconded that a committee of three from each union, with the vice chairman added, be appointed to endeavor to effect a settlement.

Amended by Delegate McClelland that the matter be referred to the Washington Lodge of Machinists, with the request that they endeavor to adjust their differences with the Elevator Constructors' Union.

Amendment to the amendment was made by Delegate Winslow that the Elevator Constructors be requested to file their grievance against the Machinists to the Executive Committee. Carried.

Amalgamated Society of Carpenters, through Delegate McKay, stated that what their union had expected when they came into the Council had come but in a different manner than they expected, and asked that a committee of three be appointed to visit Messrs. Duehay & Sons and T. F. Schneider, and endeavor to effect a settlement of the differences.

Delegates King and Brand opposed the motion.

Delegate Allison asked that the secretary read motion carried earlier in the meeting relative to struck jobs.

The motion prevailed, and the chair appointed Delegates McKay, Daly, and Nothnagle as committee with instructions to report at next meeting.

A committee from Wood, Wire, and Metal Lathers' Union stated that they had been notified to furnish thirty lathers on M street job at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon and that they had reported for work this morning with twelve, but that Mr. Speir's representative would not put them to work unless they furnished the thirty men or would work with the nonunion men employed on the job; that they could not accept this proposition and would endeavor to have the thirty men on the job in the morning, and asked that the matter go to the Board of Arbitration as originally intended. Request was granted.

Chairman Wells took the chair.

On motion, the secretary was directed to bring the Horton & Hemenway matter before the Board of Arbitration.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Delegate Allison asked for information as to Amalgamated Carpenters being allowed to work on struck jobs.

The regular order was called for and carried.

Delegate King moved that consideration of by-laws be made a special order for 8.30 o'clock at the next meeting. Carried.

Delegate Winslow moved to adjourn.

At the request of Delegate McKay the motion was withdrawn.

Delegate McKay then asked that the matter touched on by Delegate Allison be considered, and stated that as a committee had been appointed to visit Duehay & Sons and T. F. Schneider the committee would accomplish nothing if the Amalgamated Carpenters were called off the jobs.

Moved and seconded that the Amalgamated Carpenters be requested to withdraw their men from the struck jobs or withdraw from the Council.

The motion was laid on the table.

Delegate Reilly stated that the Brotherhood of Carpenters had agreed to give the Amalgamated Carpenters until Tuesday, February 16, to take out the Council card and enforce it, and said he wished the Council would permit the Amalgamated Carpenters to work on jobs until that time.

Delegate Smith asked that the Council take no hasty action, and said that the Amalgamated Carpenters came to the Council in the interest of peace and harmony, and assured the Council that if hasty action was not taken results that would be beneficial to all would result.

Delegate Ratigan moved that the request as made by by Delegate Reilly be granted.

After some discussion Delegate Reilly moved that Delegate Ratigan's motion be laid on the table. Carried.

Delegate Winslow moved that the Duehay & Sons and T. F. Schneider's jobs matter be left in the hands of the special committee to report at the next meeting. Carried.

On motion, the chair appointed Delegates Reilly, Thompson, Winslow Larcombe, and Allison a committee to act in conjunction with the committee from Central Labor Union to draft suitable resolutions to forward to the Baltimore Federation of Labor.

The Council then adjourned.

Third Division.

Charles Abernethy and Joseph I. Keefer were transferred last week back to the Official Gazette Division.

When in doubt as to whom you will vote for at the coming election for delegates to St. Louis, just put a cross, thus (x), opposite the name of T. Frank Hall.

Last Friday noon we received a call from Mrs. Lillian B. Gordon and Miss Anna Wilson, president and sergeant at-arms, respectively, of the Woman's Auxiliary. Come again, ladies!

We of the Third Division were prevented from attending the special meeting of Columbia Union on Tuesday afternoon by a belated order to the whole force to finish their takes of rush copy and then help the make up man, which took us until 6.30.

The fire that devastated Baltimore, by a most singular coincident, begun on the natal day of Wellington F. Simons, who holds down slug 40 in alley 7. Mr. Simons is now forty years of age, but feels about twenty-five. Since he got over that swelled face he acts as frisky as a young colt. Congratulations are in order.

Those who drink hot water from the pipes in the G. P. O. are warned that there is danger in the dose. We are informed that some sort of acid is periodically placed in the boilers for the purpose of clearing the pipes from rust. It would seem that what would eat rust from water pipes would have a tendency to injure the lining of the stomach. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Wm. N. Goldstein, chairman of the committee of arrangements of the combined chapels, desires to extend his special thanks to T. Frank Hall and Phil Nachman, for the very efficient assistance rendered by them in arranging for our participation in the funeral ceremony of our late friend, William H. Hickman. The chairman also desires to thank Hoyt Holton for his kind assistance.

I have the honor to announce, on behalf of his friends in the Third Division and elsewhere, that Charles W. Herzinger is a candidate for vice-president of Columbia Union. Mr. Herzinger has been a constant attendant at the meetings of Columbia Union for a long time, has served as a member of the entertainment committee and as delegate to the Central Labor Union, is of engaging personal address and a fluent talker, and without doubt would be a credit to the Union in the capacity of vice-president or any other office within its gift.

At the Ninth Street Christian Church, on Sunday evening, February 14, the Rev. E. B. Bagby will preach a sermon that is bound to be of interest to every one, particularly every man who may attend. Mr. Bagby's subject will be: "The Woman Who Does Not Complain." Many printers from this building have attended the services held at this church recently, an impetus to such attendance having been given by the circulation throughout the G. P. O. of the "Average Record" by the Bereans, a Bible class composed largely of printers. At least, "The Woman Who Does Not Complain" seems, at first blush, to be such a rarity that it might pay to go and see what Mr. Bagby has to say about her.

Candidates for International offices will be nominated at the February meeting of Columbia Union. It looks like Secretary Bramwood will not have any opposition. President Lynch is opposed by Vice-President Hawkes. The International Typographical Union has had a remarkable and unprecedented growth during President Lynch's term of office. Those of our membership who had the pleasure of meeting President Lynch during the convention last August, who saw him in the president's chair, and heard his masterful reply to Commissioner Driscoll, will know that he is the right man in the right place. We believe the best interests of the International Typographical Union demand the re election of President Lynch.

A short time ago I made some reference in this column to the numerous "thirst parlors" that infest the locality surrounding the Government Printing Office, and, in the course of my remarks, made the statement that "men have been discharged who would be with us today if the liquor habit had not demoralized them, and there are others still on the rolls who are booked for dismissal from the same cause." From the unfavorable comment caused by this statement I judge that it must have struck home. Not one can deny its substantial truth. Not that I have any personal knowledge of the intentions of the Public Printer in the matter of discharges; but he who runs may read. I write as I do because of interest in my brother workman. Shakespeare has written one or two sentences very much to the point. I quote from "Othello," act II, scene 3: "O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil! . . . O that men should put an enemy in their mouths, to steal away their brains!"

John McCormick's strictures on the impudence shown by Pard Bloomer in daring to place in nomination his own candidate for president of Columbia Union without going through the formality of consulting with the downtown members, would be distressing if they were not ridiculous. Judging from the manner in which Mr. McCormick denounces Mr. Bloomer for his pleasantries about Jim Kreiter, John Berg, and Zack Jenkins, he must surely think that Mr. Bloomer is the veritable Boss of the Union, who has only to name his candidate for any office to insure that candidate's election. The trouble with Mr. McCormick is that he takes everything—principally himself—too seriously. In short, to use his own expression, he has chosen the wrong "roll." Cheer up, Mr. McCormick! Bloomer isn't the whole show. There are just a few others. Perhaps you may, after all, get a down-town man for president of Columbia Union; perhaps you may be able to land Charlie Hawkes in the I. T. U. presidency. But I don't believe you can do either.

I don't want to be too hard on the gentlemen who populate what is sometimes termed the "brainery." A little thing—in fact, two little things—happened last week that would seem to indicate that the "human element" exists among our proof readers as well as among others whose duty it is to decided quickly what is right, and then to see that it is put into practice. We did an index last week, full of such words as ichthyosaurus, lycopodiacea, carboniferous, etc. One of the comps. got just a bit confused "amid a sea of troubles" and "set up an out," as old George Barry used to say. When the proof came back, the missing words were written in the margin. One of the words was Cretaceous, but the man in the "brainery" had written it cretatious. The second instance of the "human element" was where the comp. started to set up the word militia, but got it malitia. Not to be outdone, our "brainery" friend marked out the first "a" and marked in an "e" instead, making it melitia. This calls to mind the words of the poet: "One touch of nature makes the whole world grin."

J. W. BELCHER.

Night Bill Force.

H. W. Baker came on this force from the Fourth last week.

The items from this division were sent in too late for publication last week.

At his own request J. M. Burton was transferred back to the day Second from the night Second.

John Greene, jr., wishes it understood that the rumor committee was in error regarding his candidacy for treasurer of No. 101.

Charles O. Doten has his baby boy at Sibley Hospital. He is suffering from pneumonia. Charley says a number of printers are represented there by members of their families.

Dan Vaughan, now Vice-President of No. 101, seems to be the popular favorite for delegate. He has held his present office with dignity and kept abreast of affairs. He is a safe man.

Among the many rumored candidates for treasurer, our Charley Holmes seems to be a stayer, and he says he is in to win and fears no new comers. His record here speaks for itself.

The printers of Baltimore, who have suffered from the greatest conflagration the world ever seen, have our sincere sympathy. Ere this the union will have extended more substantial comfort.

R. L. Davidson has been transferred to the proof room as a copyholder. He has rheumatism so bad in his left arm that he can not set type. His many friends wish for him speedy recovery.

Joe Zimmerman, who has been absent from this force almost since Congress convened, we learn in now in Chicago, Ill., after a return from Hot Springs on extended sick leave, being treated for rheumatism.

C. E. Hawkes, candidate for President of the I. T. U., passed through this room last Wednesday evening. He is a very pleasing gentleman and made a most favorable impression on every one he met. He will prove a most dangerous opponent to Mr. Lynch.

The law which does not allow a saloon within a certain distance of a school house or church seems unnecessary. Why not limit the proximity of drinking places to factories and large establishments where many people are employed? Then the law would do humanity some good.

George Merriam received a marked copy of the Philadelphia Trades Union News (a fine looking paper by the way, favorably comparing with any metropolitan daily) from Shelby Smith last week. He has been elected President of the Executive Label Campaign Committee, composed of the allied printing trades. They are inaugurating an aggressive campaign for the label. Philadelphia offers a fine field for Shelby's tireless energy. We wish him success.

Every printer in this office was pained but not surprised to learn of William H. Hickman's death last week. He was universally loved by all who ever worked for him or knew him. He was big hearted, kind, and impartial. The writer had the pleasure of working under him at different times and during his last year in the office. When he was in pain he was always ready to listen to others and to assist or sympathize with them. He was a good man. Peace to his soul. His family have our heartfelt sympathy.

This chapel sent a beautiful floral piece as a token of our esteem to the late beloved William H. Hickman.

COLUMBIA UNION, NO. 101.

Resolutions Adopted Extending Substantial Aid to Baltimore Union.

At a special meeting of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, held Tuesday evening, George P. Nichols, of Baltimore Typographical Union, No. 12, made a statement fully describing the condition of affairs in the printing industry in Baltimore. He said that Baltimore Union had sufficient funds on hand to give aid to any of its members out of work on account of the recent fire, but that it would be some time before it could be secured from the depository, which is in ruins.

The following resolutions were then adopted:

WHEREAS, Columbia Union, No. 101, feels a keen interest in the welfare of the craft of the fire-stricken city of Baltimore; and

WHEREAS, It is the duty of every union printer to render assistance in time of need; and

WHEREAS, The terrible catastrophe which has rendered many homeless and thrown out of employment almost the entire membership of the Baltimore Union; therefore be it

Resolved, That Columbia Union, No. 101, in special session, tender to our sister city profound sympathy, and to the craft in Baltimore the use of all the funds in our treasury;

Resolved further, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished Baltimore Union and also that they be published in THE TRADES UNIONIST.

Baseball.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

A recent issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST contained an article by one of the correspondents which stated that a movement was under way among the baseball enthusiasts of his division tending toward the formation of a club for the coming season.

It has been suggested that it would be a good scheme to reorganize the G. P. O League of last season which was confined exclusively to the printers, and expand it somewhat in order that it might include the bookbinders, electrotypers, and engineers.

The league might be composed of six teams. Two from the printers, two from the bookbinders, one from the electrotypers, and one from the engineers. This would give all an opportunity of playing, and as there s much good material in these departments a close and interesting race might be expected.

It is none too early to begin the organization as grounds must be secured, players assigned, and the league put on a firm business basis that will insure its success. Some mistakes were made last season, and it is to guard against a recurrence of these that an early consideration of the scheme is suggested.

Those interested are invited to meet at the Typographical Temple, Sunday, February 14, at 3 30 p. m. If you want to get in the game come out and help in pushing the scheme to a success. Don't wait for the other fellow to do all the work and then step in at the eleventh hour and demand an equal share of the benefits and an equal share of the glory. Come and lend a helping hand.

Vol. VIII. No. 36. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1904. Price, 3 Cents.

THE ALLIED BUILDING TRADES

Duehay-Schneider Trouble Settled on Report of Committee.

BY-LAWS FURTHER AMENDED

Hod Carriers Reported Agreement with Horton & Hemenway—Delegates to the Board of Arbitration Chosen—Other Important Business.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades of the Central Labor Union was called to order at the usual hour on Tuesday evening by Vice-Chairman Winslow.

The roll call disclosed the presence of 46 delegates from 19 unions.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Credentials were read from Local Union No. 884, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, certifying to G. W. Mayhew, vice L. Thornton. Accepted and the delegates seated.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From the Central Labor Union, relative to relief fund for Baltimore Federation of Labor. Placed on file.

From Carpenters No. 884, directing secretary to send bill for working cards to Carpenters District Council. The secretary was directed to inform the union that the Council does business direct with the locals.

The consideration of the By-Laws, which had been made a special order for 8.30 o'clock, was then taken up, and acted on as follows.

The by-laws and amendments as approved were then referred back to the committee with the request that they submit clauses to cover the Board of Arbitration, the trustees, business agent, the price of cards, refusing the support to unions who get in debt to the Council, and to provide an obligation.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Delegate Winslow reported from Central Labor Union as to the holding of a smoke talk on Thursday, February 26.

Delegate Daly, from committee to visit Duehay & Sons, and T. F. Schneider, reported having had a conference with Mr. Frank Duehay, but that nothing had been accomplished.

Delegates McKay and Nothnagle both reiterated what Delegate Daly had stated and that it was the recommendation of the committee that if the trades affected be allowed to return to work that Duehay & Sons jobs would be unionized in a short time.

It was moved and seconded that the report of the committee be received and the committee discharged.

Delegate King asked if the motion if carried did not virtually declare the strike off.

The chair stated that in his opinion it did.

Delegate King then raised the point of order on the motion as stated by the chair. After an explanation by Delegate Reilly that the motion did not carry any recommendation with it, the point of order was sustained. The motion was then put and carried.

Business Agent Ratigan made his report, which was accepted.

ROLL CALL.

Delegate Lahey stated that the work at Treasury belonged to his union.

Hod Carriers stated that the Horton & Hemenway Company had agreed to live up to the agreement made between their union and the master builders, and that a mistake had been made in asking that the Board of Arbitration be called.

They also stated that a letter from their union to the Central Labor Union had been approved by that body, and asked that the secretary be directed to forward copy of same to Employing Contractors' Association, the Master Builders' Association, to each individual of the Master Builders' Association, and to all affiliated locals. The request was granted.

The Machinists stated that if the Elevator Constructors would prefer their grievance to Machinists' Union they would receive courteous treatment.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The election of representatives to the Board of Arbitration was then taken up, and resulted as follows: Jos. A. Dalv, Ed. Nothnagle, John McVev, W. F. Gilmore, and Jos. Reilly. Alternates: Thos. F. Ryan, E King, H. C Larcombe, Benj. Russell, and J. D. McKay.

Delegate Reilly moved that the struck jobs be placed in hands of the Business Agent, with instructions to call off any men whose union was affiliated with the Council that he might find working on jobs, and, if they refused, to prefer charges against the union at the next meeting.

Delegates McKay, Payton, Gilmore, and Daly opposed the motion, and spoke in favor of acting on the recommendations of the committee who had visited Mr. Duehay.

The motion was carried and the Council then adjourned at 11:45 p. m.

Proof Room Notes.

With such splendid material for vice-president as Messrs. Herzinger, Armstrong, and Sauter to chose from, Columbia Union is to be congratulated.

I respectfully beg to submit to the down-town contingent that either Mr. Rodier, or Mr. Kreiter would make highly creditable delegates to the St. Louis convention.

I welcome the candidacy of G. G. Seibold for the position of secretary of Columbia Union. Mr. Garret has proved a faithful and efficient officer, but competition proves interest in the good work, and—let the best man win.

The action of our union in contributing $1,000 for the Baltimore union in their hour of distress shows the true spirit and that unions stand for something more than merely higher wages. With regard to contributions to various charitable and relief purposes, Columbia Union occupies the first rank.

Mr. Ricketts, foreman of printing, deserves honorable mention for offering positions to 50 Baltimore printers, who lost their places by the fire. I am informed that all or nearly all of this number are now on the payrolls of the G. P. O. As a class, the printers were hit harder than anybody else by the fire, for all the big shops were in the burnt district.

W. W. Frye kindly handed me a document commending it to my thoughtful consideration. It is a bill (H. R. 11962) introduced by Mr. Baker, and prepared by Mr. Cowden, as I am informed. The thing is fearfully and wonderfully made. It is divided into forty-five parts, each of which is some department of industry, and the Government is to take charge of and run the whole business. The Government, among other things, is to run all the papers and magazines and pay the editors, and is to be "washee" for shirts and other things. It is just too awfully funny for anything.

The Night Proof Room, always abreast in its charitable and relief work, appointed a committee of nine to attend the funeral of our late William H. Hickman. A committee on resolutions was also appointed, which reported as follows:

Resolved, That the members of the Proof Room Chapel of the Government Printing Office have learned with exceedingly great sorrow of the death of our late friend and co-worker, William H. Hickman, realizing as they do that in his demise we have each sustained a distinct personal bereavement in the loss of a sincere and devoted friend, an always affable and considerate compeer, and one whose heart, throughout the years that we have known and loved him, has always responded to every effort that had for its object the lightness of the afflictions and increasing the happiness of his fellowman.

Resolved further, That the sincere sympathy of this chapel is hereby extended to the family of our deceased friend and comrade, and that they be furnished a copy of these resolutions.

As an Americaa citizen, I have very little interest in that scrap in the Far East. Both nations are absolute monarchies and stand for the classes as against the people. But I think that Russia has been misrepresented as to the origin of the war. In my opinion Russia has been honest and patient in her efforts to avoid hostilities. Japan would never have begun the war but for the encouragement of some of the Western Nations who are eager for the partition of China, and she is conscious of her weakness. A nation self-reliant and strong would not have resorted to the treachery of breaking off negotiations without notice and destroying the enemy's vessels by night by using the Russian search-lights. Whatever Prof. Woolsey may have said about this phase of "international law," the moral sense of the world will condemn Japan for her conduct at Port Arthur. For more than 200 years Russia has not been overcome by an enemy. From apparent defeat she always rose victorious and strengthened. As heretofore in her history, she will emerge from this contest triumphantly, to the glory of the white race.

Baseball.

Responding to the call for a baseball meeting published in last week's TRADES UNIONIST, several enthusiasts gathered at Typographical Temple Sunday afternoon. While it was considered advisable to proceed at once to organize the league along somewhat similar lines to those suggested in the article published last week, all present disclaimed being the author or having any knowledge of the person who made the call and signed it with three stars. W. R. Love, Specification; Dan C. Vaughan, Proof Room; G. O. Atkinson, Record; Fred Berger, First Division; W. H. Barnholt and J. E. Veatch, Press Room, and George H. Healey, Treasury Branch, all of whom were present, were made a committee to visit various departments of the G.P.O. and urge the attendance of ball players and supporters of the league idea to be present at another meeting to be held next Sunday, February 21, at 2 o'clock, at the Temple. The early hour is chosen so that it will not interfere with the attendance of any to the meeting of Columbia Union. Every person on the pay roll of the G. P. O. who cares to be affiliated with the movement are urged to be present, and it is hoped at that time to be able to organize the league and to take steps to place it on a basis that will insure its success throughout the season.

Washington.

WILLIAM TIPTON TALBOTT.

Facing the cloud wrack as the tempest brewed
Prophetic impulse overmastered him
And sealed his heart with strength. Beyond the dim,
Wild dawn of freedom with sad heart he viewed
The sacrificial torrent, crimson-hued;
But saw the land her torch of empire trim,
And bent his mind, that would not brook their whim,
To weigh the people's cause, and found it good.
And when, full-orbed, from battle rose the State,
They scarce could feel he found their praises sweet
And could but think that he'd dare question fate,
So firm he stood, so coldly gracious—great
In that sure way, dispelling base conceit,
Which leads to power and fame by pathways straight.

THE FIRE FIEND.

The fire fiend is on thy shore,
Maryland, my Maryland;
It swept the streets of Baltimore,
Maryland, my Maryland;
Though ruin stared you in the face
You acted wisely, with all grace,
Soon buildings, new, will take their place,
Maryland, my Maryland.

Thy sons and daughters now are sad,
Maryland, my Maryland;
Conditions there are surely bad,
Maryland, my Maryland;
But when prosperity returns
And every altar brightly burns
We'll patronize business concerns,
Maryland, my Maryland.

Thy charred and ruined halls of fame,
Maryland, my Maryland,
Are grimy monuments of flame,
Maryland, my Maryland;
When from the ashes you rebuild,
Thy temples soon you will reguild,
With joy each heart will then be filled
Maryland, my Maryland.

Rejuvenated Baltimore,
Maryland, my Maryland,
Will be your pride forevermore,
Maryland, my Maryland;
When from the ruins you arise
Thy pinnacles will glint the skies,
For hope eternal never dies,
Maryland, my Maryland.

—JAS. M. MONTGOMERY.

Miss Mary A. Law was on the indisposed list Saturday.

B. F. Mann, of the Proof Room, was absent several days on account of acute indigestion.

Now that the war in the Far East has actually begun, Japan can be expected to Russia opportunities.

Miss Katherine Spencer would like to be elected a delegate to the Ladies' National Auxiliary convention. She is very worthy of success.

The Third Division correspondent erred in referring to the president of the Ladies' Auxiliary as "Mrs." She is a "Miss," Brother Belcher.

Mr. Gutelius is going around quietly nowadays making votes. He is sure to poll a large majority of the votes in the Spess and Gazette chapels.

During the absence of both Major Dodge and Mr. Mann, last week, Mr. Waterman presided at the "desk of authority" with great courage and skill.

Col. James E. Bright, a candidate for treasurer, is an extremely able and popular man, and a Chesterfield in point of breeding and gentlemanly deportment.

Philip V. Kelly, Howard S. Fleming, and W. H. Murphy are temporarily employed in our midst. They seem to be first-class fellows and desever the "glad hand."

Miss Anna Wilson, of the Official Gazette, is making a succesful canvass of the Spess. She will win if the song, "Oh Promise Me" is as "taking" as her sweet smile.

All the popular people in our midst received at least one valentine Monday. Mine had an undersized body growing to a head flanked with ears that would make even Bob Bray.

I sometimes pause in midst of labors to wonder if our o'erhead neighbors, who, on knocking on the floor—like the slamming of a door—really know that what they do makes us fear they may come through, knocking types from out their places, mashing heads and sundry faces, thus reducing all to "pi" in the twinkling of an eye!

'Pears to me, 'twixt you and I fiwas p. p. I'd know why!

—O. L. WEBSTER.

T. Frank Hall paid us a flying visit Saturday. He is the Third Division candidate for delegate. Mr. Hall has many friends in our midst who will see that his interests are not neglected.

Am glad to state that Major Dodge, the genial and accomplished head of the "Brainery," has recovered from a little spell of sickness and is back again at the old stand, obligingly "ringing" and "erasing" marks on Mr. Jaques' proofs.

So Philip Steele, of the first Division, has decided to compete for the honor of representing Columbia Union in St. Louis, eh? Well, now, there are many members of No. 101 who will be glad of the opportunity of voting for this sterling unionist.

Messrs. E. A. and William Fleishell, of the Washington Post chapel, are two young gentlemen with rare intelligence, unlimited ability, and unexcelled popularity. I take my hat off to them. And I'll take my coat off, too, and work for either any time the candidate-fever overtakes a Fleishell.

Keeper of the Sacred Sorts McDermot had his great heart softened by the pleadings of the desperate "average" diggers, and yielded up l. c. p's and g's. But until I give him a 20-line "puff" right next to Monty's poetry I am afraid he will not "cough up" the much-desired l. c. t's—and a dictionary.

The Titus F. Ellis constituency believes in the "early bird" theory. If Mr. Ellis is not elected delegate it will not be for the lack of "plugging" on behalf of numerous friends. He is a big fellow, with a corresponding heart and brain, and is endowed with all the ear-marks of a successful candidate.

Somebody told Tommy Tompkins last Saturday that bass fishing was simply out of sight at the Chain Bridge. Accordingly, the first opportunity he and a fellow fishing crank had was taken advantage of and Chain Bridge was invested—for a very brief time. Instead of running water and fish, nothing but ice, very thick ice, abounded. It was an honory joke to play on "Our Tommy."

"Brother" Joe Babcock has the delegate fever, also. If there ever was a man who is deserving of the unqualified support of his Union for past faithful and fruitful efforts in its behalf (too numerous to mention), Mr. Babcock is that man. There isn't a better unionist in Washingtou than Joseph H. Babcock, nor an abler and more intelligent one, either, in the estimation of a great many. And of the great many very commendable things that can be truthfully said of Mr. Babcock, that of being an honest man in every particular is one of them.

W. N. Goldstein, of the Third Division, paid us two visits recently. "Goldy" instructed us to vote for his candidate for delegate, Titus F. Ellis. That's one of the three disposed of, as far as the G. P. O. is concerned. This week Phil Nachman is expected, and will probably issue an order to us to go down the line for either Mr. Steele or Mr. Radley, of the First. That will be No. 2. As the Spess has a candidate of its own that it is going to support to a hair, we need not be bothered any further by ye candidate of this brand, for "Bro." Frank Ward wrote our Down-Town ticket last week.

If the colored iceman don't look out some day he will run his head right against the sharp edge of a brass galley. He will be getting only what is coming to him if it occurs. Almost daily he pushes a heavy truck loaded with ice at a very great speed right down the line of alleys, many times barely escaping women as well as men by their dodging (in most cases with a galley of "live" type in hand) in an alley. But the iceman never lessens his speed; just yells like a Comanche Indian, as the truck is upon you, "GANGWAY!" which, in itself, is enough to frighten a nervous woman plumb near to death. Oh for a handy dictionary!

One day recently "Pard" Bloomer paid the Third Division a visit. After he had run the gauntlet of the entire "tribe," and was about to return to the elevator, Mr. Fritz, seeing a handy truck not working, urged "Pard" to get aboard and be pushed out. "Pard" was game, and assuming a dignified position on the "bow," was being rapidly speeded "down the line" when an "Indian" yelled: "Say, Fritz, what have you there, 'live matter?'" "Yes," replied the man behind the son of a gun. "It's first-class male matter, too!" "If that's so, sarcastically remarked another of the same "tribe," "you had better be careful lest you run into one of those McCormick trucks and break next year's candidate slate!" "Down!" thundered "Pard" to the elevator man in the distance, while the "warriors" amused themselves in a pica-quad "fling."

J. W. Belcher, the Third Division correspondent, employs a happy combination of wit and wisdom in his weekly pencilings, all of which is highly appreciated, not only in the Third, but in all the other divisions as well. However, Mr. Belcher, like the rest of us, occasionally, but surely not intentionally, does not give credit where credit is due. For instance, he recently stated that the Specification Division had two candidates for delegate—Miss Anna Wilson and Mr. Gutelius, where it has only one—Mr. Gutelius. Miss Wilson is accredited and does credit to the "sister" division adjoining us—the Official Gazette. When this department was under the direction of Foreman Ramsey it was known as the "Side Show." Since this force of modest pretensions has been dignified by an official name, and is conducted as an individual division, under an entirely different complement of jolly bosses and trusties, the members of its chapel righteously resent the undignified application of "Side Show." They also individually and collectively mercilessly denounce the press monster who classifies them other than the Official Gazette. They are a very proud and hungry people, and it is said that they divide the time between "cam" and "frictional" states, and just dote on "roads"—"kids," preferably. At any rate, Mr. Belcher, don't let it happen again.

Bindery Notes.

Michael Dunn, of the "Cow Boys," has began to brace up and look wise. A new pride has taken possession of Mike because of Gus Bauer giving him a quiet tip that he closely resembles ex-President Cleveland.

Jack Wiedman, James Cogan, and Chas. Binker, the committee in charge of the sausage roast and smoker to be given at Bessler's February 20, report the list of subscribers to the roast as being filled, the number being limited. The committee hopes to surpass all past efforts.

David Thompson and Robert G. Lowery, for many years employed in the Bindery Division of the Government Printing Office, died on February 4th and 5th, respectively. Death, more than any other factor, is the agent that transforms the personnel of the Government Bindery.

The coming election for delegates to the International Convention of Book Binders at St. Paul, Minn., January 14 next promises to be an event of unusual interest. Many at present are being groomed for the coming contest in the Bindery of the Government Printing Office. Great care, however, should be exercised, and the very best judgment of the voters of Local No. 4 should be put forth in an endeavor to produce a cool, conservative, yet determined delegation, as legislation of vital importance is absolutely necessary for the welfare of the Washington local. Some of those whose names have already been mentioned are Theo. Hardy, James L. Stockman. Martin Dries, James L. Feeney, Leonard Kukart, Wm. B. Hyde, Robt. F. Frailey, Thos. Esperon, Henry Hoiby, and others.

A Query to Bloomer.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Last week Bloomer had this to say:

I hear that my compagnon du voyage of two years ago, Major John Tamale Herbert, of the Post, is a candidate for President of the Union this year. Now, as my foreman, John R. Berg, is also a candidate, I can hardly be expected to assure the Major of my intelligent support, as is my custom, but I assure him that if I conclude to vote for a down-town man for that great office he shall have my warmest efforts.

Say, Pard, does this mean we must vote as our bosses say if we want to hold our jobs?

IT is hard to believe and yet it is true that there are still many half-baked editorial writers who refer to the consumers of the country as if they were a class distinct from the earners.

A CHICAGO professor asserts that the Bible lacks literary finish and is a "religious scrap book." This puts us next to the reason why the Christian nations are always so ready for a scrap.

The Late Senator Hanna.

The history of this country can show no character that came out so strong and occupied so much attention in the public eye as the late Senator HANNA during the past eight years. Coming on the scene of national politics during the heated Presidential campaign in 1896 he was made the target of abuse by the opposition papers to his candidate for President.

Caricatured as a labor crusher and union destroyer and a representative of the trusts by the papers opposed to his policies and candidate he lived to show that he had been grossly misrepresented and made the medium of a campaign that was intended to create sentiment against the centralized wealth of the country.

Though all the years when he was being held up as a representative of the trust and an enemy of labor he pursued the same policy that guided him through early life, gaining his point in every struggle and finally showing by his acts rather than words that he stood for the well-being of all the people, irrespective of class.

The good accomplished by him in the great miners' strike in Pennsylvania stands out in bold relief and his efforts in organizing the National Board of Arbitration showed his sentiment to organized labor as well as to those outside of the ranks.

Senator HANNA died at the zenith of his power for good, having secured the respect and admiration of that great class of wage-earners he was so willing to serve, and his passing is evidenced by the sincerity in which the labor world has viewed his death.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

Little Anglin, of the Record, was walking through the Capitol grounds when he came upon a couple of little colored girls. One, with stockings down over her shoes, certain unmentionable undergarments hanging below half mast, and the rest of her raiment and personal appearance in perfect keeping, was expressing herself:

"Ah don' car' nuffin' 'bout it now an' Ah reckon Ah's got hahdened to it, but dar wuz a time when it cut me real deep. When anybody asts me now, Ah jes' say, 'Yassum, mah mommer has quit takin' in washin' an' is wukkin' in the Gov'ment Print Noffis.'"

A committee of one hundred members of Cincinnati Union is looking after the candidacy of Thomas F. Crowley, of that city, for trustee of the Union Printers' Home, and in a little circular letter which they have sent out they give his trade union record, as follows: Twenty-five consecutive years a member of the I. T. U.; secretary-treasurer of Cincinnati Union in 1881-82 and 1885 86; I. T. U. delegate to St. Louis in 1882; delegate to State Trades Assembly at Columbus in 1884; secretary of Cincinnati Trades Assembly in 1886 87; I. T. U. delegate to Milwaukee in 1900; secretary of Committee of Arrangements of Golden Jubilee Convention in 1902. Mr. Crowley has hosts of friends in this city who will make it their business to see that he doesn't get left in the vote getting. Happening to mention Crowley's candidacy to George P. Nichols, of Baltimore, himself a candidate for trustee of the Home, of which two are to be elected, he said:

"Tom Crowley is one of the finest fellows in the world, as well as one of our ablest men, and the I. T. U. will not make any mistake in electing him a trustee."

At the risk of harrowing the soul of somebody or other, I will mention modestly that I am for Crowley.

I have received No. 1, Vol. I, of the Kansas City Labor Herald, a well printed seven-column folio. Among other interesting matters I find in it an account of a meeting of the Union Label League, at which Mrs. Charles W. Frear, wife of a well-known Omaha printer, made some telling remarks, from which I extract the following:

"The unions will be greatly benefitted if the money, or a portion of it, now spent in boycotting, is used in educating the wives and mothers to purchase union-label goods. Great results have been secured in other cities, and Kansas City union men and their wives can also get good results."

* * * *

We have here in the Women's Auxiliary a noble organization working to the same end, but I fear that they do not always receive the encouragement from members of Columbia Union that their efforts deserve. To educate the lady members of the families of union men up to the point where they will not expend the wages of union men for anything but union label goods is to accomplish the success of organized labor, but we have some union men who need a little education in that line themselves.

There was a meeting of the Association of Ex Delegates of Columbia Union (if I have the amended name right) at Typographical Temple last Sunday, and I am sorry to say that it was not an overcrowded one. President Zachary Taylor Jenkins was in the chair, with Secretary John T. Herbert, Treasurer Charles W. Otis, and the other officers on deck. The threatened smoker for Washington's Birthday was abandoned, but arrangements were made for the collection of dues all the same. The getting together of a fund to pay the expenses of those who contemplate attending the St. Louis session of the I. T. U., the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, and other attractions being provided by St. Louis Union for the entertainment of the delegates and visitors, was discussed. Subscriptions of $3 a pay day from now until the convention will be received from all who desire to attend, whether ex-delegates or others, and those who wish can get the advantage of the rates to be secured by the association by giving in a lump sum when the time comes. Non-members will thus have the society of the Exes during the trip, which will be a safeguard against having to associate with backcappers during the long ride.

The association adopted the following resolutions regarding the death of ex-Delegate William H. Hickman:

WHEREAS, We have heard with deep grief of the death of our fellow-member, William H. Hickman, a delegate from Columbia Union, No. 101, to the Boston convention of the International Typographical Union held in 1875; and

WHEREAS, We realize that by his death we have lost a faithful and deeply interested member, a generous and noble-hearted friend, and a fellow-unionist of whose fealty and devotion there was never any question; and

WHEREAS, We are desirous of testifying our respect and affection for our late fellow-member, in whose death we recognize the loss to our craft of a man whose nobility of character, loyalty of friendship, and lovable personal traits endeared him to all who were so fortunate as to know him; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Association of Ex-Delegates of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, while bowing to the will of

Our fathers' God, from out whose hand
The centuries fall, like grains of sand, deeply deplore the death of our friend and companion, whose blameless life and purity of character will cause his memory to be cherished long and affectionately, and whose name is deeply engraved in our hearts.

Resolved, That we tender our sincere sympathy to the children of whom he was so devoted a parent, whose welfare was always his first and foremost care, and to all to whom he was near and dear.

Resolved, That this resolution be published in THE TRADES UNIONIST and the Typographical Journal.

The following resolutions on the death of William H. Hickman were passed by the Night Proof Room, but were received too late for publication in last week's issue:

Resolved, That the members of the Night Proof Room Chapel of the Government Printing Office have learned with exceedingly great sorrow of the death of our late friend and co-worker, William Henry Hickman, realizing that in his demise we have sustained a distinct personal bereavement in the loss of a sincere and devoted friend, an always affable and considerate compeer, and one whose heart, throughout the years we have known and loved him, has always responded to every effort that had for its object the lightening of the afflictions and increasing the happiness of his fellow-men.

Resolved further, That the sincere sympathy of this chapel is hereby extended to the family of our deceased friend and comrade, and that a copy of these resolutions be furnished them.

E. H. THOMAS, Chairman.

I hear that Frank Kennedy ("Sadie Maguire"), of the Omaha Western Laborer, is a candidate for trustee of the Home. Mr. Kennedy is so well known that there is nothing that I can say that will make him better known, and if elected will undoubtedly perform the ardous duties pertaining to the office in a manner to satisfy everybody.

Last week, on returning from Mr. Hickman's funeral, James H. Platt, of the Job Room, had a slight stroke of paralysis of his left side, from which he is rapidly recovering, being already able to go about the house without much difficulty. He has been suffering, however, from a complication of disorders which will require a course of treatment to eradicate. There were very gloomy rumors in circulation regarding Mr. Platt's condition, but I am glad to say that his condition has at no time been alarming, and it is expected that he will be able to resume his duties in a week or two.

Oliver H. Reed, whose death last Saturday was chronicled in all the city papers, was one of the oldest employees of the Government Printing Office, not of the Patent Office, as the papers had it. Under Mr. Defrees' administration he was in charge of the Press Room, and at the time of his death, which occurred very suddenly in the office from acute indigestion, he was a pressman at the Interior Branch of the G. P. O. Mr. Reed was a very modest, quiet, unassuming Christian gentleman, and many will miss him, though his duties of recent years have taken him away from association with the larger number of his craft. His age was 65 years.

The campaign is coming on but slowly. Dan Vaughan is doing a little hustling. I here very encouraging reports as to the probable success o my long-time friend and former "cub," Joe Stelle, of the Job Room.

Night Bill Force.

Wm. McEnaney thinks he has a good story about a dog named Schneider. Mc's inimitable Dutch dialect adds interest to the tale—yet.

Frank McFadyen, slug 43, Second Division annex, has some fine views of Baltimore holocaust which were taken on the Sunday of the fire. A limited number will be disposed of at a moderate price.

Charlie Holmes' friends think the only way he could be defeated would be for the union to enact one of "Funny" Roberts proposed "resolutions" to do away with the office of treasurer. That is one way to beat a man.

As usual, a few comic valentines came to this room. The recipient's friends seemed more interested in preserving and exhibiting them than the owner. John Purvis has one on exhibition which he rescued from the waste-basket.

Every one who attends union meetings always find C. W. Herzinger in his seat. He is a close observer of union affairs and attentive to all discussions; always ready to speak out for or against any measure that is before the body. He is fearless and aggressive.

Oliver McCardell was seeking information at the copy window the other night. He wished to know the difference between the blue "pull out" sign before lunch and the red "rush" sign after lunch and the occasional "let out a link" order when copy was handed out.

"Billy" Love's announcement that he will make the race for vice-president is hailed with delight by his many friends. There is probably not a printer in this big office who does not know him. He is a man of wide experience, and acquaintance with him inspires friendship and trust. He would make an efficient vice president.

The "Little Union Cafe," across the way from the G street door, seems to be a popular place for the Baltimore crowd to lunch. A very healthy "knockers' club" convenes there at 11 o'clock every night. Good service is to be had at this place, and it is a wonder that more of the night force have not discovered it.

The Post correspondent intimates that Mr. Orton T. Pierce will be put forward later for delegate honors. He is a forceful man, ever to the front fighting for the rights of the newspaper men. He never gives up a fight until the end. He is a fine operator and he was a good hand printer and has served several terms satisfactorily as chairman of the Post.

It is well for a good man in office to have opposition occasionally. It shows that the office is worth having and keeps the holder in touch with the membership. While anyone who might oppose Mr. Garrett might be eminently capable, still the present incumbent, owing to his experience, can handle the affairs much better than a new man. We could not do better, and could do worse. Let's "stand pat."

Forty years ago, in Lexington, Ky., at the old Phoenix Hotel, an army officer was stopping. On the next corner lodged another army officer. Living in the same block and playing around these hotels was a child yet in kilts. Later these three people worked together for years in the G. P. O. They were the late Capt. W. H. Hickman, Capt. W. R. Ramsey, and H. S. Sutton.

Frank C. Bates, the present good-looking and efficient sergeant-at-arms, has announced his candidacy for delegate. Frank is well known and will make a good race. I do not know whether it has been published in this paper or not, but on January 27 he culminated a successful romantic campaign by marrying Miss Carrie L. Maddox, at the home of the pastor of the Ninth Street Church, E. B. Bagby.

Whether intended or not, the candidacy of three women will likely result in none of them being elected. No man is willing that the delegation be half and half. The feminine proportion of the membership does not warrant it. Probably every voter would be willing to give a complimentary ballot to one lady. Miss Wilson is the original, and for a long time, the only aspirant. Undoubtedly there are many other ladies as able and worthy to be delegate, but why not have a primary or decide on one candidate, rather than to lose the election altogether.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

A Handsome Floral Tribute.

The floral tribute presented by Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, at the Hanna obsequies, was a handsome one. It was the result of action taken by several chapels and the officers of the union took the matter in hand. The design was left to Gude, the florist, and it was conceded to be one of the finest offerings sent to the Capitol.

Post Chapel.

R. G. Stocker is a new arrival in the ad. alley.

Veteran McCormick is too old a campaigner to be scared off by the bark of small dogs.

It has taken about all my spare time this week to figure out the pay roll preparatory to issuing February working cards next Monday.

Removing mustaches seems to have become an epidemic hereabouts. J. Monroe Kreiter is the latest to thusly beautify his personal appearance.

I live just one block from "Pard" Bloomer, now. Hope we won't get into a row. I might have made a poem out of the two sentences, come to think of it.

"Sam" Montgomery, well known to the members of the craft here and elsewhere, arrived in town last week, and is now relieving the overworked regulars in the machine department.

F. H. Burdick, who had been one of our force at different times in the past, having been thrown out of work by the late fire in Baltimore, where he has been working on the Herald, is again with us.

Dan Vaughan paid us a call Monday afternoon. The popular vice president said he is not campaigning just now, but would see us later. He probably polled the larges. vote in our chapel last year ever received by an outsider and he had a worthy opponent, too.

To print two morning and one afternoon newspapers for two days in a row, and on short notice, at that, is no mean achievement. But that feat was easily accomplished by the Post force, supplemented by a few extra men from the ill-fated Baltimore papers, last week.

If the chairman of the newspaper chapels are supposed to keep track of all the accumulated overtime during the rush cause by the Baltimore conflagration, I move the resolution introduced some months ago calling for increased conpensation for that official be resurrected. What has become of that document, any way?

Is Mr. Belcher really serious when he intimates that no down-town man would be given consideration in connection with the presidency? If he is, I do not believe he has the interests of the whole union at heart. The best fitted man, regardless of his location, should be chosen for that office, and I do not believe the down town men would vote for the candidate from this section if, in their opinion he did not measure up to the standard of the G. P. O. aspirants.

I had about made up my mind that John Berg suited me for President this year, but having heard from outside quarters that Maj. Herbert has the bee in his bonnet I cornered him the other day and asked him concerning the truthfulness of this report. He stated that he expects to be in the race. I will not attempt to conceal that, in company with others, I would like to see a down-town man hold that office once in a while, and "Major" does whatever he undertakes.

The following, comprising a part of the Baltimore News force, are utilizing the Post plant to get out the first-named paper: W. J. Hanafin, president Baltimore union, assistant foreman; W. B. Prescott (ex-I. T. U. President) and Samuel Reese, proofreaders; Samuel Taylor and Frank Ely, copyholders; Clarence Dick, apprentice; George Jentner, bankman; S. J. McCurdy, J. D. Nugent, Wm. Chambers, and Jas. Woodhouse, ad. men; George Litz and O. T. Stewart makers-up; G. W. Sindall (chairman), Jas. League, T. B. Coker, T. James, Chas. Sener, W. H. Nickols, Scott Jackson, C. G. Miller, and A. Jackson, operators.

C. A. Honaker is back after a week's visit at his home in Honaker, Tenn.

Frank Thompson has gone to Petersburg, Va., as a delegate to attend the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Knights of Pythias.

A. W. Sefton and his wife are both laid up with inflammatory rheumatism, while their little son is suffering from erysipelas.

The order went forth Thursday evening to clean up all slugs and leads around the frames, and in consequence, Eugene M. Root's bank, on Friday morning, looked like a section of the city dump.

The hands in Lesher's alley set a page of solid brevier the other day and it came back from the Proof Room without a mark in it. "Lesh" says his gang is beginning to show signs of the training he has given them.

J. H. Wheeler et al. are working hard on their houseboat, which is to have quite a commodious "ammunition" chest, and is to be located in a cool place below the water line. I do not know whether or not it will be waterproof, but, I am informed it is to be lined with zinc. The launching is set for May 1, and one of the party has a Truscott launch, which will tow their summer home from creek to creek.

In a recent issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST a call was made for a meeting of base ball enthusiasts at the Temple, on Sunday last. A few of the faithful appeared, but not enough to make definite arrangements for next season's games. There was a general disclaimer among those present as to the authorship of the call, and the conclusion was reluctantly arrived at that the caller must have failed to call. So far he has refrained from revealing his identity.

"Jack" Wheeler tells us the following story: A convalescent in a hospital asked the physician in charge if he could have a little whiskey in his milk. "No, sir," the physician replied: "Whiskey and milk is not permissible in this hospital." The patient said, "Doctor, I don't understand you." The physician was about to pass on to the next cot, thinking the patient ignorant, when he said, "Doctor, you say permissible—'sible' or 'cible.' The doctor, who was a scholar himself, said: "I know whiskey and milk will mix (permis-cible), and while it is not permis-sible, in this hospital, yet I will see that you get it."

One of the characters in the G. P. O. is John Waller. Every one knows John, and every one likes him. He used to be in the First Division, but is now cord and page paper editor in the basement, when he is not acting as private secretary to "Nellie" Nelson. John was a sergeant during the civil war, and had the reputation of being a fine soldier. Some of his war stories make very interesting reading. Here is one that he vouches for: "Whin I was with me rigiment at the battle of Yorktown I was on the extreme right, an' jist before the battle Gineral McClellan rode up an' sis, sis he, 'is Sargent Waller on the field?' Sis I: 'Here I am, me hearty fellow?' an thin sis he: 'Let the battle proceed.'"

Jesse M. Burton found the Night Force too strenuous and is with us again.

I heard a rumor the other day that Gutelius, of the Spess, will be a candidate for delegate.

Frank Hoover's many friends will be pleased to learn that he is now permanently located in the proof room.

Columbia Union backed up her expressions of sympathy by offering her purse. That's the sympathy that counts.

Messrs. W. R. Bromley, H. H. Geisel, C. H. Pace, H. T. Rigg, F. V. Shipley, James H. Whitaker, S. M. White, and R. L. Witter were assigned to this division last week as a result of the prompt and commendable action of the powers that be in giving temporary relief to the Baltimore printers thrown out of work by the great fire.

James H. Whitaker, one of the Baltimoreans who joined us last week, resigned on Monday to take up his old position with the Curley Printing Company. This concern was destroyed by fire on February 8, and one week later the fire insurance had been paid, new outfit purchased, quarters secured and ready for business. If this is a sample of Baltimore energy we can expect to see a new town there in a few months.

The boys were slow to get in line Saturday afternoon when being paid off. That is a time when ever man should seize his opportunity. Always bear in mind that the more you lag the more every man behind you is delayed.

There is no longer any doubt of the fact that Messenger Warner is just as Deutsch as the fellows from Pennsylvania. The other day he passed me a proof to correct, and when I said "Good day," he beamed upon me with that peculiarly bland, Warner's Safe Cure expression, and replied, "Guten Abend!"

As a result of the great fire in Baltimore and the consequent throwing out of work of practically all the printers in that city, a number of them were employed by Foreman of Printing Ricketts as emergency men last Thursday morning, five being assigned to the Third Division. Their names are: David H. Cross, J. A. Berkely, Samuel E. Gover, August Steinberg, and R Harris.

I have started a crusade against the men who leave dirty water in the wash bowls for others to clean up after them, and shall not let up until the rhinoceros hides of the offenders are pierced. Any man who is so lost to all sense of decency as to keep up such a disgusting practice after being repeatedly admonished in a courteous and considerate way is nothing less than a scandalous blot on the whole force, and merits ostracism by all self-respecting people.

Music isn't printing; and as these items are written for the edification of printers there may be some who think that an interpolation of a subject foreign to those which usually interest members of the craft might not be in order. However, I will risk saying that Bernice Thompson, in her article on "Music and Musicians" in last Sunday's Post, was wrong in saying that Beethoven was the author of the "Pastoral Symphony." It was written by Haendel, the greatest composer of oratorio that ever lived.

In an article headed "Kansas Day," by Chas. S. Davis, slug man of this division and a graduate of the Kansas Agricultural College, which appeared in our issue of the 4th inst., it was noted as somewhat extraordinary that a sufficient number of the alumni of that institution should reside in Washington to render feasible the formation of a State association. The Kansas graduates are not alone in their glory, however; since it appears that the Washington Alumni Club, whose members are graduates of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, will hold a banquet in the near future.

Frank E. Warner, of this division, and E. J. Morsell are preparing for publication the "Typographical Union Campaign Blue Book," which will contain half tone portraits and sketches of all the candidates to be voted for by Columbia Union, No. 101, at the election in May. The book will contain a complete roster of the members of Columbia Union by chapels; also a fac-simile of the official ballot and other matters of interest to the craft. I understand that it is the intention of the publishers to distribute the book free to the employes of the G. P. O. It is expected to be ready for distribution the latter part of April.

A lot of cold air come through the cracks around the windows when the wind comes from the north—and we have had lots of north wind lately. When I drew a "window frame" in the new building I thought I was fortunate; but I have since had occasion to wish I could transfer myself temporarily to some place where there is an equal quantity of light and less draught. The windows are not the only place that let in cold air, however; those square holes in the ceiling are the cause of frequent complaints, and the men who "put up a holler" are like those preferred by Julius Ceasar, who said, "Let me have men about me that are fat." Tommy McEneany, for instance, whom no one may accuse of having "a lean and hungry look," says that the hole in the ceiling right over the dead board lets down a draught that hits him right in the back of the neck, so that he is constantly troubled with a cold. And there are many others.

In compliance with a request signed by a large number of the members of the Third Division Chapel, a special chapel meeting was called at 4.25 p. m., Tuesday, February 16, to take action on the death of Senator Marcus A. Hanna. After the chairman had stated the object of the meeting, Chas. W. Herzinger moved the adoption of the following resolutions, which were adopted unanimously:

WHEREAS, In the death of the Hon. Marcus A. Hanna, Senator from the State of Ohio, organized labor has lost a true friend and champion; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Third Division Chapel, Government Printing Office, members of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, that to show the respect and esteem in which we held Senator Hanna, the officers of this Union be requested to procure a suitable floral tribute, the same to be the offering of Columbia Union.

Resolved further, That we, as members of the Third Division Chapel, hereby pledge our proportionate share of the cost of said floral piece, in the event of the Union's inability to pay for the same.

Resolutions of a similar tenor to the above were passed by every chapel in the Government Printing Office. It is a source of deep satisfaction to those who best know of the strength of Senator Hanna's friendship for the cause of labor, that Columbia Typographical Union has testified before the world her sorrow at the death of this great and noble man.

They have also engaged the famous Bacon Banjo Quintette, of Hartford, Conn., the finest banjo organization in the world, and Miss Salome Wingate, one of Washington's very finest contraltos. The rest of the programme will consist of selections by the Nordica Club; W. H. Scholz, violin; W. T. Holt, guitar; E. L. Howes, mandolin; H. S. Gamble, mandola; the Ladies' Rondo Club, composed of ten mandolins and guitars; a mandolin solo by Mr. Holt; a violin solo by Mr. Scholz; a banjo solo by Mr. Bacon, etc.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, sailed for Porto Rico last week to study labor conditions on the islands. He will return about the 25th of March. He was the guest of honor at a banquet given in New York previous to sailing.

Chas. E. Hawkes, vice president of the I. T. U., and a candidate for President of that organizaiion, was in the city this week. He has charge of the reorganizing of the printing industry in Philadelphia, and is realizing good results. He left for Philadelphia on Thursday.

An Able Manager.

William R. Hearst, prospective candidate for President on the Democratic ticket, has many able and capable managers throughout the country. The organization of this corps of workers is recognized as one of the greatest strokes in modern campaign methods. Old time politicians are amazed at the sentiment created in Mr. Hearst's behalf and the friends of other prospective candidates are becoming alarmed at the progress made by Mr. Hearst. To Mr. Max F. Ihmsen, private secretary to Mr. Hearst, all the credit is due for the advance of the Hearst movement throughout the country. Working unceasingly, calling to his aid such influences as he needs to accomplish an end, and knowing no such word as fail, he has made a name for himself as an astute and shrewd manager.

He has a wide acquaintance among leaders in the organized labor movement and has been instrumental in the organization of a great many Hearst clubs throughout the country. As a newspaper man he has held the position of city editor on the New York Journal and has had charge of the Washington bureau of that paper, where he was credited with getting more exclusive news than any other correspondent in the city.

A man of determined character, fixed purpose, and having a clear insight in the ways of the political world, he feels confident that he is going to accomplish all he started in to do in securing for Mr. Hearst the nomination for President.

Pointed Paragraphs.

From the Chicago News.

Chronic complaining makes tough luck all the tougher.

A politician seldom drops politics until the public drops him.

If it wasn't for his fool luck the fool wouldn't have the money to part with.

The elevator boy is poorly paid when one considers the fool questions he is asked.

A bald-headed man can't lose anything by trying a new patent hair restorer.

Not Built That Way.

The observant trade unionist will note that the fellow that is always exercising his lung power in hammering the union and its officers was never known to disturb the equanimity of the financial secretary by paying his dues in advance, nor creating a flurry in the union by bringing in applications for new members.—Exchange.

Official Gazette.

James F. Smart, fifteen days; Mardi Gras carnival. Explanations in order when he returns.

E. P. Murray received a lovely valentine; but, fearing some one might tear it, refused to allow it to pass around the room.

Some more of the help: A. S. Jones, Second Division; H. T. Irwin, Third Division; F. M. P. Montague and F. M. Roller, Fourth Division.

Have you forgotten about subscribing to THE TRADES UNIONIST? This is going to be an interesting campaign and that is the way to keep in touch with union affairs.

Miss Carrie L. Whitehead is on leave of absence for thirty days. She anticipates a pleasant time with relatives and friends, and will enjoy the gayeties of the Mardi Gras carnival.

Valentines quaint, valentines beautiful, and Valentine Ruff were in evidence in this division. Why should anyone send Frank Wilkins Hostetter's Bitters Almanac? He does not need the medicine and his jokes are surely no measlier than he will find between its covers.

A valentine—

Sunny Jim; how I envy him.
With his features all aglow
Chasing gloom, averting woe.
May he reap like as he sow.
More power to him! Sunny Jim.

Miss Kate Spencer, one of the candidates for the Woman's Auxiliary convention, has secured about ten new applicants for membership to the local Auxiliary. If the other candidates and the rest of membership exhibit half her enterprise the sending of two delegates to St. Louis will be a certainty. Get busy, ladies.

Farmer Ruff received a very elaborate and tastefully arranged valentine, which he very prondly exhibited. The valentine was the product of the joint labor of Miss Booth and Miss Wilson, and gave a graphic display of a number of the phases of hayseed existence. One picture, depicting a sleigh-ride, was a sketch by Miss Anna Wilson, which proves that young lady to be an artist of considerable skill. The poetry of the valentine, by Miss Booth, describes the several scenes so forcefully and well that one can, in imagination, hear the bleating of sheep, the howling of canines, and the lowing of kine in the pasture. It is so intensely bucolic.

The bushwacker and guerrilla have been busy with our candidate—shooting venom into the ear of any who would listen—and, as a consequence, the temperature has fallen several degrees, as evidenced by the averted eye, the stony stare, and the formal greeting. But the sun may shine on our wishes later in the game. Cheer up, Gents! Come over on the winner's side and give your powerful influence to help swell Miss Wilson's majority. Although her friends intend electing her without belittling any other candidate in the field, ever since the announcement that there would be a lady candidate for delegate the peanut politician has tried to take hold; but the thing eluded him. It is a new proposition; he don't understand it. Two years ago the idea of electing a woman delegate was considered a good one, and nothing came of it; last year was considered a still better opportunity; this year will be the best year. The idea is about three years old. Make it a fact. Miss Wilson has had the courage—it takes courage—to enter the contest, and while her friends do not claim that she is the best possible representative of her sex for the honor sought they think she will make a creditable representative.

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

Vol. VIII. No. 87. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1904. Price, 3 Cents.

THE ALLIED BUILDING TRADES

Local Branch of Amalgamated Carpenters to Be Disciplined.

ARSENAL WORKING NINE HOURS

Hod Carriers Making Headway — Slaters Meet Employers' Association — Council Reaffirms Stand in Regard to Struck Jobs—Stone Laborers Very Active.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades of the Central Labor Union was called to order at the usual hour Tuesday night by Chairman Wells.

Roll call disclosed the presence of fifty-four delegates from twenty local unions.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Credentials were read from Electrical Workers' Union, No. 26, certifying to U. Cosh, vice T. J. Fagan.

A communication from THE TRADES UNIONIST relative to error in heading of minutes was read and placed on file.

Several communications from E. C. Graham, secretary of Employers' Association of the Building Trades, were read and ordered referred to the unions interested and the chairman of the rsspective committees.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Delegate Sheetz, from committee on by-laws, requested that Secretary furnish the committee with copy of rules. Approved and amendments referred to committee. Request was granted.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Delegate Lahey, from Stone Laborers' Union, asked assistance of Business Agent on Acqueduct Bridge. Request granted.

Delegate Silver made same request for Granite Cutters' Union, which was also granted.

Hod Carriers reported that hod carriers in the employ of Horton & Hemenway had made application to become members of their union and asked the assistance of the Business Agent with J. H. Nolan's hod carriers. Request granted.

Steam Fitters stated that one of the contractors at the United States Arsenal was working their men nine hours. Referred to Business Agent.

Painters stated that they had been given a chance to straighten out the Woodley, Windsor, and Cecil Flats, and asked if it was the sense of the Council to cater to scabs on these jobs for a year.

After considerable discussion, the resolution adopted February 9, "That it be the sense of the Council of Allied Building Trades that no member of an affiliated union be permitted to work on the struck jobs for a period of one year unless a satisfactory settlement be effected in the mean time," was taken from the table.

Delegate Lewis then moved that the jobs which have been turned over by the builders be declared fair.

Delegate Allison moved to amend "that it be shown to the satisfaction of the Council of Allied Building Trades that the jobs have been legitimately turned over."

The amendment was lost.

The original motion was then put and carried.

Slaters stated that their committee would meet their Employers' Association February 24, and that it was no fault of theirs that they had not held a conference before, as they had complied with all rules of the Board of Arbitration and the Council of Allied Building Trades.

The Business Agent made his report for the week, which was accepted.

The Business Agent was directed to prefer charges against both branches of the Amalgamated Carpenters for allowing their men to work on struck jobs.

Delegate Desmond asked if Granite Cutters carried cards for their entire membership.

Delegate Silver stated that the Granite Cutters had less than fifty members in the city and that they carried cards for all but superannuated members.

The Council then adjourned.

Columbia Union is to be congratulated that its membership contains so many whose proven capacity entitles them to consideration as delegates to the International body. Some military critics of the juvenile class profess a dislike for the way Japan began to settle her differences with Russia, and suggest that as a matter of courtesy it would have been more becoming in the Japs had they announced their intentions by an advance courier, after the manner of Paul Revere, or by a red light display indicating "danger" ahead. We hope that Japan will be able to give a satisfactory explanation to these critics and to show that she has not violated any of the rules of etiquette by taking undue advantage of her friend, the enemy, which is as much as may be said by a neutral who would avoid entangling alliances by refusing to "butt in."

Specification Notes.

Jesse Morgan is again with us. He is a fine printer, that's why.

"Jakey" Dwight has been annexed. He became ill on the first day assigned, and was excused.

Col. W. R. Burgess is known as the "trusty" copyholder. He is very accurate in reading, as in everything else.

Dr. S. D. Pool has been recognized as a valuable man in the proof room, and is frequently called upon to plug a vacancy.

W. R. Love has been elected president of the G. P. O. base ball league. He says he will see that the Spess is not snubbed this year.

B. W. Butler "made good" from the very first comma marked, and spends most of his time now reading proof as a "temporary." I would like to see him "land."

William R. Love, of the Specification Division, is positively going to make the race for vice president of our union. Billy is being assured of hearty support every day, and his friends are quite confident of his ultimate success. By the way, Billy is "making good" on the Spess.

Thursday, the 18th instant, a beautiful little baby girl presented itself in Charley Duffy's home, and now Charley is again a very happy father. Congratulations were in order last Saturday, and our popular imposer received the "glad hand" from every one. Long life and a happy and useful career to the little Miss.

John F. Putnam, jr., is reading proof temporarily now. I heard an "old-timer" commenting on his work Saturday. He said Putnam had all the earmarks of a first-class reader. There wasn't a "blue-pencil" mark on the proof Putnam had read, and which was "up for criticism." This does speak well for a "new" reader.

Proofreader Dan Marvin visited Alexandria on Washington's birthday, and helped celebrate by parading as a member of the Improved Order of Red Men. Dan says if there is a street or alley in Alexandria that "they" didn't march him over he'd like to know it, so that he could return and complete the circuit. There were others,

Owing to a severe attack of rheumatism, Major Dodge was compelled to leave office Tuesday. The Major has suffered a great deal from this affliction of late, and has, therefore, the sympathy of the Spess. Mr. Mann, who was sick last week, has returned, and is in better health. He has charge of the proof room in the absence of Major Dodge.

Proofreader Charles Fletcher was pleasantly surprised last Friday—his birthday. He received a beautiful gold watch and chain from a very dear friend, who resides in Jamestown, N.Y., together with a highly appreciated letter containing beautifully expressed sentiments of the occasion. It seemed to greatly please Mr. Fletcher that his old time friend should remember his birthday. Mr. Fletcher is held in very high esteem by not only his office associates, but by all who chance to know him—all of whom, I am quite sure, have already wished him "many happy returns."

"I hear that Charlie Hawkes will contest Jim Lynch's re-election to the I. T. U. presidency. Charlie is a bright man, but Lynch is too big a man in every respect to be traded off for any other at this juncture. He has demonstrated his ability in every emergency that has arisen."

The Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Chicago, and Washington unions seem to hold contrary opinions to "Pard." However, President Lynch has been indorsed by New York and by "Pard," so the count now stands 4 to 2 in Hawkes' favor—that is, taking only into consideration the larger union bodies.

I have the honor to officially announce Chairman Homer Melick's candidacy for honors as delegate to St. Louis. He is now in the hands of his friends, and I am sure they will treat him well. Mr. Melick is too well and favorably known to the craft of Washington to need any introduction at my hands, for he has served No. 101 long and well, and in a most intelligent and high-minded manner. Mr. Melick succeeds himself regularly as Chairman of the Specification Division, and this room only recognizes the highest merit in choosing its presiding union official. It will be nip and tuck with Mr. Gutelius and himself as to which will poll the largest vote in this room. Of course it is to be presumed that Miss Wilson will carry the Official Gazette solidly—and possibly the Spess. So second honors will have to content Gutelius or Melick.

STRENUOUS NOONTDIE.
[And what's the use?]

What means this eager, anxious throng,
That madly rushes by,
With touzled locks, with impulse strong,
With fixed and bulging eye?
Has fear bereft them of their wits?
Is everything awry?
Not so, my friend. Fear naught; for it's
The noonday "rush" for pie.

Midway the room the swinging crowd
Halts in its mad career;
While hoarse and frenzied yells ring loud
On the vitiated air.
"Give me my pumpkin, mince, or peach,"
"I saw it first," they cry,
While tugging, lugging, "mugging," each
Secures his "gob" of pie.

W. W. Maloney is on leave for awhile and E. P. Murray is doing the press-revising in his place.

New arrivals—Sternburg and Harris from the Third Division; Robards and James from the Fourth Division.

O. S. Miller returned to work on Tuesday. He was absent from work for several days on account of sickness.

Miss Alice Guild, who has been threatened with pneumonia for a week or more returned to work on Tuesday.

At last our Alexander P. Beatty is with us once more. It is true he came in bandaged up somewhat; but we were glad to greet him. He has had quite a siege of it with carbuncle.

The employes of the Gazette Division are at a disadvantage when it comes to foraging for grub. By the time they reach the lunch counter—located in the First street end of the building—there is little left beside the tools.

Sergeant Mat. Maloney is something of an authority on war matters and things and, in discussing the disruption of the hitherto amicable relations that have existed betwixt and between Russia and Japan, he ventured the opinion that the British would take gin-sling.

Miss Catharine M. Fleming is a member of the printing committee of the Woman's Suffrage Association, which met in convention here last week, and she has been doing splendid work for the cause of unionism. This committee controlled considerable printing, consisting of programs and other literature, amounting to about 10,000 pieces, and every piece had the union label on it.

Our chairman, Ellis G. Myers, took a day's leave last Saturday and, with bounding heart and buoyant step, hied him to the B. and O. depot at an early hour to welcome home his wife and little girl. They had been sojourning in Nashville, Tenn., for three months for the benefit of their health. By some misunderstanding, coupled with the tendency of trains to arrive at destination several hours late, our chairman was compelled to study the beauty of the interior decoration of the B. and O. station for the best part of a day before the family arrived. However, he reports that the trip did the folks good, his wife having gained fifteen pounds and the little girls six pounds.

The regular monthly meeting of the G. P. O. Veterans' Club was held at Maccabee Temple, last Saturday night and there was a large attendance. By a special invitation of the officers of the club Capt. C. M. Robinson gave a very interesting and instructive lecture on his trip through Europe during the summer of 1902, devoting most of the time to Brussels and vicinity. Just before giving a description of the Battle of Waterloo, Mrs. J. C. Morgan recited Byron's poem "There was a Sound of Revelry at Night," which was enthusiastically applauded. Captain Robinson talked in his usual fluent and graceful manner. After the lecture refreshments were served by the Woman's Auxiliary to the Veteran's Club.

James E. Hoes is a man of wide and varied experience, having traveled much and visited "furrin parts." His knowledge of methods of doing things other than the American way is extensive. Naturally, in consequence, his views on stock raising and small farming are very interesting to the "rube" element in this division and, to do him simple justice, he is very liberal with his information. The other day he was surrounded by a group of interested seekers after knowledge to whom he was explaining the advantage of raising a flock of Angora cows, such as he had met up with in Bulgaria. Telling how there was a clear profit of nineteen cents per head per year on each beast and, granted a sufficiently large capital and ample and abundant floor space, the profit on the feathers would enable a man to spend the remainder of his days in luxurious idleness and bid defiance to the deadly and haunting average. Well, he had 'em hypnotized. Then someone—fearing, no doubt, that Hoes might wield to great an influence in the coming contest for delegate—broke the spell by calling attention to the lack of cash among his listeners and the impropriety of ensconcing a seventy-five dollar cow on a twelve-dollar farm.

COLUMBIA UNION MEETING

Charles E. Hawkes Indorsed For Office of I. T. U. President.

A VERY HARMONIOUS MEETING

Delegates to Central Labor Union to be Paid for Lost Time—Union Refuses to Abolish Office of Treasurer—Meeting Adjourns For Two Weeks.

The regular meeting of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, held last Sunday, was a record-breaker for attendance. The interest displayed in the nomination of I. T. U. officers, principally the president, was the occasion for the outpouring of over 400 members.

After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting were dispensed with, the President reported that by request of several chapels, the officers of the Union were requested to present, on behalf of the Union, a floral offering on the occasion of the funeral obsequies over the late Senator Hanna. He stated that a piece costing $110 was presented. On motion of Mr. Berg the action of the officers of the Union was sustained and the bill approved.

The Entertainment Committee announced an entertainment and dance in conjunction with the Women's Auxiliary, on Friday, April 8.

President Laura B. Gordon, of the Auxiliary, then addressed the Union, asking for the cooperation of the members in the entertainment and the future of the Auxiliary.

The question of absenteeism of delegates to the Central Labor Union being raised, it was voted that at least one delegate be present at each session of that body, and to be compensated for necessary time lost.

The Cummings Memorial Committee made a report, which was placed on file.

The report of the Laws Committee was taken up, and after considerable discussion the amendment abolishing the office of treasurer was lost—ayes, 100; nays, 124.

The chair having been asked why all names of prospective members were not published in the I. T. U. Journal, it was voted that the law be complied with in the future.

The report of the Nominations Committee being taken up, certain candidates were held over for one month to hear from sister unions.

The candidates who were favorably reported by the committee, and elected by the Union, were then obligated.

The regular order of business being suspended the Union then took up the presentation of candidates for I. T. U. offices.

Nominations being in order, Frank N. Kidd presented the name of Chas. E. Hawkes, of Chicago, for President of the I. T. U.

J. J. Sullivan presented the name of James M. Lynch, after which a ballot being taken resulted in the indorsement of Mr. Hawkes, the vote being Hawkes, 193; Lynch, 59.

John W. Hays, of Minneapolis, received the unanimous indorsement of the union for first vice-president.

John W. Bramwood, of Denver, received the unanimous indorsement for secretary-treasurer.

For delegates to the A. F. of L., Wm. M. Garrett, Frank Morrison, and Jos. E. Goodkey, were indorsed.

Ph. G. Nuernberger, of Chicago, was indorsed as delegate to A. F. of L. from the Allied Trades.

For trustees of Union Printers' Home, two members of typographical unions and one of Allied Trades, George P. Nichols, of Baltimore, and Thos. F. Crowley, of Cincinnati, were chosen unanimously to represent typographical unions, and H. H. Rogers, of Type Founders' Union, of Chicago, was indorsed as a representative of the Allied Trades.

The Union being asked to indorse a proposition to print a blue book of proposed candidates for offices in the Union, it was refused.

The Union then adjourned to meet Sunday, March 6, to complete unfinished business.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

Our former fellow-workman in the G. P. O, H. Y. Brooke, editor and proprietor of the Crenshaw County Critic, of Luverne, Ala., is making things hum in the politics of his county, being chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee. His paper gives a list of thirty-two places and dates where he will address the people on the subject "What has the Gang Done with the People's Money? or, Turn the Rascals Out!" at which he announces that he will cheerfully divide time with any announced candidate who desires to defend "the gang" and will produce record evidence for every charge he makes. As "Windy" always was a fighter, he is right in his element now, and his paper sends hot shot hurtling into the ranks of the enemy from every column. I hope that he will come back to Washington a Congressman.

* * * *

It having been suggested that I had not yet discovered, so far as my column is concerned, that Titus F. Ellis is a candidate for delegate to St. Louis, I want to say in self-defense that there are some things that are so self-evident that they do not need to be said, and one of them is that Titus will certainly be a delegate to St. Louis. Perhaps in persuit of my usual programme of looking out for and helping the weaker ones I had neglected to mention his candidacy, but it was only for the reason stated.

* * * *

In answer to the query of my friend Willis L. Hall last week, I don't believe that he will ask to do anything in the future to retain his job that he has not done cheerfully in the past with the same object in view.

* * * *

The circular of the Joseph E. Goodkey Campaign Committee did not get to me in time for notice last week, but I take pleasure in briefly epitomizing it now. It begins by reciting that Mr. Goodkey is a candidate for delegate to the American Federation of Labor and reviews his career at St. Louis, Chicago, and Louisville, before coming to Washington, his work in this and other cities being too well known to need specification by me. Then follows a number of indorsements "As a Trades Unionist," "As a Labor Leader," and "As a Printer." His campaign committee, consisting of W. N. Goldstein, Jeff Garland, and W. H. Bright, are such indefatigable workers that I don't see how he can lose.

* * * *

My friend, Broderick, of the Post, says he had about made up his mind that John Berg suited him for president, until he heard that a down town man, my valued friend, Major Herbert, was a candidate, when he at once transferred his allegiance, wondering in almost the same breath that G. P. O. men should prefer a G. P. O. man for that office. But I'll never get into "a row" with him for doing exactly what I do myself—stick to men of my own typographical locality, all things being equal.

* * * *

George R. Brandon, of Specifications, has submitted for my inspection, through George M. Ramsey, a circular of Cincinnati Typographical Union of date December 31, 1868. One better acquainted in that city than I am could make an interesting paragraph from it, but my knowledge is extremely limited. The officers were: President, Jas. A. Waring; vice-president, Aug. Donnelly; recording secretary, F. E. Hill; corresponding secretary, P. F. Lapham; financial secretary, Wm. A. Beasley (they were long on secretaries); treasurer, John W. Sullivan; sergeant-at-arms, John Stove. Among names that I recognize in the list of members are Amos Allison, H. Jeff. Bell, Geo. R. Brandon, Walter Bell, Wm. Cunningham, P. J. Cunningham, John Collins, Dan Davis, Fred Good, Geo. Lutz, W. E. Mathews, W. H. Parr, T. N. Surguy, Jim Truffy, Wm. R. Wade (now in the Printer's Home), and John P. Young. There is appended a paragraph to this effect:

Rat Offices.—The Commercial office and Gazette job room are still rat establishments, employing their old force of rats. Give all printers from Cincinnati, without a card from this union, a wide berth.

* * * *

It was a source of grief to me that the indorsement of President James M. Lynch was so ruthlessly turned down at the meeting last Sunday, but it was not unexpected in view of the work that has been done here for Mr. Charles E. Hawkes, both by himself and his many friends. I have but the kindest feelings for Mr. Hawkes and regard him as one of the ablest men in the I. T. U., but I think the valuable work that has been done by Mr. Lynch entitles him to another term and I believe he will get it.

* * * *

C. W. Herzinger has courageously hurled himself into the field as a candidate for vice-president, and he will get there or he will make his opponents scratch gravel. Mr. Herzinger is one of the most active of our members, never failing to attend union meetings, and when he takes the floor he always expresses his views with fluency and earnestness.

* * * *

The indorsement of John W. Hays, John W. Bramwood, William Kennedy, George P. Nichols, Thomas F. Crowley, H. H. Rogers, William M. Garrett, Joseph E. Goodkey, Frank Morrison, and P. H. Nuernberger at the meeting last Sunday for the various offices for which they are candidates also meets with my indorsement, and now it is up to us to elect as many of them as possible, for an indorsement is not necessarily an election. It seemed a pity that nothing like the number of votes were cast in any of the other contests that there were on the presidency.

* * * *

T. C. Parsons, of the Times, candidate for down-town delegate, made a visit to the big mill on Monday night, and the encouragement he received made him feel pretty comfortable. Mr. Parsons has strong claims on the consideration of Columbia Union, having given much faithful service on the Finance, Business, and two or three special scale committees, and having secured an increase of $2 a week to the men of his own chapel, of which he was for a number of years chairman. In electing men to such positions as delegate we should give preference to efficient workers for the Union, being a "good fellow" (a character which Mr. Parsons possesses in the highest degree) not being the sole consideration.

* * * *

And while we are talking about candidates for delegate who have rendered the Union valuable service, we ought to keep in mind my friend T. Frank Hall, whose untiring work on the Laws and other committees entitles him to the Union's gratitude and the consideration of the members. (Now, don't get impatient or jealous; I'll reach all of you during the campaign.)

No apprentices are allowed on morning and evening newspapers.

Over $600 per week is now paid out to sick and out-of-work members.

The National Publishers' Association held a convention February 17, 18, and 19, at the Waldorf-Astoria. The proceedings were not given to the press.

Hereafter No. 6's inmates of the Colorado Springs Union Printers' Home will receive their pensions every week instead of monthly, as heretofore.

The signing of the Brooklyn scale in the Citizen and Standard Union will result in vigorous methods being pursued against the rat Eagle and Times, of that city.

Munsey's Evening News now publishes a 50-page paper on Saturday for 5 cents. He has dispensed with the Sunday edition, but still carries all the Sunday features.

"Big Six" has beds in four hospitals: Seton, St. Mark's, and St. Vincent's, New York; St. Mary's, Brooklyn. Twelve sick members now occupy beds in these hospitals.

Ex-Delegate Charles H. Govan is touring the New England States with a company of vocal and instrumental musicians. He gave quite a few concerts to Scottish societies.

The Commercial-Advertiser, an evening paper, was started in 1796. Last week it changed its name to the Globe and reduced its price from 2 cents to a penny. It is now thriving.

Louis Foltz, E. E. Mulligan, and E. F. Sutherland had their applications indorsed for admission to the Union Printers' Home at Colorado Springs. They are now waiting for vacancies.

D. M. Oviatt, foreman of the Journal, has gone to Boston to make preliminary arrangements for getting out Hearst's Boston Examiner on March 21. Mr. Oviatt will remain about two weeks after the first issue.

Organizer Jackson, of New York, visited Boston last week to look over the ground of the book and job strike in that city. He reports about 300 members still out and all firm. President McMahon expressed himself as confident of winning.

The new building of the Times at Broadway and Forty-third street will be ready for occupancy about March 15. The composing room will be one of the finest in New York and will have all the facilities which will make its surroundings pleasant.

Owen J. Kindelon, always popular among his associates and full of Irish wit on the public platform, is now on the day force of the Herald. Mr. Kindelon was an intimate and life-long friend of the late Congressman Amos J. Cummings and is deeply interested in the erection of the proposed monument in Mr. Cummings' memory.

A banquet at Shanley's was tendered Patrick Tracy, supervisor of the City Record, last Sunday night. It was a full dress affair and tickets were $5 each. Mr. Tracy is a member of No. 6. All the officers of "Big Six" and many prominent members were present. The supervisor was appointed by Mayor McClellan for two years at a salary of $5,000 per year.

The Herald chapel holds more social events than any other newspaper. One week there is a bowling tournament, the next week a beafsteak dinner, the following a vaudeville entertainment, and so on. The money for these social events is raised by a "rake-off" on the pools. With a membership of 160 in its benevolent society, in the last six months $1,200 was paid in for dues and $820 collected in sick benefits.

The candidates for delegate who have announced themselves are Edward Meagher, Commercial-Bulletin; P. J. Hynes, Morning Telegraph; Charles T. Peyton, Times; Robert W. Campbell, World; William Brennan, Post Book Room; W. Butz, Brooklyn Citizen; John Mason, Butterick's; Thos. McConkey, Herald; John Crossland, Textile Printing Company; Charles Madge, Journal; Charles Reed, Tribune. Four are to be selected. Both parties will hold caucuses in April.

The three-year agreement between the book and job trade and the Typothetae winds up about November. President P. H. McCormick is already planning the ground work for an eight-hour day. Mr. McCormick will have very little opposition for re-election next May. His efficiency and executive ability have been extolled even by members of the anti-administration party. Representing the book trade and being employed during the day, he devotes his evenings to the work of the union. He has added many new members to "Big Six's" membership.

The banquet tendered to Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, the day before he sailed for Porto Rico was successful in every sense. About 250 prominent labor leaders assembled to wish Mr. Gompers bon voyage. Mr. Gompers' father, who is nearly 80 years old, was present, and was the proudest man in the hall when his son was presented with engrossed resolutions, set in a very neat frame, testifying to Sam's brilliant career as a labor leader. Some of the printers present were: James J. Murphy, Samuel B. Donnelly, Eugene Busche, Nate Newman, John T. Bogart, Ed. T. Farrell, Eugene O'Rourke, and James Lavery, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Personal Mention.

Eugene Busche, a well-known employing printer of New York, and a member of "Big Six," was in the city on business the early part of the week.

R. M. Campbell, well known as a member of New York Typographical Union, No. 6, and often spoken of as its "silver-tongued orator," was in the city the past week.

HERO PAINTING.

WILLIAM TIPTON TALBOTT.

What matter whether eyes of brown or blue
Or eyes of gray
Lit up his face? What matter if a frown
King-like upon it lay?

What matter if he dressed with seemly care
And with calm grace
Could win a lady's "Thank you," or a name
Back through the past could trace?

Such touches truly lend a softer glow
To portraiture
Of him whose entity the jailor Time
Strives vainly to immure.

Useful accessories are they no doubt;
But what he did—
His triumph over self, his war for truth—
Must not be hid.

And if he stooped to soothe the wretchedness
Of hearts that bleed,
And pitied deeper than his words could reach
That matters much indeed.

And much it matters if he proudly dared
To speak his mind
When men in fury strove to damn the truth,
With brainless passion blind.

But most it matters if he toiled in vain
Through lonely years,
Heart sick, and yet at last achieving fame
Despite the cold world's sneers.

Oh, you who linger in the night of toil
And long for day,
Take heart—the grandest hero is the man
Of whom the world shall say

That from the roadside of defeat he plucked
The flower success,
Bravely and with a modesty sublime,
Not with blind eagerness.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

From the New York Press.

Evening dress at any other time of day would be undress.

The man who expects common sense in women hasn't any himself.

When a girl tells you how cold she is she is always careful not to tell you where.

A man's idea of a happy married life is an old pair of slippers, a pipe, and his wife away on a visit.

The reason women can always sit down so comfortably is the loose way they wear their clothes where they do it.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Post Chapel.

Fie, Newsom! Imagine Maud S. in kilts.

Charley Sener and Thad. Coaker (Dick Croker) are taking lessons in billiards from our own expert—Ed. Wirsing.

Don L. Murray is absent on account of illness, the extent of which, at this writing, I have been unable to learn.

Billy Hanafin and a portion of the Baltimore News force make their appearance at about 5 a. m. It's good morning, sure.

President Johnson exercised excellent judgment when he placed W. N. Brockwell at the head of the Nominations Committee.

Dave Sandoe is emphatic in his declaration that a day job is a very nice situation. Of course there are others who think the same way.

May I inquire of Mr. Pafflow if he would suggest Messrs. Kreiter and Rodier at the same time? We are only conceded one at present, you know.

Sener, who is on the News, is a nephew by marriage to J Monroe Kreiter. Neither gentleman knew of the relationship until they began comparing notes.

News certainly travels fast these days. Scarcely had the Post began issuing the Baltimore paper than a Michigan weekly put in an appearance giving the Post composing room a big send off.

A billiard tournament, probably confined to members of this chapel, is now being talked of, to take place in the not remote future. It is surprising that so few printers play this scientific and fascinating game.

I have been in different localities where crows abound, but cannot remember ever having heard that bird making a noise sounding like Hawkes! Hawkes! Must have been a trained "polly" our friend heard.

Occasionally—or frequently, as the case may be— a chairman errs in making a decision. Would it not be well for the members of the chapel wherein the error is made to point out the mistake to the officer instead of criticising him in saloons? Think this over, and if the shoe fits you put it on, put it on.

The Post chapel, in special meeting, held Wednesday morning of last week, unanimously indorsed a resolution sent out by G. P. O. chapels requesting the officers of the union to procure a suitable floral tribute to the late lamented Senator Hanna, and guaranteed to assume its share of the expense.

Charles Dodson, who so ably assists Machinist Sprucebank to keep our machines in good order (if I may again be allowed to quote that ancient street car sign), is wearing "the smile that won't come off." His young wife on Saturday morning presented him with a bouncing boy. Both mother and little one are doing well.

Joe Stelle dropped in to pay his respects to his many friends in this chapel Saturday night and chatted pleasantly concerning the coming election. It is too early as yet to make predictions, but I will venture to say that those who do not vote for Joe, if he decides to again try for delegatorial honors, will at least wish him well.

W. M. Sinclair left us some weeks since to accept a situation elsewhere, but the job did not prove permanent, and he returned just in time to participate in the overtime occasioned by the Baltimore fire. This week he again departed, and I have been unable to learn his present seat of operations. This report reads like the story of the Irish train dispatcher, who had been cautioned against sending in too lengthy reports concerning wrecks along his line. The next report he sent in read: Off ag'in; on ag'in. Finigin. (All due apologies.)

No individual member of this chapel has ever been accused of of setting the world afire, but there is just a mere possibility that the combined membership started the recent conflagration in Baltimore. In looking over the mailing list used to send out our New Year's greeting, I observed that the only Baltimore newspaper chapel that did not get one was the World. That office is the only one the fire did not destroy. Now, draw your own conclusions.

The newspaper offices will be pretty well represented in the way of candidates this year, if all those spoken of intend to stay in the field. Miss McDonald has announced positively that she intends to try for the delegatorial honors; Maj. Herbert aspires to the presidency. That winds up the Post list as far as I have heard to date. Michael Maher, for delegate, and Harry Sauter, for vice-president, is the Star's complement, and T. C. Parsons and Harry Knapp, for delegate, and Seibold for secretary, are those from the Times. Then the new office to be created—assistant secretary—haven't heard yet who will want to fill that gap, but, judging from the large number after the other plums, it is likely that there will be a few after this one when it is definitely decided that the new office is to be a reality.

The printers of England, as indicated in the following letter, seem to make a practice of exchanging tributes of friendship to a much greater extent than do the printers of this side of the Atlantic. This chapel has two framed greetings adorning the walls of its composing room, one received in 1894 and the other in 1896, from our English namesake:

Composing Department, Morning Post,
Strand, London, Eng., Feb. 1.

To the Father of the Chapel, Washington Post.

Dear Sir:—To the numerous tributes of friendship adorning the walls of our composing room has to be added a finely-executed photo of your members which reached us in good condition.

To say that the gift is appreciated would be to convey to your own companions' mind but a feeble impresion of the welcome accorded to it.

Such proofs of the kindly feeling existing among members of the craft are by no means rare, but your thoughtful consideration is the more appreciated when the distance that separates the two shores is reckoned up.

Trusting the lives of those who figure in the picture are and will continue to be as pleasant as they appear to be, and the name and circulation of your paper be as widely known and patronized as the famous march named, no doubt, after it, I am, on behalf of the Morning Post Companionship,

Fraternally yours,
JOHN HERBERT DAVIS, Father.

About fifty men in this room were detailed for work February 22.

Frank Morgan returned to work Tuesday, after a week's illness.

Ed Geyer has been transferred temporarily to the Record Clerk's Division.

Newt. Lillard is at home with two badly inflamed eyes, the result of a cold.

Some of the remarks I've heard about the weather lately wouldn't look well in print,

We have been getting in some new 6, 8, and 10-point sorts lately, and they were badly needed.

Billy Skeen, of the Supply Division, was off last week with bad case of grip. He came back Tuesday.

C. G. Hopkins and M. H. Phillips have been off sick the past week. The latter is in Sibley Hospital with a bad case of blood poisoning.

The Supply Division is getting in a lot of new job faces, including full series of Cheltenham old style, Jenson italic, and Post Monotone.

Daniel Miller, of Takoma Park, took the place of Charles Danenhower in the soup kitchen two days this week. Dan took his vest off for the first time in years. Mr. D. slipped and fell on the ice Friday morning, but reported for work Tuesday.

Charles E. Hawkes, of Chicago, candidate for President of the I. T. U. was a caller in this division Thursday, and made a very favorable impression. I suppose every correspondent in the shop will have this item, but it's news—and news is scarce.

At a meeting of the ball tossers at the Temple Sunday, a league of eight clubs was formed from the composing rooms, three from the bindery, one from the press room, and one from the foundry. Each team will be required to contribute $10 to the treasury. The officers choosen were: W. R. Love, president; J. E. Veach, vice president; D. J. Chute, secretary, and W. J. Beddow, treasurer. Managers of the teams will be elected by those who are interested in base ball in each division. Grounds have not been selected nor a schedule arranged, but judging from the enthusiasm displayed it will not be long before things are humming.

There is a man in the G. P. O.—I don't dare mention his name—but will call him "Bill," who some years ago worked a short time in a rather large job office in a Northern city. He was a pretty chesty proposition in those days. He's toned down now—and as a usual thing his first inquiry was for the "flub-dub" case. Well, as the corner he was put to work in was rather dark, Bill kept his gas burning, even after all the other men had turned their's out. The gang watched him swell out a little while, and then one of them had a brilliant idea. He turned his own gas on and blew in the tube, which, of course, put Bill's light to the bad. Bill lighted it again, but didn't say anything for a long time. Finally he asked one of the boys what caused his gas to go out. "Why, you see," said the man, "the bookkeeper in the front office has a little thing in there to turn off a man's gas when he thinks he is wasting it." Bill started for the front office at a double-quick. He went up to the bookkeeper and said loud enough to scare the typewriter almost off watch: "Say! what do you think I am—a —— —— owl? I want you to let that light of mine alone after this!" The bookkeeper had the jerks all the rest of the day, but the laugh Bill got separated him from that job.

Repeat the dose, Mr. Talbott. We like your style.

J. L. Kause is located temporarily on Slug 30—this is his third move.

Jesse M. Burton, E. J. Dwight, and Jesse Morgan are on Spess detail.

There has been a scarcity of lower case h's and w's lately, allee same Spess.

Major Herbert dropped in the other day, but said he would call later to solicit support.

Mr. C. E. Hawkes made a flying trip through this division the other day, leaving a favorable impression.

J. W. DeVries and D. J. Snyder make most of us resemble dwarfs when lined up. Both are 6 footers and built in proportion, but a more genial and even-tempered couple can not be found.

If the copy preparers would mark quad lines on the head or foot of takes in running tables they would help us materially. As it now is we do not know whether it goes or not, and time is lost hunting up the previous take.

While most of us are satisfied to plug along content as printers, two of our fellow workmen are burning the taper low in the study of medicine—C. W. Huff and R. H. Miller. Both are young, ambitious, and determined, and deserve credit for their efforts.

I will go a step further in the "pull-the-plug" crusade and make a kick against the disgusting practice of those who use the basins as a receptacle for refuse and nasal douches. The large tub at the end of the wash-room will answer the purpose and not be so offensive to others.

While appreciating the careful and earnest work of the Nominations Committee in their efforts to protect the interests of the union and deal fairly by the many applicants, I think the course pursued at Sunday's meeting in balloting separately for each candidate and having the chairman of the committee give a brief history of each case as the name is read, is a step in the right direction, as it aids the committee besides helping the membership to a clearer insight into who and what the applicants are.

Night Bill Force.

T. C. Parsons, of the Times, paid the Night Force a visit Monday.

J. H. Ross has been kept away from his desk by inflammatory rheumatism.

Anyone having items of interest to this division will please hand them to Slug 15.

Harry J. Smith, one of our imposers, has been on the sick list for the past eight days.

Tom E. Doty has on exhibition some fine photographic reproductions. His work is that of an artist.

Washington's Birthday was celebrated by the usual "Easy night on the Bill Force," "Let out two links," was the order.

Johnny Hogan laid off a couple of days last week nursing a pain in his chest. At first he feared pneumonia would result.

J. S. Macklin, a temporary employe of the Bill Force Annex, who has been ill for some time, left for his home, Harrisburg, Pa., last Tuesday.

Last Monday night, on motion of John Dickman, this chapel unanimously voted to procure a floral tribute to the memory of the late Senator Hanna.

The Little Union Cafe, across from the G street door, has installed a telephone for the convenience of its patrons. Mr. Hummer is trying to secure additional room to accommodate his increasing trade.

Messrs. Dougherty, A. L. Huss, Emil Himmighoefer ("square head"), Brennen, and Louis Nau (who played by the band), were entertained at Alexandria on the 22nd by George Hayden, of the Record. A royal time was reported.

Speaking of candidates, the name of Titus F. Ellis is always heard. He seems to be counted already as one of the winners. He is a congenial, jolly companion, accomodating and generous. For years this union has sent one heavy-weight in their delegation. Titus seems to be "the man of destiny" in this instance.

T. Frank Hall, candidate for delegate from the Third, dropped in casually the other evening. Mr. Hall has many warm friends and supporters on this force. He is never content to drift with the tide. He must be a worker and help propel the great ship of trades unionism through all kinds of waters—calm or rough.

Columbia Union and each individual member could reflect no greater credit on themselves than by electing as delegate the beloved and honored candidate from the First, Philip S. Steele. He has grown gray working at the case alongside those whom he loves. He takes a deep interest not only in the material welfare of his friends, but the spiritual as well. He is well-informed and can make an equally good address from the pulpit as from the floor of the Union. Without exception all on this force who know him seem to be for him, and he will meet us all before the election. Surely, no other candidate would feel hurt if Mr. Steele carried the credentials. Let's try for it, anyway.

H. NEWSOM.

THE LATE M. A. HANNA.

Resolutions Adopted By Bookbinders' Union, No. 4, On His Death.

At the last regular meeting of Bookbinders' Union, No. 4, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God in His divine wisdom to remove the Hon. Marcus A. Hanna from among us when his wise counsel was most needed; and

WHEREAS, Coming at a time when, mainly through his instrumentality, a better understanding between the employed and the employer was at hand, his death can be viewed but as a national calamity; and

WHEREAS, In his death the people have sustained a loss that will be but accentuated and not assuaged by time; therefore be it

Resolved, That it is with profound sorrow Local Union No. 4, International Brotherhood of Bookbinders of Washington, D. C., learns of his death; and

Be it further resolved, That we extend to his grief-stricken widow and family our heartfelt sympathy and condolence in this their hoar of bereavement; and

Be it still further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent his widow.

A Correction.

In the last issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST an error appeared in the heading over the article relating to the proceedings of the Council of Allied Building Trades. It was stated that the trouble with that body and the Duehay-Schneider jobs had been settled through a report of a committee. This was an error. The matter is still open for settlement.

Now on Unfair List of Central Labor Union

Third Division.

Hot tamales have no place in the administrative entity of Columbia Union.

Vice-President Hawkes was shown through the big building on the 17th inst. by Foreman Hay of the Job Room.

James M. Lynch is an able, fearless, and progressive President. Why turn him down because young Mr. Hawkes wants his place?

The roster of the Third Division is now close to the 100 mark, by reason of the addition to the force of a considerable number of emergency men.

Who says Alley 7 is not in the swim? Goodkey indorsed by Columbia Union for delegate to the American Federation of Labor! That is glory enough for one day.

I noticed "Windy" Morgan and a lot of boys going up to be counted for Hawkes last Sunday. "Windy" and others: Don't holler until you get out of the woods.

My apologies are due to the Woman's Auxiliary and to its members for saying "Mrs." when I should have said Miss Lillian B. Gordon. It was a grave error, and I thank Brer King for setting me right.

To avoid the possibility of a disturbance of the entiente cordiale now existing between R. M. Cheshire and Max J. Knoble, it should be noted that the latter's slug number is 36 and not 27, as printed last week.

If Mr. Broderick seriously thinks that I ever intimated, much less said, that "no down-town man would be given consideration in connection with the presidency" of Columbia Union, he is the most deluded man in the city. What I did say, and what I now repeat, is that I don't believe a down-town man can be elected president of Columbia Union this year.

I am again indebted to the Spess correspondent, J. Ligon King, for valuable information concerning my candidate for delegate to the I. T. U. convention, Miss Anna Wilson, who, it seems, should have been accredited to the Official Gazette chapel. The error was entire inadvertent and was the result of depending upon a third party for information. But I respectfully submit that this error is based upon a technicality, inasmuch as the Gazette "side show" (so-called) has so recently been separated from the Specification Division that some of us unthinkingly class the two bodies as one. However, Miss Wilson is entitled to this acknowledgement of my misstatement, and to the prediction that it will not so much matter after election, for she will then represent Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101.

It seems to be a custom among the storekeepers of Washington to keep their stores open half a day on a legal holiday. Why should this be so? Sunday is looked upon as a day when almost everybody ceases from his usual business; stores are closed Saturday night and remain closed until Monday morning. People know they have to provide for Sunday and consequently they do so by laying in the required provisions on the night before. They can just as well do this in the case of a legal holiday. We should all bear in mind the fact that every time we patronize a store that keeps open on a legal holiday we are assisting the proprietors in compelling the clerks to work five or six hours more than they should work. I could not help feeling a sort of satisfaction that the heavy showers on the morning of Washington's Birthday must have played havoc with the business of those who kept their stores open until 1 o'clock.

I didn't say this specifically, but as the present year's election was referred to, I presumed it would be so understood. I am always ready and willing to give my support to the man, no matter where he works, who is best qualified for a position; but as there didn't seem to be any disposition on the part of the down-town people to place anybody in nomination, I took the liberty of making up my mind without their assistance. Perhaps this was impudent on my part, as I am a mere kid of 50 or so; but I respectfully submit that the first I knew it was criminal to make up your mind before asking "Uncle Johnny McCormick" was when that gentleman pitched into "Pard" Bloomer for daring to have an opinion of his own. Let us come to an amicable understanding, gentlemen. I don't pretend to have any influence in the affairs of the Union; but if I have the honor to be a contributor to THE TRADES UNIONIST next year, just hunt me up and present the name of your candidate, and if I eanestly believe he deserves my support I will work hard for his election.

Dr. Woods Hutchison, secretary of the Oregon State Board of Health, is out with a new idea. He thinks that topers should be allowed to drink themselves to death, thus insuring the survival of the fittest. In the Doctor's opinion, "The nations of Southern Europe through continued consumption of alcohol have gradually attained a level of comparative sobriety. . . . Today the races in the van of progress, the dominant factor in the world's work, the American, English, Irish, Scotch, and North German, are those in whom drunkenness is rampant." The Doctor also states that "Romans in the zenith of their power and Greeks in the days of Cyrus were all drunken and hard drinkers. Their degenerate descendants are comparatively sober." Hence it would appear that if the old soaks in the Government Printing Office were to transmit the drinking habit to posterity it would take anywhere from 1,000 to 2,000 years for "their degenerate descendants" to attain a condition of "comparative" sobriety. It is a prospect gloomy enough to bring even the most drink-sodden person to his senses. It is impossible for me to conceive how anybody endowed with reason can contemplate the possibility of his own posterity reeling down the centuries in a state of beastly intoxication without a shudder at the mere thought. Think it over, men and brethren.

Of course Chas. W. Pafflow couldn't be anything but Russian in his sympathis. His very name forbids the thought. But I fail to see how Russia victorious could add to the glory of the white race, as Mr. Pafflow seems to think, or to the glory of Christianity, as others say. According to my lights, the testimony is all the other way. A Post correspondent writes: "If Japan should capture the Island of Saghalien and release all the Russian political prisoners there, millions of human heart throughout the world would call her blessed." Japan does not forget that in her war with China, Russia stepped in and robbed her of the fruits of victory. Not content with that, Russia has appropriated the vast territory of Manchuria ofter solemenly promising the Powers of the world she would evacuate in 1903. Everybody knows that all the concessions secured by Russia from China were granted by China through fear. We all know about these terrible Siberian mines, and the Kishinev affair is too recent to have been forgotten; it is well known that the Czar is in daily, almost hourly, fear of assassination by his own subjects; that the government of Russia never took the people into account, but has always treated them as cattle, and that it is but a question of time when another revolution more terrible than the French revolution will overcome Russia from within, and the long-smothered woes of her peasants will find awful revenge. And then the talk of the "glory of the white race!" In regard to the so called "treachery" of Japan in firing the first shot, we have only the word of Russians for that; we have Japanese authority for the statement that it was the Russians who first fired upon them. Russian victories have been won in the past more by brute force and by vastly outnumbering the enemy than by military skill. Such was the case in the war with Turkey, than whom no nation possesses better fighters. And that way, I submit, is the only way in which she can whip Japan. There is no doubt in my mind about the justness of Japan's cause. May the god of battles send her power!

Andrew Carnegie says the trusts can not monopolize brains, with which statement all who are acquainted with the facts must agree. The vast majority of business men in this great country of ours are not interested in trusts; yet they are acknowledged by the whole world to be among the most intelligent, aggressive, and successful in existence. There was once a time when fraternal organizations owed their inception and existence almost entirely to sentiment; when a man organized a lodge or society for the honor of being known as its originator; when the benefits derived from such organizations depended entirely on the number of members enrolled, or upon their disposition to give. This condition of things has gradually been changed for the better by the onward march of business ideas and the adoption of business methods, until it has come to be a recognized fact that a fraternal organization that cannot make a definite contract to pay a certain benefit at a certain time is as carefully avoided, in most instances, as a plague; the only exceptions to this rule being the great fraternities like the Masons, Odd Fellows, Elks, and others of similar character, whose aim is the elevation of their membership. To the end that these fraternal organizations may succeed, it is of the highest importance that only men of tried and proved capacity from a strictly business standpoint be elected to take charge of their interests. Notably is this the case in the management of the affairs of the great labor unions. A case in point was the selection, four years ago, of James M. Lynch, to be President of the International Typographical Union. Under the direction of Mr. Lynch the Union has passed through a season of prosperity unexampled in its history, and has made for itself a name that is honored and respected wherever it is known, through the Typographical Journal, of our marvelous growth in point of membership, in the number of new unions, in financial strength, and in moral influence, during the two terms in which Mr. Lynch has filled the Presidential office. Naturally the great success and popularity of Mr. Lynch has created a desire in the minds of others for the office which he has filled so ably, his only opponent, so far as I know, being Charles E. Hawkes, of Chicago, the present First Vice-President of the I. T. U. It strikes me very forcibly, however, that the old motto, "Let well enough alone," applies quite strongly in this case Mr. Hawkes is doing nobly in his present capacity; why make a change that is in the nature of an experiment? We know we are safe with Lynch at the helm; we also know that a general who is skillful in a subordinate position often gets rattled when promoted to be commander-in-chief. In short, the only reason why we should change from Lynch to Hawkes seems to be just this: Hawkes wants it. It is an honorable ambition. But sentiment has no place in a matter of business. I ask my readers to think this over carefully before voting.

BOOK BINDERS MAKE MERRY.

The Fifty-fourth Anniversary of the Local Union Remembered.

What might be termed a "Red Letter Night" in "Bookdom" occurred on Saturday night last, February 20, the Book Binders of the Government Printing Office celebrating the fifty-fourth anniversary of the organization of the Book Binders' Union of Washington; D. C.

Two banquets were scheduled for the evening, one known as the "Sausage Roast," under the supervision of Jack Weidman, James Cogan, and Charley Binkert, the other known as the "Silk Stockings and Boiled Shirts" party, of which Wm. Gallagher was chairman and Wells C. Harrell was toast master, assisted by the following committee: Messrs. Wakefield, Bauer, Berkeley, Schlick, Brown, Warren, Taylor, Rutherford, Bassett, Terry, Hardy, Feeney, Lanman, and Bassler.

Some of the principal features of the "Sausage Roast" was the excellent singing by the Congressional Quartet, which were kept busy responding to numerous encores.

J.H. Hanlein, a singer of local repute, sang an original production entitled: "Give Me Back My Fifteen Cents."

James E. Cogan, who has become quite popular as a comedian and singer, and who is rapidly establishing quite a reputation of saying the right thing at the right time in his humorous monologues, kept his audience in an uproar of laughter from the beginning to the end of his "stunt."

"Stick to the Union Jack," rendered by Jack Weidman on an octorena, was an exceeding pleasing feature of the evening's enjoyment.

John L. Dwyer, of local repute as a speaker, was very pleasing and entertaining, while last but not least was Chas. F. Weston, whose reputation as a speaker is too well established for comment.

Numerous telegrams of humorous tenor were received during the evening.

John Emerson made the hit of the evening, but no body was struck.

At the Oxford Hotel, where the "Silk Stocking" contingent were assembled, enjoyment and good fellowship were the order of the evening. The tables were tastefully decorated and fifteen courses constituted the menu. Singing and oratory constituted the greater part of the entertainment.

The committee was very fortunate in securing the services of J. Walter Humphrey. As a singer Mr. Humphrey is one of the foremost in Washington musical circles, and ranks second to none.

Songs were also sung by J. Harry Hanlein, Ed Hutchins, a nd William McCabe, all of which was well received.

The music was furnished by Helbig's Union Orchestra, and was pronounced by those present very fine.

Recitations were delivered by Theo. M. Hardy and Thomas Esperon, which were loudly applauded.

Short speeches of five minutes each were delivered by J. L. Feeney, R. T. Frailey, R. T. Barrett, Wm H. Kelley, Geo. Kirch, and Martin Dries.

He was also twice elected a member of the Legislature of his State from Davidson County, Tennessee, and had an honorable record as a member of the Confederacy during the Civil War. He was well known as a member for the past twenty-five years of Phœnix Lodge, F. A. A. M., which order conducted the services at Mt. Olivet Cemetery on Monday afternoon.

Frank A. Kidd is an able and useful union man. He will reflect credit on No. 101 as a delegate.

Robert A. Martin was transferred to the day side by request on account of the illness of his wife, Robt. W. Christian came on the night side in his place.

The Wisconsin Republican Association recently elected Dr. A. E. Cowles and J. E. Maynard secretary add vice-president, respectively. Both gentlemen are efficient members of the Night Proof Room.

In the haste of writing I made a palpable error in my last, making it appear that the down-town men were entitled to two delegates. I only regret that I can vote for but one of the gentlemen mentioned.

A sense of freedom and personal self-respect is making its way among the rank and file of the armies of Europe. A document has been distributed by the million among the soldiers of the French army, calling upon them to refuse to obey if ordered to fire upon their fathers, brothers, and neighbors in the interest of those who are grinding them into the depths of poverty and degradation. A similar propaganda is being made in the German and Russian armies.

Enrico Terri, the great representative of organized labor in Italy and editor of the Avanti, has been condemned to fourteen months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of 1,516 lire for his exposure of corruption in the Navy Department. After the sentence was pronounced, a vast throng gave him a tremendous ovation. Soldiery and police lined the streets. A civilization which depends on bayonets and revolvers for its existence instead of upon reason and justice will not endure very far in the twentieth century.

A discussion of the war in the East is obviously out of place here, and while I refuse to be drawn in a controversy over it, I may be pardoned a word in regard to its effect on the great army of labor. In this point of view the question narrows itself down to a conflict between the enlightened and progressive ideas of America and Europe which recognize the worth and dignity of man as man and the ideas of Asia which are fixed in caste and regard those who labor as so many oxen. Despotic as Russia may be, the intelligent masses aspire to freedom and are fully conscious of the dignity and value of their labor. In Japan labor has no respect for itself. The worker there is a slave, a coolie, without aspirations and quite content in his degradation. As I see it, the victory of Japan would mean the exploitation of China under Oriental ideas and the array of the yellow hordes in competition against the labor of America and Europe. From Russia organized labor has nothing to fear. A victory for Japan would go far toward the introduction of Japcoolie labor in the United States at from 10 to 20 cents a day.

Parry's scabs are on strike. This great union labor smasher was giving an object lesson how organized labor could be destroyed. Instead of cutting off the monkey's tail at a single blow, he adopted the old plan of taking off a little at a time by repeated cuts—and the monkey kicked.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Feb. 26.—The Parry Manufacturing Company, at the head of which is D. M. Parry, President of the National Manufacturers' Association and the National Industrial Association of America, has a strike on his hands.

Seventy-five craters and hangers employed by the company struck to-day on account of a cut in wages. All the men are non-union. They were paid off and discharged.

The men say they have been cut from 72 to 57 cents per piece since October, and struck against an additional cut of 2 cents to-day.

The only thing to bring repentance to a scab is, figuratively speaking, to punch him in the face with a stick of cordwood. Parry's scabs have received this punch, and got it good. It shows non-union men what they have to expect. It should show the union men that the battle is now on for life and death with organized labor. Strike-breaking syndicates have been formed all over the country, and employers are flooded with offers from these associations to furnish them with spies and informers, renegades and traitors, who will sow discord and work up hostility, envy, and hatred among the unions, thus rendering their hopes and plans abortive. The striking feature is that these syndicates are professedly commercial—a more refined, subtle, and dangerous Pinkerton gang.

Mr. Thomas F. Grinley, the parachute jumper, has given a very concise statement of how it feels to drop 3,000 feet. He says the descent is so rapid for the first 200 feet that one would hardly realize he had started on the journey, and that the remaining distance is easy; and still another interesting point is that "the drop does not jar you until you strike the ground. In fact, there is less jarring to the system than if you had jumped off a six-foot high fence." The story is so very plausible and reaches us while we are in that peculiarly trustful mood that we prefer to take his word for it rather than to make the trip, even though the experiment were to prove Mr. Grinley a liar.

REMINISCENCES.

O, were you ne'er an athlete,
And did you never bowl,
And feel the flush of vict'ry
Come sweeping o'er your soul,
As down the glistening alley
The deadly missile bore,
And landing with a sickening thud
Knocked down a "brace" or more?

A crew of jolly bowlers
A challenge late had wired,
By reason of unfounded hopes
From pipe-dreams late inspired;
Our captain was as brave a man
As ere commission bore,
And far from scene of battle
Trod oft knee-deep in gore!

But "woe is me;" a vengeance sure,
Swift retribution poured;
For sore misled by Captain Ned,
We met the Saltzman horde.

* * * * * * *

They struck a strike—yes, nearly all
The bowlers he had there—
While we, cheered on by Captain Bran,
Could never spare a "spare."
Our Captain beat his manly breast,
Bewailed his mournful lot;
"Ah me!" sobbed he, "it would appear
"We're fewer than I thought."

—JOHN F. WARNER.

The above lines were inspired by a recent bowling contest between teams captained by W. Russell Branham of the "correcting alley," and E. C. Saltzman, bankman, in which contest the latter team came out ahead. The bard, who thus makes his bow to our readers, was one of the defeated team, and is from Ohio—two things which should not prejudice us against him. On the contrary, it may be said that notwithstanding the limitations just mentioned Mr. Warner has made a "ten-strike" and will hereafter hold the proud position of Third Division Poet Laureate.

Three pay days in February would ordinarily mean $1.45 for dues; but this time many of us paid as high as $1.80, and several paid $1.85. Who wouldn't be chairman of the chapel when collecting such rates from ninety-eight men, of which he gets 5 per cent?

Our candidate, T. Frank Hall, is making a quiet canvass, but slowly and surely getting there. Avoid the confusion caused by contemplating so many names. Just narrow it down to three or four; it is much more simple. And always, at the top of your list, put T. Frank Hall.

As illustrating the ease with which a perfectly obvious error sometimes gets past the "black man," the "blue man," and the "red man," I ran across a proof just returned from the Department of Agriculture, in which appeared the phrase, "when the plants are wet with due." In the "Brainery," as in the composing room, only "eternal vigilance" will insure perfection.

Of course "all is fair in love and war," and the indorsement of Mr. Hawkes by Columbia Union was cleverly managed by that gentleman's friends; but they should remember that a packed meeting is no sure indication of the way an election will go, particularly when said meeting comprises but one-eighth of the membership of the Union. Such expedients may be clever, but they are undeniably tricky, and I doubt if those who managed Mr. Hawkes' campaign will feel entirely satisfied with their work. It is true they have secured a technical "indorsement;" but one swallow don't make a summer, and there are yet 1,750 voters to hear from.

At last we know the real cause of the Baltimore fire, and if there is a reward offered for the correct answer, I herewith claim it on behalf of Richmond B. Lancaster, late of Baltimore, but now of the Third Division. Mr. Lancaster says that "The Two Orphans" was billed to appear at Chase's Lyceum Theater the day after the fire broke out, and it is said that Kate Claxton was to have acted as the blind girl. It is a matter of history that Kate and her play were running in the Brooklyn Theater when it burned down with great loss of life, and that she was in St. Louis with the same combination when the hotel in which she was stopping took fire, Kate saving herself by tying up her head in a wet cloth and rolling down stairs. It would seem to be a foregone conclusion that "The Two Orphans" have again got in their work; but we are a little at sea in regard to Kate. If she will please drop us a line it will relieve the tension and furnish the last link in the chain of evidence proving the existence of a psychological connection between "The Two Orphans," fire, and Kate Claxton.

I rise to second the nomination of Joseph E. Goodkey for delegate to the American Federation of Labor. It has been my privilege to be the alley-mate of Mr. Goodkey for just one year, and during that time I have run the gamut of human emotions in studying the character of this many-sided man. To begin with, Mr. Goodkey is a first-rate printer. It goes without saying, therefore, that he believes in the Bible quotation, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." And he literally follows this injunction in whatever he does. Should he be chosen to represent us in the next convention of the American Federation of Labor, Mr. Goodkey would never sulk in his tent, like Achilles, but would ever be found at his post of duty, his voice raised for what he considers to be for the best interests of his fellow-workmen. I conclude with a strain from Dickens: "Rough he may be; so air our barrs. Wild he may be; so air the bufflers that roam on our boundless peroarers. But he is a child of freedom and a child of natur', and his proudest answer to the tyrant and the despot is, that his home is in the settin' sun!"

I am in receipt of a circular from the Rallying Committee of the Woman's Auxiliary, which calls for more than a passing word. To be direct, the Auxiliary now numbers seventy members, having been in existence a little over a year. This is doing very well, but as Columbia Union numbers 2,000 members, the membership of the Auxiliary ought to be several hundred at least. As the circular says, "The ladies have helped the cause of unionism by pushing the label and asking for union goods and union clerks in stores." That is the whole argument in a nutshell; if we and our families would all do as much, the labor problem would not be a problem. The apathy shown by the members of Columbia Union toward this subject almost forces one to the conclusion that most of us are in the Union from necessity rather than desire. Let every union printer wake up and help the Woman's Auxiliary by inducing his wife, sister, or daughter to join. The initiation fee is 50 cents; the dues are only $1 a year, payable quarterly. Examine carefully the list of unfair houses on the last page of this paper and avoid patronizing any of them in future. In this way we may exert a tremendous influence for good.

Major Clifford has covered himself with glory by paying us off twice on Saturday during the past month, a proceeding which has been viewed with the liveliest and most genuine appreciation on the part of the men. It seems to me that there can be no satisfactory answer to the question, Why are we not paid on Saturday always instead of Monday? According to the best information I can obtain, the custom of paying off on Monday was instituted many years ago, at a time when it was thought that many of the men, if paid on Saturday, would be incapacitated by drink from showing up on the first day of the week. It is submitted that this reasoning can not hold good at the present time, because the force now employed consists for the most part of steady and reliable men, who have given notable proofs of their willingness and ability to work continuously through a protracted period of not only eight, but twelve hours a day, as during the past two months. Moreover, Saturday being market day, it is possible to buy provisions of the farmers at a considerable reduction from the prices charged by local dealers. It is frequently impossible for us to take advantage of the markets on Saturday, because by that time, a part of our earnings being deposited in the bank, our allowance of ready money is depleted; and many of us run up an account with a city grocer who profits by our need for his goods. All this would be obviated by changing the pay-day to Saturday. I most earnestly and respectfully commend this idea to the consideration of the Public Printer, confident that I voice the wishes of a large majority of my fellow-workmen,

Station G, Post-Office.

A report being freely circulated that a recommendation has been made to the Post-Office Department to remove Station G from its present location on G street near Seventh northwest, the business men in that vicinity have protested vigorously against the change.

Since the use of the Union Building by the city post-office and the subsequent creation of Station G, thousands of people have become patrons of Station G and will feel lost without it and greatly inconvenienced should the change be made.

Superintendent ROBINSON and his able corps of assistants have made a record second to no other station in the city in the dispatch of work coming to their station and it is hoped that conditions now maintained will be made permanent.

High Wages.

Stripped of its high-sounding pretensions the capitalistic organization of which PARRY is the head center appears as a movement for low wages. Their contention may always be narrowed down to this: that the individual workingman should be unrestricted in accepting as low wages as he pleases. To organize for the increase and maintenance of wages, it is claimed, is contrary to nature, and constitutes a vicious infrac ion of the industrial if not of the moral law. Ingeneous arguments may be set forth in support of this contention—arguments which appeal strongly to the self-interest of the so-called average man and are likely to befog even the workingman himself.

The fact is that those who, either knowingly or unknowingly, assist in keeping wages down view the question from a narrow personal standpoint—the huckstering standpoint of the shop—and therefore fail to understand that, in a Republic at least, the health of the body-politic is absolutely dependent upon the consuming capacity of the wage-earning constituency.

The history of human development proves this. Civilization did not really begin until some primitive wage-earner struck for the means of living up to a higher standard. And what was high wages to him meant increased consumption and greater prosperity for the community in which he lived. The land waxed strong and overcame its neighbors because that toiler was better fed and better clothed and, incidentally, reached a higher mental and moral plane.

And so on down the ages the land "to hastening ills a prey" has always been the land where the toiler was oppressed, while high wages have always stood for increasing prosperity and national growth. In short, high wages mean brighter homes, contented wives, and happy children. They mean improved conditions generally—sturdy manhood, civic virtue, substantial and progressive government. And the enlightened workingman is beginning to fully realize this, and will in the future fight to keep his wages up and to make them higher, not merely from the point of view of personal interest alone, but in the altruistic belief that he is thereby benefitting the whole community. As our good friend ADAM BUGG would say—

  Singing, Wages! high wages! high wages!
As he gazed at his wife and his kids at their play
He forgot all his cares as he carrolled away,
And, with dreams of a future increase in his pay,
  Sang of wages, high wages! high wages!

But an Academician cried, "Why do you stand
  Singing, Wages! high wages! high wages!
When you know that disaster will spread o'er the land
If you don't heed the law of supply and demand?"
With a vigorous wave of his hard, horny hand
  He kept singing of wages, high wages!

And the Workingman's voice does not cease to ascend,
  Singing, Wages! high wages! high wages!
For as long as he spends the Good Times will not end,
And the higher his wages the more he will spend,
And his words with the music of destiny blend,
  Singing, Wages! high wages! high wages!

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

W. M. ("Minnie") Wood has submitted for my inspection a copy of the Constitution, By-Laws, and Scale of Prices of Memphis Union, No. 11, of the vintage of 1887, which contains, in addition to the matter usual to such a document, a map showing the location of the grave of each person buried in the printers' burial plat in Elmwood Cemetery at that time. As the list of those buried is not long and will interest many of the old-timers, I incorporate it: Jas. P. Weeeles, A. Wilkerson, child of Wm. G. Creevy, F. R. Van Horn, John B. Grady, W. P. Hollister, J. B. Barker, B. F. Fuller, J. Cruikshank, E. P. ("Bone") Smith, T. S. Barksdale, Bennett Jones, Joseph Trothchilds, B. F. Coulter, John Fassett, H. E. Templeton, L. T. Gallaway, N. T. Skelton, W. A. Graham, J. J. Dew, B. F. Owens, S. Kibbe, Geo. W. Stoddard, R. E. Magee, B. F. Harrison and child, Thomas and W. E. Carson, Geo. Crosby, Thos. W. Coleman, Thos. J. Tally, Michael Lavelle, A. J. Callan, Sam Sent, Chas. M. Williams, Dan Trapp, J. L. Jenkens, John H. Hunter, S. C. Parkinson, N. L. Farris, W. H. Cowles, Wm. Mullins, Henry Sproat, John Hogan, John W. Chambers, and four marked "Unknown," which a headnote says "are most likely the graves of Wm. G. Stephenson, Edw. Sing, Chas. Gray, and Chas. Smith, who died during the epidemic" (of 1868 or '79). Many whose names are contained above will be remembered as "Missouri River pirates" of a century ago, who ranged down as far as Memphis and even New Orleans during winter.

My friend "Texas" Smith was at one time foreman of a paper in Socorro, N. Mex., his "force" consisting of two Mexican boys. While making up the paper one day he pied a line, and as he proceeded to fix it up he remarked to one of the boys, who was watching him:

"Humph! I've been forty years at the printing business and that is the first time I ever pied a line."

The boy looked at him with startled incredulity, spoke to the other boy in Spanish, and then went out.

"Juan," said Smith, "what did that kid say about me?"

"I'm afraid to tell you; you might beat him."

"No, I won't beat him. I know he said something about me and I want to know what it was."

"Well, then, he said, 'Juan, that old man with the specs on says he's been working at printing forty years and that's the first time he ever pied a line.'"

"Was that all he said?"

"No; but I'm afraid you'll beat him if I tell you the rest."

"I won't beat him. What else did he say?"

"Why, he said, 'I think he's a d——d old liar!'"

In a recent letter Billy Wilkinson told me this one:

I had a friend in Galveston (all the gang from there now in Washington knew him) who was chiefly remarkable for two things. One was his fund of information and the other his capacity for whisky. He was a literary vagabond, and the last few years of his life he lived God knows how—I don't. He had been an alderman of the city and everybody knew him and liked him. His father was in the British civil service in India, somewhere in the Himalayas, where my friend was born, or, as he put it, "I was born in the slant of the sun." When young he had the advantage of a private tutor, and later attended for a term the University of Edinburgh, but ran away and came to Texas. He was a rapacious reader and had a marvelous memory. This is the long preface to a short story.

One night a proofreader on the News, fortified with a few inches of conversation water under his jacket, undertook to engage my friend in argument. Now, this was a foolish thing to do, the more so as the p. r. knew his man. The room was filled with people, who enjoyed the wordy warfare going on. It took "Sandy" (Alexander Jeffreys Musgrove) only a short time to do his adversary, He made more history in a few minutes than the Russ and Japs have done in three months. Finally the proofreader could stand the laugh no longer and yelled, "Good God, you must have swallowed the Congressional Library!" Quick came the reply as he arose, yawning, "Naw, I just swallowed an ordinary proofreader."

Mrs. Bessie N. Wild, wife of E. S. Wild, of the Night Bill Force, gave a most successful musicale at her studio, 73 Rhode Island avenue, on Wednesday of last week, the performers being her pupils. There were piano numbers by Mesdames Eugene Stevenson, Alice Kennedy, and Cora A. Hover, and vocal numbers by Miss Gertrude Reamer, Miss May Collins, and Messrs. W. J. Galbraith, William Lawman, and W. E. Burchfield. Mrs. Jessie A. Hover, Mrs. Sadie Bailey, and Mr. Herbert Knight were down for songs, but were all suffering from the grippe and unable to appear. The proficiency exhibited by her pupils was most gratifying to Mrs. Wild, as well as to their relatives and friends, who composed the audience.

J. Ligon King quoted last week what I had said seven weeks before regarding the I. T. U. presidency, and, feeling safe after the action of the Union, true to his tin-soldier instincts, rushed to align himself with what he imagines is the popular side. Indorsements may be procured with comparative ease; elections have to be worked for.

Frank A. Kidd has jumped into the middle of things and indorsed himself for delegate to St. Louis. He is a very capable man in all the ramifications of union business, from playing on the old jawbone to engineering legislation and seeing that it is properly executed afterwards, and is an experienced I. T. U. politician, having been a delegate from Chicago (to Boston, I think). With Kidd to head our delegation we can fill up with almost anything else and still have easily the ablest aggregation on the works. It grieves me to say that I am for everybody, but I've just got to be for Kidd.

There seems to be three candidates for vice-presidents—Harry Sauter, C. W. Herzinger, and Billy Love—two from the G. P. O. and one from the Star. If it were not that I fear many would hesitate to trust so important an office to a down-town man, I would think that Sauter stood a good chance to be a winner.

* * * *

Now, I don't know how busy Harry Knapp may be working up his election, but he has many good friends in the G. P. O. who will be glad to see him represent the down-town end at St. Louis. He has given many tests of his faithfulness to the Union in years past.

* * * *

It may be that I have never mentioned the fact before that I will be glad to see W. L. Gutelius, of the Spess, elected a delegate to St. Louis, but such is my taste. He will add to the brains as well as the good appearance of the delegation.

* * * *

It is a belief that ought to be well founded that Joe Stelle, after the splendid run that he made last year, will be found inside the money this time. Joe deserves to go to St. Louis for the faithful service he has done the Union.

* * * *

I have been criticised for supporting so many different candidates for the same office. I do not contract to elect all of them, you will notice.

The election of a printer, Thomas A. Bynum, as Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias of the District of Columbia is a matter of congratulation to the entire craft. Mr. Bynum is one of the ablest men in our Union and I congratulate him on having achieved this position of honor and dignity and the Order on having selected him as its head.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

A neat definition of happiness in Ainslie's for March: "Four feet on a fender."

Locally, I am in receipt of a neat note—and I suppose others, likewise—from Mr. Joseph G. Stelle announcing his determination to again contest for delegatorial honors, while Mr. Kidd tells me that he, too, has decided to enter—two by no means despicable factors.

About a dozen years ago a bunch of boys blew into Washington from central Illinois. Perhaps, rightly, they were denominated "fresh kids." In that time a dozen or more of them have climbed from the lowest to the highest rung of the ladder in the world departmental. It is with a sense of genuine pleasure I note the promotion of one of these boys, Merritt O. Chance, from private secretary of the Secretary of War to the buyer for the Post-Office Department.

Good material that from which to select trustees of the Union Printers' Home. Messrs. McCaffrey, Crowley, Nichols, and "Sadie Maguire" have been tried and not found wanted. I have known Mr. Nichols for a dozen years, during which time not as many sentences have been exchanged between us; yet not a week passes over my head but I do not run over his tracks, and as a rule they point in the right direction. By their works, I believe the Biblical injunction is, ye shall know them.

Going the rounds of the press is a story of Speaker Cannon placing the following indorsement on the back of a check tendered in payment for a set of books:

This check is in full payment, both legal and moral, for sixty volumes of books called for in the contract with the payee. The books are not worth a damn and are high at that. We are never too old to learn, but the way your gentlemanly agent come it over your "Uncle Joseph" is worth the check.

I encountered the same irrepressible agent, with the difference that I did not bite. He rang the door bell about 11 a. m., an hour at which I am supposed to be asleep. The landlady was loyal. "If I awake him," she told him, "for male or female, chick or child, before 12 o'clock, I lose a roomer." So he waited until noon, and when I came down stairs you should hear him throw the con into me. "Knowing your interest in matters pertaining to literature," he began. This didn't work, and he took another tack. "Your daily intercourse with the legislator and the statesman," was a like failure. "Your recognized talent in the world of letters," went to waste. "Prove an educator," brought a responsive gleam of the eye which the price as promptly eclipsed. "Uncle Joe" has many sympathizers in this bailiwick.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Post Chapel.

By request—Mr. Hawkes has supporters on the Post.

Few, if any, members of this chapel found it necessary to put on new "shoes" last week.

"The way of the transgressor is hard." Likewise the would-be chapel correspondent.

Robert (Tip) Hoy paid this chapel a call Saturday night. Needless to say any more. Everybody knows "Tip."

Recent departures are: Samuel Montgomery, for New York, and B. F. Thorp and Charles Sengstack, to the Government Printing Office.

Good Morning C., the well-known race horse enthusiast, claims to have won a bet. Every one who believes this statement, please hold up your right hand.

"Spadge" Parsons, candidate for delegate, missed roll call at the meeting of the "Mutual Admiration Club," held Sunday night in the Post composing room, and the chair recorded a fine of——

It's good-bye to the Baltimore News men. They left us early last week to commence operations in their temporary home in the Monumental City. Hope we will meet again, but under less strenuous circumstances.

The stereotyping department of the Post has recently been placed under the supervision of Foreman C. C. Thompson, who can now be termed as the practical mechanical superintendent of the whole establishment.

Sergt. Matthew Maloney dropped in on us Saturday night, but did not linger long enough to be interviewed. I worked with Matt. on the old Evening News and know that when he is around there is something doing or brewing.

To the confirmed bachelors and those of the gentler sex who may want to go to St. Louis, while I am not authorized to make this statement, I believe I can say that Miss McDonald will not take advantage of what would be her leap-year prerogative.

I have every reason to believe that if the fellow who writes under a nom de plume and attempts to be humorous with the name of J. Monroe Kreiter will tackle the latter gentleman in union meeting he will get all he is looking for, and certainly all he deserves.

Bill Mattocks, a native of Albuquerque, a member of the late lamented Rough Riders, later an operator on the Post, and now a part of the Night Bill Force, G. P. O., came in to see the "gang" Sunday night and incidentally interviewed his old friend D. L. Sandoe.

W. M. Byerley, a sub. on the machines, is absent, suffering from a large carbuncle on the back of his neck, together with several other lesser disabilities, but expects to be around again in a few days. Gnly those who have been similarly affiicted can fully sympathize with him.

E. E. Holbruner, formerly of this office, but more recently employed in the big printery, who had been in the hospital for a period of six weeks and had sufficiently convalesced to be about, was again stricken and is now in Sibley Hospital, and his friends fear that it may become necessary to amputate one of his limbs.

J. Ligon King, whose pencilings in THE TRADES UNIONIST are as intelligent as his record for bravery was brilliant in the Spanish-American war, was a visitor in the Post composing room on Saturday evening. He was naturally talkative and had much to say on union politics, but did not commit himself in any way. Wise, Ligon, wise.

William Andrew Bailey, machinist for the Globe Printing Company, was called in Saturday night to relieve Machinist Dodson, who became disabled through overwork occasioned by the printing of the Baltimore papers. Bailey is almost a giant in stature, as well as muscle, and easily changes the magazines without the aid of the operator.

It is passing strange that we "literary" men so often misunderstand one another. Mr. Bloomer accuses me of transferring my allegiance to Maj. Herbert in his candidacy for president, when I meant to imply that I had simply suspended judgment. It is a matter of little importance, of course, just whom I am for, as I assume to carry but one vote in my vest pocket. All things being equal, I, like my near neighbor, will give candidates from my own chapel the preference. I want to get better acquainted with Mr. Berg and as many other gentlemen as may enter the race, and will consider all on their merits and vote accordingly. I believe I now fully understand Mr. Belcher, and, if my understanding is on straight, I have no quarrel with him.

Mr. Dunn informed me a day or two ago that he had received a long and interesting letter from E. E. Gessler, chief proofreader in the Government Printing Office at Manila, and formerly a reader in the big shop here. Mr. Gessler is entirely satisfied with his position, and says that after an extended holiday this summer in the States, during which he contemplates a trip to this city to renew old acquaintances and "swap lies," he intends going back to the Philippines for at least two years more; and thus does "Pard" Bloomer lose another bet. The members of the American printing colony are all in the enjoyment of good health and good times. He makes complimentary mention of Messrs. Sam Musick and Jim Alford, both well known hereabouts. In the mail which brought the letter was a copy of the Christmas edition of the Manila Sunday Sun, a very pretentious publication for that city—or any other, for that matter. It is well printed and profusely illustrated, many of the pictures being the products of Mr. Gessler's skillful handiwork with the camera, he being an expert with that implement of lights and shadows. According to what Mr. Dunn tells me, the letter is a very cheerful one all through, and gives somewhat of a black eye to the hard-luck stories which have been circulated here concerning the trials and tribulations of a white man in that tropical climate.

Mr. Gessler's friends, to whom he sends pious regards, will be pleased to hear that there is practically no truth in the stories at one time circulated here to the effect that he had had a long hard siege with disease in a Manila hospital.

First Division.

Sam Esmay has been off sick for two weeks with erysipelas.

"General" Lawton, slug 9, has been off sick some time with pleurisy.

Geo. W. Sylvester was transferred last Monday evening to the Library Branch.

Another candidate for delegate has bobbed up in this Division in the person of E. Heidingsfeld.

New appointees in this room are: M. B. Carney, W. C. Williams, S. P. McNeal, and George Gray.

Chas. F. Purdy received news Monday morning that his father was dead, and has gone to his home in Brooklyn.

Another vice-presidential candidate has entered the field in the person of "Jimmy" Armstrong, of the Proof Room.

Again has Major Clifford made our hearts glad by paying off on Saturday, and we all hope that it will become a habit with him.

Harry Knapp candidate for delegate from the Times chapel passed through this division last Tuesday evening, making the acquaintance of the boys. Harry made a very favorable impression.

Notwithstanding rumors to the contrary, William R. Love has positively announced his candidacy for vice-president, and I will say now that I think he will be elected and that he will make a splendid officer.

George Sylvester was transferred to this Division from the night force Friday morning. This night work must be some like what Sherman called war, judging from the talk some of the Cascarets are putting up.

N. J. Lillard's "bum lamps" are again in good working order and he is back at work. "Lil" was visited last week by one of his old employers, Horace Hood, of Montgomery, Ala., who spent a few days with him.

President-of-the-Ball-League-Treasurer-of-the-Sym, and candidate-for vice-president-of-the-Union, "Billy" Love is again with us, having been transferred from the Spess Saturday morning. He says he was 500 ahead of his average over there and hated awfully to leave.

There is a man in this office who is undoubtedly entitled to the medal as the champion mean man. He used to eat lunch at a nearby quick lunch restaurant, where the customers take from the counter what they want, go to a table and eat it, then pay the cashier whatever the bill may be, the proprietor trusting to the honesty of his customers. He became suspicious of a certain individual an kept an eye on him. The fellow came in one day at lunch hour, took provisions enough to make his bill come to 25 cents, but when he finished eating he handed the cashier only 10. It didn't take any persuasion, however, to induce him "to cough up" the other 15 cents, after he had listened a few moments to the cashier's rather pointed remarks. The restaurant aforesaid has lost a customer (by request) but what is their gain is some one's else loss or something like that.

In last week's issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST, Mr. Belcher correspondent of the Third Division, makes the plaintive wail that the only reason President Lynch has opposition is that "young Mr. Hawkes wants it." Yes, Brother Belcher, young Mr. Hawkes wants it, and judging from appearances, a large number of persons want him to have it—not because Hawkes wants it, but because they think he is the better man. Of course Hawkes wants it. Prescott wanted it when he defeated Ed. Plank; the same can be said of Donnelly when he was victorious over Prescott; and Lynch wanted it very badly when Sam Donnelly was defeated. As to who will be the most acceptable President of the I. T. U. it is up the membership at large to decide. Pard Bloomer's statement that "Charlie Hawkes is a bright young fellow, but Lynch is too big a man to be thrown aside," must not be taken to seriously. Pard has dreams.

The G. P. O. Baseball League met again last Sunday at the Temple, and a large number of enthusiasts attended. It was plain to be seen however, that they were not all of the same mind in regard to the "labor question." One of the representatives of the binders stated that he had been instructed to withdraw from the league unless laborers were barred, or at the least, they would allow but one laborer to a team. The proposition to eliminate the laborers did not meet with the approval of the printers, and an animated discussion ensued, terminating finally in a motion to appoint a committee of managers to meet and finally decide the question. A committee of three were also appointed to draft rules and by-laws, and the officers instructed to negotiate for grounds. It is to be hoped that the managers will come to an amicable arrangement at their meeting and that the white winged dove of peace will henceforth hover over our league.

Second Division.

There's a man in the Second
Who can safely be reckoned
As at the head of the heap in the delegate fray;
His name's Titus F. Ellis,
And there's no need to tell us
That he's A No. 1, because he's built in that way.

Other chapels send greeting
As to how he'll be meeting
With cordial support in and out of Uncle's big shop;
And whoe'er else may be in it,
No one can doubt for a minute
That our big-hearted friend into the right place will drop.

So with nothing to fright us,
As to the fate of our Titus,
Let us vote straight for a good delegation all through;
And if a lady's included,
It can be safely concluded,
That our local Union will to its conditions prove true.—MCPIKE.

Baseball! See Beddow.

N. D. Talbott is the latest from Baltimore.

T. L. Wade was laid up with rheumatism the fore part of the week.

Did you see Williams do his stunt? As a juggler he is something awful.

E. J. Dwight and W. W. Ingram have been transferred to the State Branch.

On the sick list: Melvin J. Page, F. H. Hopkins, G. T. Bruffy, and Clayton Stanford.

J. A. Henesy is still confined to his home by sickness, the nature of which could not be learned.

This chapel paid the highest card ever, for February—three pay days and a neat little roll from overtime.

We are getting up our average on sickness these days. From five to ten men are off nearly every week from this cause.

Jesse Morgan received the sad news of his fathers death, and left for Terry, Miss., on Friday. The whole division extends sympathy.

Having got the Official Gazette out on time Arthur S. Jones returned to this room, and is helping us keep the cases in shape for the "blankety-blank-blank" night men.

A tip to the baseball manager from this room: Get Wm. G. O'Connell's name to a contract. He's an A-player, and with some steady practice will make an excellent catcher.

Every printer ought to respond cheerfully to the appeal made by the Rallying Committee of the Woman's Auxiliary to aid them in increasing their membership. The Auxiliary is doing good work in furthering the interests of unionism and pushing the label. The union should have a greater interest in this promising organization. A word in its favor may mean another member. Say the word, printers, and help the ladies along.

There is a movement on foot looking to the organizing of a social club among the members of this division. I don't know all the details, but the object is, I believe, to hold monthly meetings where the men and lady members of their families may listen to bright talks, music and songs, and become better acquainted. Several of the State organizations hold meetings of this character that are thoroughly enjoyable and where we are brought so closely together in our daily work it seems to me an occasional gathering would be doubly pleasant.

ALLIED BUILDING TRADES.

Meeting of March 1, 1904.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades of the Central Labor Union was called to order at the usual hour by Vice-Chairman Winslow.

The roll call disclosed the presence of 44 delegates from 23 unions.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read, and, after correction, were approved.

Credendials were read from Upholsterers' Union, No. 58, and referred to an investigating committee consisting of Delegates Nothnagel, Thompson, and Allison.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Elevator Constructors' Union, No. 12, relative to a grievance with Machinists' Union, and containing a copy of trade jurisdiction granted them by the American Federation of Labor. Referred to Executive Committee.

From Slate and Tile Roofers' Union, No. 12, stating that their union and their employers had settled their differences and that slaters wages would be $4.00 per day from March 1, 1904, for one year.

From Painters' Union, No. 368, stating that their agreement with their employers had expired and that efforts were being made to enter into another agreement with the Master Painters' Association that would embrace the arbitration plan approved by the Council.

Another communication containing reply of M. P. Carrick, general secretary Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, to letter sent by 368, relative to Plumbers and Marble Workers putting their men back to work on struck jobs, and asking that a committee be appointed to reply to same. The request was granted and the chair appointed Delegates Thompson, of the Tile Layers, Regan, of the Sheet Metal Workers, and Wells, of the Paperhangers, as the committee.

From E. C. Graham, secretary of Employers' Association, relative to Slate and Tile Roofers' Union. Placed on file.

Bill from THE TRADES UNIONIST for $22.25 was received and referred to the Central Labor Union for payment.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Delegate Sheetz, from Committee on By-Laws, reported progress and asked that he be furnished by the Secretary with copies of the amendments as approved. The request was granted.

From Central Labor Union, with communication from S. J. Prescott & Co. which had been referred to that body. The secretary was directed to forward the desired information and to notify the different Carpenters' unions of the request of S. J. Prescott & Co. and ask them to have the matter adjusted.

The Business Agent made a report, which was accepted.

ROLL CALL.

Engineers asked for information about the filtration plant job, and requested that the Secretary take the matter up with the District Commissioners and see if the law could not be enforced.

Hod Carriers stated that they were still unsuccessful in getting J.H. Nolan's men to join their Union, and asked that the Secretary inform the Employers' Association that the hod carriers had filed no grievance with the Council of Allied Building Trades against Mr. Nolan since the agreement with the Master Builders' Association had been formed. Agreed to.

Painters stated that they were endeavoring to enter into another agreement with the Master Painters' Association, and that they would hold out for the arbitration plan approved by the Employers' Association and this Council.

Paperhangers stated that their Union had renewed their agreement with the Master Paperhangers' Association, and that the agreement contained a clause that union paperhangers would not work in a shop that employed non-union painters. The agreement was approved.

NEW BUSINESS.

The Secretary was empowered to procure copy press, etc.

There being nothing further brought to the attention of the Council, the meeting adjourned.

Night Bill Force.

Lost—An "easy" night on the Bill Force.

Geo. W. Sylvester (annex N. B.) was transferred to the First Division day.

Joe Zimmerman returned to work Wednesday of last week after an absence of several months.

John Onyun would make an admirable father of the jolly chapel which meets at the Little Union Cafe every night at 11 o'clock.

When the new "marching out" orders went into effect Monday night, Alley One would have been the last to file in—had it not been for the back stairway.

Mr. J. H. Ross, is still confined to his home with rheumatism. His familiar "let out a link," is missed. We wish him speedy recovery and connection with the pay roll.

The venerable little watchman whom we term the "fire marshal" can more appropiately say, when Congress adjourns, "who iss de fire?" than he did some time ago.

A member of this force statistically inclined, made a tour of the room the other night and discovered that someone in every alley and the cage work glasses except in the third alley.

John E. Hogan can be recommended as a first-class medium. Almost any night he can receive written communications (after a few mysterious raps) from departed printers, addressed to Mr. Roberts.

Quite descriptive are some of the names of persons on this force: Wild, Peacock, Wolfe, Buzhardt, Greene, White, Donn, Brown, Carpenter, Rose, Gardner, Pollock (a fish), Onyun, Wise, Sill, Howe, Lytle, Gaulden, Coates, Campbell, etc.

The mother of Mrs. E. H. Andrew, died February 29, after a lingering illness, aged 73. She leaves a host of friends, as her many charitiable acts, as well as her kindly disposition, had endeared her to every one. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew have the sympathy of their friends in their sad bereavement.

Oliver Bennett, of the reviser's proof press, always has his eye open for good things for the printers. While the papers are full of war news from the East he is ready to supply an atlas of 16 pages, containing maps of Port Arthur, Europe, Asia, the world, China, and Russia, besides a summary of the different navies, area, population, wealth, etc., of the two nations.

In the Church Herald, of February 18, Dr. E. B. Bagby, of the Ninth Street Christian Church, proudly calls that body "the Printers' Church." Over half the membership is composed of printers and their families. Unionists feel at home at this church for all of their printing bears the label, union men are on the board, teach Sunday School classes, and sing in the choir. "The way of Salvation made as plain as day," is the text for next Sunday night. All are welcome.

THE PASSING (SIDE) SHOW.

It used to be the "side-show,"
With animals galore,
With clowns, elephants and freaks,
And monkeys, don't you know;
Who used to do the finest stunts,
Some are performing yet,
But there are others "tumbling" to "Officialized Gazette."

—ANONYMOUS.

Frank Wilkins denied being the author of the above beautiful "pome," which was placed on my case during my absence therefrom. He was ready, as usual, with a brilliant rejoinder and remarked that "while this was not the 'side-show,' it was the 'Gaze-at' division. [Boisterous laughter]. So we lost nothing in popularity by the change." The poetry that Frank writes is about the ladies. I captured a specimen of his handiwork later in the day. On close inspection and analysis the spark of poetic fire may be detected.

J. F. Smart has returned to work after a fifteen days' leave spent in the South. He "took in" the Mardi Gras and had very little to say about it, hence he must have had a jim-dandy time.

I asked Andrew Turnbull for an interesting item of news and he directed my attention to Shott's hair. It looked all right to me and I said so. "Why," said Andy, "he has had his hair cut; because some one said he looked like Herr Most."

The subscriptions to THE TRADES UNIONIST are coming in and there should be more of them. Bear in mind that when you aid an enterprise of this kind you are strengthening a vehicle which may be of considerable service to you when you wish to reach the public and cannot do so by the ordinary channels.

A shrill and piercing scream rent the circumambient atmosphere and roused from its somnolent lethargy the attention of the Gazette force one afternoon last week. Men and women paused in the industrious pursuit of work to ask "What is it?" One of the ladies in shaking her case dislodged a small piece of sponge from its moorings in her "cap" case and it jumped its way leisurely across the "lower" case. She mistook it for a mouse.

Bookbinders Union Nominations.

The interesting controversary of the Bindery's choice for delegates to the National Convention, at St. Paul on June 14, next is becoming paramount to all other subjects of interest. The friends of the various candidates are extolling their virtues and placing them before the voters as "Just the right man for the place." At the regular meeting of the Union held Tuesday, March 1, eleven candidates were nominated in the following order: J. L. Feeney, by John T. McCausland; R. F. Frailey, by Ed. J. Roche; Theo. Hardy, by C. H. Potter; Thos. Esperon, by Wm. Perry; Chas Weston, by Sam Wakefield; Martin Dries, by Chas. Knockey; C. W. Nelson, by Maj. John Fredericks; Leonard Kukart, by J. A. B. Espey; Wm. B. Hyde, by John Tuohy; Geo. Kirch, by Chas. Welsh, and J. J. Fogerty, by Robert McCullough. So the contest is now on, and the biennual battle for delegates has commenced.

The seriousness and importance of this election is not always fully realized, and too often is the matter disposed of as a "merry jest" to some "good fellow," simply because he is a good fellow, and that alone, while the more serious and vital considerations are permitted to pass unnoticed, and too often die for want of better judgment.

In the selection of national delegates the position is, when thoroughly and thoughtfully considered, a serious one. It is one that should command the very best thoughts of the aspirant before presenting himself before his friends in quest of their suffrage. The idea of a jaunting trip, receptions, and banquets should be absolutely and entirely eliminated, while the interests and requirements of the organization should be thoroughly studied, and so shaped and considered that the results achieved should be a great credit to the organization he represents as well as to himself.

Slaters Secure Higher Wages.

Slate and Tile Roofers Union No. 12, has secured an advance to $4 per day through the Board of Arbitration of the Building Trades without any loss of time. They formerly received $3.50 per day. This speaks will for the condition of the building trades in this city where they have joined with the Board of Arbitration.

The Cummings Memorial.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

I read with interest the article signed by the "Committee of No. 101," relating to the above subject. I can not say, however, that I read with satisfaction the committee's statement that only $250 has been contributed by the membership of No. 101 towards the memorial that we fondly hope will stand forever as the grateful tribute of Union printers to the memory of one who was faithful unto death to the principles that underlie our righteous cause. The sum named is out of all proportion to what a decent regard for the memory of Amos J. Cummings demands of this Union. No such champion of its rights stood ever on the floor of Congress. At all times, under all circumstances, he proclaimed his devotion to the cause of organized labor. Risen high in the councils of the nation, he never hesitated to have it known that he was above all things a union printer. And among all the many unions that compose the aggregation known as the International Typographical Union of North America, there is not one that benefitted so greatly and so often by the friendship of this champion so powerful, by the loyalty of this friend so true, as has Typographical Union, No. 101. And a few petty hundreds of dollars is to be recorded as the measure of Columbia's regard for the memory of Amos J. Cummings? I can not believe it. I do not believe it. I do not know anywhere an association of men and women who, individually and collectively, have a better reputation for liberality that comes from the generous heart. Without in the least desiring to reflect upon any one, either committee or chairman, I venture the query, Is there not lacking that systematic effort that in every enterprise of this sort brings forth the best result? I do not believe that in the entire membership of over 2,000 there are a dozen individuals who, holding situations at living wages, will decline to pay a dollar apiece if contributions can be made in small periodical payments. May I not call upon President Johnson to call together, say next Sunday afternoon, the chairmen of all the chapels, give them a sample of his eloquence that thrills and convinces, and send them forth to do what duty, what simple decency, demands? Send them forth, too, with the request to meet a week later and report results? Systematic effort of this kind will raise, in my opinion, near two than one thousand dollars. And will not that raise Columbia Union still higher in the esteem of all whose good opinion is worth having? AUGUST DONATH.

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. VIII. No. 39. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, MARCH 10, 1904. Price, 3 Cents.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

Brief Resolution Condemning "Open Shop" Policy Adopted.

KNOX HAT IS DECLARED UNFAIR

Hospital Attendants Interested In Congressional Legislation—The Allied Label League Changes Its Title—Reception to be Tendered President Gompers.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8.15 p. m. on Monday evening by Secretary Winslow, in the absence of the president and vice-president.

Delegate McCarthy was chosen to preside at the meeting.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

From Journeymen Horseshoers' Union, No. 17, certifying J. Horigan, D. Adair, H. Peters, T. Parker, and G. Nail.

From Local 372, Bottle Beer Drivers, certifying E. F. Shue.

Credentials received and delegates seated.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Allied Label League, notifying the Central Labor Union that the title of that organization had been changed to read Allied Label League and Miscellaneous Trades Council. Agreed to.

From John A. Moffitt, president United Hatters of America, calling attention to the Knox hat being an unfair product, Mr. Knox having declared that he "would never, so long as he lived, run a union factory or employ union help at any price or at any cost." The communication further asks that the agent in this city be placed on the "We Don't Patronize List," and a committee call on the agent. Referred to Allied Label League.

From Carpenters District Council, asking that the Central Labor Union take S. J. Prescott & Co. from unfair list. Secretary was directed to inform Carpenters District Council that the firm mentioned is not on the Central Labor Union unfair list, but on unfair list of Council of Allied Building Trades, and refer the matter to that organization.

From E. J. Ratigan, secretary of Council of Allied Building Trades, replying to request of S. J. Prescott & Co. to this body to state why that firm has been declared unfair, and stating that that action was taken in Allied Building Trades Council on September 9, 1902, at request of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers Union, No. 5, because of employment of nonunion men.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Hospital Attendants called attention to certain bills pending before Congress and presented a statement of conditions prevailing in Hospital for the Insane, with the request that a copy be forwarded to each member of Congress. Referred to Legislative Committee.

Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen stated that an unfair list of stores that handled Loeffler goods had been published, but was not correct, and a corrected list would be given out in a few days.

Clerks called attention to the fact that the Hudson Variety Store had signed their national agreement.

NEW BUSINESS.

Under this order of business it was agreed that the following resolution, adopted at the recent open meeting of the Central Labor Union, be printed and a copy forwarded to every central body under the jurisdiction of the American Federation of Labor:

"Resolved, By organized labor in mass-meeting assembled, under the auspices of the Central Labor Union of Washington, D. C., that we condemn the 'open shop' policy."

On motion, a committee of five was appointed to tender a reception to President Gompers on his return from Porto Rico.

Adjourned.

By marks unnecessarily large the proofreader has it in his power to make an average proof look as if it had been knocked down at thirty cents.

The group of newsboys who sing each noon hour for the edification of gentlemen composing a hollow square near the North Capitol street entrance to the old building, are well paid by the shower of pennies. The music isn't so much, but the scramble for pennies is a real circus.

A judge of the Massachusetts superior court recently granted an injunction restraining printers from contributing to a relief fund in aid of those out of work and on strike. This is a bit discouraging, and even more so than the order issued by a Federal judge in Pennsylvania restraining a minister from praying for striking miners.

When at last it comes to settling the question as to what shall be done with the old folks in the various departments of the public service, if Uncle Sam should decide to retire all after the manner of Supreme Court Justices, Army officers, etc., there would yet be some to protest against the scheme; but the opposition would be overcome as fast as the objectors arrived at the retiring age.

It gives me pleasure to add to the testimony of others who have met with prompt and satisfactory returns by the use of THE TRADES UNIONIST as an advertising medium. Only recently I announced in these columns that I was ready to sample a box of "After-Dinner" cigars. The box came almost immediately, and the cigars are so very satisfactory that the only thing regretted is that I did not advertise before.

This really happened: A company of young people were engaged in conversation when one of the number alluded to the health of a young lady friend who was "going with tuberculosis," meaning that she was slowly wasting away from that disease. The hostess, an elderly lady, whose hearing is somewhat impaired, showed an eager interest by inquiring if the young man was nice and of good parentage. She had taken tuberculosis as the name of the gentleman the young lady was "going with."

In setting forth his claim as a candidate for President of the International Mr. Hawkes gives himself much credit, while Mr. Lynch, with becoming modesty, employs the pronoun we, which leaves us with the impression that Mr. Lynch does not claim to be the whole thing; but we all know that the satisfactory showing of the past year comes largely through the directing force and untiring energy of Mr. Lynch, and this may be said without disparagement to others, who are entitled to their proper share of credit.

The contribution of Mr. J. C. Patterson, of San Francisco, Cal., in the March number of the Typographical Journal will find indorsement among those who hold to the quantitive theory of money. Experience has proven that the greater the volume of money in circulation the less harmful it becomes in the hands of the money-changers, whose avocation is thus limited because of the plentifulness of the commodity they hope to control. The money question must needs be a question of serious moment to the toilers so long as the shylocks seek to control by curtailing the volume and whose interest it is to make the dollar master and man the slave. Until money is made the helpful servant it should be and the real producers come to their own the contention will go on, increasing in force until finally and absolutely man or mammon is accorded the mastery. This is the basic question met at every contention between capital and labor, and if arbitration fails—what then?

HIS AVERAGE.

He plugged on "Spess" for a year and a half,
And the average never would come,
Until at last the poor man's mind
Went entirely on the bum.

They lugged him across the Eastern Branch
To the Bughouse on the hill,
And they locked him up in a padded cell
Where all was calm and still.

And then his dull eyes brightened
As he counted the bars in the grate,
"I've got it at last!" he shouted,
"There's even forty-eight!"

What has become of the Star correspondent?

Robert T. Bray has been wrestling with grip for the past week.

Imposer C. J. Duffy is enjoying a sixteen days' leave of absence.

Owing to a rush of work in the patent line, the force worked Monday and Tuesday nights until 9 o'clock.

The many friends of Miss Brook A. Yowell will be pleased to learn that she is recovering from her prolonged illness of grip.

Miss Allie Trefts and Col. William R. Burgess have been appointed copy-holders. Both were deserved and popular advancements.

The universal opinion is expressed that in the promotions of Colonel Burgess and Miss Trefts to copy-holders wise selections were made.

I understand that Messrs. Johnson, Lawson, and Kidd will make the race as candidates for delegates. Good fellows, these; and very competent and popular.

In carelessly stepping off of a street car recently, Dr. Hauer accidently turned an ankle, and consequently was laid up. It evidently makes Dock's feet sore to ride.

Billy Love has left us, but his many friends in the Spess chapel will keep up the good work, and see that his candidacy is kept alive—even despite the non-indorsement of the "slate" man.

Louis P. Naylor has been appointed a regular proofreader. He took his seat in the proofroom Tuesday. We all congratulated "Louie," for he is not only very competent, but exceedingly popular.

Latest news from the "Front": Messrs. B. W. Butler, Orville Calkins, and Joseph Schmaling have been promoted from the "case" to full-fledged proofreaders. These are three examples of merit being rewarded.

I am told that Messrs. Radley, of the First, and Brown, of the Clerks, will contest, with others, for the honor of being elected treasurer. Both are elegant gentlemen, and unusually fitted to fill the office with the greatest credit.

Mr. Jesse W. Morgan departed for his home in Mississippi one day last week on a very sad mission, having most unexpectedly receiving the sad news of his father's death. The chapel extends its sincerest sympathy to Jesse and to his bereaved family.

The new press room is now completed, and fine brand new Hoe presses have been fully installed. Their gentle bur-r-r is music to the ears of the complement of jolly pressmen and feeders and other workers in the press-room, which, by the way, is located in the basement on the H street side.

Germany vs. France—yes, 'tis true. Anyone who has seen Austin DuGanne since he suddenly quit work several days ago will say so. He was viciously attacked by German measles, but is doing nicely, considering the "long route," as Fred Davis aptly remarked, the measles will be obliged to traverse before they finish their ravages on our genial French galley man.

I have heard several printers complain that the proofreaders seem to delight in making errors as conspicuously as possible on the proofsheets. In answer to this I can say that I do not believe that there is any intention to "show up" the compositor. The fault lies in the fact that our Proofroom evidently can not afford a decent pencil sharpener. We need a dictionary, too, and a few packages of l. c. h's.

"Cycle" cut out just enough of my announcement of Mr. Melick's candidacy for delegate as to make it appear that I referred to "Mr. Gutelius and himself"—one and the same person. Well, in explanation, "Cycle," who is really a good friend of mine, and a fine fellow, says he "only intended to have a little fun." As "Cycle" can take a joke as well, I really do not feel that any unkind motive was intended either to myself or Mr. Melick.

I recently had something to say about the dangerous activity of the ice man in this room. Since that time the colored man in question has been on his real good behavior, and says he did not intend to endanger the safety of anyone. I say this much in his behalf, because when a man tries to do right he ought to be encouraged. Especially as I publicly censured him I take pleasure in complimenting his present sensible methods.

Major Dodge believes in the theory that "variety is the spice of life," and accordingly one day last week threw his sam handwich out of a window and chased himself over to the colored lunch woman and called for a bowl of oyster soup. Of course the Major wanted some oyster crackers, so he dived a hand into the first paper bag standing around loose, and getting a handful of its contents, dropped the same into his soup. He was greatly astonished and amused to find he had gotten hold of peanuts instead of crackers, and said he "guessed he was getting bug-house at last."

"What is a 'tin soldier?'" Why, in the flesh a "tin soldier" is an appellation for a national guardsman who prefers society and a pretty uniform to the hard work of a military camp and plain blue clothes. But no one "tin soldier" ever poses as the "whole thing," or instructs his fellow-members who are and who are not the proper men to be elected to command (he really is sensitive to ridicule). The "tin soldier" can generally be entrusted with a duty, and render a faithful service; and he can take his "tea" without stumbling into the slop-barrel.

Proofreader W. F. Walsmith recently became a happy grandfather. However a friend of his has reasons to believe that "Wal" expected a different sex than that which actually appeared. At any rate the following has been handed me for publication, and it very plainly tells the story of Grandpa's disappointment at the turn of nature's affairs:

FOXY GRANDPA.

I hoped to be a grandpa
And have a lot of fun
By playing jokes and pranks upon
My little cute grandson;
But now, alas, my joy is nil,
My hopes have gone to slaughter,
Of vanity I have my fill,
My grandson is a daughter.

Last Sunday Vice-President Dan Vaughan presented an exhaustive report on the practicability of reducing the dues from 1 per cent to three-fourths of 1 per cent. His voice was clear, his manner pleasing, treatment of others very courteous, and, last and equally appreciated, the report itself, while voluminous, was very comprehensively gotten together. Mr. Vaughan created a splendid impression as a debater of rare intelligence and wit, for in every attempt made to rattle and ridicule him, his ready reply caused a hearty laugh at the other fellow's expense. His remarks were frequently punctured with applause. As the report of the Special Committee on the Feasibility of Reducing the Dues had been printed at the union's expense and distributed among the membership, it would have been a magnanimous thing, and the proper thing to have done, to have ordered Mr. Vaughan's report printed and distributed also. But it wasn't considered for a moment—and some people are saying unkind things.

J. Ligon King quoted last week what I had said seven weeks before regarding the I. T. U. presidency, and, feeling safe after the action of the Union, true to his tin-soldier instincts, rushed to align himself with what he imagines is the popular side. Indorsements may be procured with comparative ease; elections have to be worked for.—Pard Bloomer.

I really do not understand just what Pard means by the allusion "true to his tin-soldier instincts," as I am in no way connected with the military or naval branch of the service. I sincerely hope he does not hold the printer-soldier who volunteered in the American army in 1898 in contempt. I enlisted, along with several others from the G. P. O., to serve two years under the Stars and Stripes, and as a son of a Confederate soldier, I did so with a full determination to do my full duty wherever my sphere of usefulness may lie—on the drill field or battlefield. My life was Uncle Sam's for two years—and yes, for all time, if necessary, to keep Old Glory waving wherever the National Government chose that it should. But that life was only hazarded for the short period of six months, the end of which time my regiment, which had seen the Spanish flag lowered and furled forever over the palace at Santiago and the national colors of the United States run up in its place, was mustered out of the service. My discharge paper says I performed my duties well and faithfully, and when the "farewells" were being said, my company mates, each and every one, shook my hand and said as quartermaster-sergeant I had treated them squarely and that I would always be remembered as a friend. Since the organization of the Spanish war veterans (an organization now of over 100,000—700 in the District) I have been repeatedly honored by the local commands, and four consecutive times elected a delegate to the National convention, and I will attend the next convention as a member of the national council of administration. I am proud of my army record and of the confidence entrusted in me by my comrades. I am proud that it is a fact that nine-tenths of all printerdom are patriotically inclined, and while not all of them found it practicable or possible to offer their services in the Spanish war, they at least have been honest, broadminded, and generous enough to give credit to those of the craft who represented it.

You should try and be good-natured in your correspondence, Pard. You have been "giving" it to us a number of years, and you are not now so old that you can not learn to "take."

Columbia Union Meeting.

An adjourned meeting of Columbia Typographical Union No. 101, was held last Sunday to complete the business of the February meeting.

The Union proceeded to take under the consideration that part of the report of the Laws Committee left over from the previous meeting.

The amendment offered by Mr. Vaughan, to reduce the dues from 1 per cent to three-fourths of 1 per cent was debated at length, Mr. Vaughan moving to submit the proposition to a chapel vote.

Mr. Berg moved to lay the whole matter on the table, which motion was lost.

Discussion on the proposition to a wide range, telling points for and against the proposition being made during the debate, which was closely followed.

Mr. Vaughan read a number of communications from the secretaries of sister unions, giving information relative to the question in other jurisdictions, and made a good presentation of the case.

After considerable debate, a motion to postpone action until the July meeting prevailed.

The Laws Committee, having reported adversely on the admendments submitted by Mr. Love, relative to employing a member of their Uuion on clerical work in the rooms of the secretary, and defining the status of the office of assistant secretary, Mr. Love moved to nonconcur in the report of the committee.

Mr. Pierce moved to amend by substituting the amendments submitted by him at the July meeting relative to the creation of the office of assistant secretary, and making certain necessary amendments to the by-laws.

A motion to table the whole matter being defeated, Mr. Roberts moved that the amendments of Mr. Love and the Pierce substitute amendments be printed in the call for next meeting. Agreed to.

Mr. Pierce moved that the matter be made a special order for 3 o'clock at the next meeting. Agreed to.

The secretary read a communication from the foreman of the Times, appealing from a decision of the chairman of that chapel on an interpretation of what is known as the six-day law, claiming that the law should not apply in the recent emergency when the Times force aided the Baltimore American. On motion, the decision of the chairman of the Times chapel was sustained.

Mr. C. S. Gunn moved that the secretary be directed to pay his clerk $15 per week during the remainder of his service with the Union. Carried.

Mr. F. C. Roberts moved that the Board of Trustees be authorized to pay the janitor $15 and the assistant janitor $10 for faithful service during the winter aside from regular salary. Agreed to.

Adjourned.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

To be a printer, I claim, a man should be acquainted with the geography of the United States; be able not only to call the capitals of the several States and their respective locations but the names of the counties in which the more pretentious cities are located. But to-day the date lines of the yellow journals are—due to machine composition and the sacrifice of accuracy for speed—a string of pi. There is a town over in the Middle West—it is Marie Litta's town; it is Adlai Stevenson's town; it is Jack Leech's town. When the New York Journal chronicles doings in McLean County it appears as Bloomingdale. Such is fame!

One of the most pointed articles I have read of late—and I read every book, paper, or magazine I can beg, borrow, or steal—is a character sketch of C. C. Thompson, appearing in the Baltimore News. I append a paragraph:

Mr. Thompson's wiry build and the absence of an ounce of superfluous flesh—all being muscle and bone—suggest endurance powers and one would be willing to wager on first sight that he could stand a long stretch of hard work. But the visiting Baltimore newspaper men were hardly prepared for the wonderful "lasting" qualities which he displayed during the two weeks the News was printed in the Post building. The Baltimoreans had a little of endurance themselves, and did not balk at eighteen hours of going and six of sleep. But when they left the Post building they always left "Charley" Thompson there working; and when they reached the building again, many hours before daylight, Mr. Thompson's cheery "good morning" always greeted them. Precisely when he slept no one could figure out, as he was always on the spot after the News' force left and before it went on.

Allied Label League.

The Allied Label League was called to order on Friday evening last by President McCarthy at the usual hour.

Officers all present with the exception of the financial secretary.

A bill for printing was referred to the Central Labor Union for liquidation.

The committee on Hecht mattea reported progress.

The recording secretary was instructed to notify all unions that a regular per capita tax will hereafter be levied.

The case of the Loeffler Sausage and Provision Co.'s unfair attitude to organized labor was thoroughly discussed and Delegate C. A. Pfau, of Clerk's Union, appointed to assist the Butcher Workmen in their efforts.

Several resolutions were introduced and acted upon, after which the League adjourned.

A loan of $1,000 at 5 per cent wanted for improvements on District of Columbia real estate. Address A. B., this office.

THE March number of the Typographical Journal is full of instructive and entertaining matter. "Improvements in Printing," by William S. Bridge, and "An Up-to-Date Scoop," by Joseph E. Cohen, of Philadelphia, are very readable, while the Washington contributors are much in evidence with several columns of "good stuff." J. MONROE KREITER adds to his usual bright Washington budget much timely Baltimore fire comment. As for ARTHUR F. BLOOMER he excels the best he has ever done, or comes pretty near it, in a humorous breezily written sketch entitled "A Million Dollars for a Stomach." If there is anyone who tosses the Journal aside with indifference we advise him to cultivate the habit of giving it some serious consideration, for it is full of printers' lore in great variety and seems to improve from month to month.

The Corporations Auxiliary Co.

The discovery made by a representative of the Appeal to Reason that an organization exists to supply spies to big manufacturers for the purpose of minimizing the effect of the unions, and to ultimately destroy them, is worthy of emulation by the so-called "yellows" in the labor press.

It is nothing new to say that unions are honey-combed with spies; that within the ranks of many unions there are time-servers who peddle out all news of any interest to the employer; that it is well-nigh impossible for a union to take any action without it being known within forty-eight hours by the employers if it affects their interests. And the unions recognizing this condition are prepared to meet it when it presents itself.

The substance of the article in the Appeal to Reason is that a conspiracy exists in the National Association of Manufacturers, among many of the employers, to destroy the unions, and the work outlined by the Corporations Auxiliary Co. is to supply "good men" for $150.00 per month, mostly machinists, for the purpose of spying on the union they are members of and making reports of its transactions to their employers.

It is apparent that the discoverer of this gigantic conspiracy has found a couple of adventurers who are making hay while the sun shines in the heydey of the existence of the National Association of Manufacturers.

In the National Association of Manufacturers there are many firms and corporations that do not assent to the policy of PARRY and his colleagues in their campaign against the unions, but are members for business reasons apart from the labor question.

The intent of the article in the Appeal to Reason is shown wherein the writer of the article claims to have discovered that the Corporations Auxiliary Co. have an indorsement from the late Senator HANNA and one from Senator FORAKER. It matters not how these indorsements may have been secured; to the writer of the article the indictment stands.

As to the late Senator HANNA, his recent work in the interest of organized labor gives the lie to the "story," while his every act in life during his public career has been an open book. His record should refute any imputation of the character mentioned.

As to Senator FORAKER it may be said that while he may not be in touch with the labor movement, he is too shrewd and politic to stand for the proposition that he indorses such a scheme as outlined in the Corporations Auxiliary Co., and his denial of the charge against him will no doubt be forthcoming when it is called to his attention.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

I recently received a letter from Frank B. Mercer, whom many of the older employes will remember as a proofreader on the Record fourteen or fifteen years ago, in which he says:

I received the paper you sent me containing notice of Hickman's death, and I was more than sorry when I read of the poor fellow's sufferings. He was alright. During the three or more years I worked under him on the Congressional Record I never saw or heard of any act on his part that gave rise to an accusation of favoritism, and his position was certainly a trying one in that respect. He was a steadfast friend, square in all his dealings so far as I ever knew, and I knew him quite intimately during the six years I spent in Washington. I trust he is enjoying all the happiness that the departed who have lived aright are said to enjoy.

Mr. Mercer has been located at Spokane, Wash., for a dozen years or more and says "the world is dealing with me fairly well and altogether I have no kick coming."

* * * *

William S. Waudby wrote me the other day:

I saw the account of our friend Hickman's death in the papers. He was a man. Many were his friends and sad his loss.

Waudby is keeping up his fight manfully for the Commissionership of Labor, and if the position is given to anyone who has distinguished himself by his efforts in behalf of organized labor I do not see how it can fail to be Waudby, in view of the thousands of organizations that have asked for his appointment.

Charles E. Dietrich, of the Record, has become a partner in the firm of Alderson & Dietrich, general agents of La Luciole Company, which has a new style of electrical signs with ten different kinds of merits over old electrical signs, their office being at 917 E street northwest. I shall be glad to see Charlie make a success of his enterprise, and if the new scheme is only half as good as it is alleged to be they have a fortune assured.

James M. Lynch, president of the I. T. U., is sending out the following circular, which by its modesty, frankness, and manliness must appeal to all who think for themselves:

Indianapolis, March 1, 1904.

TO THE MEMBERSHIP OF THE INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION:

Your support is solicited for my candidacy for re-election to the presidency of the I. T. U.

The record during my term of office must be my advocate. There has been great gain in membership and we are are making rapid progress toward the eight-hour day for our book and job members.

If you believe that the continuance of my administration will tend to the further progress of the organization, I ask for your support at the polls on May 18.

Fraternally,
JAMES M. LYNCH.

Under the head "The Figures That Tell the Story" are a few statistics covering his incumbency:

SCALES INCREASED:
Newspapers—
Hand composition	786
Machine operators	396
Book and job rooms—
Hand compositors	366
Machine operators	83
HOURS DECREASED:
Newspapers—
Hand compositors	535
Machine operators	239
Book and job rooms—
Hand compositors	286
Machine operators	57

The figures refer to number of instances. The increase of membership is shown by the following:

	Members	Unions
November 1, 1900 (including 44 Stereotypers and 20 Photo-Engravers' Unions)	34,425	499
February 1, 1904 (excluding all Stereotypers and Photo-Engravers' Unions)	46,365	687

Seventeen newspapers have been converted from nonunion to union, and in about 100 instances arrangements have been made for an eight-hour basis to take effect in the future.

Up to March 1 Mr. Lynch had received the nominations of 336 unions, against 37 for Mr. Hawkes, in his home city of Chicago Mr. Hawkes receiving but 29 votes more than Lynch out of a total of 479

I have before expressed my admiration for Mr. Hawkes as an able, energeric worker in the cause of the Union, but in Mr. Lynch we have the greatest president we have ever had in the management of I. T. U. affairs, and I hope and believe that Columbia Union will cast her vote for his re-election, notwithstanding her nomination of Mr. Hawkes was procured.

The editorial page of a newspaper might be likened to the stomach in that in it is digested and made available as nutrition the news of the day. The average man has not the time nor the application, usually, to correlate and assimilate, in their varying relations, the different classes of news coming from everywhere, nor perhaps to understand their meaning and bearing on each other. But on the editorial page of the well-edited paper it is all made plain, commented on, explained, and the probable effect on future events set forth, not alone by editorials, but by selections from the views of other great papers. It is this feature which makes the Washington Post the really great paper that it is. Other papers have equal facilities for getting the news, but lacking this intelligent comment and application of the relationship and bearing of the world's doings, to that extent they fail to equal that great paper as an adjunct to the man who would be well informed.

* * * *

It seems to be an accepted fact that President Joe M. Johnson is in the race for delegate to St. Louis, but he is dreadfully coy and shy about saying so himself. He has made so good a record during the two years that he has been president, and has shown such ability in whatever positions he has been placed, that there can be no doubt of his election as a delegate this year, when we want to "put our best foot foremost," and we may as well count now on voting for him as to wait until he gets the courage to come out flat-footed.

* * * *

I, too, received a copy of the Manila Sunday Sun from E. E. Gessler, containing many specimens of his artistic photography, but my friend Broderick, of the Post, "blew off" Billy Dunn's copy before I got a chance, so anything I might say would be a work of supererogation.

* * * *

While you are considering the question whom to vote for for delegate, if such considerations as having done much valuable work for the Union have any weight with you, T. Frank Hall is well worthy of your support, for he has been and is one of our most faithful workers. Besides that, he is an old Missouri River "pirate," and that gives him a warm place in my affections.

* * * *

Miss Anna Wilson, accompanied by three other ladies, made a visit to the night forces one night last week. While she said she was not canvassing, she incidentally nailed a few boards on her fences. The night forces will give Miss Wilson a vote for delegate to St. Louis that she may well be proud of.

* * * *

My old friend Philip S. Steele is by no means idle in these stirring times of vote-hunting, and if he doesn't make some of the youngsters hustle before election I am no guesser. Philip wants to go to St. Louis as a delegate, and I hope that he will.

* * * *

Sidney T. Bates, whose recent death at Akron, Ohio was announced in last week's TRADES UNIONIST, was originally from New Hampshire or Vermont, and he was employed for a number of years at the Riverside Press, in Cambridge, Mass. Shortly after the civil war he went to Florida, publishing a paper at Tallahassee and being interested in the State printing, during which time he gave T. Thomas Fortune, a colored man who has since become quite prominent, his start in life. About thirty years ago he came to Washington and worked in the G. P. O. for a number of years as compositor and proofreader. About 1887 he went to Akron, where he read proof in the Werner printing establishment, returning to this city some seven years ago, since working as compositor and for the past three years as copyholder in the Library Branch. He was something of a poet, writing under the nom de plume "William H. Dudley." As near as I can figure it, he was 72 years old.

* * * *

As fine a fellow as ever lived left us when old Bob Gayle died on Friday last, at the ripe age of 73 years. For many years he was a carpenter in the G. P. O., and he and Al Hughes, who is not far from the same age and also a carpenter, were inseparable companions in their hours of recreation as well as of work. About ten years ago Bob has the misfortune to lose most of the fingers on one hand in a planing machine. He was buried last Monday.

* * * *

The Times last Saturday had an editorial on the eight-hour question which shows that paper to be the firm friend of the workingman. It realizes that the toilers have some rights in the world besides working in order to enable others to live in idleness.

* * * *

Speaking of the down-town delegateship, notwithstanding the modesty of Mike Maher, which is his chiefest charm, hosts of the G. P. O. boys are picking him for winner and have him on their slates. Modesty is not without its advantages after all—in fact, I have found it a valuable asset in my business.

* * * *

The Union did well to postpone the proposition to reduce the dues until July, and it will then do better by postponing it indefinitely. One weakness of labor organizations is that they do not pay enough to have their battles fought.

Senate Bill No. 2665.

After the defeat of the W. W. Taylor case in the Court of Claims, being a test of the claim for the full thirty days leave for employees of the Government Printing Office, J. L. Feeney, after a conference with Judge Weed, one of the counsel in the case, drew up the draft of the bill printed below, and which has passed the Senate.

The bill reads as follows:

"That from and after the date of the passage of this act the thirty days' annual leave of absence with pay in any one year to employes of the Government Printing Office, authorized by the existing law, shall be exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays: Provided, That the existing laws relating to the granting of annual leave with pay to clerks and employes in the executive departments shall apply to clerks and employees of the Government Printing Office who are paid annual or monthly salaries or compensation."

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Post Chapel.

D. L. Sandoe is on the sick list.

LYNCH Mr. Hawkes, and send Miss McDonald to St. Louis!

Smoking is forbidden in the Post composing room, and as a substitute we are now "chewing the rag."

Joe S. Walsmith is a proud father. A daughter (the first and only child, I beleive,) arrived one day last week.

Improvements are in order just now. It is to be hoped that the composing room will get a skylight before they cease.

"Secretary Moody is said to be anxious to have rats exterminated from naval vessels. He should enlist a few Union printers."

R. G. Scott, a sub. on the machines here during the past several months, has accepted a situation as operator for the Wilkins Printing Company.

While Dan Vaughan did not, and probably can not convince some of us that the monthly dues should be reduced, he demonstrated to my own satisfaction that he is thoroughly competent to represent Columbia Union at the coming convention.

Just after having quenched his thirst at a spigot from which Potomac water flows, an operator returned to his machine to put in type an article bearing on the condition of the river as regards to ice. The article went on to tell of a state wherein the water would become dammed, and the operator, following copy, made it "damned." Modesty prevents the naming of this intelligent compositor.

At a meeting of this chapel held last week the committee having in charge the preparation and printing of our New Year's Greeting made its report and was discharged with a vote of thanks. It was shown that the cost of the greeting was $173 23, which is a goodish piece of money, no matter how fast you say it; and everybody appears to be satisfied. The principal items were photographing, arranging the pictures, making the plates, and printing—respectively, $33, $15, $52.50, and $41. There is already talk of getting up another a year or two hence.

While dwelling on the capability and adaptability of the printer to fill clerical and other positions, it may not be out of place to mention here that the general manager, the managing editor, the telegraphic editor, the sporting editor, and the mechanical superintendent of the Post newspaper establishment are all practical printers, and it was only a short time since that most important of all persons, to the printer, at least—the paymaster—was also a former knight of the stick. And the Post, judging from the regularity which we receive our pay, is conducted in a business-like manner.

The announcement of the appearance at one of our theaters shortly of "The Virginian" calls to mind a story I heard recently about the book of which this play is a dramatization—Owen Wister's "The Virginian." It seems that a library committee of one of our Sunday-schools decided upon this work of fiction, without examining it, as a good one for their shelves, but it did not last long—it was a little too stout for them when they came to read it. Of course, after it was excluded, there was a great demand for it, and the poor book was nearly worn out by those good church people; but it couldn't stay in the library. And there was really nothing wrong with it, either.

Second Division.

Sam E. Davies has been transferred to the Agricultural Branch.

After a three week's illness J. A. Hennesy reported for work Friday.

Melvin J. Page, who has been absent about ten days, returned on Monday.

D. J. Snyder was off the fore part of the week suffering a slight indisposition.

"Conditions" were such that "traditions" had no show in McPike's "pome," as published in the last issue.

Harry E. Faust, ex-proofreader on the night side, was transferred to this division Monday. He has been unable to work for the past four or five months owing to sickness.

On Monday the following telephone message was received: "Tell Harris to meet me at ——, at 5.30." As there are two of them in this room, and neither knew which was meant, they both begged off to keep the appointment.

The Secretary of the Second Division Assurance Society reported at the regular meeting that two members only had received benefits for the first quarter. This is doing very well for a membership of over fifty. One application was received and acted upon favorably.

While there are plenty of grog shops (which are good or bad according to our views on temperance) we have not a single good lunch room convenient to this office. Many complain of the poor service outside and the cold lunches served inside, and profer bringing a lunch from home rather than taking a chance with either. It seems to me if a suitable space could be allotted on one of the middle floors some one would volunteer to serve a hot dairy lunch on a plan similar to that in vogue in the Treasury, where a waiter goes around before lunch hour and takes orders which he delivers, steaming hot, at your desk—generally serving meat, eggs, or fish, potatoes, bread and coffee, for 15 cents. How does this idea strike you?

Third Division.

Does Mr. Broderick mean that Mr. Hawkes has supporters on the Post by request, or that the information is given only by request?

Frank Bates, of the Fourth Division, wishes to announce to his friends and supporters that he hereby withdraws from the race for delegate.

It is very much to the credit of Baltimore Typographical Union that it indorsed President Lynch by a practically unanimous vote at a recent meeting.

Cross, of Baltimore, who was located on frame 57, started back home March 5, where he has a job on the Herald. The good wishes of the division go with him.

The Union took wise action in postponing to a later day the consideration of the resolution to reduce the dues. Indefinite postponement would have been better.

The G. P. O. ticket for delegates to St Louis: Miss Anna Wilson, Messrs. T. Frank Hall, Titus F. Ellis. Other candidates may be positive or comparative; these three are superlative.

Recently I had the honor of an introduction to Mr. T. C. Parsons, of the Times, down-town candidate for delegate. Mr. Parsons promised to give the Third Division a call in the near future.

At last the wires are in place for supporting the electric light over our frames. The job has been long drawn out, and the constant rapping of the hammers has been wearing on the nerves.

Former Slug 44 (Bunker) called on us last Monday. "Bunk" looked about the same as ever to the ordinary observer; but the eagle eye of Goodkey noticed that his hair was parted "about a pica out of the middle."

Hoyt Holton began thirty days' leave Monday morning. It is understood that Hoyt is going to Philadelphia to undergo a hospital operation on his stomach. We hope to see him back at the end of his leave in good health, supplemented by the digestion of an ostrich.

It gave me much pleasure to make the acquaintance of W. L. Gutelius of the Spess several days ago. Mr. Gutelius purposes making a call on us in the near future in order that he may ask us if we know of any good reason why we shouldn't vote for him for delegate.

The Union made a big mistake last Sunday in failing to pass the motion to donate $20 to the Women's Auxiliary. One of the most potent forces for the advance of Unionism is the Auxiliary. It deserves our help and encouragement. That motion must be passed at the next meeting. God bless the ladies!

Having felt from the first that just as soon as Mr. Broderick and I really understood each other we would find our views on men and things to be more or less similar, I welcome with pleasure his announcement that he has no quarrel with me. Neither have I any quarrel with you, Mr. Broderick, and I have no hesitancy in saying that you may command me for anything in my line.

The following is the complete list, so far as known, of nominees for delegate to the American Federation of Labor: Frank Foster, Boston; Frank Morrison, Chicago; Max Hayes, Cleveland; Wm. M. Garrett, Jos. E. Goodkey, Washington; Louis Negele, St. Louis; J. J. O'Rourke, New York; Michael Colbert, Chicago. Allied Trades: P. S. Neurenberger. Of the above, five are to be elected.

Music lovers in the craft could spend Sunday evening in no more delightful way than at one of the concerts of the Washington Symphony Orchestra. Apart from the fact that the members of this organization are union men, the music they produce under the direction of Mr. DeKoven is of the highest order, and the further fact that the programs are made up from requests by the audience makes each performance doubly interesting.

Mr. Joseph E. Goodkey (Slug 41) now has the indorsement of 25 local unions throughout the United States and Canada in his candidacy for delegate to the A. F. of L. This is a good showing when you stop to consider that his campaign commenced in the middle of February, and as a score of unions which would probably have indorsed him met in the early part of that month, he unfortunately missed their indorsement. Though not indorsed in Chicago or St. Louis, he has the assurance from friends in those cities that he will get a handsome vote.

About every man in the division shook hands with Samuel Gover, of Baltimore, last Friday morning, the occasion being the birth of a bouncing boy on the previous day, Mr. Gover having just been apprised by telegram of the joyful occurrence. Although this is our friend's first offense, he bore himself with becoming fortitude through the trying ordeal of a public reception and accepted our congratulations with dignified courtesy. Here's long life and happiness to the new voter.

By the superior perspicuity of that wonderful being, the Intelligent Compositor, I was saved last week from the misspelling of a word. I used the expression, "a biger man than old Grant," and the compositor, with a sublime charity for my shortcomings, added another "g" to "biger" and made it "bigger." For this I thank him; but with his permission I will explain that about thirty years ago there was a doorkeeper of the House of Representatives of the United States, named Fitzhugh. Mr. Fitzhugh was from Texas. The duties and privileges of his position were so different, so much more comprehensive and grand than anything he had ever met up with in the State where they shoot you for wearing a silk hat, that he was moved to write to a friend who lived in Texas and tell him all about it. And the crowning paroxysm of his letter was where he told his friend he was "a biger man than old Grant." The letter was too good to keep and was published, and Mr. Fitzhugh became the subject of a cartoon by Nast with the inscription underneath, "If the coat Fitzhugh, put it on." Fitzhugh was fired, and the incident appeared to be closed; in fact, it was closed to all intents and purposes until the Intelligent Compositor got in his work on me last week. May I venture to hope that the I. C. will do me the justice to note that I was simply quoting Mr. Fitzhugh? Yes? Thanks, awfully.

The young man from the first Division who furnishes items for THE TRADES UNIONIST, and whom I shall call "Topsy" for lack of a better name (as his parents seem to have forgotten to provide him with one), accuses me of making a "plaintive wail" in a recent contribution. My dear Topsy, you are misinformed. You could not have read my little piece, or you would have seen that there was nothing "plaintive" about it. As far as the "wail" is concerned, it will be time enough for that when the crows that holler "Hawks! Hawks!" over Goodkey's house holler to some purpose. And let me tell you right now, before I forget it, that there is a heap of difference between wanting and getting a thing. You make the great mistake, Topsy, of taking it for granted that the members of the International Typographical Union have no power of discrimination. Up to the present writing I am informed that over 300 unions have indorsed the business administration of President Lynch, while the indorsements accorded Mr. Hawkes can be counted upon your fingers and toes. Do you want to know why Mr. Lynch has received this wide approval? It is because he stands for things accomplished, not merely promised. For instance: In the four years of his administration, scales have been increased as follows: newspapers, 1,182; book and job rooms, 429. Hours have been decreased as follows: newspapers, 774; book and job rooms, 343; to become effective at a later date, 100. The membership of the I. T. U. on November 1, 1900, was (including 44 stereotypers and 20 photo-engravers' unions) 34,525; on February 1, 1904 (excluding all stereotypers and photo-engravers' unions) the membership had increased to 46,365. These facts and figures stand for what President Lynch is responsible for having accomplished. Do you venture to say that Mr. Hawkes could do any better if we should happen to give him the opportunity? Don't be too sure about Pard Bloomer's "dreams." Just come down out of the clouds yourself; try to banish the remembrance of that "smart young fellow" from your mind; study up the statistics to be found in the Journal, and you may see the error of your ways and vote for James M. Lynch for president.

The Second Division correspondent makes note of a movement being on foot to organize a social club in that division. I hope the promoters of the idea will give the Woman's Auxiliary of Columbia Union a trial before the movement gets on both feet, and see if they can not find what they seek in that organization.

Mr. J. F. Smart, no doubt smarting under the imputation that he had nothing to say concerning his recent vacation, warmed up and admitted that he found everything booming and in a flourishing condition in the South. Real estate values have advanced and people are looking forward with eager anticipation to the American occupation and resumption of work of the canal.

ALLIED BUILDING TRADES.

Meeting of March 1, 1904.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades of the Central Labor Union was called to order at the usual hour by Chairman Wells.

The roll call disclosed the presence of 47 delegates from 23 local unions.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

From Painters, No. 368, certifying to G. Jule Murray, vice E. King, resigned.

From Stone Laborers Union, No. 46, certifying to Frank Hanson, vice A. Locksley.

The credentials were received and the delegates seated.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Painters Union, No. 368, stating that their union would make a demand for $3.50 per day on May 4, 1904. Referred to the Executive Committee.

From same union, stating that their agreement with Master Painters' Association had expired by limitation March 1, 1904, and asking that the good offices of the Arbitration Board be used in assisting them in having another agreement entered into that would embrace the arbitration plan approved by the Council and the Employers Association. The request was granted.

From S. J. Prescott & Co., acknowledging receipt of letter from secretary under date of March 4. Placed on file and the Secretary directed to further communicate with Samuel J. Prescott & Co., and give them the exact status of the Iron Workers Union as far as relates to the firm of S. J. Prescott & Co., and the Council of Allied Building Trades.

From Carpenters Joint District Council, stating that the Council had removed the firm of Samuel J. Prescott & Co., from the unfair list, and asking the Council of Allied Building Trades to take similar action. The request was granted, and the communication placed on file.

The Secretary was directed to inform Samuel J. Prescott & Co., and the Employers Association of the action.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Delegate Sheetz, from Committee on By Laws, reported progress.

Delegate Nothnagel, from Committee to Investigate Credentials of Upholsterers Union, No. 58, reported progress.

Delegate Riley, from Committee on Relief for Baltimore Federation of Labor, reported that their labors were finished and asked that the committee be discharged. Granted.

The committee appointed to draft reply to letter of M. P. Carrick, Secretary of Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, submitted their reply, as follows:

MARCH 8, 1904.

GREETING: We, the committee to whom was referred the communication of M. J. Carrick, General Secretary of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, containing extracts of a letter received by him from L. W. Tilden, General Secretary-Treasurer of the United Association of Plumbers, etc., in a reply to communication of M. P. Carrick to Secretary Tilden, relative to the suspension of Plumbers Union of Washington by the Council of Allied Building Trades for sending their men back to work on jobs which have been declared struck by their Council, would respectfully present the following:

M. P. CARRICK, ESQ., Secy. B. P. D. and P. of A.:

DEAR SIR AND BRO.: Your communication of recent date to Local Union No. 368, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, containing extracts from L. W. Tilden, Secretary-Treasurer United Association Plumbers, etc., was referred to the undersigned, a duly constituted committee of the Council of Allied Building Trades, for reply. In doing so we wish to say first that we are surprised that Mr. Tilden would be so densely ignorant of the workings of a body composed of delegates from twenty-seven unions of the building trades as to submit to one man dominating their affairs, and we characterize the attack on Mr. Ratigan as wholly unwarranted and without justification.

Mr. Ratigan is a member of the Steam Fitters Union, the only union of steam fitters in Washington, having been in continuous existence since September 25, 1885; that the Council of Allied Building Trades reposes confidence in Mr. Ratigan is evinced by the fact that he is now serving his third year as its Business Agent.

The Plumbers Union was suspended from the Council of Allied Building Trades for deliberately returning to work on jobs which had been declared struck by this Council, and the fact that they were suspended may have been intensified as it was not their first offense. While we admit that this decipline may be odious to the Plumbers and their general officers, the fact still remains that discipline must be maintained and that the conditions existing in a central body will not permit of special legislation for any union when it affects them.

We inclose you copies of letters which this Council, through its affiliated unions, are sending to each general secretary, and we would respectfully urge you to use your good offices with the secretary of the United Association of Plumbers, etc., that he instruct his Washington local to reaffiliate with the Central Labor Union.

H. J. WELLS,
W. E. THOMPSON,
THOS. F. RYAN.

The report of the committee was received, approved, and ordered spread on minutes, and a copy sent to M. P. Carrick.

The report of the Executive Committee meeting held March 2, 1904, was read and the recommendations concured in by a vote of 29 to 5.

The Secretary was directed to notify the Employers Association and all affiliated unions that the strike against the Woodley, Windsor, Cecil, and Roehampton apartment houses had been declared off.

ROLL CALL.

Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers protested against the action of Council in declaring strike off.

Stone Laborers asked the assistance of Business Agent with Mr. P. C. Clark, contractor, on abutments for aqueduct bridge.

Machinists asked that Executive Committee meet Friday, March 18, to hear grievance of Elevator Constructors.

Steam Fitters protested against action in declaring strike off.

NEW BUSINESS.

W. M. Lewis was elected alternate for John McVey on Arbitration Board, vice E. King.

Adjourned.

Bindery Notes.

Bob McLannahan has returned to work after an extended illness covering several weeks, Bob's purse is long, and coin plenty, and it takes a long while before he is broke.

Len Kukart is some what concerned about his chances for delegatorial honors in the event that Bill Nevens refuses to act as his campaign manager, as Bill claims he has taught "Kuke" all he ever knew as a speaker.

The honorable and Independent Order of Jonadabs are quietly but firmly grasping the members of the Government Bindery in great numbers. "Water wagon" patrons are increasing, while the admirers of the flowing bowl are scratching for a quorum.

A prominent finisher in the Job Room, being somewhat financially embarrassed, penned the following to one of the candidates for International honors.

My Dear B——:

The rose is red,
The violets blue,
Lend me a "V"
And I'll vote for you.

The answer was immediately returned, in the following lines:

The rose is red
And so is the pink,
I'll lend you a "V"
Well! I don't think.

Word has at last been received from John Fox, of the Job Division, through a letter sent to Fred Schlick on February 21. While we were endeavoring to keep warm and saying all sorts of bad things about the mean weather in general and the Groundhog in particular. John was basking in the warm climate and spring breezes of Texas and New Mexico whither he has gone to recuperate and repair his impaired health. It is the wish of his many friends in the division that he will soon return with his health fully recovered.

About a week ago the following notice made its appearance, appended to the regular meeting notice, by some person unknown:

"If the Arbitration Committee were disbanded, there would be plenty of money to pay death benefits."

Let us hope that the miscreant whose ideas of courage is so small and whose motives are so narrow that he would steal forth like a thief in the night, to force his contracted opinions on an unsuspecting people, may find sufficient money to pay his death benefits, and, for the general good, may his heirs draw it quick.

Specification Lamentations.

Every man sent to the Spess kicks yet he never resigns; but eventually he becomes resigned.

I am not butting-in, Brother King; but just working off a little surplus grey-matter for exercise.

We all got up our average Washington's Birthday, anyhow. Hope none of the boys got a "head."

Guess the ice man reads THE TRADES UNIONIST, for he has cut out his 2.10 clip and has entered another class.

The work of this division is conducive to temperance, for a fellow can not fight booze all night and set Spess all day.

The "new men" think that for ways that are dark and tricks that are vain the Brainery men are peculiar. (With apologies to Bill Nye.)

One cold day recently I asked my side partner what the temperature was that morning, and without missing a stroke the busy man replied, "Look in the book."

When we kicked about the racket of the bookbinders overhead we supposed we had a monopoly on noise, but discovered our mistake after singing "Jersey Sam" once too many times.

Brother King forgot one item last week. He failed to tell how he got "bughouse" and corrected a galley for Carney, while his (Joe's) mind was busy working out a nice little puff for a lady candidate for delegate.

Oh, yes, we (the new men) have the "system" down fine. It's just like this: Distribute, one hour; set, three hours; correct, four hours. Adopt this method and you will surely make good, regardless of lower-case t's.

It is not the "open shop," but the "open window" that causes a difference of opinion in the various alleys. Now, our friends, the night watchmen, could become peacemakers, indeed, and enable us to more and better work if they would throw open all the windows for a while both night and morning, and give us good pure air to breathe. If we only knew what is "in the air."

JEREMIAH.

The Curtis Publishing Co.

An inquiry having been sent to this office to define the status of the Curtis Publishing Co., of Philadelphia, in its relation with the printing trade, we learn that as publishers of The Ladies Home Journal and The Saturday Evening Post that the composing room and press room are practically card rooms; that in the press room many of the pressmen receive more than the scale; that to work in the composing room proper a union card is a prerequisite; that the mail list is the only work done under the scale, girls doing this work at 30 cents per thousand; that while hand composition is used on the publications, the Lanston and Simplex machines are also used, union machines operators and hand compositors alone being employed.

The firm is liberal to its employes, paying for all holidays and full time Saturday, which is a half day. In the press room, should the issues be advanced sufficiently to allow several days lay off, it is allowed with pay.

This office has been secured to the Philadelphia Union mainly through the efforts of its efficient President, Alfred D. Calvert, who worked hard to make it what it is to-day, a union office to all intents and purposes.

Interest in Labor Problems.

Having managed two national campaigns, Senator Hanna was especially qualified to judge of the signs of the times. After the campaign of 1900 he addressed a dinner of bankers and promoters at the Union League club in New York. He told them that the next great battle in this country would be between labor and capital. He advised them to take a broader view of the question and study it. He said there was justification for the belief among the workingmen of the United States that they were not getting their share of the country's prosperity. It was the duty of every man of wealth to raise labor up rather than keep it down, and only in taking the broad view could a calamity as great as any that had ever come to the country be averted. J. Pierpont Morgan, when asked for a speech immediately after Senator Hanna sat down, said: "Hanna's made my speech."

Senator Hanna became interested in the council of conciliation of the American Civic Federation, which was planned to prevent or settle labor disputes. He accepted the presidency of that body. The day before he took the place, sitting in his office in Washington, he said in an interview: "To succeed in this work I would give up my seat in the Senate. I would rather be instrumental in bringing about harmony between labor and capital than be President of the United States."

Beethoven as a Composer.

J. W. Belcher had the following to say in THE TRADES UNIONIST of February 18:

"Music isn't printing; and as these items are written for the edification of printers there may be some who think that an interpolation of a subject foreign to those which usually interest members of the craft might not be in order. However, I will risk saying that Bernice Thompson, in her article on 'Music and Musicians' in last Sunday's Post, was wrong in saying that Beethoven was the author of the "Pastoral Symphony." It was written by Haendel, the greatest composer of oratorio that ever lived."

A well-known gentleman, who stands high in Washington musical circles as a teacher and critic, takes issue with Mr. Belcher regarding the correctness of certain statements made by Miss Bernice Thompson in the Sunday Post of February 13, and has requested us to publish the following in reply:

"J. W. Belcher's role of musical 'interpolator' in a recent issue is quite amusing. He makes the insinuation that Miss Bernice Thompson didn't know what she was talking about in the Post and asserts that Haendel (Handel) wrote the 'Pastoral Symphony;' that 'Haendel' was the greatest composer of oratorios that ever lived, and by the latter statement would seem to imply that the 'Pastoral' is an oratorio. Now, the facts are that Miss Thompson displays considerable eruditeness in the subjects which she treats; that Beethoven did write the 'Pastoral" symphony, between the years 1806-8, about forty-seven years after Handel, we hope, joined the beatific choir, there to sing the Heavenly praises; and that Haydn's 'Creation' is considered by the best authorities to surpass anything Handel ever wrote. Handel never wrote a symphony, while Beethoven's masterpieces are symphonies, he having written but one oratorio, 'The Mount of Olives.' Oratorios are vocal, symphonies orchestral, compositions. Beethoven was the greatest composer that ever lived. He is called the 'Shakespeare of Music.'"

"Young" Mr. Hawkes.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

In a recent issue of your paper I read with some amusement where a correspondent asks, "Why exchange Mr. Lynch for young Mr. Hawkes?"

It was amusing to those who knew the record of Mr. Hawkes, but misleading to the uninformed; therefore, in a spirit of fairness, I would ask that you print a few facts.

It will probably be news to many to know that "young" Mr. Hawkes has carried a card several years longer than our worthy I. T. U. President.

As to the ability of Mr. Hawkes, I will state that he was President of the Seattle Union when I was in that city in 1892, and he impressed me at that time as being a man of marked executive ability. That has been quite a number af years ago, and he has had a vast amount of experience in a much broader field since then.

During the lockout on the Tacoma (Wash.) Ledger the local union started a co-operative daily. They met with many obstacles and finally applied for a receiver, the court appointing Charlie Hawkes. There was discontent and grumbling on all sides when he took up his duties as receiver. His position was anything but an enviable one, but by hard and conscientious toil, good generalship, and a patience that would have been a credit to Job himself, he overcame difficulties that looked insurmountable.

He was afterwards made President of San Francisco Typographical Union while I was there, and served in that capacity during a most troublous period. I have seen him on numerous occasions bring order out of chaos at some of the stormy union meetings held in that city in those exciting and uncertain days that followed the advent of the typesetting machine, thereby displaying a knowledge of parliamentary law that would have been a credit to any man.

The fact that Philadelphia Union instructed her delegates to the last I.T.U. convention to secure the convention's approval of sending Mr. Hawkes to that city to try to improve conditions there was a very high tribute to his ability, and I hear he is having much success already.

I believe the records will show that he has accomplished more good work as an organizer than any other man in that line. He has successfully handled some of the knottiest problems between our organization and employers.

Any mention that I could make to Mr. Hawkes' unionism would seem insipid in the face of such a brilliant record as he has made working for the "good cause" for the past fifteen years.

I think it will be found that "young" Mr. Hawkes has done enough successful work for an "old" Mr. Hawkes, don't you?

GUY W. MCCORD,

PARIS COMMUNE—Celebration Sunday, March 20, 2.30 p. m., Concordia Hall, 506 Sixth street northwest. Dr. Alexander Kent will deliver the address. You and your friends invited.

From Philadelphia Bookbinders Union

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Seeing an article in your paper of March 10, in reference to The Curtis Publishing Co., publishers of The Ladies' Home Journal and The Saturday Evening Post, stating the standing of compositors and pressmen employed by that firm being union men, we desire to make the following statement:

In January, 1901, we had a strike in The Curtis Publishing Co. for an increase in wages, as the men employed there did not get our scale of wages. About six of our men scabbed it by going in to work, and since that time their bindery establishment has been run by non-union men. The men were expelled from our Local, and the firm was placed on the unfair list in our Local and our International organization, and to this day stands in the same position; and will stay that way until they employ union bookbinders.

Trusting that I have made our case clear, and may be understood by all those interested, I remain,

Fraternally yours,

ALBERT E. HURST,
Secretary,
Philadelphia Union, No. 2, I. B. of B.

When two men are candidates for the same office from the same room or division and each is alike entitled to the fullest credit as staunch union men, the temptation is to speak or write of one as he deserves and to be careful that the other does not suffer by comparison, because both in reality are equally worthy. This is the situation as it at present exists in the Specification Division, where Mr. Gutelius and Mr. Melick are employed, yet their acquaintances and friends are by no means confined to this particular division, for as zealous and active union men their record is known to at least a majority of the membership of 101. Both have received repeated assurances of good will as chairmen of the Specification chapel, where questions of more than ordinary moment are constantly arising and those requiring the keenest discrimination and best judgment. Both are good delegate timber, a fact so generally accepted that it need not be here repeated, only that it is always a pleasure to say a good word for those who by common consent are worthy of the confidence and support of all who are unionists in sympathy and in practice as well as in name.

Night Bill Force.

Tommy Travis and Hindman Doxey were transferred to the day side last week.

Mr. E. H. Andrew's youngest sister, Miss Annie Andrew, is now visiting him from Missouri.

After an absence of nearly two weeks, caused by rheumatism, Mr. J. H. Ross, has returned to his desk.

Wm. A. Uber, who has worked only a few nights this session owing to rheumatism, resigned Tuesday.

Mr. Knapp, from the Times, shook hands with us last week and announced that he was running for delegate. He has many friends in this office.

Hogan "got busy and kept busy" the other night when he discovered he had set a "doc" take in his "bill" stick, and "Gnat' never said a word.

Mrs. Kate Newsom, mother of this correspondent, has returned to her home in the World's Fair City for an extended visit during the exposition.

This division was second to the First day in its contribution to the public charity call awhile back. The entire contribution from this office was $241 15.

Joe Stelle, the popular and efficient Chairman of the Relief Committee and candidate for delegate was looking after his fences in this room the other night. He is a safe man and would make a good delegate.

Dave Pollock informs us that when the machines come "Big" Sill and Ben Wolf are going to start a second-hand clothing store. Sill will be the puller-in and Wolf will do the selling in his well-known persuasive way.

Miss Wilson, the Gazette, nee Spess, candidate for delegate, Mrs. Bert Wolfe, and Miss Booth, honored us with a call at lunch time last week. It really looked like this chapel will vote unanimously for Miss Wilson.

Messrs. Hopkins Parry, of Pennsylvania, and J. A. Smith, of Greensboro, Ga., are the baby members of this force, the youngest union members of No. 101. They are in the Second Division annex, while holding a temporary appointment they are taking a course on the typesetting machines. At least one Parry is a union man.

Dan Vaughan has gotten out a unique campaign card. It is a fac-simile shape of the union label. His picture is in the center. In the top box is the words, "For delegate to I. T. U." Through the center is his name, "Dan C. Vaughan." In the lower box is the words, "Night Proof Room, G. P. O." In the corners of the card are the dates, etc.

Of all the delegate tickets made out it is only a matter of selecting the second and third winners from this office. Dan Vaughan is always counted No. 1. He is conceded a winner by all, not because he will get the other fellow's vote, but because each individual wants the pleasure and honor of voting for him. He has the hearts of the voters at large in No. 101.

Mr. T. C. Parsons, candidate for delegate from ths Times Chapel, paid us a pleasant call last week. He made friends with every one he met, and seems to be the down-town selection for this force. He has a good union-working record here, having earnestly served on the Finance, Business, Nominations, and special committees. Through his efforts the scale on the Times was increased $2. If sent to the convention he will eat no idle bread.

The Chicago News tells us of an ex-governor of Idaho, who lately visited that metropolis. He absolutely refuses to wear a necktie. "He would be hanged first," he said, when the hotel detective remonstrated with him. On this force is a man of letters who cares nothing for the eternal fitness of things in gent's furnishings. Look at him any night. While he wears a tie he does not bother about its affinity to the collar. They are about as well mated as a mule and an ox would be in a team, or a display line with Gothic caps and Celtic lower case. "Such, though, is the idiosyncracies of genius," remarks one.

It is with profound regret that we record the unfortunate mesalliance of Mrs. Ida Susette Nichols, our very capable lunch woman. Outside of employees in this office there is probably no one who knows the printers by name and face better than she, nor any one whom the printers more generally know. To condense this story: Act 1, March 3, Mrs. Nichols announced to us that she would be wed the following day, "after being lovers for four years." Act 2, March 4, wed. She was absent from the lunch stand. Act 3, March 6. The appreciation of this chapel was shown by the presentation to Mrs. Cross of two beautiful panel paintings and a landscape scene. Mr. William McEnaney cordially attended to these arrangements. Mr. Kidd, ever ready to make a speech, and gifted with oratorical powers, gallantly made the presentation speech, which was gracefully responded to by Mrs. Cross, who was all smiles. Act 4, March 6, Sunday. Act 5, March 7. The groom was proudly presented to all the notable patrons of the lunch stand, including Messrs. E. H. Thomas, Kidd, Ennis, McEnaney, Billings, Boyd, Kiernan, et al. On Tuesday night the tranquility of the Bill Force was rudely disturbed from center to circumference, its whole body was shaken from stem to stern with excitement from the news. A difficulty had arisen between bride and groom about finances. Blows had been struck. Arrest had followed. Prison bars were looked through. Police court. As the bride says: "I am a cultured, refined lady. No man can lay his muscle to me, for that is for common women. Yes, I threw a milk bottle at him in protection. My shoulder is black. Any man's head would have been broken, but when I was a child and used to fall down cellar, my mother always said I had a hard head. I am a good woman as every policeman on the block knows." With a wave of the hand, "No more husbands for me." A great many advised reconciliation. Some said otherwise. George Hayden came up from the Record, saying they were prepared to pay the assailant's fine if Mrs. Cross said so, while she appreciated this "lovely" act on their part, she would not hear to it. She wishes it understood that she deeply appreciates the interest the printers take in her affairs and that that "they are every one just lovely, and that she loves every one of them. That they are perfect gentlemen." Marriage is certainly a lottery.

John F. Luitich is the baseballist in this room, and an enthusiastic one, too.

A. A. Martin is back at his accustomed place and feels much better now.

Joe Stelle, the Job Room candidate, dropped in for a social chat one day last week.

L. P. Sutor is quite a sufferer from neuralgia, but never gives up no matter how much he suffers.

L. W. Cornwall, in charge of the ring alley, says the boys have been kept pretty busy of late.

It wont be long now before Grant S. Barnhart will add M. D. to his name. A close student and merits success.

Elias S. Webb informs me that a bouncing boy was an invader of his home recently. Mother and infant doing nicely.

Emanuel Thomas says it is only a question of a few days before the stool-repairing job will be good again. Some of 'em need attention now.

See Mr. Redfield and get his views on "Fresh Air." He is an authority on that subject. He gives good sound logic with his prescriptions.

R. F. Chisholm is called the walking encyclopedia. What he knows about office style is generally accepted as fact—when called upon to give it.

J. H. Kahlert is getting along nicely. He returned to work recently, but has to use crutches in meandering about the room. Glad to see him back.

No wonder our esteemed friend, John O'Donnoghue, looks so pleasant these days. It is a boy, and a fine one at that—ten pounder, Arrived last week.

W. W. Stanford casts many wistful glances in the direction of "Old Virginia." His family resides in that State, and "Stan" is anxious for the "good old summer time" when he can enjoy fishing trips, etc., down that direction.

Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Hawkes was indorsed by Columbia Union, when the votes are counted and the results from the Fifth Division registered, you will be surprised to note the large number of Lynch men. Yes, Mr. Lynch will get a good vote here. "We know whereof we speak."

The writer desires to join hands with the other correspondents in thanking Major Clifford for paying off the various divisions the past three Saturdays. He is the "boss of them all" as far as being a good man in the right place. We all have to lift our hats to the Major, and wish that he may retain that place for many moons to come.

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town.

THURSDAY, MARCH 17, 1904.

THE snuff-colored Oriental is up to snuff.

THE mutilated umpire joke may now be sprung.

THE Turk extracts considerable amusement from the concert of the powwowers.

JAPANESE successes on the water may account for Wall Street's anti-Russian attitude.

IF the worst comes to the worst, Korea would rather have Japan than Russia for a stepmother country.

CARNEGIE still finds it difficult to renounce belief in the proverb that a fool and his money are soon parted.

ALTHOUGH gentle spring is here, it is hardly fair for JOHN BULL to ask the Muscovite how he liked his Japanese hair cut.

PERHAPS the public would have more confidence in the PARKER boom if it would only butt up real hard against something.

KIPLING thinks it unnecessary to burst into song until Russia has reached the "Absent-Minded Beggar" stage of the game.

IT was naturally to be expected that Russia would fare better than she has in the water following the annexation of the Finns.

IT would be interesting to know whether Speaker CANNON considers WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH a genuine Presidential Bee.

A GREAT many people were grieved when WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH admitted that the Presidential Bee approached the Speaker with a string tied to it.

ONE of the most remarkable feats of the Post-Office Department is the extension of rural free-delivery to the eloquence of the House of Representatives.

CAPTAIN HOBSON may not convince the country that a $2,000,000,000 Navy is necessary, but it is pretty generally conceded that he has a $2,000,000,000 nerve.

THE success of the war expert depends upon his ability to dispose of his "ifs" and "buts" so as to cover an orderly change of base in case his preliminary guesses fall before the march of events.

DON JOAQUIN VELEZ, Colombia's new President, is called the "Old Spartan," and once had his children kept in jail over night for disobeying a curfew law. It is not likely, however, that he will give Panama a spanking.

A SCIENTIFIC Frenchman points with alarm to the fact that there are over 80,000,000 bacilli congregated on the human hand, so that the President of the United States, if he shook hands with all the voters, would meet an army of something like 1,000,000,000,000,000 bacilli.

AMID the wild excitement of lurid sea tales and exploding canards and the crackling flash of sizzling headlines, we listen with soulful longing for the sounds of strenuous hope and fearless joy which once arose from England's laureate bard. Oh, ALFRED, ALFRED, pipe us once again those soothing strains.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

The candidates are getting into the field for the various union offices more rapidly than I can announce them; but, fortunately, they are not entirely dependent upon me for publicity.

Howard G. Brown, at present one of the auditors, announces himself as a candidate for treasurer, and his experience in connection with the union's financial affairs eminently fits him for the place. He is young and active, and has many friends—all of which is ready capital when aspiring for office.

J. Ligon King says E. A. M. Lawson is a candidate for delegate to St. Louis, and while this seems too good news to be true, in view of the number of times we have had our hopes raised as to his candidacy during the past two years, only to be have them hurled into the mud, I am going to hope for the best and say as a candidate his election will be assured, his former experience as delegate and president rendering him so valuable a man that the union will never pass him by for an untried and unknown quantity.

Homer Melick, of Specifications, is another candidate for delegate whose name I have never reached, such has been the demand upon my limited space; but I now endeavor to make amends by giving it as my opinion that his large acquaintance, backed up by the fact that he is known to be an earnest, faithful union man and energetic in the performance of all duties that have been incumbent on him to perform, will bring him consideration from the membershtp that can scarcely fail to elect him. Homer Melick deserves well at the hands of Columbia Union.

* * * *

By the way, speaking of J. Ligon King above, I had forgotten his army experience and had his military exploits associated in my mind with the Morton Cadets or some of the local military organizations, though I now remember a very vivid encounter between him and a snake while he was a soldier. In view of the facts, I withdraw the "tin."

* * * *

In Senate bill 4106, which relates to the control of the street and suburban railways of Washington, is a provision putting it in the power of the District Commissioners to say at what intersections the roads shall give transfers. It seems to me that they should be compelled to give free transfers wherever necessary to enable a passenger to make a continuous journey, regardless of the ownership of the roads; this to accommodate the public in return for the practically free use of the streets in the pursuit of their business. There is no good reason why a passenger should not have a transfer from the cars of one system to another without expense, and I believe it would increase the business of both companies. A workingman can not afford to pay two fares each way in getting to and from his work, and preferably he will walk and pay none, whereas by receiving transfers he would ride both ways and each company would get that much more business. Let us go to work and see if it can not be brought about. Why can not the union take action on a matter which affects so many of its members as this does?

* * * *

Dan Vaughan is first in the field with his cards, the design of which is in imitation of the union label, with a picture of Dan, fat jowls and all, in the center. It is a very neat, and its being the first out presages that he will be the first in.

* * * *

"Boo-hoo-hoo! Robby hit me?"
"Well, why don't you hit back?"
"'Cause I hit first, and then he Gave me an awful crack."
—Lyrics of Ligon.

* * * *

Harry Knapp, of the Times, paid us a visit late last week in the interest of his candidacy for delegate. The reception he received was so encouraging that he has reason to have big hopes of realizing his ambition.

* * * *

I received a note from a candidate the other day thanking me for a favorable notice of his candidacy. If this thing should become general my mail will be largely increased.

* * * *

Recently I have received communications from two fraternal insurance organizations to which I belong informing me that in the event of my decease it will be necessary to have my cold remains identified by two members of the organization, a prodding which I have earned by reason of failure to attend meetings in the recent past. In one case I appointed identifiers; in the other there are many who will be glad to perform that office for my heirs and assigns. But how about you fellows who haven't the excuse of having been on night work for two years and a half?

* * * *

My friend, Joseph E. Goodkey, in his candidacy for delegate to the American Federation of Labor, received 31 indorsements of unions located in 23 States and Canada, ranging from Maine to California and from Ontario to Georgia, being sixth in a string of 11, some of whom received only the 5 indorsements necessary to get on the ticket. Look out for Goodkey to get there, for he is an indefatigable hustler.

* * * *

That we will have linotypes in the not remote future seems to be an assured fact, but we have every reason to feel certain that the Public Printer will not "machine" the office at one fell swoop, but will install them so gradually that their introduction will not displace any considerable number of compositors now regularly employed. It was the idea of the linotype people, Mr. Kennedy told me several weeks ago, to get their machines introduced just rapidly enough to take up the annual increase of work, which is estimated at 10 per cent, which, while it will dispense largely with the considerable temporary force now annually employed, will leave the regular force practically intact. We can trust the Public Printer to protect our interests.

* * * *

Our Record artist, W. I. Reed, gave us another specimen of his cartoon work last week, representing a number of the boys in characteristic positions and occupations. I hope to soon see his name among the great cartoonists of the age, if he does not waste too much time coddling his modesty.

* * * *

I am afraid it will be a source of deep grief to some of our outside friends who are so anxious to see the G. P. O. "machined" to discover that the operation has hurt us very little and helped them not at all. It is entirely foreign to my nature to entertain such uncharitable feelings, but it is impossible that they are not guided by one or the other motive.

The crow that up Salt River flew
So wildly shrieking "Hawkes!"
May yet serve as a meal for two—
This wicked crow that talks.

It seems to me silly to copy into this paper paragraphs that have already appeared in it, in order to reply to them, for anyone who would be interested in the reply would be likely to remember the original. But this may be only a matter of taste. I remember once a correspondent copied about half of my unapproachable witticisms, feeling real devilish and wanting to do me for all time; but the editor threw it into the waste basket. A simple reference to the paragraph that troubles you ought to be sufficient to identify it.

* * * *

I hear that the Knockers are going to have their banquet and backcapping session on April 10. If you are of sufficient importance to be backcapped you ought to attend. Being true to their name, they never speak ill of anyone who is present nor well of those absent.

* * * *

I never had much sympathy with the proposition to "give it to a man out of work" when the union has a service to perform, unless it is a little temporary job like counting the ballots. The union wants the best service possible all the time, aud the man persistently "out of a job" is not of that class.

A. F. BLOOMER.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

News From Big Six Collected By Our Special Correspondent.

The downpour of rain did not prevent a large attendance at the last meeting of Big 6. Important business to be transacted and the close proximity of the local and International elections, brought together a record-breaking crowd for an unusually stormy day. The politician, with his usual stage smile and his ever-ready proffered glad hand, circulated in all parts of the meeting room, and his continual buzzing was a source of annoyance to those who usually come to meetings to assist in conducting it for legitimate business.

It did not take long for President McCormick to admonish the whisperers and the business proceeded.

Ths following new members were elected: Robt. Owston, Edw. Tannenbaum, Walter E. Fleming, Max Pine, Wm. J. Clark, Henry T. Gregory, Annie Forster, Philip A. Kearney, John F. Hodgins, Edward Grasdorf, Vincent E. Donohue, John J. Pharleson, jr., Wm. H. Fielding, Emile Dermigny, Fred. G. Johnson, Albert A. Golden, Sanders F. Berk, and John G. Mitchell.

Reinstatements—Lewis C. Keller and Elmer E. Burtis.

The following sums of money were donated: Cripple Creek miners, $200; Waterbury (Conn.), Central Labor Union, in aid of a fair, $10; for the family of Mr. Shanley, who was killed on a railroad near Rome, N. Y., $10; Glove Workers of Fulton County, N. Y., who are on strike, $25; Asphalt Workers, $3; Parkersburg, W. Va., striking painters, $100.

The chairman of Strauss' chapel had charges of defalcation brought against him.

G. E. Geiswert, E. F. Stober, and B. M. Barrett were expelled for ratting by a unanimous vote.

The Times chapel presented a new scheme to compensate delegates to I. T. U. It allows $15 a day and carfare. It was placed on file.

The protest of seventy members of the Los Angeles Union against the re-election of James M. Lynch was also placed on file.

NOTES.

Police Captain Cornelius J. Hayes is an honorary member of No. 6.

Seventeen new situations were created on the "lobster" or third shift of the World. This cuts off considerable overtime.

The termination of the book and job agreement the latter part of the year will mean an 8-hour day when the new contract is signed.

The deaths reported to Secretary Healy last week are: Harry Moylen, W. D. Conover, John Kaufuss, Philip Keller, and William Whiteside.

Joseph R. Buchanan's new book, "The Story of a Labor Agitator," is in great demand. The sale has exceeded the anticipations of the author, who is a member of Big 6.

Messrs. James Cunnion and John F. Dobbs appeared before the Appropriation Committee of the Legislature to urge the passage of the Municipal Printing Plant Bill. The bill was introduced by Assemblyman E. A. Miller, a member of No. 6 for twenty years.

Additions have been made to the third shift of the Journal which will cut off considerable overtime. The third shift works 7 hours, from 2 a. m. to 7 a. m. Heretofore the shift which began at 7 p. m. for eight hours were frequently required to stay over the regular time. This action meets with universal favor because it created more situations.

The Administration party held its preliminary caucus last Sunday. About 300 were in attendance. The election of officers and the selection and date of the nominating convention for officers of the Union were the only matters of importance acted upon. The Campaign Committee elected consists of Frank Conway, chairman; Walter H. McKee, vice-chairman; John H. McCarthy, secretary-treasurer. Committees on Literature, Platform and Ways and Means will be announced later. From present indications it seems that there will be three candidates in the field for the coming election—the present incumbent, P. H. McCormick, representing the Administration; Chas. H. Govan, anti-Administration, and George H. McKay, Independent, for many years a leading member of the Administration party and formerly Secretary and President of Big 6. President McCormick's successful administration during the past month entitles him to a second term, and the writer predicts a sweeping victory for him. The membership recognize—particularly the book and job men—that he is in a better position to handle the contemplated 8-hour question at the expiration of the agreement on January 1, 1905, than probably any man in the Union. The book and job men generally cast four-fifths of the vote at elections, and Mr. McCormick has been employed in a job office since his admission into the Union. Mr. Govan is an ex-delegate and a proofreader on the Herald. He has been on the lecture platform recently. Mr. McKay is employed in Bradstreet's, and is considered a shrewd union politician.

Death of James L. Welty.

James L. Welty, well-known as an employe of the Government Printing Office, died Saturday last of heart disease. Mr. Welty was a mute, but despite that fact was a good printer. His last work was done in the Sixth Division day force. He was 62 years of age at his death.

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning, the Rev. Dr. Williams, of Trinity church, officiating, and interment was had at Baltimore, Md.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Post Chapel.

And side issues.

Why apologize to "Bill Nye," Jeremiah?

Victor M. Hurley is on the sick list, suffering from an attack of grip.

D. L. Sandoe has sufficiently recovered from his recent illness to return to work.

Franklin Fisher, who had been on the sick list for a week or more, is again at work.

There should be no difficulty in catching—er—smallpox in the Potomac River just now.

A number of these items may not impress you as properly coming under the head of Post Chapel; but news is scarce.

As an indication that the rush is again on, improvised desks for the additional proof readers were called into use Saturday night.

Mr. Bloomer, having a much larger field and an unlimited capacity for writing things of interest, should not complain when another and less fortunate correspondent has a "scoop" now and then.

The average individual who has had the experience of explaining to his wife what happened at "lodge" will be willing to grant the poor Mormon polygamist a few concessions outside his domestic circle.

Proof readers should be careful how they pronounce words when they "make remarks." This has reference to "pre-ced-ence," which two of them hauled around by the tail as precedence at the last meeting of the union.

Stereotyper Clifford, of the Post, is the proud father of this week. A fifteen-pound boy arrived at his home a few days ago. Father and little one are doing well. I will soon make a specialty of reporting births—one every week, it seems.

An error was made last week in including the managing editor in the list of practical printers connected with the Post. I hasten to make the correction, and will add that the man who probably helped to convince the Public Printer that a certain machine is now all right, is a printer.

I have heard some employees of the G. P. O. gleefully remark: "Let the machines come; they will demonstrate their unfitness to do the work in the big office and will soon be fired out." Such men will find out how deluded they have been and will naturally be the ones to regret the installation of the iron typesetters.

George Charles has the pip. His physician at first advised him to remain indoors for a few days, but George argued against this. Other expedients were resorted to without success, and finally the medico, failing to impress his patient with the seriousness of his case, said: "Well, then, play the races if you must, but don't fall into the water when attempting to cross the bridge."

I was "scooped" last week in the matter of a clipping from the Baltimore News praising my foreman. However, my assistant foreman, Frank S. Lerch, also showed staying powers during the period covered by that item, and this only goes to bear out that old adage: "You can't keep a Pennsylvania Dutchman down." Both gentlemen are natives of the Keystone State, and to such the term "Dutchman" is usually applied.

Pard Bloomer, in his notice of the elevation of Tom Bynum to the Grand Chancellorship of the K. of P. of the District, overlooked, or was not familiar with, the fact that the man he succeeded, William M. Hodges, is a printer and the son of a printer. Mr. Hodges served his apprenticeship on the old Sunday Herald about thirty years ago, but has been for many years in the employ of Thomas E. Waggaman, real estate dealer.

A member of this chapel called my attention to the alleged fact that I was creating an impression, through my notes in THE TRADES UNIONIST, that this chapel is unanimously for President Lynch, and, although I believe he (the member) will eventually agree that the present head of our International body is good enough, he, like the other members of this chapel, makes a habit of thinking for himself. Realizing that the young man who aspires to the highest office within the gift of the membership has a few out-and-out supporters, on request of the aforesaid member, I tried to explain.

I am neither a poet nor a prophet, but since the father of our Joe S. Walsmith is suffering a disappointment over the birth of a grandchild whom he had hoped would be a boy, but proved to be of the other sex, I will change the poem dedicated to him and make it read this way:

CONSOLATION, GRANDPA.

Be of good cheer, dear grandpa;
You yet may have your fun
"By playing jokes and pranks upon
That cute little grandson."
First a little girl comes, then a little boy,
Despair will go to slaughter,
Your dented vanity transformed to joy—
A grandson and granddaughter.

First Division.

Pay day on Saturday again this turn-in. Keep the good work up.

Doc. Radley is not a candidate for treasurer—never has been a candidate for that office.

At a meeting of the ball players held Friday noon, Fred Berger was elected manager of the Document Division team.

They say machines will make such a sweeping change that even the services of Senator Pocher will have to be dispensed with.

Charlie Purdy is again making the dirt fly in the soup kitchen this week, Mr. Danenhower being again confined to his home by sickness.

We are still adding to our roll by working every night. We used to have Saturday night off, but it don't go any more. Sunday is getting more popular than ever.

Mrs. Fred Berger, wife of our popular messenger, has been in Sibley Hospital for several weeks suffering from the result of a serious operation, but is now on the road to recovery.

I read with a great deal of pleasure Joe King's letter in last week's TRADES UNIONIST, and especially that portion in answer to a remark in a former issue regarding "tin soldiers." Joe can take care of himself in most instances.

Sam Esmay, who has been ill for so long, is still under the doctor's care, and prospects for being able to work inside of two weeks very poor. Mr. Esmay has been particularly unfortunate, having had a great deal of sickness in his family this winter.

There are other delegatorial candidates in the field, of course, and some mighty good ones, too. But there is one who I am not alone in thinking will carry the credentials—and that is Phillip S. Steele. When his name is mentioned it is noticeable that there is no knocking. Everyone has a good word for Philip, and he has earned it by long and faithful service to the cause of unionism. When you start picking the winners don't forget to put him at the top, for that's where he'll surely land.

Brother Belcher, of the Third Division, handed me one in last week's issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST, and incidentally furnished me with a name; for all of which I am duly grateful. In the first place, Mr. B. accuses me of the heinous offense of being nameless, and accuses my parents with neglecting to furnish me with one. If I remember rightly it is only very recently that he himself has owned to having one, and since that time seems to think the rest of us ought to follow suit or be ostracised. I don't know anything about Goodkey's house, or the crows who are going to "holler" (as he calls it) over the place. I do know that at least one union—Los Angeles—gave Mr. Lynch an "unanimous" indorsement, and that a vigorous protest was made by over seventy members of that "unanimous" union. It is easy to get an indorsement from most unions. Usually the first one who asks for one gets it. But one swallow doesn't make a summer, and you'll find, Brother B., that it takes a lot beside indorsements to elect a president. I don't think even Mr. Lynch would claim that he and he alone, as president of the International Typographical Union, accomplished all that Mr. Belcher credits him with. I venture to say that Mr. Hawkes had a very large finger in all of those pies. It would be a good thing for the "stand-patters" and "let-well-enough-alone" people, to wake up. What is the use of an I. T. U. election, anyway? Why not appoint some good man like Lynch for life; and I guess that's what it amounts to according to Mr. Belcher. If that was the case it wouldn't be necessary to bother about union politics, and we could employ our leisure hours in the study of music, or some equally enticing art.

Third Division.

Saturday, March 12, was the third continuous Saturday pay-day.

Elmer Dement, while using the rule cutter last Monday, severely lacerated his thumb, his hand slipping just as the cutter came down. Boys will be boys.

A letter from Hoyt Holton says that his stay in Philadelphia has done him a world of good, and promises of future help are satisfactory.

The Official Gazette man announces that "Spring has come." Would it not be safer to say, after the manner of the chairman when the vote is nearly even, "Spring appears to have come?"

T. Frank Hall, slug 45, Missouri River pirate and candidate for delegate to St. Louis, was recently elected a trustee of the Allied Printing Trades Council. He is a good man to vote for.

Many a man is credited with having "sporting blood in his veins" when an analysis would show that it is nothing but booze in his blood.

There is a great deal of sense in the above, written by the Post paragrapher.

Titus F. Ellis never forgets those who do him a good turn, and incidentally he is always ready to do anybody else a good turn. That sort of a man is a good one to tie to. Vote for him for delegate.

Dear Mr. "Lamentations of Jeremiah," you should have said Truthful James instead of Bill Nye. It was Truthful who made use of the expression: "For ways that are dark and for tricks that are vain."

In putting a cross on your ballot opposite the name of Anna Wilson, you will be voting for a willing worker in the cause of Unionism. Those who are willing to work ahd that do work for us deserve the plums.

It has been sagely remarked that indorsements don't elect a man to office. It will be remembered that when Donnelly ran against Prescott for president of the I. T. U., Prescott got the lion's share of the indorsements; but Donnelly got the votes, and votes count.

J. S. Garner, in looking through an old 8-point Bruce cap-case last week, came across a working card made out in the name of C. A. Howle, for the month of August, 1896, and signed by Thos. W. Haworth, chairman. The owner can have the same by proving property.

The following was copied from some Agricultural Department copy: "Five pigs raised from April to October averaged 150 pounds and were only fed one month before killing time." Those pigs must have been like the Texas frog, which goes without eating most of the time.

I understand that Farmer Wood, of the correcting alley, also of Bladensburg, was recently made the happy father of a brand-new little boy. This one, added to the previous invoice, foots up seven, and there would seem to be some ground for the rumor that the price of eggs will go up.

On the 9th inst. we were honored by a call from Dexter S. Hussey, of the Times chapel, who incidentally did a little electioneering for T. C. Parsons. Perhaps the other down-town candidates should be warned that Mr. Hussey has a mighty persuasive way, especially when saying nice things about his friend Parsons.

This division received an official call last Saturday morning from T. C. Parsons, chairman of the Times chapel, in his capacity of candidate for downtown delegate to St. Louis. It is no exaggeration to say that Mr. Parsons gathered in most of us, and will surely give his opponents plenty of work if they set out to defeat him.

The way some persons leave their dirty water in the wash bowls would almost lead one to think they want to save it for next time so as to avoid the delay caused by drawing clean water. Everything about the new Government Printing Office is suggestive of cleanliness except the persons guilty of this disgusting habit. Will nothing reclaim them to habits of decency, or are they so steeped in filth that they prefer, like pigs, to wallow in it?

The scheme of the Second Division to form a social club which shall be exclusively a Second Division affair is strikingly unjust to the Woman's Auxiliary, an organization which has put in a year of the hardest kind of work in aid of the objects of the Union. The thing to do is to introduce your wives, daughters, and sisters to the Auxiliary, make active members of them, and you will have the social feature you want, while co-operating in the aims and the purposes of the Union. Just give this matter the right kind of consideration, gentlemen, and I am sure you will agree with me.

Two discoveries in medicine are announced: First, the new Austrian drug, Ascatco, for catarrh and asthma, evidences of the curative power of which "are pouring in from all parts of the country," says the Post of the 13th inst. The Austrian dispensary, No. 6 East Fourteenth street, New York, has been empowered to distribute sample bottles free by mail on application to persons in all parts of the country. The dose is 7 drops twice daily, and 500 drops will cure obstinate cases. Second is the discovery by French physicians of a cure for constipation, or "intestinal dyspepsia." By swallowing, once a day or less oftener, a little gluten capsule containing tartaric acid—nothing else—"the whole man, or woman, is transformed, passing from nightmare into radiant day!!"

The Benning Races.

The spring meeting of the Washington Jockey Club opens on Thursday, March 24, and will close on Thursday, April 14, making nineteen days of high-class racing.

Superintendent Strahan has made many improvements at this beautiful course since the fall meeting, and Secretary Walton has received entries from the best stables in the country; in fact the usual stable room is overtaxed to accommodate the owners of horses who desire to start the regular season at Benning.

With each recurring year the Benning course has advanced in popularity with the public and can now compare favorably with the old Ivy City course in its palmiest days.

Mr. T. F. Ellis.

The above-named popular and excellent gentleman is, as all of the resident typographical fraternity know, one of the several candidates to represent Columbia Union in the coming St. Louis convention. The aspirants may be fittingly termed good delegate material. Some of them are better equipped than the others for the honorable and onerous incumbent duties. I have no hesitancy in classing Mr. Ellis as one of the best. He is eminently conservative, to use that most elastic and worn word, in dealing with questions of importance to unionism.

He is a man of good judgment, well-poised mind, broad views. To these excellencies may be added the significant fact that, as to St. Louis, Mr. Ellis is "to the manner born." Thus he can be doubly useful and vastly helpful, in capacity as a delegate, to the many of our craft who will visit St. Louis and to those others who will go to the Western city as representatives of Columbia. We of the Second expect to elect Mr. Ellis. Our worthy, important division has had few official or even committee honors bestowed upon it. We are ardent in the belief that one of the quartette of delegates should come from our contingent. Mr. Ellis is that one.

CHAIRMAN.

ALLIED BUILDING TRADES.

Meeting of March 15, 1904.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades of the Central Labor Union was call to order at the usual hour by chairman Wells.

Roll call disclosed the presence of 44 delegates from 23 local unions.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read, and, after considerable discussion indulged in by Delegates Reilly, McGuire, and Allison, approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From William Tindall, secretary to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, containing information as to who had charge of work on the filtration plant. The secretary was directed to acknowledge receipt of same and thank the Commissioners for the information furnished.

From John Stephen Sewell, captain of Corps of Engineers, relative to the E. Keeler Co. violating eight-hour law at Washington Barracks. The secretary was directed to acknowledge the receipt of same.

From Samuel J. Prescott & Co., acknowledging receipt of letters from secretary under date of the 10th instant. Placed on file.

From E. C. Graham, secretary of the Employing Contractors Association of the Building Trades, containing the list of members of the Master Builders Association, and asking that he be advised if any of the names were on the unfair list of the Council of Allied Building Trades or its affiliated unions. The secretary was directed to inform the Employing Contractors Association that none of the names on the list were on the unfair list of the Council of Allied Building Trades and that we were not in a position to say what firms were on the unfair list of the affiliated unions, and without knowing why such information was sought, and until we were firmly convinced that the Employers Association was composed of persons who exclusively employed union labor, it would not be advisable to endeavor to obtain the information sought.

From Granite Cutters Union, stating that their jurisdiction included the cutting of all granite from the roughest piece of curb to the finest piece of statuary. Filed.

From Local Union, No. 190, Brotherhood of Carpenters; and the Steam Fitters Union, protesting against the action of the Council in declaring off the strike against the Woodley, Cecil, Windsor, and Roechambeau apartment houses. Filed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

From Central Labor Union, announcing that the reception to President Samuel Gompers would be held at Typographical Temple, on Thursday, March 24; also that Stone Masons Union had filed trade jurisdiction.

Committee to investigate credentials from Upholsterers Union, No. 58, reported progress.

Trustees stated that they would endeavor to have report at the next meeting.

There being no report from the By Laws Committee, the secretary was directed to inform the chairman of the committee to submit report at the next meeting.

ROLL CALL.

Hod Carriers stated that they were still having trouble with J. H. Nolan, and asked the assistance of the Business Agent with the Master Builders Association.

Glaziers asked assistance of Carpenters, Painters, and Business Agent with Barber & Ross.

Amalgamated Carpenters stated that the Business Agents of both Carpenters Unions had been unsuccessful in their efforts to unionize the shop of J. H. Nolan.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The Secretary was directed to prefer charges to the Master Builders Association against J. H. Nolan for employing nonunion men.

The Secretary was directed to make but one roll call, and that under head of unions to submit business.

NEW BUSINESS.

The Secretary was directed to purchase six gas lamps for halls.

Robert T. Bray has entirely recovered from an attack of grippe.

"Butt in" all you like, friend "Jeremiah," for you seem very good-natured.

My dear "Jeremiah:" Please make yourself known to me. I have a proposition to make to you.

We are truly thankful for past days of sunshine, but we still need some l. c h's—and a dictionary.

A desk in the Ring Alley has been assigned Miss Fell. The reason of this is that "Merit will tell!"

A great many young ladies pass through our Room during lunch time, but none prettier than a tall brunette from upstairs—a Miss B.

Assistant Foreman Zeigler is certainly one of the most modest men of authority in the G. P. O. He is very capable, and a popular gentleman as well.

Gus Laing is temporarily employed in the ring alley. Gus has been sick, and this relief from the "strenuous life" will help him to get in condition again.

The opinion of Proofreader Davis is often sought by the puzzled comp., and great reliance is placed in him. Mr. Davis is certainly a popular and stylish young man.

Every time a certain "print" goes in the Proof Room—which is frequent—to "knock" on errors marked, the "faithful" tip off the "boss" by yelling: "Major, Dodge!"

In the G. P. O. baseball league, one of the printer teams will be made up from the Spess, Gazette, Job Room, and the several branch divisions. Looks like nine good men ought to be found in that bunch.

John Putnam, who has been in the Brainery for some time chalking up errors against the caseholders, is now holding cases and registering kicks agin the proofreader. John is good at anything assigned.

The Ladies' Auxiliary will hold its next regular meeting on the 17th inst. at the Typographical Temple. Twenty-five candidate will be inititiated. The Auxiliary will give a progressive euchre on the 1st of April.

Capt. Will H. Way is not partial to the open windows on chilly days. Wherever there's a Will, there's a Way; and I guess wherever is our Way, he'll find the place a bit windy. However, keep a Way from the windy, Billy,

Miss Louise Gunton, of the Proof Room, was quite indisposed Monday, and therefore necessarily absent from the office. Ladies are missed by their associates who have the smiling countenance, gentle nature, and pleasant address of Miss Gunton.

Notice.—"Clerks" and "proofreaders" doing printers' work and drawing printers' salaries, who do not want "Society" to know it, will please apprise THE TRADES UNIONIST Spess correspondent with that fact, so the necessary "protection" can be given.

Frank Ward has "graduated" from Georgetown Hospital, and is now enjoying the salt air of Atlantic City. He expects to take a trip to Europe, leaving New York sometime in April. We certainly hope Frank will return to us with a new lease on life—and secure a machine.

John Sturgis says he hopes Ban Johnson will transfer the baseball graveyard from its present to the old Seventh street site. Mr. Sturgis lives just behind the grandstand, and being a baseball crank of the first water, can't withstand the temptation to attend the funeral ceremonies. Thus depression and heat go hand in hand with John in the good old summer time.

Chas. W. Kelly has changed his frame—165 to 57. He likes Alley 6 because there are only "fresh-air" cranks in it. Mr. Kelly didn't like the Spess when first assigned with us, but not being easily discouraged and having a sunshiny disposition, he has easily succeeded in mastering the style sufficiently to be occasionally rewarded with an "O. K." and the good will of the force as well. Kelly is a jolly good fellow, and work on the Spess isn't half bad when one has a side partner like him.

Andrew Parker, who lives somewhere across the Eastern Branch, some time ago made a poultry purchase with the view of producing eggs and chickens for home consumption. On Andy's complaining of the hens laying well, but refusing to give "birth" to chickens, some one suggested that he purchase a "setter." This he did a short while ago. On being interrogated as to present progress, Andy replied that he "didn't know what to expect now, since the confounded dog sucks every egg in sight." Say, Andy, what you need is a "pointer."

J. LIGON KING.

SPRING.

ALFRED DIETZ.

From out great heaps of melting snow,
From icy cold still flushed—aglow—
Emerges spring with joyous bound,
Runs swiftly, noiseless o'er the ground—
Opes drowsily her dreamy eyes,
Kept tightly closed 'neath winter skies;
Waves gracefully her magic wand
O'er dale and forest, lake and land.

A mantle rich of hopeful green
Spreads over all where snow had been,
And balmy breezes stir the air—
Perfume of flowets ev'rywhere;
And merry are the voices gay
Of romping children out at play,
And lighter feels old folks at home
At windows in the ev'ning gloam.

And songbirds sing sweet songs of praise
'Mongst leafing trees and shrubby maze;
Beside the silv'ry, babbling brook
The cattle find a shady nook.
A sunny life diffuses all
That had been under winter's thrall,
And voices have a laughing ring
Under the wand of magic spring.

And, then, at closing of the day,
When twilight hours their tints display,
The old, old story is retold
Of love that's young and love that's old:
How Cupid's well-directed dart
Plays havoc with the human heart—
Sends blushes to the youthful cheek
As hands are pressed and lips do meet.

Thus spring to all deals out her cheer
Till good old summer time is here—
Then slower moves her magic wand
O'er dale and forest, lake and land—
And finally she drops to sleep
When winter storms around her sweep
To dream of bygone springs—Arise
When sunshine warm will thaw the ice.

Official Gazette.

T. C. Parsons, of the Times, made a preliminary canvas of this division last Saturday.

Messrs. Harris, Keelon, and Montague were returned to their respective divisions Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Philip S. Steele, of the First Division, made a canvass of this room on Tuesday, and distributed his cards for delegate to St. Louis convention.

The suggestion of "Jeremiah" about the watchman opening the windows awhile in the morning is a good one. Hope it will prevail. The air is not of the best after being housed-up all night.

Fred. Davis refused to give an expression of opinion in relation to the Russian-Japanese war. He held that the President's order as to strict neutrality of Government officials sealed his lips.

Roasting is supposed to be good for a candidate on the David Harum theory that "fleas are good for a dog." John Purvis lamented over the loss of fifteen pounds good avoirdupois as a result of his last campaign. According to that candidates should not train down too fine before entering the race.

Simeon Johnston, is at least a consistent weather prophet. He predicted a rainfall for one night last week, and scheduled it for 9.15 p. m. He was discovered trudging around in a drizzle at about 8 p. m. with an umbrella tucked under his arm. When asked why he did not raise his umbrella, he remarked that "It is not raining, and it will not rain until 9.15 p. m. This is only a foggy dew."

Mrs. Wm. S. Waudby, of Rochester, chaplain of the International Woman's Auxiliary, delivered an interesting and instructive address on the subject of "Auxiliaries" to the wives, sisters, and daughters of the members of Syracuse Typographical Union, March 9th, and her efforts had much to do with the organizing of the Syracuse Womans' Auxiliary, which starts out with every promise of success.

Geo. S. Kauffman has a new pair of trousers which are a source of admiration of, at least, all the male members of the Gazette. They beggar description. They do not remind one of the Aurora Borealis; yet they contain all colors of the spectrum, from chrome yellow to vermillion, with all the intermediate shades of green and blue. When the light strikes him at a proper angle he radiates color like a prism.

Did you ever play progressive pit? Great fun! You shouldn't miss it. The Woman's Auxiliary may give a progressive pit party at Convention Hall or some other suitable place in the near future. They have a euchre party on hand for the 30th of March, and a joint entertainment with Columbia Union in April. Send in your application for membership to the Auxiliary. It will do you good to become acquainted with one another outside of the shop.

In last week's notes Miss Carrie L. Whitehead was referred to as a native of Alabama. She is a native of the State of Ohio and was visiting her sister, who resides in Alabama. She is very enthusiastic about her trip, however, and regrets the necessity for leaving the "Sunny South" so soon, where everything is in blossom at this time of year, and in marked contrast with the weather and conditions which greeted her on her return here. She gave a glowing description of a drive which she took on a fine shell road around Mobile Bay. The bay is semi-circular in form and the road about its edge is between a double row of magnolia trees in full bloom. On one side the bay and on the other beautiful residences and villas with well-kept gardens filled with sweet peas and flowers in profusion.

THE TRADES UNIONIST.

OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. VIII. No. 41. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, MARCH 24, 1904. Price, 3 Cents.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

Resolutions Adopted Asking For Summer Concerts at Night.

ACTION ON THE LOEFFLER CASE

Allied Label League Desires Further Extension—Legislative Committee's Report on Senate Bill 2833—Boot and Shoe Workers Want Their Label Advanced in Stores in This City.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order last Monday evening by Vice-President Brinkman.

The minutes of the last meeting were read, and, after correction, were approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From John F. Tobin, president Boot and Shoe Workers Union, stating that after keeping an agent in this city for the past three months advertising the Shoe Workers label no appreciable effect has been noticed, and asking if any suggestion could be made to change the present condition. To Allied Label League.

From Shingle Weavers Union, No. 9891, calling attention to unfair product in that trade. Referred to Carpenters Union.

From Allied Label League making report on expense incurred for printing and indorsing bill. Placed on file.

From Local No. 251, Bottlers Union, inclosing contract for indorsement of Central Labor Union. Referred to Contract Committee.

From E. J. Ratigan, chairman Gompers' Reception Committee, inclosing incidental expense account. Referred to Finance Committee.

From Belleville (Ill.) Trades Assembly calling attention to Willard Range Works, of St. Louis, Mo., and Eureka Range Works, of O'Fallon, Ill., being unfair to Stove Mounters International Union. Placed on file.

From Steel and Copper Plate Cleaners, No. 8810, stating that Michael Morgan will act as its representative in the Central Labor Union, vice R. S. Claiborne.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Engineers, No. 99, asked for a report on the Arlington Brewing Company matter.

Upholsterers requested that the Stumph & Lyford case be taken from the Grievance Committee and referred to a special committee. Granted.

Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen stated that they thought the Loeffler case could be settled through the Grievance Committee, and asked that that committee take the case in hand. Granted.

Allied Label League and Miscellaneous Trades Council requested that the Central Labor Union require all label and miscellaneous trades to affiliate with that section or withdraw from the Central Labor Union. Request refused on ground that time for drastic action was not opportune.

Beer Bottlers submitted an agreement, which, on favorable report to the Contract Committee, was indorsed.

Washington Lodge of Machinists presented a resolution directing the Secretary of the Central Labor Union to request Colonel Symons, Superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds, to have the proposed summer concerts by the Government bands given between the hours of 7 and 9 p. m., to permit of attendance by the working classes, who could not attend in the afternoon. The resolution was adopted.

The Legislative Committee reported on several bills, among which was the report on Senate bill 2833, authorizing the construction of the Great Falls and Old Dominion Railroad. The committee made a strong protest against the report of the District Commissioners in disapproving the proposed legislation.

Adjourned.

As to Mr. Hawkes.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 14, 1904.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

For several months I have been an interested reader of your paper, but this is my first attempt at "buttin' in." However, in recent issues of your paper I notice that many of your correspondents, who are opposed to the candidacy of Mr. Hawkes, lay particular stress upon the present prosperity of the I. T. U., together with the fact that many unions have increased their scale and lessened the working hours, as a reason why Mr. Lynch should be continued at the head of the International Union.

Indeed, the I. T. U. as an organization has made much progress during the past few years. The country has been prosperous, and local unions throughout the land have taken advantage of that prosperity. Here in Washington we have raised the scale and shortened the hours of labor. But, gentlemen, is there a man among us who would place the credit for that magnificent performance upon the shoulders of President Lynch? Mr. Lynch had nothing to do with it. The result was brought about simply because the committee, of which Frank N. Kidd was chairman, used excellent judgment and sound business tactics in dealing with the local Typotethæ.

Mr. Lynch has made an able officer. The men who have served him as advisers have served him well. George Washington served his country well as its first President. But at the expiration of his second term did he set up a howl for the retention of his office? Not so! The Father of His Country was content to share the honor of the Presidency of the young republic with others whom he knew to be as capable as he himself had proven. Mr. Lynch seems not to have been inoculated with the spirit of magnanimity which caused George Washington to decline a renomination for a third term. Evidently Mr. Lynch believes in the prosperity of Mr. Lynch along with the organization.

But is Mr. Lynch alone responsible for our present prosperity? In a circular recently issued by that gentleman he refers to past accomplishments as "we,"—himself and others—evidently meaning Mr. Hawkes, to whom should be given the credit for our great increase in membership, for as a co-worker in the cause of unionism, Mr. Hawkes' record stands unparalleled. But let us give Mr. Lynch all the credit which his most ardent supporters claim for him, and with all that should he be continued in office? I believe not, and I believe a majority of the members of No. 101 will think likewise on election day. Four years at the head of the organization are enough. He has had the honor and given the organization the very best service that he is capable of. To remain longer will be no advantage to the Union, and a disadvantage to himself, as the association of himself with the inside cliques and wings must necessarily place a handicap upon his future usefulness. Mr. Lynch is persona non grata with the National Typotethæ, and why should we force his presence upon that body when we have others more acceptable? Mr. Hawkes is not handicapped by any promises to inside cliques or political rings. He is a union diplomat in every sense of the word, and capable of piloting the greatest labor union on earth on its journey to peace and prosperity if elected to the presidency.

Fraternally yours,

CHAS. S. GUNN.

B. F. Hackman Dead.

B. F. Hackman, well-known as an old-time printer in this city and New Orleans, died Friday, March 18, 1904, of palsy, aged 64 years, at Confederate Soldiers' Home, Richmond, Va. Interment was at Hollywood Cemetery.

Mr. Hackman will be remembered as an employe of the G. P. O. at different periods of time, his last work being done there in the early nineties. He was foreman of the News in this city during the brief career of that afternoon paper, and for several years was foreman of the States at New Orleans, where he was compelled to come North on account of failing health. He was an inmate of the institution in which he died for some time before his death.

Specification Notes.

Who's holding up the Spess Sym. settlement?

Willie Connor has been transferred to the Second Division.

Wm. J. C. O'Brien is taking a little "balance" of leave. How we envy him.

Joel V. Carlton and A. J. Bartels have been sent back to the mines of the big building.

E. H. Tabler recently drew a transfer and is now setting phat tabs in the Second Division.

A. J. Arnold is on the sick list. So are Messrs. H. T. McConvey, Perry Grimes, Ogle, and Simms.

Stephen Smith, Howard S. Fleming, and Fred. W. Moore have been transferred. Sorry to see you go, boys.

Mr. Ware (Slug 117) is also now on the list as a "regular." "Shorty" is just the kind of a printer Captain Ramsey wants.

Jesse W. Morgan is now a "regular" Spess employe. And we are glad to have him, for he is a congenial fellow, and a splendid printer.

E. P. Cummings, of the Fifth Division, is reported as being desperately ill, and is not expected to live. This will be sad news to his host of friends.

Mr. Burton (174) asked to be returned to the Spess. He likes our Room. Of course he does. The Spess is the best division in the G. P. O. to work in in every way.

Paymaster Clifford is suffering from a stroke of paralysis. Both legs are affected. I chronicle this with sincere regret, knowing it will be accepted as very sad news indeed.

It has been suggested by a fair copyholder that the Public Printer should not give any single man a machine on the Spess who does not first marry one of the girls that the said machines may displace.

One chairman has requested me to agitate the non-shaking of hands by candidates, as it consumes unnecessary time of both chairman and printer, and, he says, it accomplishes little or no good. I guess this chairman is not a "jiner" or fraternity man.

"Louie" Vogt ("Sunny Jim), of the First Division, is an avowed candidate for the office of auditor. (Pard Bloomer may copy with safety.) Mr. Vogt is extensively and most favorably known and is fully competent to fill this most responsible position. The candidate who defeats "Louie" will be the winner sure.

Edwin W. Edmonston has patented a copyholder that is in very general use already, notwithstanding same has not been on the market more than ten days. It is a complete success, and a source of convenience in very many ways, taking up but little room on the upper end of the lower case, thus leaving the small-cap case uncovered at all times. I wouldn't be without one.

"Louie" Carroll says Kennedy remarked to the House Committee that by placing fifty machines in the Government Printing Office a reduction of 50 per cent of the expenses of printing would result. Now "Louis" says that what puzzles him is the fact that if fifty machines will reduce expenses 50 per cent, wont the introduction of one hundred machines cut off 100 per cent—or all expenses attached to printing? See Carroll.

The G. P. O. Veteran Club have secured new and more comfortable quarters at the hall northeast corner of G and Sixth streets northwest, where they will give a reception to the members and their friends the third Saturday of April. This is one of the most unique of all the soldiers' organizations, in that it is purely for social purposes and to enable the old vets and their families to become better acquainted with each other.

Union meetings are interesting; and the Spess people can be found there in plentiful numbers. Last Sunday's features were: Sam Gompers securing a stay in the reading of the minutes at its most interesting period; Dexter Hussey's refusal to be embarrassed by a lot of "horse play"—and a certain Arkansas horse laugh; Cos. Rodier's bright repartee and splendid voice—and willing response to several encores; a speech, in which was pictured a "rat" "honoring" our Union; the efforts of several candidates to scramble on the Secretary's band wagon after the sustaining vote, and John O'Brien's full-faced and futile effort to find a cuspidor.

A "new" man was assigned recently in the Spess, and on being handed "copy" he walked rapidly to his "frame." He returned to Mr. Carter's desk very soon, however.

"Boss," says he, "No one of you asked me to take this job; did you?"

"I don't reckon so," slowly answered Jim, looking up inquiringly.

"And no one saw me coming in here?" the "new man" continued.

"I expect not," said Jim.

"Well," positively replied the "print," "I'm going to tell you nobody needn't see me go out!"

"Why, what's the trouble?" spoke up the obliging copy dispenser.

"No trouble yet, and there isn't going to be any. Where's the nearest door! I want to slip out quietly and quickly, and before it is too late. Thanks! Good day!"

And he returned his copy to the desk, and hied himself away. His copy began as follows:

"15. The method of transmitting messages which consists in transforming electrical undulations into qualitatively corresponding magnetic undulations within a supplemental substantially constant magnetic field, producing thereby qualitatively corresponding resultant magnetic product undulations, equilibrating the torsional effects of the resultant magnetic undulations and causing thereby qualitatively corresponding mechanical vibrations quantitatively proportionate to the resultant magnetic product undulations, thereby quantatively enhancing the mechanical result while preserving therein the characteristic quality of the original electrical undulations, and causing qualitatively corresponding electrical undulations by means of said mechanical vibrations."

Do you blame him?

J. LIGON KING.

Ladies' dining rooms. R. A. Driscoll, N. Cap. and G. Oyster pan roast, 10c.

Proof Room Notes.

I am unalterably in favor of white European labor in preference to Mongolian and Malay Asiatic labor.

The accomplished and popular Dr. James R. Armstrong authorizes me to announce his candidacy for vice-president of No. 101.

The races are here, and the symposiums are preparing for a land-office business. Better invest your spare change in an Easter bonnet for your wife or in a supply of coal for next winter.

The number on the sick list is now above the average. I do not know all but those reported as seriously ill are Drs. R. I. Thomas and J. F. Atkinson, Major J. D. Russell, Dan C. Vaughan, and H. P. McKevitt.

It is wonderful how friendly all the big and little candidates are to labor. Tons of literature are already being distributed showing the vital claims of the contestants for the labor vote. The surprising feature is, that with so many devoted friends labor should have anything left to ask for.

John Moody, a veteran Wall Street authority says in his book that 440 big trusts control over 20 billions of capital, and that 35 defunct trusts have palmed off on the public over 600 million dollars of worthless paper. This is enough to build the Panama Canal and create the biggest navy in the world.

If there is any objection to any candidate it ought to be spoken out freely and honestly. To do this is everyone's right as well as his duty. But backcapping and knocking is an ugly and nasty trait. Vague hints and insinuations, when not supported by positive assertions by responsible parties ought to go for nothing among union men.

The vast variety of water-spouts in the G. P. O. and their cleansing efficiency greatly surpasses anything of the kind anywhere. "Needle baths" and all the stream, shower, duck, cold, hot and what not, however administered, or to whatever part of the human corpus, are not in it when compared with what we can enjoy on a cold frosty morning in our bath rooms.

Allegations have been made for some time that the labor unions were infested with spies. And now comes a New York daily paper and avers that labor organizations are honeycombed by these miscreants in a complete and systematic organization. It gives the name by which the chief is known at the headquarters in Cleveland, and also the name of the chief agent in New York City. It also publishes letters containing instruction from these agents to spies in the unions. Keep your eyes skinned and put none but tried union men on guard.

It should be a pleasure to every union printer to know that the Hon. Richard Bartholdt has been renominated last Saturday at St. Louis as Representative in Congress. Mr. Bartholdt is a printer by trade and a thorough master of the art preservative. What is best of all, his sympathies are already with us. He has ably represented his district for many years, and his nomination is equivalent to a re-election. Not only printers, but labor unions generally have in him a true friend on whom they can rely.

With ten candidates or more from the big shop and five from down-town there is a plenty of good material to select from for delegates to St. Louis. And while others are expressing their opinion, allow me to give my preference for one—that is Titus F. Ellis. There are other candidates as able as he; but he is a St. Louis man, knows the city thoroughly, is a true blue, has rare social qualities, and while not behind others in executive ability, would make every union printer in the United States and Canada feel at home on that august occasion.

From recent developments it would appear that typesetting machines are to be installed in the G. P. O. But I am confident that there will be no violent displacement since their introduction is left to the discretion of the Public Printer. I should much dislike to appear as a flatterer or a sycophant, but I think that while the Public Printer recognizes the inevitable progress of the machine, I believe that the element of humanity will be a factor in determining his resolution. In this connection it will not be out of place to remark that the Lanston machine is considered the best for book work. And I am not interested in them, nor do I know any of the Lanston people.

Fifth Division.

The mother of Jas. H. Wiley will be ninety years old on the 6th of the coming April. She enjoys fine health.

Hugh P. Griffin has entirely recovered from a very severe cold—but daily expects another from that draught on his right.

B. H. Swain is applying himself pretty closely to his books just now. If we are not very much mistaken you can call him doctor in a few weeks.

Hindman Doxey severed his connection with this office last Monday—resigned. It is said that Mr. Doxey is going to Arizona for the benefit of his health.

A man at our elbow says the insurance business is good now. Fail to comprehend his language unless he anticipates many "fires" soon, owing to "defective flues." Hope not.

James A. Healy left us suddenly Saturday afternoon. He received a message that his mother was very ill at her home in Richmond, Va. We were much gratified to learn that she is improving.

The many readers of this paper will be pained to learn of the serious illness of Theodore M. Hanft, slug 40. Mr. Hanft has been home for some time and is in a very bad condition. Chronic rheumatism seems to be the ailment. He has long been employed in this division, and his many friends hope for a speedy recovery.

The printers in this office are fortunate. Good light, nice rooms, plenty of heat, and as good a lot of superior officers to work for as can be found in the country. All they ask is attention to business and good work and you are never molested. A reasonable request and everyone should take pleasure in trying to do his duty and doing it well.

We have always taken great pleasure in reading "Pard" Bloomer's letters. He is a splendid correspondent and displays marked ability as a writer, but shall have to take exception to his little reflection on J. Ligon King as the "tin soldier." Now, we have a long acquaintance with Friend King, and remember very well when he volunteered his services in defense of his country. He was accepted and went to the front prepared to fight against Spain should the occasion require it. Had his anatomy been filled with Spanish bullets possibly he would now be cherished in memory as a printer hero, but because that didn't happen he, with other brave fellows, is branded "tin soldier." That is wrong, "Pard," old boy. The mere act of volunteering your services for defense is courageous, not knowing results, etc. Then, again, to leave a nice position, good home, wife, and dear friends for the hardships of war deserves a better reflection than that. It is our desire to give praise whenever due, and we feel like saying hurrah for the young and old who fought for the country.

Night Bill Force.

Jim Brooke has struck up quite a friendly acquaintance with the Capitol Grounds squirrels. He is frequently seen their feeding them. They even climb up on his shoulder.

Well, the races commence to-day. For most of those who win, it only means a "gay"(?) time, and then remorse. For those who lose, it means remorse, despondency, and deprivation for dependant ones. Does it pay?

The genial armless guide of this office, Louis Neuer, made a pleasant call on this office Monday night. Asked if he was running for delegate, he said: "No, I am running for umpire of the G. P. O. Baseball League." He is a good umpire and has served most acceptably in that position in the past.

Mr. C. H. Davis, of Kansas and Oklahoma, now of the Third Division, who has distributed printed pictures of himself and family with a solicitation for Times' World-Fair trip coupons, and Mr. E. M. King, of this force, who is on the same lay, and incidently offers to pay 25 cents per 100 for them, have been outwitted by Mr. John H. O'Brien, who edged in a talk at the union meeting Sunday as to how his efforts in this same direction are being rewarded.

SECOND DIVISION ANNEX.

F. T. Razey went to Day Second last week.

John H. Malees, well-known in this office in years past, went to New York this week on the sad mission of burying his wife. He has the heartfelt sympathy of all on this force.

S. D. Barr, recently appointed as a temporary, is well known to the old timers. He was one of the "Mississippi River Pirates" in the "good old days." Of late he has been practicing dentistry.

A. M. Willingham is showing what he claims is a genuine Egyptian scarabeus 4,000 years old. It is a small charm of stone taken from the coffin of a mummy. On one side it represents a beetle. On the other side are some marks, alleged to be the title of the individual the mummy represented. An expert of the Smithsonian declares it is a fine specimen. An English captain who campaigned under General Kitchener presented it to Mr. Willingham.

THE Japs have lived up to their fish diet and done most of the whaling.

SOON sporty gents with scant resources will tell us all about the horses.

AN excuse sometimes made for the use of intoxicants is the condition of the Potomac water. Boil the water wagon.

AT least Korea may yet point with pride to the fact that she was the battle ground of one of the greatest wars of modern times.

THE question may yet arise as to whether it constitutes assault with intent to kill to knock a man down with a chunk of Potomac water.

DR. PARKHURST might have enjoyed something "equally as good" if he had been in Washington when BRISTOW lifted the lid off of Congress.

THE PARRY idea of the eight-hour work-day, done into rhyme, is something like this:

Eight hours in swinish inaction to snooze;
Eight hours to "soldier," and eight hours to booze.

But probably the following conception of ADAM BUGG comes nearer to the truth:

Eight hours of labor to progress to give;
Eight hours of slumber, and eight hours to live.

The Short Work-Day.

Those who attempt to fix the limits of the mechanic's work-day according to any unchangeable arrangement are engaged in a task as futile as any ever attempted by reckless radical or hidebound conservative. What labor organizations desire is to make the day as short as industrial conditions will permit. They hold that with improvement in the means of production should come improvement in the condition of those whose manual toil has so much to do with production. They insist upon this for the sake of the community at large as well as of the individual worker. For, as we must constantly insist, free institutions, in the broad sense of the term, are only possible where the great mass of the community are well-fed, healthy, and contented and, as a consequence, intelligent, lawabiding, and progressively conservative. The long work-day, in an age of machinery, with its specialized tasks and rapid processes, exhausts nervous energy, saps vitality, and is the inevitable cause of intemperance, ignorance, and general degeneration. The United States will lead the world so long as the working masses have time for healthy physical and mental development. If we should ever retrograde to the serfdom which is involved in the long work-day and low wages, then better a monarchy than the Republic.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

A recent letter from George A. Tracy, who is working on the San Francisco Call, gives a lot of news of former Washingtonians now on "the Coast." Big Ben Ferguson is still in that city. Bill Morrison, who worked on the Record years ago, is on the police force of Frisco, detailed as printer at headquarters. "Diagram" King is in Los Angeles. Charlie Holden, who worked on the Record twenty years ago, is also in Frisco, looking as young as he did in the old days. Fred Decker, recently an operator on the Post, is in Los Angeles. Kuhn, who worked in Cadick's for a long time, is in Portland, passing through San Francisco on his way there. Will Israel, another G. P. O. boy of years ago, is one of the Mergenthaler "swifts" of the Coast. "Thin Space" Scott is on Hearst's Examiner. Seneca McNeil, whom many now in this city have known in years gone by, died at Spokane, Wash., six months or more ago.

Dick Hicks, who has often visited this city in his capacity as a tourist, had made a brief stay in Frisco. He had been in South Africa, whither he had gone from New Orleans as a "mule skinner" during the Boer War, and he told a most doleful tale of the way the "limejuicers" turned him down in Cape Town when he showed up for work. The theory, he said, of exchanging International union cards may be all right on paper, but it don't work out. The officers of the union, while they did not flatly refuse to accept his I. T. U. card, told him very plainly that if he insisted on depositing it, it would only be a source of expense to him, saying, "You simply can't work in this town, for we have no work for foreigners."

Topsy Fraid-Cat seems to want to get in on the "tin soldier" discussion, though admitting that Ligon King can take care of himself "in most instances." I suppose he thinks this is an instance where even he could help. Belcher can make you climb a tree, pussy. Scat!

Friend Broderick is right in his surmise that I did not know that Tom Bynum succeeded a printer as Grand Chancellor, K. P., and I am equally ignorant whether or not the J. W. Carter who is the present Grand Vice-Chancellor is our noble Roman of that name. Carter is a common sort of a name, you know.

I suppose Ligon King will use three-quarters of a column chewing me up this week. And yet he ought to feel under obligations to me for giving him a chance to set forth his military prowess—again.

Candidates who are playing for popularity by advocating some pet project will do well to remember that projects have opponents as well as advocates, and that enemies are about fourteen times as active as friends.

Adrian M. Jones, formerly of this city, later of the entire boundless West, is now makeup on the Los Angeles Herald, according to A. J. E. Hubbard's Labor News.

* * * *

The Century for March had an article by a stonecutter, Robert Bruce Grant, entitled "The Eye of Fear," which is better adapted to make the reason for the existance of trades unions clear to those totally unacquainted with the subject, and who have the natural prejudice of the uninformed regarding such organizations, than any I remember having read. After a brief introduction he draws this parallel:

Once, when a young man left the farm and knew something of a trade, he sought for work wherever he listed, and was free to do so. To-day if he does the same thing he runs against the shop steward, who demands his card. If he hasn't one, he doesn't work until he gets one. The deduction from this is that the American workman has lost one of the most sacred rights, that of working where and how he pleases.

Ages ago a man left his lair to hunt for meat and sought it where and in what way he pleased, even if he had to chop another's head off to get it, provided he did not get his own head chopped off. To-day a man leaves his home to seek for food, and runs athwart laws, national and otherwise, which say he shall seek it thus and so, and shall not kill another and take it from him. We may deduce from this that man has lost his time-honored right to chop and be chopped.

He then goes on to show the necessity of the trade union, in the interest of both employee and employer, to regulate the trade, with rare argumentative force, though the entire article is extraordinarily eventempered. It should be read everywhere, and especially by weak-kneed unionists who have some qualms of conscience regarding the right of employes to combine in their own interest.

Why can't the correspondents be pretty and play nice, instead of scratching each others' faces and pulling each others' hair?

Howard G. Brown came in and visited us the other night. He wants to be treasurer, and his education as an auditor eminently fits him for the job.

I have seen a copy of the Union Printers' Bulletin, issued at Chicago in the interest of the candidacy of Mr. Hawkes for president of the I. T. U., devoted to glorifying its candidate and throwing mud at Mr. Lynch. Notice is given to correspondents in this effect:

Communications for publication must be signed by the writer.

Anonymous communications or those over a nom de plume will not be printed.

Notwithstanding which no communication in it has a signature of any kind. The one from this city is extremely kidlike, and mentions my tears over this union's nomination of Hawkes, as though the methods used were not enough to make the angels weep. A graveyard-whistle cheerfulness pervades this advocate of a weak cause that makes one charitable.

"Trades Unionism: A Reply to the Criticism of Trades Union Methods contained in the Address of President Charles W. Eliot, of Harvard, in Faneuil Hall, February 7, 1904. By Frank K. Foster, speaking under the auspices of the Boston Central Labor Union, in Faneuil Hall, February 21, 1904," is the title of a 27-page pamphlet sent out by Boston Union. It is one of the ablest papers I have ever read and a complete answer to all the arguments of the learned professor, which he considers seriatim. It ought to be read by every man, unionist or otherwise, interested in the labor question. Foster is a candidate for delegate to the A. F. of L. and ought to be elected.

The Executive Council of the I. T. U.' after settling the strike in the book and job offices of Boston "to the satisfaction of the union, were given a unanimous vote of thanks at a meeting attended by practically all members of the local," Secretary Bramwood writes me.

In the absence of the disbursing clerk, Maj. E. A. Clifford, who is suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism, Chief Clerk H. T. It there is any part of the work of the great printery with which he is not familiar I have yet to hear of it.

Woman's Auxiliary.

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held Thursday evening, March 17. The attendance was good. Fifteen new members were elected, making the total membership at this time seventy-seven. Mrs. E. H. Thomas, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, reported that arrangements were about complete for the Euchre to be given at the Typographical Temple, March 30.

It is well known that the principal object of the Auxiliary is to "push the label." They are anxious to increase their membership and they invite every Union printer to urge his wife, mother, sister, or daughter to become a member. The initiation fee is fifty cents and the dues are only one dollar a year. Application cards will be supplied upon request.

THE POET.

WILLIAM TIPTON TALBOTT.

Bound in chains of contemplation
Broods the poet long;
Broods on future world-progression
Till his thoughts begin to freshen
Into golden song.

Many-mooded though his heart is—
With all passion fraught—
By the fireside, where the mart is,
In all places, love a part is
Of what he has taught.

Came the poet, child of gladness,
When the world was young,
Soothing life's untutored madness,
And unto the voice of sadness
Gave a sweeter tongue—

Blending music with the grinding
Of the wheels of life,
And with saintly eyesight finding
Beauty even mid the blinding
Storms of human strife.

Till at last he sadly pauses
In life's brighter beams,
Awed by care and care's grim causes,
Deafer to the world's applauses,
Dreaming hopeful dreams—

Dreams of truth's triumphal ditties,
Dreams of regions where
None so base but gently pities,
In the many-hearted cities,
Strugglers with despair;

Dreams of heroes calm and scarless,
Simplifying life;
Dreams of nations grand but warless,
Passing from the chill and starless
Night of human strife.

So to kindle and to cherish
In the human heart
Flames of thought less gross and garish,
Making vileness shrink and perish,
Is his special part.

And his song, however subtle,
More than joy can give,
Is not wholly false and futile,
If some part of instincts brutal
Thereby cease to live.

Official Gazette.

I don't think.

E. L. Scott is still on our sick list.

Why don't a correspondent from the Times and Star chapels mix in?

Messrs. James and Irwin have been returned to their respective divisions.

W. L. Gutelius distributed his cards of announcement as a candidate for delegate.

We don't need a dictionary. Jaques and the other fellows spell our "stuff" out for us.

Give your name to the chairman, E. G. Myers, for a subscription to THE TRADES UNIONIST.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of Columbia Union, held on March 17, was an enthusiastic one and a large number of new members were enrolled.

In the Specification notes of last week the Euchre Club of the Woman's Auxiliary was scheduled to meet April 1—All Fool's Day—instead of Wednesday, March 30.

Howard G. Brown, of the Record Clerk's Room, candidate for the office of Treasurer of Columbia Union, made a tour of this division a few days ago. I might say something real funny right here about the average; but I won't.

The comment of the Third Division correspondent, J. W. Belcher—in last week's TRADES UNIONIST—on the merits of the Woman's Auxiliary as a social organization, were timely and should attract the attention of Union compositors.

The Rebew Orchestra, conducted by Henry Weber, has issued a card announcing an entertainment for their benefit. This organization is composed largely of printers and they have given their services on many occasions free of charge. Their entertainment should be liberally patronized.

A colored man on a bicycle tried to eliminate Miss Wilson from the equation as a candidate on Saturday evening. At least, he succeeded in hurting her left wrist severely. She reported for work Monday morning. She says she is in the contest to the finish, and nothing less than an automobile will drive her out.

The G. P. O. Veteran Club gave its usual "social evening" on Saturday March 19, and a very enjoyable time was had by those who attended it. The entire programme (instrumental, vocal, etc.) was furnished by the Rebew Orchestra, after which refreshments were served by the Woman's Auxiliary of the G. P. O. Veteran Club.

The office and proof room have been equipped with new chairs of the swivel and lean-back variety. They are a vast improvement over the old chairs. What a change for the better has come over the running of printing offices in the last twenty years. In the 80's I worked in a shop in Boston where they would not permit the compositor to have a stool. A day's work was from ten to fourteen hours. It makes my feet ache to think of it.

And no other flat would do.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Post Chapel.

Baseball will soon be here. Hurray!

Victor Hurley has resumed operations after a brief sick spell.

Suspend judgment until you have met Miss McDonald, our "pleasant little woman" candidate for delegate.

John L. Kennedy would be in hard luck if it should become necessary for him to retnrn to the printing business. He is almost too old to learn to operate.

It is rumored that Orton T. Pierce, of the Post, will be numbered among the candidates for delegate from downtown, but he will neither deny nor confirm the report.

An entertaining and agreeable little woman visited us last Saturday taking orders for a popular book. The always gallant members of this force responded quite liberally.

If J. Ligon King's remarks in last week's TRADES UNIONIST had reference to Proof Reader Fred Davis, formerly of Scranton, Pa., I heartily agree with him. I would also take great pleasure in voting for the latter gentleman for delegate.

Mr. Philip S. Steele paid the Post chapel a visit last week, but arrived too late to personally interview the members. He left cards announcing his candidacy for delegate, however, and his friends here will see that his name is not overlooked.

A St. Louis man, well-known in Washington, who some time ago wrote disparaging comments as to the possibilities of the linotype has since applied to the company which makes that machine to be placed in charge of their exhibit at the World's Fair. Should the gentleman's ambition in this direction be gratified the employes of the G. P. O. who may visit the exhibit in the Exposition City will be given a cordial reception.

Mrs. Amelia Herbert, wife of Mr. J. T. Herbert, of the Post chapel, died suddenly last Friday at her home, Clifton Beach, Md. Besides her husband, two children survive her. The funeral took place Sunday at 3 p. m. Interment in the family cemetery. The death of Mrs Herbert removes a kind and loving wife, a devoted mother, and a charitable neighbor. The members of the Post chapel extend heartfelt sympathy to our fellow-craftsman in his sad bereavement.

The "President's Page" in the Typographical Journal contains a column of comment on "Railway Accommodations in Sweden" Does our retiring president expect to be thrown so far?—Chicago Union Printers' Bulletin. No; Mr. Lynch no doubt expects the International Union to extend so far under his next administration that it will become necessary for him to travel in many parts of the world; and Mr. Hawkes, good organizer that he is, will be useful in his present position.

A letter mailed in Dundee, Scotland, on January 27, after a circuitous journey via Tacoma, Wash., the San Francisco Dead Letter Section, and thence to the United States Dead Letter Office in this city, finally reached this chapel. It had been addressed to the "President of Chapel Washington Post Office, U. S. A." In all probability the letter had been handled by civil-service railway mail employes who could tell exactly how far it is to the moon, but who have a very vague idea as to the name and location of the Capital of the nation. The letter follows:

COURIER OFFICE,
DUNDEE, SCOTLAND,
January 27, 1904.

President of Chapel:

Dear Sir: Would you further favour the Courier Chapel by thanking your members for handsome photo and seasonable greetings, both of which were much appreciated by our staff.

We have had the photo framed, and it now occupies a prominent position in our caseroom.

With best wishes to all members of Washington Post staff, I am,
Yours sincerely,
PETER REID,
Clerk of Chapel.

Accompanying the above letter was a circular giving the history of a little difficulty the London Society of Compositors had had with the Master Printers' Association, but which was afterward amicably adjusted through the medium of Mr. John Burns, M. P. A full account of this matter was recited on page 275 of the March number of the Typographical Journal.

J. HERBERT BRODERICK.

First Division.

Tommy Solan was transferred to the Foundry Monday, which makes us shy a good ball player.

Congress got tired Friday and adjourned over, so we quit at 4.30 Saturday. Quite an event.

Glen W. Buckingham returned Monday after a bad attack of grip, which laid him up two weeks.

The Post says the printers ought to be able to hit the ball, as they are past masters in the art of knocking.

Dan L. Sansom was transferred to this room from the Job Annex last week, and is holding down slug 23.

Messrs. Fletcher, Furbershaw, and McKenzie were transferred to the State Department branch Monday morning.

The Union Investment Company is now being organized by some of the employes of the office and will have offices at 735 North Capitol street. Shares of stock will be $5 each and are on sale for all who care to invest.

A meeting of the base ball players Sunday was not very well attended and things are somewhat tangled in regard to the labor question. It's getting near the glad, happy spring time, and something "better had" be doing soon.

The hosts of friends and admirers of the well-known and popular assistant foreman of printing, Mr. J. M. A. Spottswood, will be pleased to learn that he is is slowly recovering from his protracted illness of nearly four weeks. We understand his sickness is attributable to the irregular action of the heart. That he may be speedily restored to good health and returned to office is the universal wish.

Some of the high class bands of this city would do well to look over this department when in search of players. Some already play with local organizations, but there are others. R. L. Davidson, formerly of Bristol, Tenn., is an exceptionally fine tuba player, and played in Bristol for over twenty years. Some time ago there was a movement started to organize a band in the G. P. O, but for some reason or other it fell through. Why not try. There is plenty of material. I could name, off hand, a dozen players of different instruments who have had plenty of experience in brass bands, and don't think it would be very hard to organize one.

In studying the statistics as published in the Journal I find that when Mr. Lynch was inaugurated he found a plethoric treasury and no demands exorbitant. Since that time the per capita tax has been increased 10 cents a month, or 33⅓ per cent, and through the wanton extravagance of the present adminstration he leaves the organization bankrupt. The Cincinnati convention, taking a peep at the extravagance of the adminstration directed Mr. Lynch to appoint, not to exceed, four organizers one of whom should be the First Vice-President. He carried out that mandate by commissioning eighty, who expended $17,664 49 of the I. T. U. money the following year. Will Mr. Belcher, who seems to have inside information on the vote of Chicago nominating, Mr. Hawkes kindly inform the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST the figures by which Mr. Hawkes was nominated in Indianapolis where Mr. Lynch had his residence for more than three years. Why was it necessary to send two organizers to Detroit to get the nomination of that Union.

Jesse M. Burton is back on Spess again.

Chas. W. S. Huff has been transferred to the Night Bill Force.

Kane Mahoney and F. T. Razey are now located here, the latter coming from the Night Second.

W. R. Bromley, well known hereabouts, a Baltimorean, recently located in this division, left for New York last week.

Eugene Conner, Joel Carlton, and H. S. Fleming, the latter two transfers from Spess, reported here Monday morning.

A much-needed load of 10-point small-caps has arrived, for which we are thankful; but how about lower-case h's and w's, Lem?

S. M. White, who has been on the emergency list since the Baltimore fire, resigned on the 17th, and returned to that city, where a situation awaited him.

Jesse Morgan has returned from his sad mission and reports everything booming in the Southland. Jesse is a good printer, and as "Merit will tell" he has been given regular cases on the Spess.

Major Clifford, our genial and obliging paymaster, has been confined to his home for the past ten days, suffering from a complication of diseases. We all regret his absence and unite in wishing for a speedy recovery.

Keep your eye on Henry M. Allen in the bowling contest which begins at the Palace next week. Hank has been bowling them over in championship style lately, and steadily improving. Here's a dark horse worth playing for a place, anyhow.

An exciting bowling contest between teams representing the Second and Third Divisions took place on Saturday night at the Palace. The prize was a box of cigars presented by Titus F. Ellis. While Robinson and McAloon, of the Third, rolled brilliant games, their partners were unable to assist, and the team from this division scored an easy victory.

I note with pleasure the unanimity with which my fellow-correspondents praise our candidate—Titus F. Ellis—and want to say that our confidence in his success is fully equal to the praise given. Here is a level-headed, conservative man, of proven ability in committee work, a regular attendant at Union meetings and thoroughly conversant with Union politics. Of large stature, fluent speech, and magnetic personality he will surely be a credit to Columbia Union. I quote the words of a member of St. Louis Union, writing to Mr. Ellis recently: "If Columbia Union wants anything from the next convention they should send you, as your large acquaintance here will materially assist you." Mr. Ellis was an active member of St. Louis Union back in the 80's, and is still a voter there. Aside from purely business matters his presence on our delegation would no doubt add greatly to the social pleasures of those who make the trip from here.

SECRETARY.

Oysters in every style at R. A. Driscoll's, North Capitol and G streets. Overholt whisky, 10c.

Third Division.

William H. Bright desires to announce himself for teller at the May election. William is a quiet, unassuming, and industrious young man, and if anybody deserves this honor at the hands of the chapel, he does.

Mr. George G. Seibold, of the Times ad room, candidate for Secretary of Columbia Union, was a caller several days ago. It is rumored that if Mr. Seibold should be elected Secretary he would be a "crackerjack." He made a very favorable impression on the boys.

To settle a controversy I will state that the bill providing for arrears of leave to employees of the Government Printing Office, introduced in the Senate sometime in December by Senator Penrose, did not pass that body, as some suppose. The bill which passed the Senate was that reported by Senator Platt, providing for thirty days' leave with pay to employees of this office from and after its passage.

An honor which I thoroughly appreciated was an introduction to W. N. Brockwell, Chairman of the Nominations Committee of the Union, who passed through the room one day recently. Without Mr. Brockwell our meetings would be tame affairs; but just let him report the findings of his committee on a batch of candidates, and even James Monroe Kreiter is reduced to innocuous desuetude; or, let any question come before us requiring quick wit and sound sense, and Mr. Brockwell by common consent dominates the scene and a ready solution of the difficulty is found. The poet (slightly altered) says:

Nature and nature's laws lay, hid in night—
God said, let Brockwell live! and all was light.

Our first caller during the past week was Philip S. Steele, of the First Division, who left a neat card stating that he was a candidate for delegate. Mr. Steele informed me that he had once before been a delegate to the I. T. U. convention, held at St. Louis in 1874, having been sent by Albany Union. He was the father of the "Uniform Election Law," compelling all unions to vote for delegates on the same day, and also originated the law to prevent one office from borrowing pages of another. "I love my union next to my family, my God, and my church," said Mr. Steele, "and would feel it a great honor to be allowed to represent my fellow-craftsmen once more at St. Louis, after a lapse of thirty years."

J. W. BELCHER.

Treasury Division.

James B. Williamson (Uncle Jimmie) is still absent on account of sickness.

H. D. Langdon has been absent for the past ten days on account of sickness.

Miss Grace E. Gardner, temporary, is a new addition to the press room of this division.

Now that the racing season has commenced, the "sym" ought to do a flourishing business for a while.

Miss Annie F. Leonard and Gertie Stern returned to work recently, after an absence of several days on account of sickness.

Joseph H. Byrne was absent several days recently on account of the death of his brothers' wife, which occurred at their home in Alexandria, Va.

George Healey spends his spare time reading chicken books. George expects to raise more chickens than anybody in Langdon this summer.

The many friends of W. A. DeGroot will be sorry to learn that he is sick at his home in Virginia. Mr. DeGroots' wife has also been an invalid for the past year.

The Chairman received a souvenir postal card of the St. Louis Exposition from Titus F. Ellis announcing to the members of the chapel his candidacy for delegate.

Two employes of this division have recently bought themselves new homes, one on Rhode Island avenue near First street and the other in Mt. Pleasant. When the racing season in over there will probably be others to follow suit.

W. J. (Jud) Wilkinson, for several years employed Specifications, a short while in this division, now connected with the Insurance Department, State of Maryland, located at Baltimore, has patented a voting machine, known as The W. J. Wilkinson Voting Machine. Judging from the circular explaining its merits, it ought to prove a financial success to the inventor.

Now that the season for baseball is at hand and the different divisions of the G. P. O. are beginning to organize clubs, the following team is presented from this division: Wm. A. Whitney, pitcher; Edwin Collar, catcher; T. McMahon, first-base; John Mulroy, second base; Ed. L. Winne, short stop; M. G. Molan, third base; Theophilus McClure, right field; W. A. DeGroot, center field; Mike Molan, captain; Ira Taylor, mascot.

The By-Laws Committee failing to submit a report, the work was taken out of their hands, the committee discharged, and the chair appointed Delegates Nothnagel, Ryan, Lewis, Thompson, and Wells as By-Laws Committee.

The minutes of meeting of the Executive Board of March 18, were read and the action of the Board concurred in.

Tile Layers asked for information as to union men working with non-union men on Rochambeau apartment house, and asked that the job be declared unfair. Delegate Winslow raised point of order on the request, which, after considerable discussion, was sustained.

The Tile Layers and Painters then requested that a meeting of the Executive Board be called at an early date to consider grievances existing on Rochambeau apartment house.

The request was favored by Delegates McClelland, Cooper, Winslow, Lewis, and Thompson, and opposed by Delegates Gilmore and McKay.

Delegate McKay asked if the request was endorsed by the respective unions.

The secretary stated that the request was made in strict conformance of the law relative to use of card, and at his suggestion the business agents had brought the matter to the attention of the Council. The request was granted by a vote of 23 to 5.

NEW BUSINESS.

Delegate Davidson asked that the Board of Arbitration be requested to use their good offices to facilitate the meetings of conciliation committees so that valauble time would not be lost when it was necessary that such meetings be held. It was so ordered.

Delegate Gilmore tendered his resignation as a member of the Executive Board, which was accepted, and Delegate Rodier, at the suggestion of the delegates from Second Branch of Amalgamated Society, was appointed to serve the unexpired term.

There being no further business brought to the attention of the Council, the meeting adjourned.

GRANDMA SOLICITOUS.

HELEN NELSON-DOOCY.

How I ponder, who will love me
When youth's charms have fled,
When the roses all have withered
And the thorns alone are left?

In the heydey of life's summer
Sweet it is to luxuriate in smiles,
Quaffing flattery's honeyed chalice
Willing ensnared in her wiles.

Every brooklet laughs and bubbles,
Every bird note thrills with love,
E'er the zephyr is soft and tender
Sunbeams motes the leaves above.

Gliding down the slope of autumn,
There the dark clouds mask the sun;
Musing, in the lengthening shadows
Of a day that is done.

Gowned in plain and somber raiment,
Lost in every subtle grace;
Gone the bronze glint of tresses
Vanished—every charm of face.

Who will share my lowly quiet,
Hold my shriveled fingers fondly
Through life's frosty winter and Life's doubtful care?

Mr. Belcher Replies.

With some reluctance I have arrived at the conclusion that by the publication of an anonymous communication in THE TRADES UNIONIST of March 10, headed "Beethoven as a Composer," and giving the views of "a well-known gentleman, who stands high in Washington musical circles as a teacher and critic," the editor purposely set up a man of straw for me to knock down. There is only one mitigating circumstance connected with the base plot, namely: the "well-known gentleman" admits that I was "quite amusing." Then I did accomplish something when I said that Berenice Thompson made a mistake in crediting the Pastoral Symphony to Beethoven. That she did make a mistake I hope to prove to the satisfaction of all my readers, including even the "gentleman who stands high in Washington musical circles."

It will probably be admitted by all that the one who first uses a name for his production has at least a moral right to the name; and that if some one should use the same name for a production of like nature, whether fifty minutes or fifty years afterward, places himself under the suspicion of trying to steal the first man's thunder. Now, it don't matter to me how my nameless but quite amused friend may spell the name of the immortal author of the Pastoral Symphony—whether Handel or Haendel; the first is incorrect if the "a" does not have two dots over it, and the second is the form generally used by printers who don't possess a font of accents. Notwithstanding the spelling, the fact remains that in the year 1741 Haendel did compose the great oratorio, "The Messiah," in which occurs the original Pastoral Symphony—not, as our friend might think, a composition for the voice, but for the orchestra. As this composition was produced some 65 years or more before Beethoven wrote his composition, referred to by our friend as the Pastoral Symphony, Haendel might fairly lay claim to priority in the use of that title for a musical composition, and to the exclusive use of said title, not only as a matter of courtesy but as a matter of right.

Now, as to what our friend alludes to as the "facts." He does me injustice if he supposes that I do not read Miss Thompson's article with much pleasure, and, I hope, some profit. But I can not agree with him when he says she "displays considerable eruditeness," because, upon referring to Webster's International Dictionary, p. 508, middle column, I find no such word as "eruditeness." In this instance our friend is like Sir Joseph Porter, K. C. B.: "He means well, but he don't know."

I will place in the same category his assertion that "Haydn's Creation is considered by the best authorities to surpass anything Handel ever wrote." No doubt my nameless critic refers to himself when he speaks of "the best authorities." Hence his modest omission of his name at the close of his remarks. As a matter of the most common knowledge, the oratorios of Haendel, notably The Messiah, as compared to the Creation or any other choral work by Haydn, are produced in the proportion of not less than five to one. In an experience of ten years as a member of choral societies in Providence and Boston, I have had the honor of singing annually in The Messiah; I was called upon but twice to sing in the Creation. We sang what the people wanted, and crowded houses were the rule when Haendel's name was on the programme.

The effort made by our friend at exactness is a little too painful to be agreeable, especially where he says "Oratorios are vocal, symphonies orchestral, compositions." My poor, deluded friend, what, may I ask, would you call Beethoven's Ninth Symphony—vocal or orchestral?

It is a singular fact that the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven is also called the Choral Symphony because the first half is for the orchestra and the last half is for vocal quartette and chorus; it is also a fact that this same Ninth Symphony is Beethoven's greatest work. One of my proudest and most valued possessions is an autograph letter from Mr. C. A. Ellis, business manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, requesting me, on behalf of Wilhelm Gericke, conductor of the orchestra, to sing at the performance of the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven. I agree with my critic that Beethoven was the greatest composer that ever lived. But he got his inspiration from Haendel, who was—and is—the greatest composer of oratorio, as well as the author of the Pastoral Symphony.

Granite Cutters Win.

James Duncan, national secretary of the Granite Cutters National Union, has effected a settlement with the Mt. Airy Granite Co., of Mt. Airy, N. C., after a fight for recognition of the Union for the past nine years. Eight hours work and the Union scale was accepted by the company, which closes a contention that has affected granite cutting in all the coast cities in the East.

AFTER-DINNER DILATIONS.

To-day is the time for laughter;
To-morrow, the time for tears;
Whatever may come hereafter,
Whatever of woe with years.
To-day is the time to borrow
The best that the gods can give;
We can sorrow, if need be, hereafter—
To-day is the time to live.

Mr. Lynch and Mr. Hawkes, with a Word to Mr. Charles S. Gunn.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

The article signed Chas. S. Gunn in last week's issue of your paper is as barren of facts as is a toy pistol noiseless in explosion. It goes without saying that multiplicity of words does not make logical a man's position. Neither do statements at variance with truth make good reasoning. Mr. Gunn's defense of Mr. Hawkes' candidacy is perhaps the best he could make, and in his efforts to let "people" know where he stands in the present campaign it may be said he has done well. His claims are as absurd as they are ridiculous. In the first place he contends that the growth of the I. T. U. is attributable to the prosperity the country has enjoyed the past few years. If this be a fact there is little credit to Mr. Hawkes' work to whose record Mr. Gunn refers as "unparalleled as a coworker in the cause of unionism" and that he should be given "credit for our great increase in membership." And of course no one can be praised for the increase of wages in Washington. Yet he wishes to bestow it upon Mr. Kidd.

Further Mr. Gunn justifies the statement that "four years at the head of an organization are enough" by citing the fact that George Washington would not accept a third term, while he was serving the last year of eight years as President of the United States. Just why Mr. Gunn goes so far back is hard to understand. He might have inquired how long Mr. Gompers has been president of the greatest labor organization on earth, and he would have been informed it is a quarter of a century or thereabouts, with the exception of one term during that period. He would also have found out that Mr. Frank Morrison, the efficient secretary of this same organization, has been doing continuous service for about eight years. Secretary-Treasurer Bramwood, of the the I. T. U., has been in the same harness for a similar period, and coming down to our local union Secretary Garrett was elected in 1896—just eight years ago. Other instances could be mentioned.

Four years are not too long for any official who has been capable, honest, trustworthy, and reliable as Mr. Lynch has been. Evidence is had in the above enumeration. Presidents of banks, insurance companies, and other corporations are never displaced so long as their conduct is good and their services are faithful and honest. In consequence of these conditions Mr. Gunn must give some positive reason why Mr. Lynch's continuance in office would be a "disadvantage" to the I. T. U.

And when Mr. Gunn writes about "inside cliques and wings" it is his duty as an honest union man to be at the next meeting of Columbia Union and prefer charges against those whom he knows (one must take it that he is sincere in the assertion) are members of the "inside cliques and wings," and because his individual observations and knowledge end at the jurisdiction of No. 101, the "inside cliquers" referred to must reside in Washington. When he does this and substantiates his charges he will then have achieved something that will commend the verity of his statements. Or is he himself an "inside man" as he too speaks positively that Mr. Hawkes is not burdened with "wings" and "insiders."

Now, a few words as to the wisdom of continuing Mr. Lynch in office, notwithstanding Mr. Gunn. For about thirty-five years it was the custom to change the I. T. U. officers every year or two, as the records will show. During that period there were prosperous times also at intervals, but the parent organization was slow of growth, and comparative little good was accomplished, for the patent reason that no man at the head of an organization can accomplish a great deal in a short time. It was not until former President Prescott was continued in office year after year that the I. T. U. really became a factor and won the confidence of the newspaper publishers and other employing printers. And during his incumbency the machines were introduced, and he handled the matter in a very creditable manner.

But the disgruntled fellows, just as now, made war on Mr. Prescott. It was argued that he had been in office too long and had incurred the disfavor of the employing printers everywhere, and other things were said about him. In Washington, then as now (probably that was before Mr. Gunn worked in the Government Printing Office), there was a loud cry for a change. It came, and in one brief term the successor to Mr. Prescott—an experiment, although enjoying the reputation as a great organizer and "union diplomat," just as now—brought the organization into disrepute, discontent ran high, and a remedy was necessary. The referendum wisely selected Mr. Lynch as president. As soon as he was inducted into office discord and apathy gave way to confidence and progression. The man from Syracuse was the man for the place. He was courageous, honest, and resolute, and the little circular he is now sending out but modestly tells of the achievements of his administration.

The membership of No. 101 who closely followed the proceedings of the last convention know full well that his solidarity of purpose is the maintenance of the craft in that standard of unionism which will command respect of the employing printer and the admiration of the membership.

If Mr. Lynch has been extravagant, as is being said by ex-President Lawson and others, it can truthfully be claimed that he carried out the letter of the law against his own judgment.

In conclusion, let it be hoped that fealty to the powers that are shall not incite an indecent and acrimonious campaign. Moral suasion will never be offensive, but brutal persuasion is at all times at variance with good unionism. The friends of Mr. Lynch will be manly in the contest, but they will resent every aspersion upon his wise and scholarly administration.

The Knights of Momus, better known "The Knockers," will hold their annual dinner on the evening of April 17.

The action of R. J. Hale's father is commendable when he, as next of kin, divides Bob's estate equally with the relatives of the latter's wife.

George Tuttle continues my story of Lester A. Rose by informing me that, after a creditable career of journalism in Wisconsin, that gentleman died recently in Milwaukee.

W. H. Stubbs and the writer possess a characteristic in common; that is, the ability, no matter how vexatious the burden, to bob up serenely. Some time since that gentleman entertained the idea of opening a linotype school in Baltimore. Finally other arrangements were consummated; then came the destruction of the business district by fire, and now Mr. Stubbs congratulates himself on his escape.

I am beginning to think I will never grow old. The other afternoon a well-groomed gentleman, several tinges of grey in his hair, advanced with a cheery, "Hello, Sutton?" It was the proprietor of the Lafayette (Ind.) Journal, on his way home from the annual meeting of the American Publishers' Association. He hadn't laid eyes on me in twenty years, and claims that I have not changed an iota in that length of time.

Here is an item calculated to bring a pardonable swelled head to my friend, John S. Thompson, of the Inland Printer. The American Library Association, after an expenditure of much grey matter, has selected a list of 8,000 of the best books, which they urge librarians to purchase. Mr. Thompson's "Mechanism of the Linotype" is in the list. This catalogue will form a part of the Government exhibit at St. Louis.

Life were better, mayhap, for the pathos that filters through the rift. An elder brother passed to the beyond a few weeks since. Among his effects was a daguerreotype—doubtless dimmed with age—of himself as a baby boy, taken in the 50's, before I was born. Now comes a letter from a lady, asking—pleading, as only a woman can—if she may have that. Such fealty to a memory accentuates the line:

Just a loyal little woman, forcing back the tears that blur;
You may honor your brave hero—I will doff
my hat to her.

A part and parcel of my every-day life is "Philosopher Jimmie," who, while playing 'andsome 'Arry on the avenue, strolled into a shoe-shine parlor and was the recipient of a smile from the fascinating female presiding over the cashier's desk. How could she help it? Besides, that's what she's there for. Jimmie forthwith appointed himself as "capper" for the establishment, and then followed "such a business." To his associates Jimmie glowingly pictured his find as "a daughter of the gods—divinely fair." "The Colonel" was Mr. Easy Mark himself, and "The Doctor," "The Count," and even "Jim Dumps," 'tis said, proved patrons. "The Captain" might have been among the chosen, only he incautiously boasted of his ability to take the whole bunch down town and lose them. Now, I am told, the slate is running, with "Brownie" at the head. The bow of "The Count," Jimmie tells, would have shamed a Chesterfield; and while the lady's smile was broadened in proportion to numbers, the swains made little impression. No—"The Colonel," with the gallantry and audacity common to his race—for, be it known, he hails from a region where if you hang a petticoat on a bean pole the man will make an obeisance to it—

The land of the revolver and rifle,
Where the best of old bourbon like the mountain stream flows,
Where the hair-trigger reigns, or the sharp
bowie knife 'll
Win you your love while it conquers your foes—

had his advances met with the suggestion that a little lunch at Fritz Reuter's might be acceptable; and then he, false to traditions, to use his own language, renigged. He should have engaged an auto-more-beer, and after an inspection of the sights of the city found a cozy corner and produced a bite and a ball. Like Henry Watterson playing poker, it were best to do these things well. If "Philosopher Jimmie" takes my advice he will wait upon the management, inform them of his efforts, and suggest an increase in the weekly stipend of the cashier; and if he should engage for me a speaking acquaintance with the fair one I will promptly inform her that "The Count" is a good risk in the market matrimonial.

Congressional debates semi-occasionally furnish a readable item. A member from West Virginia registers a knock because he understands Uncle Sam's mail bags are manufactured in the New Jersey penitentiary. And then the House of Representatives—to its lasting credit be it said—passed a paragraph to the effect that at the expiration of the present contract there would be no more convict-made mail bags.

Another member presents a solution of the paper problem when he states that a fine grade of that article can be made from the stalks of the cotton plant, to-day forming material for the brush heap. This being true, the cotton plant bids fair to rival the hog and the reindeer in the entilization of its several components. Only a few years ago the cotton seed was the planter's incumbrance. To-day it constitutes the basis of our drugs, the olive oil of commerce, and the butter of our boarding-house table.

WE beg leave to again suggest that no good American should overflow with brotherly sympathy and get warm under the collar in favor of either of the Far Eastern belligerents. The present war, however hot it may appear in the dispatches, is a cold business proposition so far as the Governments involved are concerned. Which ever wins, a territorial grab is apt to take place. It may be a draw battle and two territorial grabs result. The most we can hope is that the final outcome may providentally prove beneficial to civilization and advance the material interests of the United States.

Dare to Be a Daniel.

Are there union men who are ashamed of the Union? If so they must be lacking in that spirit which is one of the essentials of good citizenship—the spirit of the corps. And they are, indeed, to be pitied; for a man out of sympathy with those who are his immediate associates in any occupation fails by a great deal to get the best out of life. Lawyers, doctors, and other professional and business men have their unions for mutual benefit and general improvement, and are not ashamed of them. And there is no reason why a workingman should not be proud of his well-conducted, prosperous, and progressive union. If the union, like other things human, lacks perfection, join in making it better. Do not be blind to its shortcomings, and frankly admit them, if you choose, just as you would admit your personal faults. But never assume an attitude of apology with reference to unionism. Defend its principles where they are ignorantly or viciously attacked. Let the world know where you stand and it will respect you. Apologize and you will receive its merited contempt. Be a man. Dare to be a Daniel.

The Eternal Conflict.

Much has been lost to society by unnecessary antagonism of the Past and Present. The Past is often a very aggravating drag upon the coat-tails of the progressive Present. The Present frequently tramples upon the nicely kept flower-beds of the Past in an unnecessarily heedless manner. The reforming Present scarcely commences to climb a tree in order to view the landscape more comprehensively o'er before his more timid brother grabs him and exclaims, "You shouldn't do that, Pressy. You know pa doesn't permit us to climb trees." Too frequently the enthusiasm of these quarrelsome members of Father Time's family is of that deplorable kind which takes a puerile, or, perhaps more properly, a senile delight in getting "the better of the argument." The conservative worshipper of the Past is often what he is for want of human sympathies, while the radical reformer is likely to prove a nuisance because he lacks a living conception of the Past. A little more Christliness would in many cases make a useful citizen of the ultra conservative. When from the history of the Past the extreme radical learns a lesson of patient self-forgetfulness and begins to realize the steady slowness of the processes of progress, he likewise may become an uplifting force in the development of society.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

A private letter from Boston tells the story of the late strike, which, while it did not accomplish all it was hoped to, was by no means a failure, thanks to the skillful management of I. T. U. President Lynch and the Executive Council. It seems that the local officers were disposed to ignore the Executive Council until they discovered that they had more than they could manage, when they threw up their hands and called for help. To begin with, I. T. U. law provides that before a strike is legal the I. T. U. president must be called in to see if he can not settle it without a strike, which little formality seems to have been neglected. The Boston officers were informed before the strike was ordered that there were no I. T. U. strike funds, which fact they neglected to lay before the membership, and other facts were concealed. When President Lynch and the Executive Council arrived, which was only after it had agreed that the whole matter should be turned over to them, they accepted the offer of the Boston Typothetæ of one-half of the increase asked now and the remainder in a year. Then the local officers were compelled to lay bare the facts at a special meeting of the union, in all their humilitating details, after which Bramwood and Lynch made speeches and got a vote of thanks, the strikers were ordered back to work, and the incident closed. From my information I could make this account of the Boston strike a good deal more vivid, but this is sufficient to discount the efforts that I hear one of the officers of that union is making to injury Mr. Lynch's candidacy for re-election by letters written to this city.

"Texas" Smith sent me a photograph of himself the other day, taken at Corning, Ark., where he has hung up for the past three or four months—a long stay for him—which shows little trace of the 58 years that he has inhabited the footstool. I am reminded of a little episode that occurred somewhere between Atlanta and Macon, Ga., about thirty years ago, when he, Jim Ackles, and I formed a walking party between those two towns, with possible food and lodging at the end of the tour as the incentive. We had camped for the night, and for purposes of cheer had set a big fallen fat-pine tree afire, busying ourselves for the first two hours to keep the rest of the woods from joining in the conflagration. Early in the night it began to rain, and how it did rain from then until morning! But it couldn't extinguish our burning tree—Niagara Falls couldn't have done that—and we stood around it all the livelong night, drying one side while the other again got wet. As soon as daylight came, and it was in no hurry, for this was in January, we pulled out to seek some sort of shelter and perhaps even food. Possibly a mile away we came to a little log house, with smoke rising from the chimney, and we made for it. Jim Ackles, who walked as much faster as he was long-leggeder than "Smithy" and I, arrived first, and when we followed him in he was standing with his back to the fireplace, into which a 16-year-old boy was heaping wood. In a bed in the corner of the room—it was a one-roomed palace—a woman sat, reaching for things, as though she contemplated dressing herself. Seeing three strange men standing by the fire, she asked her boy, in the characteristic Georgia cracker whine:

"James, what do these men want?"

Up to this time we had supposed that Ackles had at least said, "Hello!" or "How are you?" or "How do you-alls do?" Seeing the situation, "Texas" said:

"We got caught in the storm, madam, and are very wet, and thought perhaps we could get shelter and a cup of coffee here, to ward off danger of pneumonia."

Tough as we were, pneumonia would not have made any more impression on one of us than a stale egg on a stone wall—not as much in appearance—but it sounded well. The woman slung something over her head, shook herself a little, and slid out of bed, her toilet made. In a half hour she invited us to sit down at what seemed to me as the finest meal I ever ate. It stopped raining, we expressed our thanks, bade our hostess adieu, and moved on.

"Jim," said "Texas" to Ackles, "whinell didn't you at least say something to those people when you went in?"

"Why, you know you fellers always do the talking," he answered, "and I was afraid I'd spoil it."

I have mentioned in past months that Ackles has retired from the activities of a tourist life and settled down in his old home town of Bellefontaine, Ohio, where he, Joe Berry, and others have erected a union and are living lives of irreproachable rectitude.

If all the sudporters of Mr. Hawkes would discuss the question as fairly and good-temperedly as Charlie Gunn did in last week's TRADES UNIONIST, there would be much less acrimony in the campaign. As a supporter of Mr. Lynch I appreciated Mr. Gunn's comparison of that gentleman with the Father of His Country, the first President of the United States, and when Mr. Lynch shall have served as many years as president of the I. T. U. as George Washington did as President of the United States, he will unquestionably be willing to follow the noble example of that great patriot and refuse further election.

If the officials of the existing street railways are permitted to say whether we shall have other lines or not, we will never get them. It is a great mistake for the powers of the Government to consider the interest of the companies in preference to those of the people, as it is also a mistake to consult the residents of a street as to whether they want their solitude disturbed by the merry gong and cheerful roar of modern means of locomotion. There should be a railway in every street in which there is a demand for it, and every company and line should be compelled to give and receive transfers to and from every other line. The people whose business requires them to travel should be the first consideration all the time.

What a cheerful State Colorado is getting to be to live in! There are communities there where armed anarchists run property owners out of the country simply because they belong to labor unions. When it comes to real anarchy, whether consisting of disregard of all laws which they have not themselves dictated or of hiring thugs and assassins, some capitalists far excel the imported European variety, without the merit of having the courage to personally execute their diabolical plots.

How proud we will all be of ourselves if after the end of the campaign we are able to look back over it with the reflection that we did not do one dirty thing to help our own candidates or hurt the others! How many of you will be able to sit upon the fence with me and sing:

I never told no lies
To help or hurt in this campaign,
And them as did I 'spise.

Somebody suggests—that we have all the material to form a first-class musical organization, which nobody can deny. But all attempts in the past have shown the absence of one essential ingredient—cohesiveness. You can't get the fickle artists to attend rehearsals and work. By the way, and entirely mal apropos, I was once interested, in a country town in Kansas, in getting up a brass band. I circulated a paper and got eighteen signers, of whom fifteen wanted to play the E-flat cornet and three the snare drum. I would have turned it into a silver cornet band if I could have seen any prospect of raising the silver.

Gus Warndorf, now takes his hat off to the Stork. It visited his home recently and left a seventeen-pound boy. Gus contends that it has a chest like Gus Rhulin and freckles like Bob Fitzsimmons. He looks for great possibilities from Warndorf the younger.

Joe Steker, after several futile attempts to raise produce on his farm at Brightwood Park, has at last discovered an industry, and one that can produce to-wit, egg raising. He has made several improvements, including a hennery, and now he has changed his tune from, "Tessie" to "Fresh Laid Eggs for Breakfast every Morning."

HEAD BANDS.

A FEW DONT'S ON THE ELECTION OF DELEGATES TO THE I. B. OF B. CONVENTION:

Don't vote for any one but a bookbinder.

Don't vote for anyone because he is a good fellow.

Don't vote for the acrobatic talking candidate, for you can't guess him.

Don't fail to vote, then you can't feel sore if the result does not come your way.

Don't vote for a man because he is your friend. The Union is your best friend.

Don't vote for those who fill preferred places, for they can not serve two masters.

Don't vote for the man who wants to pay his expenses. It is evident that his personal interests will be paramount to the general interests.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Attention, Ex-Delegates!

The regular quarterly meeting of the Ex-Delegates' Association will be held next Sunday (April 3) at Typographical Temple, at 3 p. m. Business of importance.

Z. T. JENKINS, President.
J. T. HERBERT, Secretary.

Joe Stelle Withdraws.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Owing to many obligations which will prevent an active and thorough canvas of the position of delegate, I am desirous that you publish this as my announcement of withdrawal from said contest.

At the same time I wish to express to all those who contemplated voting for me my sincere and heartfelt thanks.

JOSEPH G. STELLE.

Post Chapel.

Second the motion. Let us hear from the Times and Star.

Don L. Murray has the grip. Can't say whether or not he has the pass word.

If you find all the seats in the Merganthaler bandwagon occupied, climb up into the Lanston vehicle.

Walter Redfield, son of Harry Redfield, of the Official Gazette, is the latest employe in our room in the capacity of apprentice.

The members of the Post chapel were shocked to learn of the death of the little daughter born to Mr. and Mrs. Joe S. Walsmith some weeks previously.

If Goodkey's pet crows were within range of the Gunn explosion last week, no more we'll hear of Hawkes! Hawkes! Lynch is too robust to be injured by toy pistols.

Our new business manager (a printer) is "seein' things" these days, and improvements are being made in rapid succession. A complete new and up-to-date stereotyping plant has been added lately—and the composing room may get a skylight.

J. E. (Dan) Webster, I am told, is now a practical farmer, he having purchased a farm at Falls Church, where he will in future devote his time to growing fruit and other produce. "Dan" is said to be very enthusiastic in his new venture. We wish him success.

A "gentleman" called at the home of W. L. Fleishell one morning last week, and left just in time to escape detection by the latter upon his arrival home from work. On looking around Will found that his "strong box" had been relieved of a few dollars. Moral: Don't save money; others may need it.

I understand there are a few narrow-minded men—yes, narrow-minded is just what I mean—in the G. P. O. who say they will not vote for an operator for delegate. I will not attempt to speak for the candidates, but were I afflicted with the bee I would not hanker after such votes. To be elected by them would be a shallow honor.

Tickets for the raffle of a rifle belonging to Wayne F. Byers, of Alexandria, an operator on the Post, who a year or more ago was stricken with locomotor ataxia and has since been unable to work, were circulated among the boys. The proceeds are to be applied to the purchase of a wheel-chair. Needless to say they sold like hot cakes.

The advocacy of a primary to determine who shall represent the downtown constituency at conventions of the International body is by no means a new idea, but it seems to me that that policy could be pursued with satisfaction to all concerned. It would no doubt be a sacrifice to be deprived of the pleasure of parading one's claims in the midst of the good fellows in the G. P. O., but after all, the downtown men are the ones this particular delegate is supposed to represent, and, this being true, the downtown men should elect their choice. I favor a primary. Who will second the motion? Speak quick, before it's too late.

J. HERBERT BRODERICK.

Oysters in every style at R. A. Driscoll's, North Capitol and G streets. Overholt whisky, 10c.

Second Division.

Fred Fox has resigned.

Melvin J. Page, of Alexandria, is again laid up through illness.

Wm. C. Beddow was off the early part of the week—malaria.

C. B. Boss came down from the Job Room, and is located on Slug 1.

A. F. Lowe made a flying trip to Jersey City Saturday, bringing back Mrs. Lowe and the baby.

We are so busy now that the whole force works through until 6.30, even the $4-per trusties.

Harry E. Faust was a trifle superstitious concerning his number—Slug 13—so he moved into the Job Room.

Rheumatism has claimed Thos. L. Jones as a victim, and he has been confined to his home for the past week.

Readers being scarce, Messrs. Bailey and Maupin have been detailed to the Proof Room for several days—and they are making good.

'Tis a coincident merely, unfettered by fate, that the initials of the poet-laureate of the Second Division—which are H. A. McP—stand equally well for Hot Air Machine Poetry.

A Knights of Pythias goat got busy with W. J. Harris recently and several mornings Bill came in lacking his usual immaculate appearance and having a far-away look in his eye. Titus F. Ellis went through the ordeal not long ago, but being large of frame did not have any trouble with the Billy.

True to my prophecy in last issue, Hank Allen has now reached the pinnacle in bowling prowess. On Friday of last week, in an exhibition game, he broke the District record by one pin, scoring 290 out of a possible 300. This record will no doubt stand for some time, and Hank and I are very proud of it.

SECRETARY.

Newly furnished room in flat; southern exposure; steam heat; adjoining bath; private family; references exchanged; rates reasonable; convenient to G. P. O. A. D. BELL, 1814 North Capitol street.

Third Division.

Wm. H. Bright was sick with stomach trouble several days last week, but is among us again.

There has been a noticeable lack of interest in the ponies. Can it be that we are getting "old enough to know better?"

Mr. T. C. Parsons of the Times stopped a few days ago just long enough to leave cards for his friends in the Third.

Mr. Davis made the round of the division last Tuesday with a supply of lower case w's, which "filled a long-felt want."

On the 21st inst. Mr. Bass celebrated the passing of the vernal equinox by ordering every frame in the room cleaned up. We have leads and slugs now.

Vice-President Dan C. Vaughan left each of us his "counterfeit presentment" last Monday surrounded by the customary legend announcing that he is a candidate for delegate.

One by one our emergency men are dropping off. From one of these gentlemen, Mr. Richmond B. Lancaster, I parted with regret, having learned to like him well during his brief stay with us. Mr. Lancaster is now with the Baltimore American.

Several days ago I was asked about the prospects of Miss Anna Wilson, my candidate for delegate. Miss Wilson's prospects were never better, and are growing brighter every day. She is thoroughly deserving of the honor; she has been and is a willing and efficient officer of the Union and of the Auxiliary, and all should take pleasure in casting their votes in her favor.

Mr. George P. Nichols, of Baltimore, candidate for Trustee of the Printers' Home, and a party of friends, were shown through this division Tuesday by Mr. A. P. Marston, Assistant Foreman of Printing. Mr. Nichols received the unanimous indorsement of Columbia Union for the office for which he has been nominated, and it is almost a foregone conclusion that the printers of Washington will vote for him to a man.

There were whisperings of a bowling game some days ago between teams supposed to represent the Second and Third Divisions, for which the stake was a box of cigars furnished by Titus F. Ellis, and in which the Second Division team were victorious. The reader, however, should not place too much credulity in reports about the doings of a so-called Third Division team that allows another team to roll a bigger score. That is not like us. Just wait.

The Columbia Union Campaign Blue Book, soon to be published by Frank Warren (slug 44) of this division, will be a really valuable addition to the literature of that nature, embracing as it does, in addition to the usual items of interest, a complete roster of the employees of the Government Printing Office by chapels, besides a list of the officers and committees of the Union. The book will also contain half-tone cuts and sketches of the various candidates to be voted for at the coming election. It will be distributed free to each employee.

I hope "Topsy" and the rest won't take it quite so hard. I haven't said anything against Mr. Hawkes, for the very good reason that I know of nothing to his discredit. Neither do I know anything derogatory to Mr. Lynch. When all is said and done we are very fortunate in having two such good candidates for President of the I. T. U., for no matter who wins we are practically certain to have an able executive. It is a pleasure to me, by the way, to know that my remarks have furnished "amusement" to Mr. Guy W. McCord. I feel that I have not lived in vain.

John L. Sullivan, ex-pugilist, published in a New York paper last Sunday the first of a series of letters to men on the evil effects of whiskey as a beverage. Probably there is no man in this great country who has made a more thorough test of the possibilities of whiskey than has the redoubtable John L. He says with some show of truth that "Whiskey was the only thing that could knock [him] out." He avers that while in England he had some opportunity to observe the effect of strong drink on the Prince of Wales, now Edward VII, and thinks that in view of the fact that he and the Prince were friends, these published letters might do him some good; so he is going to make it a point to have his letters reach his royal highness. If some one could prevail upon Mr. Sullivan to circulate his letters among the 4,000 or more dry-throated employees of the Government Printing Office, they might give a hint to some who have the natural tendency to become hard drinkers, but who have not yet got up to the terrific pace set by some few who seem to think it is the chief end of man to drink. If we could only stop when our thirst is quenched we would be in no need of temperance lectures; but there are too many of us who seem to think that the proper place for our money is the till behind the bar, and who do not stop drinking until the last cent we own is transferred to the aforesaid till. I am writing now to the fellows who get paid off Monday and commence borrowing the first thing Tuesday morning. It is a singular fact that there are many men who know when they have enough water, and who never drink more than enough to quench their thirst, no matter how "dry" they are; but these same people will imbibe whiskey as long as their money and the bartender's patience may last. Friends, give this matter a little thought and listen to the voice of conscience.

J. W. BELCHER.

Street Railway Legislation.

The several recent hearings by the Senate committee on the District of Columbia on the bill to grant the Great Falls and Old Dominion Railway Company the franchise to build a cross-town road demonstrated the fact that the proposed improvement is practically unanimously approved by the residents of this District. At the hearing it was apparent that the only opponents to what the Commissioners have stated "would be a desirable improvement" were the officials of the Capitol Traction Company and the Washington Railway and Electric Company. It is evident that the opposition from this source is based solely upon the desire and intent of Messrs. Dunlop, McDermott, and Harries to monopolize and thereby absolutely control local street railway transportation. Under present conditions the convenience of the public is to these corporations a matter of secondary consideration.

These companies have grown so fat and waxed so strong from franchise favors that they regard any effort of others not of the trio named to obtain privileges similar to those enjoyed by the two existing companies as an attempt to trespass upon the streets of this city of which they presumptuously claim fee simple ownership.

In this instance the people of this District have rights which no doubt Congress will fully consider and respect, notwithstanding the fact the District Commissioners in their report to the Senate District Committee advise that our residents be committed to the tender mercy of a railway monopoly and be forever ground between the upper and nether millstones of the two existing companies.

That 75,000 residents in the northeast, 25 per cent of the population of this city, should be deprived of street railway facilities because neither of the railway companies will extend a line to that section is a potent reason why the grip of the existing railway interest should be broken and that others having the ability and desires to afford these long needed facilities be permitted to do so regardless of the protests of the railway companies or the suggestions of the District Commissioners.

No exclusive interest at the expense of the general public should be permitted to fence the District in and enjoy the extorted fruit of "a pent-up Utica." Though under the conditions of local government a large per cent of the residents of the District are politically emasculated citizens, they should not be denied those improvements which will contribute to their comfort and convenience and the development of a large inhabited area of our city because of the dog-in-the-manger policy of the two local railway companies or the failure of the Commissioners to heed the will of the people of the District.

Personal Mention.

Mr. Gompers' Reception.

What might have been a well-attended meeting on the occasion of the reception tendered to Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, by the Central Labor Union, was manifestly a failure on the part of the committee in charge.

Less than a hundred people heard President Gompers deliver a two-hour address that was instructing and interesting. The interest never flagged during the time the gifted speaker told of his personal experience among the people of Porto Rico and laid bare the poverty and conditions under which the wage-earning class live.

The address was one of such a nature as would bear repetition, and it is hoped that President Gompers may be given an opportunity to again present the condition of Porto Rico in a manner that is not read of in the magazines and the newspapers of the present day, and from personal contact with the people who are vitally interested in the future of the island.

In purchasing goods from advertisers in this paper, do not fail to mention the fact that you saw the advertisement in THE TRADES UNIONIST. It will accord you good treatment at the hand of the salesman, and incidentally help the paper.

The Bookbinders Election.

The coming election, the bienniel event among the Bookbinders, promises to increase in interest as the day for voting draws near. The Washington contingent will cast their ballot on April 5th and two delegates will be selected to represent Local No. 4.

The importance of the pending contest is gradually drawing upon those having the right of suffrage, and more thought is being exercised than ever before. The campaign has been conducted without any "mud slinging." Never before has there been a national convention where the Washington Bookbinders has had more interests at issue, than at the coming one, the principal one being the "open shop" question. It behooves the Bookbinders of Washington to stand well to the front on this particular question, owing to its inception within its own jurisdiction, and through the perfidy, disloyalty and traitorous conduct of one of its own members.

Another question of moment is that of an equalization of taxation, a revision and stronger circulating medium, and many other questions of importance which will devolve on the wisdom of the delegates to the coming convention to regulate. It therefore becomes the duty of every member of Local No. 4, of Washington to meet the issues in a straightforward and manly way. Personal motives selfish ambition, and personal aggrandizement should be matters of careful thought and serious considerations, and selections made from those who have solely and entirely the interests of the general good at heart as well as the ability and intellectual acquirements to be able to place before so august a body the wants and needs of the organizations they represent.

Specification Notes.

To "Nuf Sed:" Thanks for your generous compliment.

F. N. Whitehead, of the Job Room, will be a candidate for delegate. He is as able and worthy as any.

Dan C. Vaughan, candidate for delegate, dropped in on us Monday for a little handshake. Danny is O. K. with the Spess girls and boys.

Charley Holmes, candidate for Treasurer, mingled with us Monday, and from the smile that continuously adorned his face, he must have been greatly pleased at what was confided to his keeping.

Montgomery has written a brand new Spring poem, and says if the weather will permit the same will be printed next week.

Jim Collins is sporting a Russian serge suit, and Billy O'Brien has several Japanese cloth shirts, sent him by a brother in Japan. As they work close together, both are watched closely, but so far the Japanese shirt has been bottled up by the Russian trousers.

There is some talk of Mr. Pierce, of the Post, announcing himself a candidate for delegate in the near future. Should Mr. Pierce make the race he will discover a great number of Union men who admire his sincere and out spoken style. I'll bet no man can vote Brother Pierce.

Night Bill Force.

Fixing up a "dope" for tomorrow, and holding "post mortems" over the day's races is the chief occupation of the horse bugs these nights.

It makes the regular "piker" to see a novice go out and pick up a good thing at the track. Moral: Stick to it and you will always come out loser.

It must be annoying to "Balaam" to have to retreat right in the midst of a good story simply because a superior friend of his says, "Good bye, Boyd."

Mr. F. M. Claflin, of the Second Annex, was away from work a few nights owing to the illness of his 11-year old daughter. We are glad to hear she is now improving.

The heartfelt sympathy of all the members of this force goes out to the genial Jo Gibson in his sad bereavement at the loss of his mother. She died last Wednesday, at the age of 64, of heart trouble, while visiting in Baltimore.

While at the Post one evening last week Broadnax asked what was the matter with one of his friends who was absent. "Linotypitis," was the answer Broadnax said out at the G. P. O, they were suffering from "linotype-frightis."

A hurry call Sunday night rounded up about forty comps. for two hour's work. It is said that when Sill heard of it, he came up, but no more were needed, whereupon he asked permission to pass through the room and sell a few collar buttons or suspenders to the boys.

Louis Vogt's friends are pleased to note his candidacy for auditor. This writer served an enlistment with him as "tin soldier" and ever found him to be a polite, considerate gentlemen. Since Mr. King and other of the correspondents have removed the the opprobrium attached to "tin soldier" Mr. Vogt can further exemplify their remarks.

A circular letter of Mr. A. J. McCurdy, of Roanoke (Va.) Union, announcing his candidacy for delegate to the American Federation of Labor, has been received by the G. P. O. chapels. He has been indorsed by New Orleans and some two dozen other unions. He will be remembered by many as an old Bill Force hand, and as the son of our highly-esteemed fellow-workman, Mr. W. S. McCurdy, of the Job Room. Many of us met Mr. McCurdy last fall when he was representing Roanoke Union as delegate to the convention here. He made friends with all by his pleasing address and good looks.

The management of the Columbia Theater showed good judgment by throwing that house open to inspection Sunday night after the performance to enable patrons to satisfy themselves as to its safety in time of fire. Although great damage was done by the fire to the Metzerott Building the theater was not harmed. This correspondent was one of a party of six who was politely escorted through the entire theater Sunday night by one of the attendants. The stage is completely cut off from the audience by a stone wall and the asbestos curtain. There is no woodwork about the stage except the floor and flies. Under the stage is a stone floor and stone walls. A steel trap door on the stage opens to a triangular stone-walled room where waste paper and trash is thrown. All doors are covered with sheet iron. Electric lights and water are in all the dressing rooms, which, by the way, are numerous enough for a regiment to be quartered in. The "gridiron" in the extreme top, above the stage, is an interesting place. It is full of wire cables, pulleys, etc. The curtains ascend to this place. Sometimes, when a curtain does not go down quick enough a man or two jumps astraddle as weights. With the seven exits on the ground floor and a like number above, the house can be emptied in three minutes. The Columbia management is friendly to organized labor and employ only union stage hands.

"YOUNG" MR. HAWKES.

J. Ligon King Quotes Some Figures From the I. T. U. "Journal."

As Mr. Hawkes has been a union man and a union worker longer than President Lynch, Mr. Belcher's application of the word "young" in connection with Mr. Hawkes' name evidently was meant as a compliment to the latter gentleman's general healthful appearance and vigorous hustling qualities. Mr. Hawkes' record as a national officer has also been so healthful and clean, and of real apparent benefit to the national body of printers throughout the country, that at least fifty unions of importance have officially indorsed him for the office of national president. "Young Mr. Hawkes" is worthy of the support of every printer in the country, and he, as well as his thousands of supporters, look for a sweeping victory on election day.

From certain good information received, it is a fact that President Lynch and his faithful adherents are not at all sanguine of success. Right here in Washington his principal lieutenant has found it necessary to write letters to old friends from Maine to Texas imploring their votes and aid in behalf of President Lynch.

The Journal shows an apparently bankrupt condition of the treasury on January 31, and the fact that Boston had a big fight on received no benefits is evidence of the "strength" of our finances, as set forth by some other writers.

Boston nominated Mr. Lynch by a vote of 164 to 153 before the members heard the report of the attitude of the president of the I, T, U, on their strike. After that they were wild, and will very probably get even on the vote in May.

In Boston it appears that President Lynch refused to do anything for the job printers unless they put their strike entirely in his hands. They finally did so, and Lynch immediately accepted the terms of the Typothetae, which included the retention of the nonunion men employed during the strike, and the application of the strikers "as individuals." The members of No. 13 are very much incensed, and I guess there will be a day of reckoning.

The failure of the Typefounders' strike, which was probably the immediate cause of the collapse of the Boston strike (there apparently being no funds in the I. T. U. treasury), is an evidence of what we may expect in case we meet trouble, which ever yone expects to come in the next two years.

Mr. Belcher, after copying a lot of figures from Mr. Lynch's campaign circulars, advises the correspondent from the First Division to "Study up the statistics to be found in the Typographical Journal." I hope "Sans Nom" and the other members of the I. T. U. will do just that. If they do, they will find, among other things, under "Expense Accounts"—that during the year 1903, $701.94 was used in "organizing" Madison—a union of twenty members. And when the per capita roll shows that, in January, 1903, the total cards paid were twenty, and that in December, of the same year, only nine were accounted for, it is apparent that at least one "pet" organizer failed in his duties. The useless expenditure of the money referred to is further emphasized when the fact is taken into consideration that no trouble existed in Madison when Organizer Hays put in appearance there, and no appeal for such aid had been made.

Nor is this all the money squandered in and around Madison, for the "Figures That Tell The Story" adds $486.49 to the amount previously mentioned. And what for?

And while we are thus quoting from the Journal, I want to add that the detailed manner in which the expenditures of the I. T. U. are published in this official publication are, to say the least, interesting,. Take, for instance, page 194 of the February issue. One paragraph, at the bottom of the first column, reads thus:

"The Hollenbeck Press—800 circulars, 1800 nomination blanks, $25; 750 postals and printing, $9.50; 250,000 due stamps, $60; 1,000 vouchers and statements, $11.25; 700 Journal circulation booklets, $30.50; 300 subscription notices, $2.50; 5,000 2-cent stamped envelopes, and printing, $112.50; 154 records of traveling cards issued, $54.25; 500 charters, $70; 200 books withdrawal cards, $38. Total, 413.50."

Another paragraph on the same page, reads:

"James M. Lynch, expenses to Pittsburg, New York, and Syracuse, $413.50."

Another paragragh:

"J. W. Hayes, expenses to Marshalltown, Lead, Sioux City, Huron, nad Aberdeen, $235.78."

Still another:

"J. E. McLoughlin, expenses to Albany, Norwich, Binghampton, $86.80; Orange, Newark, Trenton, Elizabeth, $191.75; services in New York, $16.75. Total, $295 30."

And what for?

The eighty organizers appointed by President Lynch present bills aggregating from $18,000 to $20,000 per year, and lump them as "expenses." And while such "expenses" might be, and probably are, perfectly correct, why are they not itemized so that the craft may know that they are legitimate.

"The Figures That Tell The Story" might be a trifle more explicit.

There are many more "Statistics" of the same interesting character. By all means, "Sans Nom," study up the statistics to be found in the Journal.

The Climbers.

WILLIAM TIPTON TALBOTT.

I see the climbers of the massive-rocked
And dragon-haunted
Ledges and cliffs where, by Hope's phantoms mocked
And tempest-shocked,
They stand undaunted.

Who are these kings of isolated heights
Where fame is blended
With rest? Who are these great-browed eremites
Of thought whose fights
With Fate are ended?—

Who these calm listeners to the tempest-screams
Of Fate defeated,
That through the splendor of their battle-dreams
Behold the gleams
Of toil completed?

O Earth, who are your sons that mount and stand
Upon the verges
Of rugged cliffs where, rising o'er the land,
The mountain grand
With cloudland merges?

Who are these restless knights that make no truce
With fiend or dragon,
And toiling skyward, deem of little use
The grape's sweet juice
In pleasure's flagon?

What birth-right of nobility have they,
With strong limbs crushing
Beneath their feet the trials of to-day
Ere morning's gray
With hope is flushing?

Has Fame, the giantess of tale and song,
Her temple portals
At last thrown open to the common throng?
Dare she thus wrong
The great immortals?

Ask him who stands where glow the cliffs with chill
Heroic beauty,
And he will say, "By right of brain and will
I toiled until
The voice of Duty,

Gathering sweetness as it floated down
The brightening gorges,
Said: 'Lo! now mayst thou wear, to soothe my frown
The iron crown
Ambition forges!'"

Official Gazette.

Sergeant Maloney has been transferred to the Third Division.

Messrs. Morrow and Robards have been returned to their respective divisions.

E. G. Myers was unanimously chosen to succeed himself as chairman of this chapel. He will be glad to receive your subscription to THE TRADE UNIONIST.

Miss Gordon and Miss Wilson had the Post souvenir picture of the chapel mounted on heavy cardboard and it looked so nice that a number of the members of this chapel "chipped in" to have it framed.

The thanks of the Woman's Auxiliary are due and are hereby tendered to Eiseman Bros., Seventh and E streets northwest, for the handsome tally-cards which they donated for use at the euchre party. The label was printed on them, too.

G. P. O. Council, National Union, has been having some largely attended meetings lately, and there were thirteen candidates initiated at the last meeting. Looks as if people had confidence in the fraternal insurance company when properly managed.

Byron A. Ford received a very quaint and attractive picture from his son, descriptive of an old-time printing office. Such pictures will be beyond the comprehension of the printer of the future, when the oil can and the monkey wrench take the place of the stick and rule.

W. W. Maloney has returned to work after a leave spent in the South. Like everybody else who has recently come from that section he is enthusiastic in describing the beauties of Nature down there at this season of the year. His trip benefitted both him and his wife considerably.

Mr. Geo. S. Kauffman has been transferred to the Job Room. He says the atmospheric conditions in the new building are a great improvement over what we enjoy on the Gazette. Mr. Kauffman recently lost a nephew named Mattern, son of Mr. Mattern, tobacconist, on Seventh street.

The candidates for various offices in the Union have dropped in so thick and fast since last report that I shall bunch them, as space will not permit of their each having a separate paragraph as they deserve. They are F. H. Melick, T.C. Parsons, C. E. Holmes, D. C. Vaughn, H. G. Brown and Frank Hall. Hope I have not overlooked any one. Titus Ellis sent over a consignment of "black kittens" to Miss Gordon for distribution among the ladies.

The euchre party given by the Woman's Auxiliary of Columbia Union March 30th, at Typographical Temple, was a success, and reflected great credit on the entertainment committee, who conceived and carried it through in all its details. Mrs. E. H. Thomas, chairman of the entertainment committee, was mistress of ceremonies and she was ably assisted in her duties by Mr. Jack Rowe and a number of beautiful ladies who manipulated the punching machines and kept an eye on the players. A number of people have given expression to regret that the party occurred during Holy Week and prevented their attendance on it. No doubt the next euchre will be more largely attended and a larger hall will be necessary to accommodate the crowd. A number of beautiful prizes were donated by members of the auxiliary. The prize-winners were Messrs. W. P. Irving, S. G. Kirby, F. McDermott, D. M. McGibbon, R. J. Bray, Edgar Meritt, John Davis, S. C. Poston and J. M. McCormick. The ladies winning prizes were Miss Trefts, Mrs. E. T. Stephenson, Mrs. W. J. Coffin, Mrs. O. D. Hyler, Mrs. J. Latham, Mrs. C. H. Herbert, Mrs. E. Calhoon, and Mrs. C. H. Slack.

H. J. REDFIELD.

Womens' Auxiliary Entertainment.

The Women's Auxiliary of Columbia Typographical Union have made all arrangements for an entertainment and dance on Thursday, April 28. The object of the entertainment is to secure funds to send delegates to the next convention at St. Louis. An excellent program of high order of merit has been outlined and an evening of enjoyment is assured. Haley's orchestra will furnish the music.

Night Bill Force.

"See that point . ☞" is one of the unique signs at the "cage" window.

Denny Sheehan has the "Charley Horse." Athletes will understand this term.

D. L. Mackley and Walter H. Mules have been on the sick list during the past week.

Mr. W. H. Guthridge and family spent Saturday to Monday at his old home in Baltimore visiting his parents.

Mr. Thomas Dougherty has taken charge of the pneumatic tube. As a hot- or cold-air artist Tommy has no equal.

A. L. Huss, of the "Hot Stuff" end of this division, is the possessor of a self-reversing water wagon with patent dump.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Wilson will be glad to hear of her improvement since going to Sibley Hospital last week.

Geo. T. Weaber, of this Division, who has been suffering from neuritis for some time, applied for sixty days' leave, and has left for Hot Springs, Ark.

A boy baby arrived at the home of S. Th. Westdal on March 31. It is the finest in the world, for "Steve" says so himself. (Minnesota papers please copy.)

In the Second Division Annex after a tie vote of 32 to 32, Theo. Gerber was elected chairman by 33 votes to 31 over the present incumbent. A. N. Venable continues as secretary.

Those afflicted with a "thirst" or who are ill advisedly trying to cultivate one will do well to read Mr. Belcher's timely items against intemperance which appear from week to week.

W. N. Whitehead merely passed through the room the other night. He received quite an ovation. Owing to his stupendous and economical task of entertaining the convention last year, he will receive many votes for delegate.

The regular election of officers for this division proved very interesting last Thursday night. "Professor" Geo. W. Harvel was elected secretary without opposition. The vote for chairman resulted: W. R. Abbott, present incumbent, 57; L. D. Brandon, 54.

The announcement Monday of the death of Mr. E. P. Cummins came as a shock to his many friends on the night forces, some of whom did not know of his serious illness. A floral piece was sent as a token of the esteem in which he was held by the First and Second Division and Proof Room.

J. B. Harris left for his home in Charlotte, N. C., to recuperate. Mr. Harris was attacked by a severe case of grip early in the winter, and has not recovered from the effects of the disease. He expects to be back in thirty days. Jim is a nice fellow and a speedy recovery is wished for him.

Big, jovial, accommodating Titus F. Ellis shook hands with us last week and asked to be remembered when voting for delegates. If good fellowship and undoubted unionism will win he expects to represent No. 101 at St. Louis. He was highly elated over the fine reception he received here.

Mr. G. G. Seibold, of the Times, candidate for secretary, was introduced to the members of the Bill Force last week. If the membership have at last decided to make a change in this important office they could not elect a safer or more competent man. He was once honored by this union as delegate to Syracuse in 1898. Mr. Seibold is a man of sterling qualities of mind and heart and puts forth his best energies into anything he essays to perform. In no way is there a man better able to fill the position he seeks.

In this column on March 17 the impression was unintentionally made that Mr. Parsons alone secured the $2 increase in scale on the Times. Further information shows that a committee of three, which included Mr. Parsons, Mr. Seibold, and one other, in company with the foreman, Mr. Hack, appeared before the manager, Mr. Paddock, in New York, and, after a presentation of the matter by the committee and a recommendation from Mr. Hack, the increase was allowed.

Anent the criticism of Mr. Belcher's statements in regard to the author of the Pastoral Symphony and his use of this term and that of oratorio, he showed this correspondent the documentary proofs of his contention, which he has at hand ready for any one's inspection. Mr. Belcher at one time had a well trained voice and has sung with some famous local organizations of different cities. In a prize contest for the best arranged program for the Symphony Orchestra of this city Mr. Belcher stood fifth out of 180 contestants.

Mr. Philip W. Steele, candidate for delegate from the First Division, by long and faithful service in the union, has well earned the many expressions of support heard on all sides. He was a charter member of Utica, N. Y., in 1864, when the scale was raised 2 cents on day work and 3 cents on night work. Thirty years ago last August he was delegate to St. Louis from Albany. Jimmy Kane, of this room, was then working in the Weather Bureau at that place, knew him well as an always energetic union worker. Mr. John Crow, now holding copy in the proof room was delegate the same year with Mr. Steele, but represented Philadelphia. Mr. Steele has been a member of Columbia Union for fifteen years. His name should not be confused with that of Mr. Joe Stelle, who withdrew from the race for delegate last week. It would be an advantageous and graceful act for No. 101 to elect Mr. Steele.

G. P. O. TEMPORARY EMPLOYES.

Status of Action Taken By Solicitors on Leaves of Absence Pay.

Mr. Arthur B. Barringer has received a letter from Geo. A. and William B. King, relative to status of leaves of absence pay to temporary employes of the G. P. O. Desiring to give the matter as much publicity as possible the letter is given to us for publication:

Mr. ARTHUR B. BARRINGER, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.:

Dear Sir—Since the adverse decision of the Supreme Court, which was representative of the claims in our hands for pay for unused leaves of absence to those employed on the temporary and emergency rolls of the Government Printing Office, we have been endeavoring to perfect a plan whereby these plans could be presented to Congress in the most favorable light.

Inquiries are being received from our clients asking as to the present status, and with a view to having those of your acquaintance fully informed, we are writing you in detail, showing you what has been accomplished.

With the adverse decision by the Supreme Court we were of course compelled to abandon the effort to secure this pay through action in the courts. The only remaining chance of success lay in an appeal to Congress for an appropriation.

It was believed that the strong equities shown by these claims would impress Congress with their justice and that proper presentation to that body would result in payment, especially since the final disallowance was based almost wholly upon a technicality.

Our position before Congress is of course greatly strengthened by reason of one favorable judgment, although the Supreme Court refused to affirm that on a ground which was not revealed at all in the trial before the Court of Claims.

Early in the present session of Congress this matter was brought to the attention of the Members and Senators, and after careful consideration a resolution was introduced calling upon the Public Printer for information to show dates of employment on the temporary roll and the amounts which would be due as commutation of leave of absence if such leave of absence had been granted, but not taken.

It will require considerable time to comply with this call from the Senate, but it is hoped that the information can all be furnished during the present session. If, after this list is returned to Congress, the committees can be satisfied with the justice of the claims, the anticipated course will be a direct appropriation to pay the money.

One thing we may have to meet is the ground stated for the disallowance of the claims by the Supreme Court. We have always been of the opinion that compositors temporarily employed prior to 1894 were paid this leave of absence in the direct appropriation by Congress in 1897. The Court of Claims found this to be a fact but the Supreme Court refused to accept the finding of fact as conclusive and held that the language used in the appropriation act of 1897 did not warrant the conclusion that temporary employes had ever been paid for this leave of absence.

Examination of the official registers for the years from 1888 to 1894 shows the names of a number of employes at the Government Printing Office for less than one year who were paid small amounts as accumulated or unused leave of absence in the appropriation act of 1897. We would like to hear from any of those so paid.

From time to time, as any decided progress is made, you will be advised, and we would like a suggestion from you as to what is the best method of keeping claimants informed as to the status of the claims. They are now scattered considerably and it is possible they may best be reached through the medium of your official paper which we have learned is widely read among those following the printing trades.

Yours truly,
GEORGE A. and WM. B. KING.

Temporary men who have not done so can send their names to Mr. Barringer, in the Specification Division, G. P. O., or direct to Mr. King. This is important, as the lawyers are anxious to complete their list.

The Cummings' Memorial.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

In view of the fact that there is at this time a fund being raised by voluntary contribution for the purpose of commemorating the memory of our late fellow-craftsman, Amos J. Cummings, the question arises, In what way can we use the money to the best advantage? It has been suggested by some that we erect a huge bowlder on the grounds of the Union Printers' Home, at Colorado Springs, and by others that we enlarge the Home.

During the past year I had the privilege of spending about seven months in Colorado Springs, and had many opportunities to observe affairs at the Union Printers' Home, and to make many pleasant acquaintances. I found the institution a model one in every respect as far as it went, but it did not go far enough.

When the Union Printers' Home was built it was not intended that it should become in any sense a hospital for the sick, but was intended for the aged and infirm members. However, those who selected the site builded better than they knew, for, by reason of its location, it has become the refuge very largely of a number of our members who have been stricken with the awful disease, consumption.

The tuberculous residents of the Union Printers' Home are provided with quarters in what is called the annex, an extension of the main building, which is provided with every possible convenience necessary to the comfort and well-being of the men. Certainly no institution in the world is better prepared to treat this disease than the Union Printers' Home. However the time has come when it is necessary to provide larger quarters for these patients. In the last monthly report of the superintendent the number of residents is given as 129, of whom 36 were tuberculous—more than one-third. I am told that there is not a vacancy in the annex at this time, and that there are a number waiting their turn to be admitted.

In view of this condition of affairs it appears to me that the fund being raised could be more profitably used in enlarging the Union Printers' Home than in any other way. When it only costs the membership the small sum of 10 cents a month, it appears to me that we should enlarge our quarters and thereby provide a home where, nine times out of ten, a man can recover his health, providing he does not wait too long.

Some two or three years ago it was suggested at one of the conventions that we erect tents in the ample grounds which surrounds the Union Printers' Home for the use of those suffering with tuberculosis. It has been demonstrated times without number that an outdoor life is the only cure. For some reason the matter of tents was not pushed, and the project fell through. It would seem that this is a good time to call attention to the matter again, and that part of the fund being raised could be used for that purpose.

I submit these few observations with the hope that our membership may give the matter some thought, and would be pleased to see our delegates to St. Louis bring the matter properly before the convention, when I feel sure something of the kind I have suggested would meet with hearty approval.

CARLOS B. TOMLIN.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

The Chicago Record-Herald of March 27 contained a double-column portrait and a lengthy sketch of William Briggs, one of the estimate clerks of the G. P. O., who is so well known to our own membership, or the older portions of it, as to need no further particulars, and who, as the article says, "two decades ago needed no introduction to any printer or trade unionist in the country." It goes on to review his career, during which he held every office within the gift of his union except president, and was twice a delegate to the I. T. U., serving two years as secretary-treasurer of that body, his services being recognized by the following resolution on his retirement, passed at the New York session of 1885:

To retiring Secretary-Treasurer Briggs, for the faithful manner in which he discharged the many and perplexing duties of his office for the last two years, this body tenders its most profound gratitude; but no words of ours, however pleasing to him, can equal the reward which he has in the consciousness of duty well done.

"Time has dealt gently with this pioneer of labor," concludes the article, "for other than a sprinkling of gray hair the trace of years has made little change. He is a member of the Ex-Delegates' Association of Columbia Union and a life honorary member of Toledo Union for services rendered to that union."

* * * *

The contest between "young" Mr. Lynch and "young" Mr. Hawkes for the I. T. U. presidency has caused "young" Mr. Gunn, "young" Mr. McCord, and "young" Mr. King, in behalf of the latter, and "young" Mr. Kreiter, for the former, to exude a lot of ink, not to mention the work of the regular correspondents. It is in keeping with the spirit of the age, which insists on the "young" men coming to the front. The controversy has been reasonably good-natured so far, and probably will continue to be as long as the real underlying motives are kept concealed.

* * * *

While on the subject of elections I want to mention an anonymous letter I received. It is bad enough to notice anonymous correspondents when they print their stuff, though they have to let the editor know their identity, but worse when the letter is in disguised chirography and dropped into a black letter box at the corner of a dark alley in the dead of night. I only notice this to protect myself from future similar deliverances. The correspondent wants me to "give those foremen hell who carry the votes of their rooms around in their vest pockets, or pretend to, and say who shall and who shall not be elected." I could not do that if I wanted to, because I don't know any such, in the first place, and in the second, I don't believe there is a foreman in Government employ (those were the ones evidently meant) who so far forgets his unionism as to attempt to use his official position for such a purpose, nor a man who has so little manhood as to be influenced by such a foreman, if there were such. The foremen recognize that they are but individual members of the union, with no more influence in it than other individuals. If anybody has frightened my anonymous friend (he is evidently "scary") about what his foreman will do to him, I suggest that the ballot is a secret one and he can fill it out so secretly and vote it so secretly that the angel Gabriel would not be able to convict him of voting against the wishes of his foreman. But I may be the victim of an April fool joke, for I received the letter last Friday.

* * * *

"Young" Mr. King says that Lynch's principal lieutenant in this city has found it necessary to write letters to old friends from Maine to Texas in his behalf. Some people have no friends except in that South Carolina village from which they came, where they they have no union and no votes.

* * * *

My friend Broderick moves that a primary be held to select the down-town candidate for delegate, and anxiously calls for a second. The occasion for primaries was done away with when our present scheme was adopted, and it is especially undesirable now that one of the candidates has developed sufficient apparent strength to land him. "Which one?" Guess for yourself, as I do.

* * * *

Dr. James R. Armstrong, of the Day Proof Room, called and left cards the other night. He is a candidate for vice president, and apparently has the game so well in hand that it will be easy picking for him.

* * * *

The Star and the Times are two wonderfully good papers, but I could enjoy the serial in the former so much more if I had not already read it in the Strand magazine, while the "Daily evening story" of the latter has not improved a particle since it appeared as a "Storiette" in Munsey's. Messieurs Editeurs, there are hungry story writers right here in Washington, with trunkfulls of stories, waiting for a market, while you are patronizing Justh's Old Stand.

* * * *

Fred Whitehead has signified his willingness to be a candidate for delegate to St. Louis, which has been urged upon him ever since he showed such executive ability as chairman of the convention committee last summer, and he will have the assistance of hosts of warm friends in his campaign. A man like Whitehead can be of real service to the union as a delegate, as he is an indefatigable worker, an able debater, is well acquainted with the laws and regulations of the I. T. U., and knows all the prominent union men of the country. He told me that he will not begin his campaign until the nominations are made, which still leaves nearly four weeks of hard work.

* * * *

H. Y. ("Windy") Brooke sent me a copy of his Crenshaw County Critic, of Luverne, Ala., the other day. Its five pages of official ads. look like there is money in it, the tone of the paper shows there is fight in it, and a letter from August Donath in the paper shows there are others than his immediate neighbors who admire its editor. Mr. Brooks is a candidate for tax collector, and if he does not win there is nothing in pluck.

* * * *

Col. William H. Bailey recently received a letter from Hughy Saxon, of Los Angeles, in which he said:

Tell Bloomer that Al Burke, famous on the Missouri in the early eighties, died here recently. Also tell him that Jenks, whom you all remember as the big chief electrician at one time in the G. P. O., is here selling automobiles and doing well. He takes me out frequently. He is wifeless and happy.

* * * *

There are rumors that John Macksey, of the Times, will be a candidate for down-town delegate, but I don't know how solid a foundation they have. He has many friends in the G. P. O. who will hustle for him. It seems to be the Times' year to have the delegate, and they are determined to have it if every man in the office has to be a candidate.

* * * *

There also were rumors that Harry O'Donnell will be a candidate for president. While such reports are highly complimentary to Mr. O'Donnell, I have reason for believing that they are baseless and the fine-toothed comb will probably be kept moving for the next week or so.

* * * *

George Seibold dropped in on us the other night in his pursuit of the secretaryship. George is "an old campaigner, egad—an old campaigner, sah!"

* * * *

As it looks to me now, six weeks before election, I. T. U. President Lynch will carry this union by a safe majority, unless undue influences are brought to bear against him, in which event he will carry it about 2 to 1. Members are annually developing the habit of voting as they please.

* * * *

"Young Mr. King," in his windy attack on President Lynch last week, seemed to have as little regard for truth as the other virtues, as just a little analysis of his "guff" will show. He says an item in the Journal reads: "James M. Lynch, expenses to Pittsburg, New York, and Syracuse, $413.50," but it doesn't. It says: James M. Lynch, expenses to Pittsburg, New York, and Syracuse, $124.33." Again "Young Mr. King" speaks of eighty organizers who presented bills aggregating from $18,000 to $20,000 per year and lump them as "expenses," whereas there were but seventeen organizers, and they all presented itemized bills. All of "Young Mr. King's" figures are equally truthful, but not more so. He doesn't tell us what he criticizes about the bill of the Hollenbeck Press for $413.50 for printing for Secretary-Treasurer Bramwood's office, but it seems to hurt him.

I hope "Young Mr. King" will study the statistics to be found in the Journal, carefully revising any figures that may be furnished him by others, for all men are prone to error while lying about those to whom they are opposed.

The union man who has labor to sell and who has not yet been thoroughly convinced that a standard or uniform wage scale is desirable might learn something to his advantage by standing in the market place a while as a non-unionist and receive bids from those who want cheap labor and are opposed to labor unions, which seek to maintain such a standard of wages as will admit of a higher standard of living. Some men need the severe lesson to make them more appreciative of privileges they would not possess if results depended upon their individual efforts.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Post Chapel

BEFORE—AFTER.

(Dedicated to Our Horse-wise.)
Sporting blood coursed thro' their veins—
Their lives were full of hope;
But when the jockey grasped the reins—
They slipped up on their dope.

It is rumored that Mr. Hawkes will withdraw—after the election.

The withdrawal of Joe Stelle will cause a goodly number hereabouts to revise their tickets.

George Fleishell, who was confined to his home a few days last week suffering from tonsilitis, is again at work.

For some reason the expenses of Mr. Hawkes do not appear in the Journal. After the election they will be read, all right.

Arrival—H. A. Ball, in the adv. alley. Departure—W. M. Sinclair, operator, for Pittsburg, St. Louis, and thence to the Pacific Coast.

Danny Vaughan's cards have been distributed. One of them is posted on our bulletin board, and from a distance resembles the all-seeing eye.

An item in the Bulletin one day last week read: Wanted—A printer who neither chews, smokes, drinks, nor swears. Who wants the job?

Victor M. Hurley suffered an attack of grip some weeks ago, and after remaining at home about a week he returned to work. His weakened condition, however, soon became apparent and a relapse set in. Upon the advice of his physician he has gone to Grafton, W. Va., to recuperate, and we hope for his speedy and complete recovery.

The candidacy of Mr. F. N. Whitehead will appeal to the conservative element of the union. His long experience in union affairs makes him a most acceptable candidate. His ability as a legislator can not be denied, and if elected, which he should be, his many qualifications for committee work will be quickly recognized by President Lynch, who was loud in his praise of the excellent arrangements made for the convention in this city. Aside from this, the fact remains that every vote cast for Mr. Whitehead will be a silent yet positive rebuke to the practice of foremen "going down the line" to carry into effect whatever they desire. He has taken up the gage of battle thrown down to him. It is now the work of the membership to rebuke the repugnant, arrogant, and coercive battle waged by the little bosses, whose only work for unionism seems to be an attempt to control elections.

There are two sides to every question, and I want to say a few words in praise of the much-abused mutual aid society—or symposium, as sometime called—in the printing office. At different times and places it has been said that the rate of interest charged those who borrow money from these institutions is exorbitant; that the International Union should pass laws abolishing them, etc. In our chapel we have three of these organizations. During the past winter hardly a week went by that one or more of our members has not been stricken by more or less serious illness. Had it not been for the benefits derived from this source the unfortunates and their families would have suffered or had to depend on the subscription list or other charity. The improvident printer while enjoying good health can much better afford to pay from 2 to 5 per cent weekly for the money he does not necessarily have to borrow than he can do without this aid in time of need. The money paid in interest would go some other way and most likely where no returns could be had or expected.

When it comes to neckties, Carlin Drake is the Tom Cod of the room.

The much-lamented Thomas Solan reports himself perfectly in love with his new position in the electrical department.

Mr. Fred Berger was placed on the sick list Tuesday morning. It is the earnest wish of all who know him that his illness will be of short duration.

Samuel T. Esmay is again holding down Slug 30. Mr. Esmay's ill health caused him the loss of six weeks' work, which is exceptionally hard for an emergency man.

Mr. Frank P. Lippincott (Slug 129) returned to work Tuesday after a week's absence. Mr. Lippincott was called to his former home in New Brunswick, N. J., by the death of his sister.

There is a gentleman in this room who has recently concluded negotiations for the purchase of an automobile. And yet there are some who say there is nothing in working overtime.

T. Frank Morgan's name now appears among the "regular" maker's-up. Mr. Morgan has proved himself an efficient man for the place made vacant by the death of "Bob" Hale. Here's to you, Frank.

In a moment of confidence the other day Simon Pocher confided to me the secret of his floor-wash. I am not at liberty to give the secret away, but "elbow grease" is the chief ingredient. Simon says he could keep the floor in perfect condition all the time—provided no one used it.

The first of April passed off quietly in this room. Probably the most amusing incident was the hasty manner in which Timekeeper Leeds made for the front windows in order to see the Italian riot. When it comes to looking for excitement he is a regular "Charley on-the-Spot."

Mr. Belcher advised me to look up statistics in the official pages of the I. T. U. Journal and after taking his advice I find that Mr. Lynch's personal expenses, in addition to his salary as president and his salary as president of the Home Board exceeds the expenses of all the presidents of the I. T. U. combined since the organization has had a permanent headquarters, and that includes Plank, 2 years; Prescott, 7 years; Donnelly, 2 years, and Mr. Lynch has been in office 3½ years. The "Figures that tell the story" can be found from month in the Journal. Here are a few:

November Journal, p. 513, J. M. Lynch, expenses to New York and Philadelphia, $84.86.

January Journal, p. 94, J. M. Lynch, expenses to Chicago, Denver, Colorado Springs, and Salt Lake, $183 65.

December Journal, p.636, J.M.Lynch, expenses to New Orleans, $88.05.

February Journal, p.194, J. M. Lynch, expenses to Pittsburg, New York, and Syracuse, $124 33.

These items are exclusive of Mr. Lynch's salary of $150 per month as president of the I. T. U. and of his salary of $33.33 per month as president of the Home Board. The per capita has been raised 10 cents per month since Mr. Lynch assumed the reins and if he is reelected and keeps up his present stroke we'll have to see another raise.

When you see our candidate—Titus F. Ellis—just give him the glad hand and proceed to climb on the band wagon. We have got a winner boys, and want you all to get good seats.

My friend Louis C. Vogt is a sure-enough candidate for auditor, and deserves election if ability, cleverness, and a pleasing personality count for aught. I have known "Louie" for several years, both as alleymate, soldier, and friend and know him to be strictly "on the level." Having served an apprenticeship in a bank, he is thoroughly conservant with bookkeeping and figures.

My readers will remember that I said last week that it was not like the Third Division team to let another team roll a bigger score. Just to prove that I wasn't boasting, I beg to submit that the Third won from the Second by a total score of 2125 to 2097.

Talking about music the other day, one of the boys said, "Fellows, I'll tell you just how much I know about music. If I was to get a hand organ all fixed up to play Old Hundred, and go out on the street with it, it would be sure to grind out Ninety-eight and Ninety-nine!"

Could Columbia Union find any better representative timber than Messrs. Dan C. Vaughan and Frank Kidd? I trow not. These gentlemen will get a large percentage of the votes to be cast May 20. No one who witnessed the able manner in which Vice-President Vaughn presided on the opening day of last year's convention will doubt for a moment that "he is little but he is good;" while the sterling qualities of Mr. Kidd as a labor leader have made him an enviable reputation throughout the country.

Hubert Newsom, now of the Cascarets, who formerly worked on frame 42, called on us Monday. I asked him what he was doing with himself Sundays, and he replied, "Why, you know I go to the Ninth Street Christian Church. If a fellow should go into one of the meetings, not knowing it was a church, he would be sure to take it for a meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of Columbia Union, there are so many printers there. There is a series of sermons being preached there Sunday evenings under the general title, New Light on Old Stories, and I wish you would come up next Sunday, for the sermon is going to be about Joseph and his Coat of Many Colors. Sure to interest you. Good bye."

No less reprehensible than the dirty water hog who neglects to pull the plug in the wash room is that other hog whose specialty is spitting on the floor. Last Tuesday one of these filthy creatures spat tobacco juice upon the floor a few feet from the door to the Jackson alley stairway, with the result that as I was turning to go out of the door I slipped, striking the side of my knee with such violence upon the hard wood floor that it was impossible for me to eat my lunch, aud I am so lame that it is an exertion to walk. Spitting upon the street, sidewalk, or a street car is an offense punishable by fine. I do not see why it is not just as great an offense to spit upon the floor of the Government Printing Office as it is to spit in the street. There are enough spittoons in all conscience. I suppose printers will chew tobacco; but the line must be drawn somewhere when it comes to spitting.

F. N. Whitehead, of the Job Room, has taken the place in the list of candidates made vacant by the withdrawal of Joseph G. Stelle. I did think I was playing the limit when I gave Miss Wilson, T. Frank Hall, and Titus F. Ellis as my ticket. But, as Bloomer says, "I've just got to have" Whitehead. I have boarded at the same house, eaten at the same table, and worked in the same shop with Mr. Whitehead for upwards of one year, more or less—less on some things and more on others—and I have noted with admiration and satisfaction his able record as chairman of the committee of arrangements during the I. T. U. Convention last summer, as well as the fact that he is a real temperance man and knows indubitably the precise moment when he isn't dry any longer, and forthwith stops drinking; and I am irresistably impelled to the conclusion that he would be a mighty good delegate, if elected. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Union-Made Cigars.

But few people in Washington know that their is a strong Union cigar factory in this city, where a line of fine hand made cigars are turned out, which have no superior quality or workmanship. This factory is owned and operated by Henry T. Offterdinger, 504 Ninth street northwest, who is a practical cigar maker himself, and whose success is due to the high standard quality of his cigars and the careful workmanship of his men. The popular brands of this factory are the Deer Heads 10 cents, and the After Dinner, 5 cents, and whenever you want a good first-class hand-made Union cigar, you will find these two brands as fine as money and experience can make them for the price.

Pressmen Elect Delegates.

Pressmen's Union, No. 1, I. P. P. and A. U., held its election on Saturday night for delegates to the St. Louis convention next June. The fact that three delegates were to be chosen and but four candidates were named for the honor made the contest unique in a way.

The candidates were Clarence Bright, W. C. Deane, W. J. Dooley, and George J. Forden. The total vote cast was 181, and but five votes separated thetop and bottom man on the ticket, Forden being the minority candidate.

ALLIED BUILDING TRADES.

Meeting of April 5, 1904.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades was called to order at the usual hour by Chairman Wells.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Credentials were read from United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, No. 884, certifying to George Prender as alternate for Joseph Reilley, and being referred for investigation to a committee consisting of Delegates Daly, Nothnagel, and Thompson, they reported favorably, and the delegate was seated.

Communications were read from the Painters, No. 368, relative to grievance on the Rochambeau apartment house. Referred to the Executive Committee.

From Carpenters Joint District Council, asking that they be furnished with sufficient cards for the Carpenters, the face of card to bear the words "Carpenter's Joint District Council of Washington and vicinity." The request was denied by a vote of 25 to 11.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Delegate Winslow reported that Chas. Rauscher, who was published as being unfair, had expressed a willingness to adjust the differences and the matter was referred to a committee consisting of Delegates Winslow, Nothnagel, and Gilmore. Also that Reinle Bros. & Solmon, Baltimore, bar fixtures, etc., who employ non-union men, were doing work in the city. The matter was referred to the Business Agent.

By-Laws Committee reported progress.

ROLL CALL.

Under roll call of unions to submit business, forty-three delegates from twenty one unions were marked present.

Sheet Metal Workers asked the assistance of Business Agent with the American Ice Company.

Bridge and Structural Iron Workers stated that the Schneider Iron Works Company was unfair to them and asked the indorsement of the Council of Allied Building Trades to so notify the Master Builders' Association. The request was granted.

Tile Layers reported the tile work at the Homeopathic Hospital as having been let to the unfair firm of the National Mosaic Company. Referred to the Business Agent and the Employers' Association.

Painters reported having called off their men at Trinity College. Referred to Business Agent.

Carpenters, No. 884, through Delegate Johnson, asked that their cards be issued through Carpenters' Joint District Council.

The request was favored by Delegates Gilmore, McKay, Pender, Johnson, Rossou, and Smith, and opposed by Delegates Winslow, Daly, Thompson, Allison, Sheetz, Cooper, McClelland, and Ratigan.

The request was denied by a vote of 23 to 11.

Carpenters, No. 1651, made same request, which was denied by a vote of 23 to 9.

Both Branches of Amalgamated Carpenters made the same request, which was also denied.

Considerable discussion followed, and the delegates from all Carpenters' Unions stated that they wanted their Locals placed on record as not being opposed to the card issued by the Council of Allied Building Trades, and that many of the statements being made were of individual members.

Delegate Winslow introduced the the following resolution which took its regular course.

Resolved, That when two or more Locals affiliated with this Council, unions of the same craft or calling, form a point council or committee, said joint council or committee shall be admitted to the Council on the following basis or representation, viz: One delegate from each Local Union forming said Council or committees, and when less than three Locals form said Council or Committee then the said Council or Committee shall be entitled to three delegates.

The secretary was directed to inform all unions of Carpenters that the request of the Carpenters Joint District Council was refused on constitutional grounds.

The Council then adjourned.

In purchasing goods from advertisers in this paper, do not fail to mention the fact that you saw the advertisement in THE TRADES UNIONIST.

Hall No. 1, "Building Trades Halls," 610 G street northwest, is open daily from 8 o'clock a. m. until 5 p. m. as a reading room to all members of building trades unions affiliated with the Council of Allied Building Trades.

A BIT OF ALL SORTS.

The number of printing offices in this city using the allied label has reached the half century mark.

Two foremen you always hear well spoken of by the people under them are Charley Hay, of the Job Room, and Dennis J. O'Leary, of the Main Press Room.

"Pard" Bloomer seems recently to have rubbed the fur the wrong way on a good many of the prominent people. Better stick to the dead ones, Pard; they are not so touchy.

While the Baltimore fire was an awful calamity, it will have the effect of supplanting with modern outfits the most antiquated and out-of-date lot of printing offices any city in this country could boast of.

The "Special notice" column of the Star is largely devoted to the announcements of the various job printing concerns of this city, they evidently believing in the efficiency of the use of printer's ink.

The baseball season will soon open, and all of us cranks who roasted Tom Loftus and his misfit all last year will soon be breaking our necks in an effort to reach the park by at least the end of the first inning.

The Linotype machine is truly a wonder, but the case-making machine in the Bindery and the gathering and book-sewing machines are truly marvelous in their ability to do what was only possible by hand a few years ago.

The Specification Division Pressroom is finally located and running smoothly, after three months of inconvenience between the far west end of the fifth floor on the Jackson alley wing and the extreme east end of the first floor on North Capitol street.

George Gray, formerly of Gray & Clarkson, has gotten back to the case again. George was quite a prominent member of Columbia Union twenty or more years ago, and I guess it is about that time since he set any type. He was a good printer, and no doubt is still able to get up the average.

Union compositors and union stereotypers got out the Baltimore papers in Washington, but no Baltimore pressmen were used, for the reason, I suppose, that there are no union pressrooms on the Baltimore papers. Neither are there any Baltimore pressmen filling temporary places in the Government Printing Office.

The R. Hoe Company has always maintained a reputation for sending out first-class mechanics to erect their presses, and Jack Dow, who has just finished the Specification Pressroom plant, measures fully up to the Hoe standard of excellence. Not only is he a thorough mechanic, but he is a man it is a pleasure to come into contact with.

Some of the knockers are wasting a good deal of hot air in abuse of John L. Kennedy for selling type-setting machines. I don't see why he has not the same right as any other man to make a living selling anything he can get well paid for in promoting, and if some of these grumblers would devote the time they devote to Kennedy trying to improve themselves, perhaps they, too, might be able to do something but set straight type.

An instance of the kindness of heart of the late Henry O. Shepard, of the Inland Printer: One of the pressmen was taxed ten or twelve dollars for an accident due partly, perhaps, to negligence, and when Mr. Shepard learned of it he sent the man his personal check for the amount, with instructions to say nothing about it, thus upholding the business office in discipline, but showing his sympathy for an old and worthy employe.

Death of E. P. Cummins.

E. P. Cummins, one of the members of the Fifth Division Chapel, G. P. O., died Sunday morning after a short illness. Death was due to pleurisy. Mr. Cummins made many friends during his residence in this city and was prominent in several organizations taking an active interest in the affairs of Columbia Typographical Union. The sympathy of his friends go out to his sister, who is thus bereft of a fond and loving brother. Interment was had at Mount Olivet Cemetery on Wednesday.

Some Facts for the Hawkes's Advocates.

Particular stress is placed upon Mr. Hawkes' claims by his friends why he should be placed at the head of the I. T. U. because he is a "Union Diplomat," and loud is the praise that he has been president of two large unions. No one will deny the latter. But it is interesting to note that the two large unions of which Mr. Hawkes was president—San Francisco and Seattle—nominated Mr. Lynch.

Twenty-four cities are mentioned in Mr. Hawkes' literature wherein he earned the title of "Union Diplomat." Among those cities are Kansas City, Detroit, New Orleans, Cleveland, Toledo, Columbus, Lansing, Sioux City, Topeka, Louisville, Burlington, Davenport (Iowa), Dixon, Streator, Quincy, Ottawa and Morris (Illinois.)

All of the above unions nominated Mr. Lynch in spite of the fact that Mr. Hawkes organized them and at one time or another was president of two of above unions. Only five of the cities mentioned in Mr. Hawkes' circular nominated him, and five failed to nominate.

It would seem that where a "Union Diplomat" is well known and did good work he should have a large majority of the support of such a Union. Especially is this true where he served as president and where he is best known. But such is not the case, and the above facts are taken from the campaign circular of Mr. Hawkes.

Last week J. Ligon King made a big fuss about the close vote in Boston between Lynch and Hawkes, Lynch carrying it by a majority of 11. Neither of the two candidates claim Boston as their home city, but Mr. Hawkes claims Chicago as his home town, and he was nominated by a majority of 29.

However, remember that out of 24 cities in which Mr. Hawkes has been a "Union Diplomat" only five nominated him.

Respectfully,
FRANK S. LERCH.

Bookbinders Election.

The election of delegates to represent Bookbinders Union, No. 4, I. B. of B., at the convention to be held at St. Paul next June, resulted in the election of James Fogerty and James L. Feeney, the two candidates receiving the highest vote. The union resolved at a previous meeting that but two delegates should go, although entitled to more.

Interest in the result was exciting, due to the closeness of the contest between Frailey and Feeney, the latter winning out by 11 votes.

A loan of $1,000 at 5 per cent wanted for improvements on District of Columbia real estate. Address A. B., this office.

C. S. Gunn Reviews J. M. Kreiter.

Washington, April 3, 1904.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

When, some two weeks ago, I wrote a little article giving my views on the Lynch question, I never thought of the terrible consequences should our J. Monroe Kreiter "run amuck." No one, aside from those who have passed through a similar ordeal, can possibly know the agonizing pain or the tickling sensation I felt as the cold chills ran up and down my trembling form, as I read my undoing from the pen of James. Had he continued much longer I fear I should have rushed to the nearest Lynch camp, and then offered myself up as a sacrifice to the cause. Mr. Kreiter says I did well so far as making known my position. This is more than I can say for him, for after carefully reading his article I have come to the conclusion that he has open dates for either band wagon.

"Multiciplicity of words," says Mr. Kreiter, "does not make logical a man's position." Multiciplicity of words, Think of it. James Monroe Kreiter complaining of multiciplicity of words. At the same he goes right ahead for a column and a half to misquote me in order that he may find some point on which to differ when I penned those simple words, "four years at the head of the organization are enough" (speaking of our own Typographical Union) little did I think of stirring up the awful wrath of my friend James. If Mr. Kreiter does not know the difference between "the head" of an organization and its hard-worked secretary I do not feel that it is up to me to undertake the task of his enlightenment. There are several good correspondence schools thoroughout the country which might undertake the job for a reasonable consideration. So far as the heads of banking institutions are concerned I care very little how long they serve. I do feel, though, that if they were changed oftener there would probably be less bank failures, and the poor workman who deposits a few of his hard-earned dollars might have better assurances that it would remain there.

I have no desire to pose under the calcium light of publicity, Mr. Kreiter, but when it comes to our respective chances for observations outside of Washington, mine probably exceed your own. I am positive they go beyond Harrisburg, Pa. If rings and cliques existed in this city before my connection with the G. P. O. (and Mr. Kreiter says they did) was it not his duty to expose them and prefer the charges which he now invites me to? Mr. Kreiter says discord existed and disgruntled fellows clamored for a change before the election of Mr. Lynch. Certainly they did, and poor Mr. Lynch was made the martyr. He was literally lassoed and dragged from the seclusion of Syracuse, to Indianapolis, protesting at every cross-road against the injustice of being placed in the president's chair. Probably you, Mr. Kreiter, received one of those personal letters from Mr. Lynch previous to his election. Mr. Lynch, then as now, was after the job. Was he not one of the disgruntled?

I expect to be at the union meeting for April, but not on the invitation of Mr. Kreiter. If I am not then it will be the second one in almost three years I have missed. It is not necessary because one attends a meeting to be a wind-jammer or hot-air artist in order to make one's presence known.

And now, Mr. Kreiter, just a word in closing. I wish to thank you for your very kind invitation to attend next meeting. Just when you were delegated with such authority I know not. My communication to THE TRADES UNIONIST may have been simply the explosion of a toy pistol, but it evidently jarred you. Impertinent, did you say? Well possibly so. Good-bye James.

Yours fraternally,
CHAS. S. GUNN.

OFFICIAL ORGAN CENTRAL LABOR UNION, WASHINGTON BRANCH, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Vol. VIII. No. 44. WASHINGTON, D. C., THURSDAY, APRIL 14, 1904. Price, 3 Cents.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

Effort Being Made to Have Mail Bag Employes Pay Increased.

B. SCHWARTZ OFF UNFAIR LIST

Carpenters Joint District Council Refused Permission to Have Its Title on Working Card—Amendment Up For Second Reading—Legislation Indorsed.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8.10 p. m., Monday evening, by President Sherman.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Delegate from Columbia Typographical Union announced that on Wednesday, April 13, President Gompers, of the A. F. of L., would deliver a lecture on Porto Rico at Masonic Temple, and requested a good attendance on the part of delegates to the Central Labor Union.

Grievance Committee reported progress.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Local No. 1651, Brotherhood of Carpenters, stating that the Council of Allied Building Trades had refused to issue a working card with the title "Joint District Council of Carpenters and Vicinity" upon it to the members of that craft, and asking that request be complied with by Central Labor Union. Request nt ogranted.

From E. C. Kellogg, secretary of the Carpenters Joint District Council, embodying the same request as above and quoting section 2, Article IX, of the constitution of the Council of Allied Building Trades in support of their contention. Request not granted.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Delegate from Machinists, Columbia Lodge, presented Senate bill No. ——, with the request that the Legislative Committee indorse same, and a copy of the indorsement be sent to Senator McComas. Also that the Legislative Committee render such aid in advancing the measure as possible. Request granted.

Retail Clerks stated that they had adjusted their trouble with Benjamin Schwartz, 337 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and requested that he be taken from the unfair list. Request granted.

Legislative Committee reported progress.

Delegate from Bookbinders' Union moved that a special committee be appointed by the chair to visit Second Assistant Postmaster-General with a view to having the pay of the employes of the mail bag repair shop increased. Motion adopted and committee appointed.

The amendment to the constitution proposed at the last meeting, referring to action on resolutions, was read the second time.

Adjourned.

The Loeffler Case.

The members of Local No. 148, Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen, claim that they are willing to treat with the A. Loeffler Sausage and Provision Co., but that the principal owner in that concern does not want a settlement. The claim is made that the employes of that concern have been given a nominal interest in the company for the purpose of allowing them to withdraw from the union. The union does not concede that the mere fact that an employe is a stockholder in a company releases them of their obligation as union men. The fact is that it is merely used as a subterfuge. The A. Loeffler Sausage and Provision Co. is still considered unfair to organized labor.

BOSTON STRIKE SETTLEMENT.

A Leading Member of No. 13 Corrects Misleading Statements About It.

BOSTON, MASS.,
April 10, 1904.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

SIRS: In your issue of March 31 appears an article over the signature of J. Ligon King in which statements are made regarding the settlement of the Boston strike and the connection of President Lynch with it that are so misleading that it seems to me that they call for a denial from one on the scene and who understands the situation as it really existed. These facts, with your permission, I should like to present to your readers.

Mr. King places the "blame" for the settlement on Mr. Lynch, entirely ignoring the other two members of the Executive Council, who were on the field and assisted in the settlement. Anyone who knows John W. Bramwood knows that he is a man who forms his own ideas, who is not influenced by the wishes of another, and who has the best interests of the organization as a whole at heart. As for Hugo Miller, the other member of the Council, he is a man careful in thought and speech, and absolutely wears the collar of no other man. These three men acted unanimously in settling the Boston strike, which they had been called in to settle by the strike committee, having full power.

I. T. U. law is very explicit as to how strikes shall be declared, and rightly so, I believe all members will agree. Boston did not live up to these laws, but struck in direct violation of them. A telegram explaining the position of the Council, urging the union to continue negotiations, and stating the condition of the I. T. U. treasury, was received by the officers of the union, but for some reason was not communicated to the meeting. That it would have changed the sentiment of the meeting will never be known. But it should have been read. However, the strike was declared and dragged along for a month, the attitude of the Council being the same as from the first. Finally the strike committee, having full power, saw that the strike was no nearer settlement than at first and unanimously voted to send for the Executive Council and place the entire situation unreservedly in their hands for settlement. Accordingly the entire Executive Council met in Boston on March 8, to look over the field. This is what they saw:

1. 220 compositors on the strike rolls and 180 pressmen and feeders on the relief rolls.

2. Enough money ($6,000) in the treasury to pay expenses for one week.

3. The membership taxed 10 per cent on all earnings for five weeks. To carry the strike on further would mean, according to the treasurer of the union, to declare a 25 per cent assessment.

4. All officers and some members of the union tied up in court on injunction proceedings that were costing the union $1,000 per week, not including lawyers fees.

5. That the firms which had signed the new scale had done so conditionally—that is, in the event of the union not being able to enforce the scale in the Typothetæ offices the firms signing would drop back to the old scale.

6. The places of the strikers being rapidly filled by printers from other cities, though the members of No. 13 were being assured that no men were being procured.

After numerous conferences an agreement was arrived at between the Council and the members of the Typothetæ, an agreement which I believe to be a good one in view of the fact that No. 13 had the small end of the stick. This agreement was signed by every member of the strike committee and was ratified by the union by an overwhelming vote and a vote of thanks was given to the Executive Council.

Now, mistakes are made in all strikes and this one was no exception. But we in Boston don't hesitate to place the blame where it belongs—right here in Boston. No political capital can be made in this city against the members of the Council for their action in this matter. Rather their course is commended by the great majority of the members of the union as being the wisest under the circumstances—and election day will show it.

It seems that a wrong impression is abroad in some quarters throughout the country in regard to the Boston strike. I hope the few facts which I have mentioned here will help to dispel any wrong impression which Mr. King and others in Washington may have about it. In placing the blame put it where it belongs—on the members of No. 13.

President Lynch—Mr. Hawkes.

After enumerating the expenses of one organizer for the I. T. U., J. Ligon King asks, "And what for?"

That is the kind of argument that is being used to demonstrate why Mr. Lynch should not be re-elected.

Fault is found with the present administration of the International body. It is contended that the president has been extravagant and that he appointed organizers in excess of his authority. This seems to be a deliberate perversion of facts.

The Cincinnati convention, among other laws, adopted: "The president may further appoint such special organizers as he may deem necessary." The law also fixes the compensation and allows a certain sum for expenses. Under these laws Mr. Lynch acted.

In his report to the Washington convention, President Lynch, under the caption, "Per Capita Tax," wisely says: "If we are to carry on aggressive and militant trades unionism we must have money to meet the cost. No business institution makes a success on sentiment, and this is as true of the International Typographical Union as it is of any other enterprise requiring money to conduct it. With a per capita tax of 40 cents we can, in course of a few years, extend our power, make known our gospel, and secure many new adherents in every part of the North American continent."

With this sound doctrine in his address, the Washington convention, the largest in the history of the organization, commended his course.

Ever since he has been in office he has advocated the importance of having organizers in the field. It is not presumed by any sane person that if it costs, say $600, to organize a town of twenty members that the I. T. U. should get back that amount in actual cash. An unprejudiced person will rate the new union a valuable I. T. U. asset. All trades organizations expend thousands of dollars for organizing purposes. To organize is to build the foundation of trades unionism. In fact, it is the cornerstone, and he who growls at the expense is usually the fellow who grudgingly pays dues.

Now, as to organizers and their expenses: The report of the "Committee on Officers' Reports"—the last paragraph, page 160, Washington convention proceedings—will be of especial interest to the ardent friends of Mr. Hawkes. The committee carefully, I am sure, examined the reports and expense accounts of the organizers, and this is what it says: "We believe aggressive organization to be very necessary to accomplish our purpose, and as the reports of the various organizers are very comprehensive, we direct the attention of all the delegates thereto. These reports show the organizers have been diligent in the discharge of their duties, and much good has resulted. We heartily commend them to the convention." The report of the committee was adopted.

The reports of the various organizers "to the officers and members of the I. T. U." are uniform in particularizing the "assistance and advice given by President Lynch and Secretary Bramwood." Mr. Hawkes says on the subject: "I have been uniformly supported and encouraged by our International officers, and to them also I wish to return thanks for valuable assistance rendered." Yet Mr. Hawkes' friends have not a kind word for Mr. Lynch, and it is known that he (Hawkes) criticises the work of the present incumbent.

Considerable has been written about the expenses of the organizers, and figures have been quoted, but for some strange reason the name of Mr. Hawkes has been omitted. In order to be fair I will admit the verity of these figures and will supplement them by adding thereto Mr. Hawkes' account, taken from the "Financial Statement of the Executive Council and Joint Defense Fund—June 1, 1901, to May 31, 1902"—and it will be found that Mr. Hawkes, the "union diplomat," received $1,632.43—a sum greater than any other organizer in that year. I am free to admit that he earned his salary and accounted for every cent. That year $1,6059.46 was expenped for organizing purposes.

A year later we find that the expenses on the same lines increased $1,605.03, or a total of $17,664 49. Of course the increase in membership justified the expenses. But the one singular part of the figures is that while the expenses were increased $1,605.03, it is observed that Mr. Hawkes received from June 1, 1902, to May 31, 1903, $1,830.55, or $198.12 more than the year previous. Only one organizer received more money than did Mr. Hawkes—Mr. B. G. Brady—$1,965.60. I am liberal enough to again admit that I believe Mr. Hawkes was faithful and honest in the performance of his duties, and also in rendering his accounts.

It is now left to the friends of Mr. Hawkes to tell the membership of our union how many towns he visited the first year named and also the number in the second year to show some justification for the increase of $198.12 in his accounts. Of course if they do not wish to so inform the membership of No. 101, I will, if permitted by the editors of THE TRADES UNIONIST, give the information later on.

For the time being, however, it is hoped the above facts will be carefully studied and fairly considered.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

"Big Six" Getting Busy on I. T. U. and Local Campaign.

Ernest L. Ayer was unanimously rejected as a new member on account of his bad career.

George J. Roberts was also censured and fined $10 for irregularities. The vote was 200 to 2.

Joseph Purcell, an old timer in New York, who applied for admission to the Home, was voted on favorably.

H. O. Hewitt was brought before the meeting and censured for discrepancies in his accounts as chairman of a chapel.

The plan of the Denver Union to build the Cummings Memorial Hall as an annex to the Home at Colorado, was unanimonsly indorsed.

The meeting laid on the table a request from a Socialist paper, the Worker, that the officers of No. 6 furnish items of trade interest to that paper.

The State printing bill in the Legislature is doomed to defeat again this year. John Dobbs and James Cunnion reported this as special committee to Albany.

The Trial Committee in the case of C. N. Ironsides recommended that he be censured and ordered to pay to the subs in his office the nights he had worked in violation of union law.

The regular April meeting of Big Six brought out all the candidates for office, and among them were noticed many faces that failed in years to show at union meetings. It was said of three of the candidates present—each of whom made a simple and formal motion so that they could stand up and be seen by the rest of the members present—that they had not lost that proverbial election smile, and that for one day in the year, at least, they had overlooked "roasting" the officers of the union. It was one of the shortest and largest meetings during President McCormick's administration, and the motion to adjourn was eagerly voted in the affirmative so that the politicians could devote their time in another direction.

NOTES.

James M. Bell ("Park Row") who has been in the State office for several years, has returned and is now employed on the Technical Press.

The Women's Federation are making strenuous efforts to have the State Council of the Royal Arcanum to adopt the Allied Trade label on all their printed matter.

Bryant L. Beecher was the recipient of a beautiful meerschaum pipe from his associates in the Herald proof room. He left to engage in the fruit culture in Michigan.

In the morning newspaper bowling tournament just ended the Tribune won first prize by a score of 23 won to 4 lost; World and Herald tied for second place with 23 won and 5 lost, the former winning in the roll off. The first prize was $85 and the second $50. Allen, of the Herald rolled the highest individual score, 245.

The International campaign was opened by the organization of a James M. Lynch club on March 27. James M. Donohue was selected president; W. E. Powers, secretary; Nathan Newman, chairman executive committee. Over 100 were present and it was decided to hold a mass meeting at Mannerchor Hall on Sunday, April 17. Prominent speakers will present the issues of the campaign.

The Ball Committee is now putting finishing touches on the arrangements for the annual reception of Big Six on Monday evening, April 18, at Lexington Avenue Opera House. Invitations have been issued to Congressman William Randolph Hearst, Mayor McClellan, and many other well-known public men. The proceeds will be devoted to the maintenance of beds in various hospitals for union printers.

On account of the building strikes the new Times building at Broadway and 44th street, will not be completed for at least four months. The lease of the present location having expired, temporary quarters were secured in the old News building, about two blocks away, and the task of removal began on Sunday March 24. Besides all the heavy presses, linotype machines, etc., over 800 cases of job type were speedily removed.

Frank A. Kennedy ("Sadie Maguire"), who is a candidate for Trustee of the Home, has many friends in New York. A committee is now in process of formation to advance the interests of Mr. Kennedy. In a characteristic letter to a friend he says: "I have never been in jail, have never run for either local or International office, will perform my duty conscientiously if elected, have no enemies to get even with, and will fight to protect the interests of the members of the I. T. U." Samuel B. Donnelly, Owen Kindelon, Nate Newman, and other well known members of No. 6 comprise the committee up to date.

April 24 has been decided on to hold the conventions of the Administration and Anti-Administration parties. Candidates for president are: Administration, P. H. McCormick, Jennings chapel; Anti-Administration, Charles Maxwell, World chapel; Independent, George McKay, Brown's chapel. These are the Administration candidates for delegates: Edward Meagher, Journal of Commerce; Thomas McConkey, Herald; W. F. Butz, Brooklyn Citizen; Robert J. Campbell, World; William Brennan, Post Book Room; Patrick J. Hynes, Morning Telegaaph; John F. Crossland, Textile Publishing Company; John Mason, Butterick's. The Anti-Administration delegates are: Charles T. Peyton, Times; S. M. Christie, Tribune; Joseph A. Weissert, Press; E. Skiffington, Klebold Press; T. Somerville, Trow's; Thomas Martin, Wynkoop's.

A Correction.

In our last issue the date of the entertainment and ball of the Women's Auxiliary of Columbia Typographical Union was given on Thursday, April 28. It should have read Friday, April 22. Bear the date well in mind. The entertainment will be a good one.

The Ideal Work-Day.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Consideration of the eight-hour bill develops some interesting thoughts not directly connected with the matter in its practical aspects. It may be well to insist in passing, however, that Congress should not be criticised too harshly for moving with extreme caution in deference to arbitrary shortening of the work-day. Of course it must be admitted that advancing civilization will prove at least a partial failure in so far as it does not provide for a considerable reduction in the hours of daily toil. Yet it is especially desirable that present conditions and local requirements be dispassionately considered. It is true that, where the work-day is successfully shortened, improved citizenship strengthens the State, while at the same time it will not do to forget that progressive conservatism should always steady the march of events.

Aside from discussion of immediate needs, it is reasonable to assume that, through the efforts of organized labor and concessions by the more intelligent among the employing class, the work-day will be appreciably shortened from time to time in the future. It was once about as long as material conditions would permit, and has grown shorter by degrees. Within the memory of the grandfathers of to-day the shortening process has continued at a rate which seems to alarm quite a number of somewhat conservative individuals.

"Man works from sun to sun,
But woman's work is never done."

To the great army of organized workingmen in the United States to-day the foregoing homely couplet is almost incomprehensible as associated with industrial progress And their work-day may yet appear to the workingmen of a more or less remote future as an illustration of industrial barbarism. Hundreds of years from now, possibly, the ideal work-day may be evolved.

But what is the ideal work-day? Generally speaking, it will scientifically meet the requirements of man's physical and spiritual nature. It will permit him at its close to retain a working surplus of vitality, and will never cause exhaustion but merely a healthy tired feeling. Nor will it be so short as to bring about a diminution of stamina through lack of sufficient exercise. It is further essential that industrial conditions shall be such that the earnings of the workingman will enable him to develop his higher possibilities.

Asked for a more definite statement, I would hazard the opinion that the ideal work-day should not by any means exceed five hours in length; that is, it should extend from one meal to another—say, from breakfast to dinner. The two-meal work-day it might be called. The reasons for this arrangement are obvious. The three-meal work-day is not natural, and the evolutionary discipline of centuries has not adapted the workingman to it. The effort, more or less severe, by which the conscientious worker frequently keys himself up to his task immediately after the mid-work meal must, except in the case of exceptionally vigorous individuals, impair the vital organs to a considerable extent in the course of a lifetime. There can be little doubt as to its influence in the development of a dyspeptic tendency, not to speak of other disorders. The majority of brain workers, and many routine workers as well, are aware that the best work of the day—that which is worth doing because it is well done—is limited to from three to five hours, from one meal to another, after which the faculties must be spurred into action. This results in the almost universal use of stimulants in one form or another, with well known evil consequences to society which it is impossible to estimate. Accordingly, taking everything into consideration it would seem that four hours should constitute the ideal work-day.

However, I make no pretension to hard thinking along sociological lines, and submit this opinion not as a development of exhaustive research, but merely as a casual illuminat on such as occasionally penetrates the mental mazes of the humblest citizen. And although it may have some foundation in truth, it should be borne in mind that all depends upon the improvement of men as individuals. Should they grow wonderfully in grace for several centuries, the old couplet may yet be amended so as to read:

Man works from 9 till 1,
And woman's work at 2 is done.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

The death of John A. Woolwine, at Cincinnati, on February 23, of pneumonia, aged 49 years, is announced in the Typographical Journal for April. He worked on the Record in 1875-76 and was quite a well-known young fellow. I remember that on the rescuing of the old National Republican from the "rats" about that time he went in with the union men, and as one rat remained and seemed pretty chesty, Jack plugged him in the nose and chased him out. He was ready for a scrap at any time. He had two sisters on the stage, one of them, Dolly Nobles, was the wife of Milton Nobles, of "still the villain pursued her" fame, while the other was a noted singer, under the name of Laura Bellini.

Another death in the list is that of John Doyle, at New York, of apoplexy, aged 62 years, whom I suppose to be an old friend of mine on the New York Herald years ago. He was for a time in the Printer's Home, and in his young days was quite a fiddler.

The members of the Women's Auxiliary are making great preparations for their entertainment and dance, to be given at Masonic Temple on Friday, April 22. The Record boys bought 108 tickets from a couple of the ladies who waited on them one night last week, which, when it is taken into consideration that very few can attend, is an expression of the appreciation they have for the splendid work the women are doing to advance the cause of unionism.

Among hundreds of recent indorsements of William S. Waudby for Commissioner of Labor is the following from the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, affiliated with the A. F. of L.:

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 1, 1904.

HON. THEODORE ROOSEVELT,
President of the United States, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In behalf of our organization, numbering about 60,000 members in the United States, I desire to urge the appointment of Mr. William S. Waudby, of Rochester, N. Y., to the office of Commissioner of Labor. I assure you that our membership feel that Mr. Waudby is fully competent to fill the office creditably and is the logical successor to the position by virtue of the civil-service code, and assure you that his appointment will give the great army of Butcher Workmen of this country the utmost satisfaction.

Very respectfully yours,
HOMER D. CALL,
International Secretary and Treasurer.

Waudby has been assigned to Sunbury, Pottsville, Reading, and Allentown, Pa., to work up the statistics of convict labor, having completed his work in the interior cities of New York. From the importance of Mr. Waudby's assignment it is very evident that the Department highly appreciates his intelligent work.

"The Boston Settlement," in the April Typographical Journal, presumably by the editor, John W. Bramwood, than whom no one could more carefully refrain from taking sides in the contest for I. T. U. presidency between James M. Lynch and Charles E. Hawkes, will show to any honest man whether President Lynch and the Executive Council blundered or acted in bad faith with Boston Union, as has been charged by some ill-formed gentlemen. If gentlemen had more regard for truth and the decencies of life in their advocacy and opposition of candidates, they would not need to be thus shown to be willing falsifiers of facts and might gradually grow a respect for themselves.

The announcement of the candidacy of F. N. Whitehead for delegate has caused a greater revision of tickets than I ever saw during a campaign before, which convinces me more than ever that no voter should ever promise even himself whom he will vote for until he sees that full field, which cannot be until the nominations are made. Mr. Whitehead's popularity comes more from the feeling that he will be a really valuable delegate than from any other cause—and there are quite a number who take that into consideration—but this feeling is supplemented by admiration for the incomparable skill he showed as chairman of the convention committee in executing the orders of the union in the matter of the entertainment of the convention last summer.

* * * *

The air is full of rumors that Capt. W. R. Ramsey and Harry O'Donnell will both be candidates for president, and possibly before this sees the light they will have definitely announced themselves. Captain Ramsey has had experience in the office, and that he is an able presiding officer is beyond question, for his administrations have been among the most successful we have ever had. Last year he presided over the Association of Ex-Delegates, and the great success the Association had in entertaining the convention was largely due to his efforts and his happy selection of the entertainment committee.

Mr. O'Donnell is well known to the membership from having recently made two campaigns for delegate, in the last of which he was successful and led the ticket. He has done much service on committees and is familiar with the workings of the union. It seems that the gentleman who informed me last week that he would not be a candidate is not as familiar with the workings of Mr. O'Donnell's mind as he thought he was.

P. S.—Since the above was written I have become satisfied that Captain Ramsev will not be a condidate, and equally well satisfied that Mr. O'Donnell will be.

Mrs. Harry Humble, who successfully underwent a surgical operation last week for the removal of a tumor, is progressing rapidly toward a safe recovery at Providence Hospital, to the great gratification of her husband and their many friends.

Next Sunday the nominations will be made, and then the campaign will be actually open, what we have had being merely preliminary skirmishing. It is to be hoped that we will be able to avoid calling each other sneaks, liars, miserable ingrates, dirty tricksters, and so on. We can all be good if we try.

* * * *

"Young" Mr. Lerch and "Young" Mr. Gunn each took a throw last week at the young gentlemen who are candidates for the I. T. U presidency. It is quite an educational campaign and it begins to look as though we will have the unusual spectacle of everybody taking an interest in I. T. U. affairs. It is nice when they just argue and don't carp at each other.

* * * *

The April working card is the voting card and it is behoovious for each one to treasure it up in order that he or she may vote. And I am sure it is not necessary for me to suggest that you should let your conscience be your only dictator as to how and for whom you shall vote, for if any one has any greater real interest in the the result than you have you are not fit to vote at all.

I entirely agree with Carlos Tomlin that Amos J. Cummings' memorial should be an annex to the Home instead of merely something to look at. What could more fittingly commemorate his life of service to his fellows than that which would be of itself of inestimable service to the unfortunate among them?

* * * *

Miss Anna Wilson's recent visit to the night forces established the fact that she is one of the most popular candidates for delegate in the field. It is now only a question as to whom her associates will be.

* * * *

Shelby Smith, now of Philadelphia, dropped in and looked the boys over last Monday night. He is the same old Shelby and the fact that he is a hot Hawkes man ought to be worth a couple of hundred votes to Lynch in this city. He lingered with us only one day.

Miss Teresa McDonald, of the Post, candidate for down-town delegate, visited the night forces last Monday night and made a favorable impression. She will make an acceptable colleague for our Miss Anna Wilson.

Five years ago, it will be remembered, there was a strike of the stereotypers in Chicago, resulting disastrously to that organization. Within the past week I. T. U. President Lynch and the Executive Council have succeeded in so adjusting matters that all the Chicago stereotype departments are now strictly union and will be from this out.

* * * *

Jim Bright tells me that after the nominations are made he will begin his campaign for treasurer and has hopes that his long connection with the finances of the union will obtain recognition by his election.

* * * *

Harry O'Donnell made his first call last Monday night as a candidate for president and was well received. In an article in the Star the same day on union politics, he was referred to as John O'Donnell and Mr. Lynch as John Lynch. I don't expect much of reporters, but the Star proofreaders are members of the union and ought to know prominent names.

* * * *

Mike Molan received a letter from John W. Hays, candidate for first vice-president of the I. T. U., exonerating him from the charge that had been made in a St. Paul or Minneapolis paper that he had written Hays a letter injecting partisan politics into the I. T. U. campaign. Mr. Molan is an old time friend of Mr. Hays and had written him numbers of letters, but, so far from animadverting on the politics of the candidates for I. T. U. president in them, until recently he had no knowledge whether Mr. Hays favored Mr. Lynch or Mr. Hawkes. Some of the adherents of Mr. Hawkes seem firm believers in the axiom, "Desperate diseases require desperate remedies."

Robert W. Burnside, of the Judd & Detweiler chapel, will be a candidate for vice-president of the union. "Bob" having worked in the G. P. O. and being well known to many of the present employes of the big shop and also standing "ace high" with all who know him down town will cut a wide swath.

The Knockers.

When a manager was making a contract with the Divine Sarah, that lady is reported to have said: "Just put Bernhardt on the bill; there's only one!" So, also, there is only one aggregation of "knockers"—the Knights of Momus—and they give their third annual entertainment at the Hotel Barton on the 17th instant. Call it a feast, a show, a dinner, a banquet, what you will—it is all of them—and more. And woe to the candidate who commits the crime of failing to put in an appearance.

Corwin Zimmerman contemplates studying for the ministry.

J. T. Gambrill has had offers from several baseball clubs to play ball.

M. N. Serrano and Geo. Plummer, have announced themselves as candidates for tellers.

Miss Teresa McDonald has appeared on the field as a candidate for delegatorial honors. Miss McDonald is from the Washington Post chapel.

Harry O'Donnell, of the Agriculture Branch has concluded to try for the presidency. O'Donnell was a winner last year. Will history repeat itself?

From the large number of candidates in the field, it looks like "there's goin' to be a job for the undertaker, and a little overtime for the casket-maker."

Shelby Smith, late of the G. P. O., now of Philadelphia, paid the First Division a visit on Monday. Shelby can't resist the temptation to "butt in" about election time.

Titus Ellis, passed through this division last week and received quite an ovation. Titus is very well known here and he will get a splendid vote from the First Division.

Philip Steele, the First Division candidate for delegate, visited the branches last Monday and was very cordially welcomed. When counting up the winners don't forget Steele.

When you see a fellow coming in to work about 10 o'clock in the morning, you can put it right down that he is neither a millionaire nor a late employe. He is one of the detail that report at 10 a. m. and finishes up at 6.30 p. m.

The card of Frank Hall made its appearance this week. It is unique as a souvenir, and valuable as a reference. Should Mr. Hall receive a vote in proportion to the size of his card, he will pretty nearly come within the money.

Mrs. Chas. Slack and Mrs. Chas. Durno paid the chapel a visit last week in connection with the entertainment to be given by the Ladies Auxiliary. I trust I am not betraying any secret when I say their pleasant smiles sold many tickets.

The popularity of Miss Anna Wilson with the boys in this room was demonstrated last week on the occasion of her first official visit to the chapel. Miss Wilson received the glad hand and words of encouragement from most everybody. Whatever may be the outcome of her candidacy, she certainly has established herself in the hearts of the boys.

A large number of our temporary and emergency forces are preparing for the civil service examination which takes place next Thursday. That reminds me that a couple of years ago I met a friend of mine as he was emerging from the civil service rooms, having just taken the examination. To my query as to how he had made out, he replied: "Oh, everything is all right, except those blankety blank abbreviations. Out of the whole bunch I think I hit the bulls eye only once. That was on hf. bd. You know I was raised out in the Indian country, and can tell a half breed with his back turned. I guess I was the only one who thought of putting down half breed for that answer. Even if I did miss all the rest, I feel pretty chesty over getting that one. Later I discovered the correct definition for hf. bd. is half bound. It only goes to show it does not always pay to be to certain.

It seems rather queer, but if we can judge by his name,
There is one aspirant, at least, for delegate fame
Who doesn't want wide-awake friends to get down off their roost,
And, 'mid a babel of tongues, to give him a big boost;
But rather he'd have, to make a dead sure thing of the snap,
Plenty of good rooting friends to indulge in a Knapp.

Should Nace and Pace arrange a race
With Wright and White 'twould be a sight;
And G-t. Proctor with Trudgian, the doctor
As referees, it would highly please
The entire force, and then be of course
A spur to Fleming and also to Hemming.

Alas and alack! we have been called upon to pause
And in bitterness grieve for the loss of our Kause,
While poor Hem, I see, too as you're doubtless aware,
Was Wade in the balance and found want-ed elsewhere.

No one can make a mistake in voting for the genial Titus F. Ellis of the Second for delegate.

Our chairman may be lacking in some qualities, but he has undoubtedly his share of pulchritude.

When the lights went out Saturday forenoon the vault man was left in total darkness, and it is needless to say that his vaulting ambition did not overleap itself.

One of the farmer boys found a kitten and a newly-laid egg in a nest the other morning. He is now wondering whether the hen laid the kitten or whether the kitten laid the egg.

Great is the force of example. Runyan has been working overtime for some weeks past, and his hens, catching the infection, have been doing some stunts of their own lately.

The following transfers from the Second division were made this week: J. A. Hennesy, J. L. Kause, and T. L. Wade to the Job Room and F. A. White to the Interior Department.

Some zealous friend of the secretary hung a card on the newly-elected officer's wire, with the inscription, "Office of the honorable secretary." Another henchman stuck on the card the notice: "I am IT; who the devil are you?"

From Colton to Cornish is a very brief stride,
As the two C's, don't you see, work side by side;
And yet the latter strode in when the former strode out,
And thus was the chairmanship change soon brought about.
But that isn't all, for, quite as quick as a trigger,
The secretaryship struck our modest Swerdfiger.

One of the day men who has no regular night man, left the following note on his frame for the benefit of those interested: "Please leave a slip if you use these cases. The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." Next morning this reply was found: "It is more blessed to to give than to receive. The Lord helps those who help themselves to sorts."

There are now four candidates for President of Columbia Union, namely: Messrs. Berg, Herbert, Ramsey, and O'Donnell.

Mrs. R. A. Julian left this city Tuesday morning to go to the bedside of her mother, who is dangerously ill at her home in Nebraska.

Shelby Smith, now of Philadelphia, formerly an employe in the G. P. O., visited this division Monday in company with his friend, J. L. Rodier.

Frank Bates of the Fourth Division, the present efficient sergeant-at-arms of Columbia Union, is out with the announcement that he will stand for re-election.

That distinguished piscatorial expert, Elmer Dement, on the 6th instant presented Mr. Joseph Dierken, Private Secretary to the Foreman of Printing, with a very fine shad.

Printers who go to the Ninth Street Christian Church are reminded that the subject for next Sunday evening's discourse will be: "Moses, what is that in thine hand? or How they crossed the Red Sea."

At a recent meeting of the Society of the Lineal Descendants of Spanish War Veterans, Mrs. W. J. Phillips, wife of "Jim Texas," former Slug 45 of this division, was elected Junior Vice Councillor.

Harry O'Donnell, of the Agriculture Department, who led the vote for delegate last year, called Tuesday to pay his respects, and incidentally to announce his candidacy for President of Columbia Union.

We received a call and a cordial hand-shake from Candidate Titus F. Ellis on the 7th inst. If there is any virtue in hard work Mr. Ellis will win, for he is certainly putting up continuous and persistent efforts to induce us to think his way. We all wish him success.

Chas. W. Herzinger desires to emphatically contradict the report that he has withdrawn as a candidate for vice-president of Columbia Union. On the contrary, he has every reason to believe that he will poll a large vote. The mere fact that such an unfounded report has been placed in circulation is evidence that Mr. Herzinger's opponents would like to have him out of the way. They may depend upon it, however, that he will be in the fight to the finish.

Last week J. W. L. Dillman, folio man of this division, had "on private view" in his alley a beautiful photograph of the head of a Newfoundland dog, which he has entered at the Thirteenth Annual Exhibition of the Capital Camera Club, to be held in the Hemicycle Hall, of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, April 30 to May 11, inclusive. Mr. Dillman's skill in photography is well known to the employees of the G. P. O., and we confidently expect that his entries will take high rank.

When Wellington F. Simons went up to the North Capitol M. E. Church last week to partake of a New England dinner he found the tables all full; but somebody called out, "Seats for seven more in the pulpit!" and Si got there. No doubt, when Mr. Saltzman asked Mr. Simons if he didn't feel out of place in the pulpit, he didn't know that Si was once a divinity student at Cornell University, and left before the course was completed because of the evil influences surrounding him in that sinful place. Mr. Simons is a model for all young men to follow. Would that there were more like him. By the way, he reported that the dinner was excellent.

Some time ago, being informed that acid was put into the hot water pipes for the purpose of cleaning them from rust, I mentioned the matter in this column in order to warn those that were in the habit of drinking the hot water of the possible danger of so doing. The subjoined communication shows my information to have been wholly without foundation. Consequently all may now get on the (hot) water wagon without fear:

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 6, 1904.

Mr. WM. N. GOLDSTEIN, Chairman Third Division Chapel:

DEAR SIR: In reply to your communication of this date, requesting to know if any acids are used in the hot water pipes that supply the lavatories in the various toilet rooms, making it unfit for drinking purposes, I beg leave to inform you that no acids nor any thing else injurious to health are used.

Very respectfully,
H. K. COLLINS, Chief Engineer.

That Star man has been visiting the big printery again, and his account of the beauties of the "twentieth century wonder," on which he calls the press on which the Record is printed, is interesting reading. He mentions "Captain King, one of Mr. Palmer's star printers," as being slated for "an important executive office" when the National Army and Navy Spanish War Veterans hold their next convention, all of which should make the bosom of the distinguished tin soldier swell with pride. So far, so good. Then our friend from the Star railroads Messrs. Ramsey and Berg out of union politics because he heard a prominent member of the Union say that the bonding companies will not consent to any foreman running for office in the Union. He truthfully says this report has caused quite a sensation." He then caps the climax by asserting that there is "another Richmond in the field" in the person of "Mr. John O'Donnell of the Agricultural Department," who "has been announced as a candidate for president of the Union," and finally, he refers to the president of the I. T. U. as "Mr. John Lynch." The reporter of the Star is a "star" reporter.

April 8th was Ladies' Day in the Third. Besides being complimented by a visit from Mesdames Slack and Durno, of the Woman's Auxiliary, who sold the boys a large number of tickets for an entertainment and ball to be given by Columbia Union and the Auxiliary on April 22d, at Masonic Temple, we also had the pleasure of receiving Miss Anna C. Wilson, candidate for delegate to St. Louis. To say that Miss Wilson made a favorable impression would be a mild way of putting it. Before she came into the room there were certain ones who did not hesitate to express themselves as being averse to voting for a woman delegate; but after meeting the candidate these gentlemen altered their point of view considerably, one of them being overheard saying that he didn't take much interest in the election anyway, but if he voted at all he would put in a "plunker" for Miss Wilson. Our fathers fought the British because they were taxed without being allowed representation. Surely we can not consistently deny representation to the large number of women in our Union. Many of them are working far harder than the men to advance the principles of unionism, in which respect Miss Wilson's reputation is not surpassed; so that no one will make a mistake in voting for her.

J. W. BELCHER.

President Gompers' Lecture.

Masonic Hall was comfortably filled last evening to hear President Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, repeat his lecture on "Porto Rico," and incidently reply to W. A. Willoughby, the treasurer of the island who has taken issue with President Gompers on certain statements made by him as to conditions on the island.

Mr. Gompers was in good voice and held his audience interested throughout the evening. It is conceded by all who heard the lecture that it is the best exposition of the conditions surrounding the wage-earners and the life they lead that has been heard or appeared in articles on the island in magazines or other publications.

The presentation of the subject in its true light will be the beginning of an era of reform in the management of Porto Rico, and if the attention of Congress is called to it there is no doubt that radical changes will be made in the conduct of the island.

Personal Mention.

James M. Lynch, President of the I. T. U., will be in the city next Sunday. It is expected he will be present at the meeting of Columbia Typographical Union.

Shelby Smith, of Philadelphia, Pa., spent a day in the city this week renewing old acquaintances. Shelby is actively engaged in pushing the label in Philadelphia, and is meeting with success.

President Samuel Gompers and Secretary Frank Morrison, of the A. F. of L., left to-day (Thursday) for Denver, Colo., to attend the meeting of the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. to be held in that city.

Hall No. 1, "Building Trades Halls," 610 G street northwest, is open daily from 8 o'clock a. m. until 5 p. m. as a reading room to all members of building trades unions affiliated with the Council of Allied Building Trades.

Card of Thanks.

Through the columns of THE TRADES UNIONIST, the sisters and brothers of the late Edward P. Cummins extend their sincere thanks to the friends who visited him, and so thoughtfully sought to minister to his wants. The manifestations of kindly solictude during his illness and their condolences in the hour of bereavement will always be gratefully remembered.

Charles J. Cassidy Dead.

Chas. J. Cassidy, an employe of the the G. P. O. Bindery for the past twelve years, died of consumption on Monday. Mr. Cassidy was prominent in the affairs of Bookbinders Union, No. 4, having served as inspector and held many prominent committee appointments. His remains were taken to Albany, N. Y., for interment. He leaves a widow.

Official Gazette.

Harry Knapp, of the Times, dropped in to look after his fences.

Harry O'Donnell distributed his cards announcing that he is a candidate for the office of president, on Tuesday.

Titus F. Ellis, of the Second Division, made his first appearance as a candidate in this division last week and was introduced to the voters.

Shelby Smith made us a fraternal visit on Monday. He gave expression to regret that he could not prolong his visit so as to get in the game.

Miss Iowa Hampson, who was called to Fairfield, Iowa, several weeks ago, on account of the serious illness of her sister, has returned to work and reports her sister's condition as much improved.

Frank Hall distributed a new card on the back of which is printed a list of the label offices. Miss Wilson said it was real sweet of him to furnish a list, as she was wondering how she would know what offices to visit down town.

At a special meeting the Woman's Auxiliary initiated a number of new members. They are making an active canvass for members and will, no doubt, secure a membership of 150 which will entitle them to two delegates in the Auxiliary convention.

The joint entertainment of Columbia Union and the Woman's Auxiliary, to be held at Masonic Temple, April 22, promises to be a good one. Miss Gordon and Miss Wilson visited Baltimore awhile back and extended an invitation to both the Union and the Auxiliary of that city to attend the entertainment. The ladies spent a very pleasant afternoon in Baltimore and came away with pleasant recollections of Baltimore hospitality.

Night Bill Force.

The Sphinx-like silence of some of the avowed candidates will probably be broken next week.

Some think Shelby Smith, who paid us a breezy visit Monday, from Philadelphia, inspired the sensational union political gossip in the Star of that date. No, why should he?

W. S. McKean, jr., one of the best known compositors in the G. P. O., has resigned. Mr. McKean will take charge of the Baltimore end of a well known oil syndicate owning properties in the fields of Indiana and Ohio.

A large audience will listen to the narrative of the virtues of the many candidates next Sunday. Surely five minutes is not sufficient for each. For a month afterward a larger audience will listen to the good and bad of these same persons.

Miss Teresa McDonald and Miss Anna Wilson shook hands with us last week. They both have good union records. The former was the only lady who "walked out" in the Brooklyn strike. She afterward did effective committee work. The latter has been very active in the Woman's Auxiliary here, as we all know, and has been an active member here for some time.

The United Workmen's Savings Bank have issued an interesting circular. Capital stock is to be $200,000, $50,000 of which is to be immediately issued at $10 per share. Its officers and directors are mostly union men. John B. Dickman, a former president of this union, now of this force, is a director. Deposits as low as 25 cents will be received. Commercial deposits will not be sought as much as those of workmen. The offices are at 416 Fifth street northwest, second floor.

Harry O'Donnell's announcement as candidate for president of Columbia Union clears up the situation somewhat for that office. His splendid race for delegate last year leaves no doubt as to his place in the hearts of the voters. In a field of eight candidates he beat the second highest by nearly 12 per cent. As delegate to the convention he did his duty well. Being the union to entertain the convention it was better taste to act as hosts than to force legislative measures, which we did most acceptably. Mr. O'Donnell has had much experience on committee work is always energetic and conservative, going the bottom of all questions, and never taking snap judgment. He is familiar with parliamentary practice, and has a full grasp of every question during its sometimes labyrinthine course. He is easy of approach, has a pleasing personality, and is considerate of everyone, yet firm in his determination when he has decided on a proper course. He will at all times render the union his most earnest and impartial services.

King's Reply to Bloomer.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

My old friend, Pard Bloomer, in last week's TRADES UNIONIST, refers to a misprint of figures in my letter of a week before in a manner to show that he has no thought of dealing fairly with the subject. The fact that the amount of the Hollenbeck bill and the Lynch bill, as printed, were identical would be sufficient to warn most people, and especially people of Pard's acumen, that one amount or the other was a clerical error. And the fact that I gave the page of the Journal on which the items could be found is, I think, sufficient evidence that I could not have intended to mislead. And when Pard attempts to make capital out of an error of that kind, he clearly demonstrates how weak a cause he has espoused. Does he believe his bombast and his rhetoric will offset the scandlous waste of the union's money, as shown by the "Figures that Tell the Story?"

Pard Bloomer doesn't know what I criticise about the Hollenbeck Press bill. Nothing, Pard, nothing! It was merely inserted to show that reputable business houses doing business with the I. T. U. are required to itemize their bills, while the accounts of organizers, as published, are presented in lump sums as expenses. Is that clear to you now, Pard?

And now as to the number of organizers: "A little learning is a dangerous thing." Had Pard gone to the trouble of looking up the facts he would hardly have charged me with untruthfulness in that matter. If he will go to the trouble to look on page 26 of the supplement to the October Journal he will find the list of organizers and the amounts paid them. If he can count beyond 17 he will find that in his statement last week he was in error. He will find that the number was as I stated, and that they were paid for their services during the year all the way from $2.10 to J. H. Huddleston to $1,965.60 to B. G. Brady. Of course it would be too much to expect Pard to acknowledge his error, but the figures are there, and no amount of Pard's mouthings can alter their extravagance.

As to his insulting innuendo that I would stoop to be the vehicle for the utterance of men who are "lying about those to whom they are opposed," I believe my standing and my record in Washington are a sufficient reply.

J. LIGON KING.

A BIT OF ALL SORTS

One of the recent appointments to a position of pressman in the G. P. O. is E H. Sample, of Chicago. Mr. Sample was for a number of years secretary, and also at one time business agent of Chicago Pressmen's Union, and was employed for years on the Inland Printer. He is a gentleman who makes friends readily, and was originally a fellow-townsman of Billy Bass, foreman of the Third Division, hailing from Lafayette, Ind.

It was a mighty handsome thing to put so many of the Baltimore printers and bookbinders thrown out of employment by that awful disaster to work in the office, and two men deserve all the credit for it. George Nichols called on Foreman Oscar Ricketts the first thing the Monday after the fire and suggested it, and Mr. Ricketts acted favorably on his suggestion at once. Of course other people moved in the matter after the way was already paved, but there is only one George Nichols, and he is the man of all men when people need a friend.

The death recently of Jimmy Welty removed a character from printing circles who in his humble sphere did his share to make life pleasant. A deaf mute, he had one of the sunniest of dispositions, and was as fond of a joke as any man I ever knew. I was employed in the same department with him for about a year some ten or more years ago, and we walked back and forth to work frequently, and he would always have the morning paper to point out articles of interest, and especially those of a humorous turn, and notwithstanding I was able to converse only by the use of pencil and paper, I found him a really enjoyable companion. There was nothing of the sham or tawdry about him, and while not a "knocker" by any means, he read most people all right, and none of the would-be's ever fooled him much. He was a good printer and a very worthy man.

In purchasing goods from advertisers in this paper, do not fail to mention the fact that you saw the advertisement in THE TRADES UNIONIST. It will accord you good treatment at the hand of the salesman, and incidentally help the paper.

ALLIED BUILDING TRADES.

Meeting of April 12, 1904.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades of the Central Labor Union was called to order at the usual hour by Chairman Wells.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read, and the secretary was instructed to insert letter received from secretary of Carpenters Joint District Council relative to card; also that the delegate from Carpenters, No. 1651, had made inquiries as to J. H. Nolan's case. The minutes were then approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication was received from Carpenters Union, No. 884, asking that their bill for cards for last quarter be sent to Carpenters Joint District Council for payment.

Moved and seconded that Carpenters, No. 884, be informed that the Council of Allied Building Trades cannot comply with the request, as the Council of Allied Building Trades must do business direct with each affiliated local. The motion was favored by Delegates Sheetz, Cooper, McClelland, Ryan, Daly, and Ratigan, and opposed by Delegates Pender, McKay, McVey, Johnson, and Rasson.

The motion was carried by a vote of 19 to 9.

Delegate Silver asked that a member of their organization be allowed to sit during the meeting. Request was granted.

A communication was read from Carpenters Local Union No. 190, relative to the printing on their cards as per request of Carpenters Joint Council. Filed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Delegate Daly reported action of the Central Labor Union on communication from Carpenters Joint District Council relative to the issuance of cards, and also stated that President Gompers would repeat his lecture on observations in Porto Rico and reply to criticisms of Treasurer W. A. Willoughby, of Porto Rico, and asked all to attend.

Delegate Nothnagel, from special committee to see Charles Rauscher, reported having secured Central Labor Union contract. Referred to Central Labor Union with the request that the name of Charles Rauscher be taken from the unfair list.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Under call of Unions to submit business, thirty-five delegates from twenty unions answered the roll call.

Engineers asked assistance of Business Agent with the Brennan Construction Company.

Painters stated that a quorum of the Executive Board had not answered to a call, and asked that the Board meet after the meeting. Request granted.

Carpet Workers asked that their union be notified of their delegates attendance.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Secretary read resolutions introduced by Delegate Winslow as amendment to Article II, Section 5:

Resolved, That when two or more Local Unions of the same craft or calling, affiliated with this Council, form a joint council or committee, said joint council or committee shall be admitted to the Council on the following basis of representation, viz: One delegate from each Local Union forming said council or committees, and when less than three Locals form said council or committee, then the said council or committee shall be entitled to three delegates.

NEW BUSINESS.

A petition approving the Great Falls and Old Dominion Street Railway Line was indorsed.

The Council then adjourned.

Carpenters Joint District Council Take an Appeal—Charles Rauscher Taken From Unfair List—Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen Still Fighting Loeffler—Amendment Defeated.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order by President Sherman on Monday evening at 8 p. m. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

From Local No. 1651, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, certifying to Owen J. Clarke, vice James H. Bond.

From Paperhangers, No. 420, certifying to Harry D. Tryon, Louis Foster, Robert C. Keiner, and Charles N. Evans.

The credentials were accepted,

COMMUNICATIONS.

From E. J. Ratigan, secretary of Allied Building Trades Council, reporting that the special committee on the Rauscher case had secured a Central Labor Union contract from Mr. Rauscher, and asked that he be taken from the unfair list. Request granted.

From Carpenters Joint District Council, stating that they had appealed from the action of the Central Labor Union and the Allied Building Trades Council denying the Carpenters Unions the right to place the title of the Joint District Council on the working card issued to them. Placed on file.

From Local No. 368, Painters filing complaint against Samuel Maddox, a builder, for employing nonunion painters on houses under his charge, in violation of a Central Labor Union contract. Referred to Contract Committee.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Retail Grocery Clerks requested that the Legislative Committee appear before the Senate District Committee in support of the Sunday closing law. Request granted.

Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen called attention to the fact that some members of unions were patronizing The A. Loeffler Sausage and Provision Co., and asked that they be requested to desist until that firm comes to terms with the Union. The secretary was requested to forward a copy of circular letter to the secretary of the Retail Liquor Dealers Association and request that they conform to the articles of agreement entered into by aud between the Central Labor Union and the Association.

Special committee to visit Second Assistant Postmaster-General reported progress.

Legislative Committee reported on several matters under its charge, and asked that a vote of thanks be extended to the following members of Congress: Hughes, of New Jersey; Caldwell, of Illinois; Hearst, of New York; Van Duzer, of Nevada, and Mudd, of Maryland. The recommendation was adopted.

The Allied Label League delegate reported that the League was prospering, three organizations having joined at its last meeting.

The amendment to the Constitution, referring to action on resolutions, was considered, and was defeated.

Special committee on Hecht matter asked for an appropriation, which was granted.

NEW BUSINESS.

Under new business it was ordered that at the next meeting, the hour from 9 to 10 o'clock be set aside for the purpose of having friends in Congress address the Central Labor Union, and that Representatives Hughes, Caldwell, and Hearst be invited. Adopted.

A motion to consider the advisability of forming a labor lyceum was carried, and a special committee appointed to report at meeting of May 2.

Miss Carrie L. Whitehead has the distinction of being the first to nominate one of her own sex as a delegate to the International body from 101, a duty which she performed gracefully and well. In seconding the nomination of Miss Anna Wilson Miss Julia M. Capt. E. D. Smoot, of Specifications, is slowly but surely solving the knotty problems of experimental farming at his conntry seat in the outskirts of Vienna, Va. Some three orf our years ago the Captain staked off a piece of ground and began to root and exercise the soil. His efforts led to discoveries and results not always anticipated, but with rather more of success than failure he gradually was able to increase the patch and now has one of the most flourishing plantations of its size in the Old Dominion. He has succeeded in gathering in from fifty to two hundred chickens, old and young, has arranged for several hills of corn, and has promised to take Charley Cypher's advice this year and try planting potatoes with skins on, as an experiment.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

Typographical talent came in great bunches on Sunday last, at both the matinee and evening performances, from the nominating speeches of Misses Whitehead and Burke and Messrs. Meritt, Leavitt, Ennis, Waterman, and others, to the efforts of Messrs. Huss, Smith (Frank H.), and Burchfield in the wee sma' hours.

Of the Momus Club affair I need only give the comment of Mr. T. C. Parsons, it being his initial appearance: "It makes me proud to feel that I am a printer and to realize that the programme is carried out by printers and their associates. I shall never miss another."

Stripped of its verbiage, Public Resolution No. 11, approved March 28 last, means that, having sale therefor, the Bureau of Documents can order a sufficient extra copies of any Government book or publication to satisfy the demand. This, too, without cost to the printing office, the expense being borne by the income derived from the sale of public documents. During the last fiscal year thousands of dollars in remittances were returned to the would-be purchasers for the simple reason the article desired was not in stock. While Captain Ferrell is thus materially adding to the work of the pressman and the bookbinder, he is bringing his bureau up to the standard of a modern supply house in literature.

George P. Brett, President of the MacMillan Company, in a lengthy discussion of the International Copyright law in the Independent, says:

I think I may state, without fear of contradiction on the part of any one having knowledge of the matter, that our International Copyright act could not have been passed without the active support of the typographical unions—a support given, perhaps, less as an act of justice to authors than as a means, through the so-called manufacturing classes, of providing employment for an increased number of printers.

As one of nine gentlemen deputized by three great interests to live in the lobby in the interest of the Chase-Breckinridge bill, I take pleasure in testifying to the truth of the gentleman's statement.

A neat act, that of Miss McDonald in retiring from the delegateship contest and lending her efforts in the direction of enhancing the chances of Miss Anna Wilson. Few of the so-called sterner sex would have made so commendable a move.

COLUMBIA UNION MEETING

Nominations Made For Ensuing Year Brought Out the Orators.

MEETING WAS WELL ATTENDED

Nominations Committee Report—Seven New Members Elected—Cummings' Memorial Committee Report—J. A. Onyon Goes on Relief Committee—Orators Out in Force—Newsy Notes.

The regular monthly meeting of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, was called to order at 2.30 p. m. last Sunday, President Johnson presiding.

The reading of the minutes of the last stated meeting were dispensed with.

The secretary read the cards deposited since last meeting, which were received.

The Nomination Committee having reported favorably on the following applicants for membership, they were duly elected: Norman Wade, E. A. Vogts, H. A. Van Horn, George R. Hemphill, A. H. Chase, A. F. Tucker, H. P. Gatley. Apprentice membership: Vincent F. Coughlin.

The candidates present were obligated.

Bills amounting $34.15 were approved and ordered paid.

Mr. Stelle, from the Relief Committee, reported the death of his late colleague on committee, E. P. Cummins, and paid a high tribute to his memory.

The president announced that John A. Onyun had been placed on the Relief Committee to fill vacancy caused by death of Mr. Cummins.

Mr. Bynum, from Cummings Memorial Committee, reported progress, and submitted a resolution indorsing the plan of creating a library and addition to the Home, which was adopted.

The Union then proceeded to nomination of officers for the ensuing year.

On motion, nominating speeches were limited to five minutes.

The following nominations were then made: President, John R. Berg, John T. Herbert; vice-president, J. R. Armstrong, Chas. W. Herzinger, Wm. R. Love; secretary, Wm. M. Garrett, George G. Seibold; treasurer, James E. Bright, H. G. Brown, Chas. E. Holmes, trustees, Hugh Everett, Joseph E. Goodkey, George E. Hupert, Wm. M. Leavitt, Joseph C. Whyte; sergeant-at-arms, Frank Bates; doorkeeper, N. C. Stoops; auditors, J. W. Carter, C. W. Radley, L. C. Vogt. Delegates to I. T. U. (G. P. O): Titus F. Ellis, W. L. Gutelius, T. Frank Hall, Frank A. Kidd, F. H. Melick, Philip S. Steele, Dan C. Vaughan, F. N. Whitehead, Anna C. Wilson; down-town—H. C. Knapp, T. C. Parsons. Alternates (G. P. O): Chas S. Gunn, J. Ligon King, Chas. B. Buchanan; down-town, Harry F. Sauter.

Adjourned.

NOTES.

John O'Brien was thoroughly impartial in his choice.

Pard Bloomer nominated J. Ligon King for alternate.

As usual, Zach. Jenkins done the honors for Billy Garrett.

Herzinger had a good nominator and he handled his subject well.

"Judge" Ennis easily carried off the honors in nominating Kidd.

George E. Hupert, of the Star, has declined to stand for trustee.

Pard Bloomer's placing Berg in nomination was brief but all-sufficient.

It was remarked that the man who usually stays away for the other eleven meetings in the year bobs up on nomination Sunday.

Dexter Hussey was at his best in nominating Parsons. He said T. C. P., his candidate's initials, mean "The Candidate of the People."

Leavitt's presentation of Phil. Steele as a candidate for delegate was pleasing and well-timed. It was just such a speech as the subject called for.

The callow youth who butted in on the Miss Wilson nomination should have a good call down. No one seemed to know him, but he had his nerve.

Sam Gompers played both ends against the middle in seconding one nomination from his chapel and placing another in nomination for the same position.

Miss Whitehead and Miss Burke received an ovation in presenting Miss Wilson's name. Miss Burke made one of the best speeches of the day. It was a studied effort and well delivered.

ALLIED BUILDING TRADES.

Meeting of April 19, 1904.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades of the Central Labor Union was called to order at the usual hour by the secretary. In the absence of the chairman and vice-chairman, Delegate Nothnagel was called to the Chair.

The minutes of the meeting of April 12 were read and approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Master Builders Association, stating that their Association had no jurisdiction over John H. Nolan, pertaining to the employment of carpenters, and would not have until such time as the Carpenters signed conciliation agreement with Master Builders Association. The secretary was directed to forward copy of letter to each Carpenters Union.

From Carpenters Joint District Council, stating that they had appealed to American Federation of Labor relative to action of Council of Allied Building Trades refusing to furnish them cards as per their request. Filed.

Under roll call of unions to submit business, 33 delegates answered to the roll, representing 21 unions.

Bridge and Structural Iron Workers stated that the Chesapeake Iron Works, of Baltimore, Md., were working on the Occidental building with non union men, and that they had called their men off. The matter was referred to the Business Agent.

The trustees reported progress.

The Business Agent made report, which was accepted.

The secretary was directed to request all affiliated Locals to forward a list of their employees to Francis Duhey & Sons.

An invitation was extended to all delegates to attend the meeting to be held in Room 10, Typographical Temple, Wednesday night, and assist in forming a labor lyceum.

The secretary read resolutions introduced by Delegate Winslow as amendment to Article II, section 5, and action was deferred for one week:

Resolved, That when two or more Local Unions of the same craft or calling, affiliated with this Council, form a joint council or committee, said joint council or committee shall be admitted to the Council on the following basis of representation, viz: One delegate from each Local Union forming said council or committees, and when less than three Locals form said council or committee, then the said council or committee shall be entitled to three delegates.

Adjourned.

Personal Mention.

Tom C. Easterling, of Charleston, W. Va., now a well-known newspaper man, but formerly on the G. P. O. pay roll as a compositor, was in the city last week.

It is stated on good authority that Public Printer John S. Leech, of the Bureau of Printing, Manila, P. I., is en route to the city, where he is expected on the 1st prox.

Warren C. Browne, of Buffalo, N. Y., was in the city during the week on business of a purely personal nature. While Mr. Browne has his choice for president of the I. T. U., he is not offensively partisan in the matter.

George D. Conquitt, of Washington, D. C., who has been sojourning at the Springs for the past seven months in quest of better health, left Tuesday night for Columbia, Tenn., where his wife and family, of Washington, D. C., will join him.—Labor News, Colorado Springs.

In purchasing goods from advertisers in this paper, do not fail to mention the fact that you saw the advertisement in THE TRADES UNIONIST. It will accord you good treatment at the hand of the salesman, and incidentally help the paper.

Night Bill Force.

Among those who were "called" on the Record Monday night was Mr. Wiley Harrison Davis, a conspicuous figure of this force.

Cliff D. Scott is home ill. Scotty knows now why so much space was devoted to Job, of Scriptural fame. His meals are furnished him on the mantel.

Sam Elwood, of the Second Division annex is a very sick man—at least he ought to be, as seven men reported him ill Tuesday night, each giving him a different disease.

The Ladies' Auxiliary have also nominated a strong ticket for candidates for delegates. Interest is running high, now that the campaign is fairly on. The nominees are Mrs. Ed Thomas, Mrs. J. A. Huston, and Miss K. K. Spencer.

Charley Holmes, candidate for treasurer, handed us his green cards of announcement Friday. Wolf says this is tantamount to election, as he will thus get the Irish and Jew vote, for the Irish make the money and the Jews take it away from them.

Miss Julia M. Burke ably seconded the nomination of her sister worker, Miss Anna Wilson for delegate Sunday. St. Louis is Miss Burke's home city. She reflected great credit on her candidate and her sex in her well-chosen and well-delivered words.

James R. Armstrong, vice-presidential candidate from the proof room, went hurriedly down the line last Thursday night. Mr. Armstrong ran three years ago for this same office, but was defeated by Walter Smith, a well-known compositor of the G. P. O.

F. Homer Melick, of the "Spess," went through this room Thursday night talking for votes for delegate. In every alley he met some former Spess hand and needed no chairman to introduce him around. He knows by experience the time a chairman thus loses.

Mr. McCardell (Slug 45) was exhibiting a magnificent set of Porto Rican views and battle-ship pictures Saturday night. His son, Lester O. McCardell, a marine on board the battleship Massachusetts, took them and sent them to him. This ship is now at target practice at Pensacola, having finished a winter's cruise in the West Indies. Their summer will probably be spent off the New England coast.

The Night Bill Force Chapel is very much pleased with the nominating speech of Mr. Chas. Otis in nominating Charlie Holmes for treasurer. Charlie Holmes has been an active, hard worker for our Union here and elsewhere for twenty years, and if it is a question of rewarding one who has accomplished things by diligent labor Charlie will win easily, and that he will be rewarded we of the night force believe.

John R. Berg, candidate for president, made a tour of this room Wednesday night of last week. Mr. Berg is preeminently fitted for the place and will make an effective race. The sensational item in last week's Star has no weight with thinking men or women. A man's church membership, party fealty, or lodge connection is never questioned; why should his duty to his employer in the discharge of his work be any more of a barrier?

Harry Knapp, Times' candidate for delegate, was around Tuesday night looking after his fences. As any man would, he has profited by apprenticeship spent under such wise and genial direction as the late Mr. Hickman and the present "Pard" Bloomer, who were foreman and assistant foreman respectively over him. Harry is especially pleased over the results of the efforts of his many friends in this office in his behalf, and feels confident of success.

All those who heard Mr. Leavitt's feeling nomination of Mr. Philip Steele Sunday, will undoubtedly vote for him. He has been a faithful old wheel horse in the cause of unionism dating back to the time before many of us were born, and in this Union for nearly a decade and a half. He has never sought elective office from Columbia Union, and by his faithful service is entitled to it. It has been said he would not stoop to the "log-rolling" necessary for election. All the more reason he should represent such an enlightened honorable body as No. 101.

COLUMBIA Typographical Union, No. 101, is now in the midst of a political campaign, and all the band wagons are full, or getting that way, which accounts for the music in the air.

The Eight-Hour Bill.

The reference of the Eight-Hour Bill to the Department of Commerce and Labor, in order that further data may be collected and official experts examine it through economic magnifying-glasses, may or may not be good politics. To us it seems to further illuminate the contention of BOURKE COCKRAN and others that Congress is dropping away from its high estate as a maker of laws. The bill has been analyzed and carefully discussed in all its details in committee and by the press and by the general public. Its further consideration by a Department of the Government will only add to the difficulties involved, besides encouraging a bureaucratic spirit inimical to wholesome legislation and perhaps dangerous in the long run to free institutions.

From our point of view the bill is in line with a growing disposition to extend some degree of public encouragement to their important industrial element frequently referred to as the toiling masses. Those who oppose it are no doubt actually moved in many cases by an unmixed desire for the general good, but we firmly believe that they are not thoroughly awake to the requirements of the industrial future of the United States. It has been claimed and is still asserted by these very individuals that America's proud position in the commercial world is due to the independence and high social standing of the American workingman. Many of them, indeed, profess to find the chief glory of a high protective tariff in the fact that it keeps the workingman's wages up and thereby makes his condition much superior to that of the "pauper labor" of Europe. All of which being so, we fail to see why these public-spirited gentlemen should object to a measure so obviously looking to the betterment and aiming at the independence of the American workingman. And by the same token, sooner or later, we expect it to become a law.

Nevertheless, we are sorry that, with regard to a matter growing out of new conditions whose relationship to the fundamental law should be established by the Congress, and by it alone, the representatives of the people should show a lack of official courage and legislative initiative.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

The "1904 Annual of the Union Mutual Relief Association" has recently been issued, being a 64-page pamphlet very creditably printed by DeNeane Bros. giving the year's operations of the sick relief association connected with the Specifications and Official Gazette divisions of the G. P. O. It contains an article now entitled "Government Printing Fifty Years Ago," originally published in The Printer when Cornelius Wendell was the contractor for the public printing, which glowingly describes the wonderful establishment which a few years later became the Government Printing Office. It is almost amusingly enthusiastic in speaking of Mr. Wendell, setting forth his remarkable business acumen and admirable personal qualities with an eloquence which no modern historian of the G. P. O. would employ regarding the head of that establishment unless he happened to be equally gifted in the use of that kind of language. Portraits and sketches of the officers of the Association are given, as well as of some of the principal officials of the G. P. O, which, with the constitution, by-laws, financial statement, list of members, and liberal advertising patronage, make up the contents. The association has 230 members, composed of the employes or those who have been employes of the two divisions connected with specifications of patents, and is in the fourth year of its existence, having been organized on the initiative of George M. Ramsey, now in charge of the press room, who is its president and has been, except one year, ever since its organization, the other officers being G. W. Hall, vice-president, and Ed. R. French, secretary-treasurer, with a board of directors and a finance committee.

* * * *

My long-time and good friend J. Ligon King gracefully acknowledges the error in his figures regarding I. T. U. affairs as given by him a couple of weeks ago, as one might expect from one of his standing and his record in Washington. That is one advantage in dealing with a man who has standing and record in Washington, for a man who has no standing and no record in Washington would go on persisting in his error. There is a little of the combative in me, but when I am compelled to take issue with anyone I always select a man of standing and record in Washington, for I have always found that a man of standing and record in Washington will own up when he is proved wrong.

* * * *

I hear that the bill giving the employes of the G. P. O. thirty days' leave with thirty days' pay, which has passed the Senate, will be reported in the House by Chairman Charles B. Landis, of the Committee on Printing, as soon as Mr. Tate, one of the members of the committee, returns to the city. But it is getting so late in the session that we have a justifiable nervousness about it and are looking eagerly for Mr. Tate's return.

* * * *

There was the usual amount of eloquence displayed in nominating speeches last Sunday, but Charlie Ennis rather surpassed former noted efforts in presenting the name of Frank Kidd. Another fine effort was that of Jason Waterman with Gutelius as a subject, while Hastings' on Vaughan was very clever. Brockwell did the office for Whitehead in a humorous vein. Gompers performed the unusual feat of seconding Gutelius's nomination and nominating Melick all in the same speech. The presentation of the name of Miss Wilson created more enthusiasm than that of any other candidate. But as I can't remember who all made speeches nor whom they nominated, I can't go through the list.

* * * *

Maj. Johnny Rankin does sly things sometimes. A week ago last Saturday night a bran new baby girl came to his house, and he never said a word about it for a week. But he deserves his good fortune, and I hope the same thing may happen many times.

* * * *

The retirement of Harry O'Donnell from the race for president at the last minute was a surprise to everybody, as he had put out his cards and made a start at a canvass. But, having been through two campaigns, perhaps he remembered the work it entails. Miss Teresa McDonald, too, refused to be nominated for delegate, though she had made such a favorable impression that it looked as though she had more than a fighting chance for election.

It is hard for us to explain to the world our inconsistency in insisting on union wages and union conditions, refusing to work with non-union men, etc., at the same time spending those union wages or permitting them to be spent for non-union goods. It is of a piece with protecting American workingmen from the products of cheap foreign labor while admitting the labor itself free. I think we ought to be protected in both ways, and that no penny of union wages should ever go to the employer of non-union labor.

I recently received a letter from Frank Rosecrans, who will be remembered from his employment in the office seven or eight years ago. He is reading proof in a New York book office, where he has been for a year or more. He reports that George Christie, Herbert Steele, and Robert Y. Youngblood are still in Albany, and that the latter is to be married shortly. Steve Caldwell is married, the father of a baby, happy and contented and looks young. "Rosey" says, "I was grieved to hear of the suffering and finally death of my old friend Hickman. He certainly was a fine fellow and an all-around man in every sense that the word implies."

Among those admitted to membership in the union last Sunday was A. A. Chase, who has long been a copyholder in the main proof room. He made application to become a member when he first came here, but was told that it was not necessary for a copyholder.

I think it is the duty of every member of Columbia Union who is so situated that he can to attend the entertainment and dance of the Women's Auxiliary next Friday evening at Masonic Temple. I have not seen the programme, but it will doubtless be printed in this issue. The ladies are working womanfully to advance our interests, and are accomplishing much. It is not enough that we have bought a ticket or two; we should show our appreciation of their work by our personal presence and encouragement. They are growing in membership and getting others interested in the cause, and we who are most advantaged by their labors can not afford, even if we have no sense of gratitude, to let them get discouraged by our neglect and indifference. There is every prospect now of a large attendance, but the hall is capacious and will hold all comers.

* * * *

To "jiners" there is no feature of the Evening Star so interesting as the columns headed "Among the Fraternities," the work of a former printer and now well known newspaper man, Frank H. Hosford.

* * * *

I occasionally meet Tim Sullivan on Fourteenth street. He will be remembered among the older "Spess" people as a copyholder in that division, and for a while kept the cigar store and news stand on the corner of First and H streets, now owned by W. H. Livermore. Tim has been a clerk somewhere—the Treasury, I think—for a number of years.

* * * *

Ellis G. Darnell, P. M. ("which iz postmaster"), of Lebanon, Ind., for a number of years a proofreader and reviser in the G. P. O., part of the time on the Record, paid a visit to old friends in the office this week, disabling some of them for a day or two. He has all of the rotundity of a Federal official.

* * * *

Mrs. O. F. Dunlap, widow of Capt. O. F. Dunlap, so long a copyholder in the main Proof Room—nearly thirty years—whose death occurred a year or more ago, died last Sunday at the residence of her son, Bert Dunlap, at Strong City, Kans., of pneumonia. Mrs. Dunlap, who was quite aged, had long been in feeble health. Bert, the son, is also a printer. The news of Mrs. Dunlap's death was received by Charlie Wilhelm, a fellow-Kansan, who was an intimate friend of the family.

I learn from A. J. E. Hubbard's Colorado Springs Labor News that George D. Colquitt, who has been at the Home for the past seven months, left last week for his home, Columbia, Tenn. He is reported to be fully restored to health, as his friends here will be delighted to learn.

Any man who runs for office would rather have a walkover.

Never judge the cook in the kitchen by the cook-book in the library.

WHISPERS.

NELLIE ROBINSON STRETTON.

I.

In the hour and the flower of defeat
Never falter, never lay the burden down;
Quaff the cup and drink the bitter and the sweet,
Wear a smile and hide the cross beneath the crown.

II.

For the waters of the Lethe oft shall fail:
Thrice the cock shall crow to gray Gethsemanae:
And the vision of the star is passing pale
For the man upon the road to Calvary.

III.

For our souls are cathedrals, dim and cold,
Many windowed, that all colors may come in,
And our hearts are only dross without the gold
Till the crucible has burned away the sin.

IV.

And our tears are only tears as they fall,
And our roses only roses while they blow,
And the clay that shapens in the potter's thrall,
He may turn and burn to marble ere we go.

V.

Let the mummer and the gibber play his part,
Tis for thee to meet the Gorgons of all seas;
Tis to walk alone and poised in the mart,
And in silence drink the wine of Socrates.

VI.

Our pleasures are but pleasures while they please,
And our sorrows only sorrows while they last,
And the tide that bears our barks across the seas
Is the tide that bears them Homeward at the last.

John O'Brien attended union meeting last Sunday.

J. C. Shinnen has been transferred to the Interior Branch.

A Bright remark: Holmes says he is going to do one of his competitors up Brown.

What's the matter with the base ball team. Its up to Manager Berger to deliver the goods.

Ansley Martin, R. H. Mayers, and Harry Nesbitt have announced themselves as candidates for tellers.

J. R. Charles took a flying trip to his home last Saturday, and Dame Rumor says that there will soon be something doing.

Its about time somebody was mentioning the name of Young Simon Pocher as a "dark horse" candidate for teller.

F. W. Whitehead made his initial bow on Tuesday. "Whitie" is an old campaigner, and takes to the business like a duck does to water.

Young Mr. Root and Young Mr. Robey were suggested as candidates last week. But Young Mr. Root declined to run with Young Mr. Robey. So there.

John T. Herbert presented his card on Tuesday. It bears the inscription, "To unionize all down-town offices." By the way, that was Shelby Smith's battle cry.

Morris Phillips is again on duty, having completed another term in the hospital. When it comes to the genuine hard-luck man, Phillips claims to be the original.

Capt. "Jack" Robinson is somewhat of an orator himself. You see the captain got excellent training when he used to yell, "Attention, company! f-o-r-w-a-r-d, guide right! Hip!"

The cruiser Lynchopavlovik is liable to be blown up yet by one of its own torpedoes—those recently placed in THE TRADES UNIONIST by Messrs. Kreiterisky, Lerchovik, and Broderickskoff.

Young Mr. Bloomer says its nice to discuss questions provided you don't "carp" at each other. After all, I guess that punch he gave Young Shelby Smith in the slats won't come under that head.

The base ball fans have been finding considerable fault with the arrangement of the Seventh street park. The "two-bit" boys are entitled to something better than a position away out in the field.

John Berg paid this division his first official visit on Monday. There is something about John, and its not because he is a foreman, either, that makes the average fellow feel that he is just about the right man for president.

I shall certainly have to say something about Dan Vaughan's card. Together with his own name and photo, there is a complete list of the other candidates for delegate. It is a pretty good card to keep in your upper vest pocket.

The ovation which greeted Miss Carrie Whitehead, of the "Spess," division, when she arose to place in nomination the name of Miss Anna Wilson, was a grand testimonial to the high esteem in which the lady members are held by the craft in general.

W. J. Delano, helper to the imposers, was married on Wednesday night to Miss Laura Connor, at the latter's home in Southeast Washington. The friendly advice which "Dell" has received from his fellow workers, if followed, will undoubtedly be of great benefit.

By the eloquent speech in which he placed Frank Kidd in nomination, Chas. H. Ennis, of the Proof Room, has easily won for himself the title of the "Silver-tongued orator of No. 101." I hope some day he will quit chasing commas, and devote himself to the practice of law, for which he seems so ably fitted.

William Leavitt, our own "Billy," is to be congratulated for the able manner in which he presented the name of Philip Steele for delegate. In simple words he paid a beautiful tribute to the gray-haired veteran of this room, and the ovation which he received testified to the popularity of both nominator and nominee.

The First Division will be well represented on the next election ticket, having five candidates. Bill Love out is for vice-president, while James Bright will be content to act as treasurer. Dr. Chas. Radley and Louis Vogt are willing to audit the accounts of the Union, and Father Steele has decided a trip to St. Louis will be about the proper thing to round out a career covering forty-two years of active union services.

Third Division.

Now they're off!

Since last Sunday we have been deluged with callers. But they didn't inquire after our health.

Mr. John Berg, foreman of the Record, who is a candidate for President of Columbia Union, exchanged compliments with us on the 15th instant.

Let nobody forget that the Third Division has the candidates par excellence, both for delegate and vice-president, in T. Frank Hall and Chas. W. Herzinger.

Harry C. Knapp of the Times chapel, called for the second time last Tuesday. "They say" he will give Parsons the time of his life in the race for down-town delegate.

Robt. J. Mears, of this division, left the city Wednesday, April 13, for his home in Milford, Del., having received a telegram stating that his mother was dangerously ill.

"Joshua, the Great General; or, How the Walls Fell," will be the subject of the discourse at the Ninth Street Christian Church (the printers' church), next Sunday evening, April 24.

The correspondent who last week put at the head of his column, "Miss Anna Wilson—that's all," made a mistake; that isn't all, by any means. Just write it this way: "Miss Anna C. Wilson, delegate from Columbia Union No. 101, to St. Louis, 1904."

Out of twelve photographs entered by J. W. L. Dillman for the Annual Exhibition of the Capital Camera Club, nine were accepted by the jury of selection and will be exhibited in the Hemicycle Hall of the Corcoran Gallery of Art from April 30 to May 11, inclusive.

Jeff Garland is president of the Company that is exploiting his mica mine. On a recent visit thereto, the company furnished Jeff with a sleeping car ticket, which Jeff declined, saying the journey would take 36 hours, and he didn't care to sleep all that time! Jeff would make a good Cascaret.

Dan C. Vaughan has issued a new lot of cards with the names of the other nominees for delegate on the back. Probably suggested by the list of label offices on the back of Hall's card. On seeing these cards, Mr. Simons remarked, "Now if someone would only print us a card with the fire alarms on the back."

"Major" J. T. Herbert of the Post chapel, candidate for President of Columbia Union, honored us by a call Tuesday. The Major is a genial and popular gentleman, who seems to have many friends in the G. P. O., and the opinion is freely expressed that he would, if elected, prove to be at once a tactful and dignified presiding officer.

F. N. Whitehead, the big man from Texas, was in to see us the other day and left us a card to remind us that he was running for delegate. To those who don't know Mr. Whitehead I will say right now that he may be picked for a winner. Those who do know him will not need to be told that he possesses all the qualifications needed for a thoroughly efficient and reliable representative.

One day last week Windy Morgan, in looking over his copy, ran across the expression, "Sermon on the Mount." He went to the chairman, saying, "Goldy, how about this—do you put up Sermon on the Mount?" "What is it?" Said Goldy, "a title?" "Why, don't you know who preached the Sermon on the Mount?" said Windy. "Of, course I do," said the chairman; "it was Moses!"

Last Monday we received calls from three candidates for vice-president of Columbia Union, viz: Chas. W. Herzinger of this division; Jas. R. Armstrong of the Document Proof Room; Wm. R. Love, of the First Division, and Chas. E. Holmes, of the Night Bill Force, candidate for treasurer was then introduced; followed by Wm. L. Gutelius of the Specification Division, candidate for delegate.

The editor of the Union Printers Bulletin, Topsy, J. Ligon King, etc., have got into the habit of referring to me when they want to say something striking and original. These gentlemen, as well as others, are trying to induce us to believe that neither of the candidates for president of the I. T. U. is fit for the high and honorable position to which he aspires. It is a foolish business. We are singularly fortunate in our candidates for president, and with either in office our interests would be secure. If my friends above referred to wish to quote me, now is their time. Their assumption that the membership of the Union will be very much jarred by the bare assertion, founded upon their lively imaginations, that either candidate is incompetent or dishonest, is intensely asinine. Until we get some tangible proof of the existence of a conspiracy between Messrs. Hawkes and Lynch to loot the treasury of the Union I shall continue to regard them with the respect and admiration which they deserve.

Candidate T. Frank Hall left his card with each member of the Division about a week ago. Here is one instance of a man who will get votes in the house of his friends, and he will get a good many. Mr. Hall is a member of the Union in more ways than the average printer. He not only preaches Unionism every day, but he interests himself in the business of the Union to such an extent that no matter what question comes up, he understands it and can talk and vote intelligently upon it. To those who do not attend the meetings, but who, nevertheless, love to "carp and criticize," his advice is: "Come to the meetings yourselves and buy chips. The game is free to all." He has worked in about every division in the office, including the Spess, and knows the ropes; and while not so young as some of us, can stand more hard knocks than many younger men and "bob up serenely" afterward. In short, he is intelligent, clear-headed and well versed in Union law and the needs and aims of Union printers generally. A vote for him will not be thrown away.

J. W. BELCHER.

Proof Room Notes.

We of the night proof room were gratified to receive a visit last Monday night from Mr. Shelby Smith. He was accompanied by Cos Rodier. Mr. Smith is now the agent of the Allied Printing Trades at Philadephia.

The aggressive H. Y. Brooke favored me with a copy of the paper he is publishing in Crenshaw County, Ala., which has a remarkably neat appearance and seems quite prosperous. He is a candidate for collector of taxes. Good luck to Bro. Brooke in all his undertakings.

I have received a letter from A. J. McCurdy, of Roanoke, No. 60, informing me that he is a candidate for delegate to the Federation of Labor (three to be elected), and requesting my humble efforts in his behalf. Mr. McCurdy will be remembered as a temporary employee of the G. P. O. some three years ago, and as a staunch union man. He deserves the good will of the membership here and is amply competent for the place.

President Johnson's withdrawal from the delegatorial contest was deeply regretted. It has heretofore been customary when a president of Columbia Union has administered his office successfully and satisfactorily to elect him delegate. President Johnson comes under this category, and deserved that compliment in an exceptional degree. Spokane Union has recognized his ability and integrity by nominating him for president of the International.

Among the many measures adopted to undermine trades unions I notice that a bill has been introduced in the Ohio legislature that unincorporated societies may be sued the same as incorporated bodies, and that the private property of the members will be liable to execution on judgment, so that if on a strike or boycott, the company or corporation prove damages, away goes the little home which the union man has been toiling and saving so many years to pay for.

A word about the progress of Russia: Fifty years ago not one mujik in the army out of fifty could read and write. To-day, in spite of all the obstacles with which Russia has had to contend, one in every three can read and write, and in the next generation it will be the rare exception who will be totally ignorant of letters. It is generally admitted that the cause of civilization and the commerce of the world have gained notably because of Russian development in Manchuria.

It is certainly gratifying to know the ten candidates for delegate from the G. P. O. and of the two from down-town are all stalwart and able, and that any of them would do credit to the Union. In this connection I can not help expressing the hope that T. F. Ellis will be one of the three chosen from the big shop. His urbanity, his general intelligence, his familiarity with the Missouri metropolis, and his disposition to oblige and accommodate should make him acceptable in a special manner to the entire membership.

The election of chapels held on the first instant resulted in the choice, among others, of Theo. Gerber, Second Division, night force; W. N. Goldstein, of the Third, day force: and W. R. Abbott, First Division, night. These names are mentioned to the exclusion of others because I happen to know the facts and because the success of these candidates under the circumstances entitles them to exceptional credit. In this connection I would remark, that while no candidate less potent that St. Patrick would have a ghost of a show against Father Thomas, of the night proof room, yet, for the sake of variety, an election would not be without interest.

It is interesting to know that the relation between capital and labor in Japan is not that of hostility but one of friendship and material support. The capitalists encourage the unions. Among these supporters the most prominent was the late T. Sakuma, a printer, formerly the owner of a large printing plant in Tokio. The progress which Japan has made in the last fifty years may be partially estimated from the fact that there are sixteen well established daily newspapers in Tokio alone, and 480 dailies in the whole kingdom. The Osake Ashai and the Osaka Mainuchi have a daily circulation of 145,000 and 100,000 respectively. There are innumerable magazines with a circulation running up to 100,000, not to mention the rural weeklies.

Open Meeting.

Local No. 21, Hod Carriers and Building Laborers Union, will hold an open meeting Thursday evening, May 5. Messrs. H. W. Sherman, Milford Spohn, and John H. Brinkman will address the meeting.

It is the desire of No. 21 to have a good representation of members of other unions present on this occasion as the subject under discussion will be of interest to every member of the various unions in the city, particularly the building trades.

The Labor Lyceum.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

A committee of the Central Labor Union met in Room 10, Typographical Temple, on Wednesday night last and formulated plans for the operation of a labor lyceum and bureau of information as an adjunct to the Central Labor Union. The features of the lyceum will be the collection of legislative data as it applies to labor legislation in Congress and forwarding it to the constituent members of labor unions.

That organized labor throughout the country is displeased with the action of certain members of the House Committee on Labor relative to their action on the eight-hour bill was exemplified by the action of the Central Labor Union Monday night, and no expense should be spared to place the true position of these men on the labor question before the voters of the country and oppose their re-election.

The committee extended an invitation to the Miscellaneous Trades and the Building Trades Council of the Central Labor Union to be present at the next meeting, which will be held in Hall No. 2, 610 G street northwest, on Wednesday, April 27, 1904, at 8 p. m., when it is expected that plans will be adopted which will be ratified at the meeting of the Central Labor Union, to be held May 2.

A cordial invitation is extended to all members of organized labor to be present at the committee meeting Wednesday night, and by their efforts assist in forming this labor lyceum and bureau of information.

Second Division.

Messrs. Cornish and Ellis attended the Momus banquet, and report having high jinks.

Mr. Holmes is all right for treasurer, but he shouldn't forget that many of us have homes of our own to look after, and not much treasure in sight.

Whatever may be in it, neither Herzinger nor Armstrong will find any Love in the V. P. chair should either of them have the luck to get there.

"The less frequent your visit, Moores the welcome," was the greeting extended Saturday afternoon to friend Moores, the immediate predecessor of our present popular postmaster, Mr. Rowe—your boat lightly.

"LIVE MATTER" TO THE "DEAD BOARD."

As they're faultlessly appareled in matter of dress,
And quite fully alive to the charms they possess—
Aye, alive to all else that good living pertains,
And in no sense to be viewed as "mortal remains"—
It seems rather sad that all the ladies who troop
Into the Second, and there comes many a group,
Should be halted half way, and if we're not much mistaken
Ere they leave us for good, to the "dead board" they're taken.

"See here," said one of the typos to Chairman Cornish while the latter was escorting Candidate Vaughan on a vote soliciting tour tother day, "If you are going to keep this show up any longer, you will have to trot out some new attractions, I saw this Vaughan before."

BLAME ON M'PIKE—VOTE AS YOU LIKE.

As 'Ellis full of matrimonial schemes (this is a fact), and as Miss Wilson is, presumably, in a reciprocal mood, it might be well—aye, even commendable—to Hall in the Parson, through whose ministrations at least one Knapp—no, happy—combination, with heart willing and Armstrong, could be made to Steele into existence, and perhaps eventually be tempted to make Holmes of their own, with a commodious Garrett, in some pleasant Berg not far away, where the party of the second part, amid the felicities of wedded Love, the cooings of at least Vaughan Whitehead Kidd (number not limited), and the music of Herzinger machine, could scarcely fail to realize that everything was done up Brown in the Bright days of her happy transition from maidenhood to wifehood.

ARIEL.

TITUS F. ELLIS,

our candidate for delegate, was born in Maysville, Ky., and joined the union in Aberdeen, Ohio; learned his trade in St. Louis, Mo., his adopted home, where he is a voter. Mr. Ellis came to this city in 1888 and has been a member of Columbia Union, No. 101, since that time—16 years. He served on the Convention Committee, and everyone knows that he worked hard to make it a success. He is the only St. Louisan on the ticket and would make it doubly pleasant for any and all who contemplate going to St. Louis at the time of the convention. Mr. Ellis has never been a delegate. To show what the St. Louis union men think of Mr. Ellis we ask you to read the following paragraph from a letter written by Mr. M. R. H. Witter, who is chairman of the Committee of Arrangements for the convention, ex-President of the I. T. U., and at present foreman of one of the greatest papers in the West, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat:

ST. LOUIS, MO., April 14, 1904.

T. F. ELLIS, Government Printing Office.

DEAR SIR: I understand you are a candidate for delegatorial honors from your union, and hope you will have success. Your friends here would be glad to welcome you as the representative of Old Columbia, and they feel sure that no worthier man could be chosen for that honor.

With best wishes, I remain,
Yours, very sincerely,
M. R. H. WITTER.

Albert K. Mundheim spent several days last week with relatives in New York City.

John Mulroy was on the sick list the greater part of last week. He returned to work Monday.

Now that the nominations have been made, the candidates are giving us the glad hand almost every day.

Geo. H. Healey, who was poisoned last spring with poison oak, is broken out with it again this season.

John W. Martin was transferred to the main office about four weeks ago and assigned to the Fourth Division.

W. Brice Coston and wife spent last week in Clarksburg, W. Va., visiting the former's brother, who had an attack of typhoid fever.

W. A. DeGroot returned to work Monday of last week, after an absence of a month from sickness, at his home in Virginia. All were glad to see him back.

The following compositors came up from the main office about ten days ago to help out on the bonds: R. E. Beall, W. N. Darden, Robert F. Fletcher, and Avory E. Smoot.

Aven Pearson, foreman of this division, was 71 years old last Monday having been born April 18, 1833. Mr. Pearson is enjoying his usual good health and is apparently as active as ever.

Mrs. F. S. Van Norman, wife of E. S. Van Norman, of this division, died at her home in this city one day last week, after a long and painful illness, from cancer of the stomach. The remains were taken to her former home in New York State, near Buffalo, for interment. Van has the sympathy of all in his great loss.

A BIT OF ALL SORTS.

The appearance at one of the local theaters recently of one of the most popular plays ever put before the American public, recalls an incident in the career of its manager that occurred in one of the large cities of the West more years ago than either he or I are pleased to acknowledge. At the time of which I write this manager was the leading man of one of the finest stock companies ever gathered together in the days when every prominent city in the country was entertained by companies of players competent to support the stars of those days, who never traveled with any support whatever, and this manager, besides being recognized as a top-notcher as an actor, was one of the handsomest men on the stage. Actors and printers were usually congenial spirits, and frequently resorted to the same boarding-house as a habitation, and a number of the actors at the theater of which this man was the leader were housed at the home of a lady whose house always contained a number of printers, and through this means I had become quite well acquainted with a number of the company.

One Saturday night while on their way to the boarding-house, a half dozen or so of these actors, including the leading man, were in a pretty hilarious condition, and they attempted to have some fun with a young fellow who was taking up more of the sidewalk in his efforts to steer his course homeward than members of the Jonadabs are usually supposed to find necessary, and the young fellow being in no ways partial to the actor in general, resented their familiarity and proceeded to show them that he was not averse to a bit of a scrap, even if he was in no condition to walk a chalk line, and when he realized that a half dozen actors were more than a match for a guy with a jag on and were giving him considerably the worst of it, he didn't do a thing but put a grizzly hug on the leading man, and while the balance of the push were hammering away at him got out a good-sized penknife and he carved that leading actor so that his pretty face, which was his principal stock in trade, was no longer a thing of beauty nor a joy forever.

Well, the young fellow was of course arrested and stood a pretty good chance of serving the State for his board and clothes for quite a term of years, but some friends of his interested themselves in the matter, and I was asked to act in the capacity of arbitrator or mediator owing to my acquaintance with a number of the actors, and I called to see the leading man, whom I found propped up in bed with his head and face so covered with patches and bandages that he looked like a Bloodfield coon a day or two after an encounter with a Washington policeman.

He acted so manly about the matter when I told him that the fellow who had carved him was not a bad sort of a chap, and was the chief support of a widowed mother with a large family, saying that he could not blame the young fellow so much, as he and his friends were the aggressors, and that his assailant was somewhat justified in what he did owing to the number of actors party to the affair, although he realized that his career as an actor was likely at an end through the carving he had received, and assured me that so far as he was concerned his assailant should never be prosecuted. When he was able to get about, although it was mid-summer and the theater had been closed for several weeks, the people of that city gave him a benefit that at least partly repaid him for the loss of his manly beauty. I lost track of him for a number of years, and never saw him again until last week, but some of the scars he got on that occasion are still visible through his close-cropped beard. The fellow who cut him met his death in the performance of his duty as a member of the fier department.

THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION

The Open Meeting Addressed By Several Members of Congress.

LABOR LYCEUM TO BE CREATED

Labor Day Celebration—Hod Carriers Union, No. 21, to Have Open Meeting—Interesting Addresses By Representatives Van Duzer, Caldwell, and Hughes.

The weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at the usual hour by President Sherman. In the absence of Secretary Winslow, who is out of the city, Delegate E. J. Ratigan acted as secretary.

The minutes of the meeting of April 17, 1904, were read and approved.

A Mrs. Stretton was granted the floor, and asked the endorsement of the body for a book of poems she was publishing. The request was referred to the Label Committee for investigation.

Credentials were read from Electrotypers Union, certifying Jesse G. Buck, and from Bottlers Union, certifying to W. H. Ryan. Upon the favorable report of the Credentials Committee, the delegates were obligated.

REPORT OF GRIEVANCE COMMITTEE.

Delegate McCarthy read letter from T. H. Healey relative to grievance of Painters Union, which was referred to Painters.

Bills for $20 from Council of Allied Building Trades, for hall rent; from R. G. M. Ross, for $12, and from E. J. Roche, for $8, for services on Legislative Committee, upon favorable report of the Auditing Committee, were ordered paid.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Council of Allied Building Trades, containing bill for $20 for rent and check for $30, requesting that they be given credit for the $50 on note. Request granted.

From Hod Carriers Union, No. 21, extending an invitation to all delegates to be present at open meeting of their Union at Cadets' Armory, 708 O street N. W., Thursday, May 5.

Letters of regret at inability to accept invitation to be present at the open meeting extended to Hon. Sydney E. Mudd and Hon. W. R. Hearst were read and filed.

The Secretary was, on motion of Delegate Ratigan, directed to communicate with the Labor Lyceum and Bureau of Information, asking them to adopt such measures as would insure the disseminating to the constitutents of each member of the present Committee on Labor in the House of Representatives their true position on labor bills, and urging upon the voters of the country at large the necessity of retaining at home all Congressmen who oppose labor legislation.

From Local Union No. 1103, Brotherhood Carpenters, stating that they had declared Woodward & Lothrop unfair to their union, and asking the indorsement of the central body. Fee returned, as Woodward & Lothrop are now on unfair list, and No. 1103 was requested to push the present boycott.

ROLL CALL.

Bottlers asked support of all unions in pushing label.

Hod Carriers asked delegates to be present at open meeting of their Union May 5.

Washington Lodge Machinists called attention to National Roller Bearing Co., and that breweries were patronizing the firm.

Retail Clerks, No. 262, called attention to the fact that Hecht was still unfair.

Sheet Metal Workers, 102, through Delegate Ross, asked that a committee of ten be appointed to get the sentiment of unions on Labor Day parade. Amended by Delegate Spohn that a committee be appointed to arrange for Labor Day celebration or excursion. Amendment accepted and carried.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Delegate McCarthy, from committee to consider the advisability of forming a labor lyceum and bureau of information, stated that the committee had had a meeting and that the subject had been discussed, and thought feasible; that an invitation had been extended to the building trades and miscellaneous sections to take the matter up in conjunction with the committee and meet in Hall No. 2, Building Trades Halls, 610 G street northwest, Wednesday, April 27, at 8 o'clock p. m.

NEW BUSINESS.

The request of Mrs. Stretton was taken up and referred to Allied Label League.

The chair appointed the following as members of the Labor Day Committee: Milford Spohn, R. G. M. Ross, E. J. Ratigan, Edward Nothnagel, E. C. Adams, H. J. Wells, J. M. Heisley, J. E. McKenna, Jere F. McCarthy, and C. A. Pfau.

OPEN MEETING.

The meeting was then called to order as an open meeting, and the resolution adopted at the meeting held April 17 was read, and the secretary directed to have same engrossed and forwarded to the gentlemen named.

The chair then introduced Representative Van Duzer, of Nevada, who addressed the meeting. He stated that he was proud of the fact that he was elected to Congress by the laboring classes of his State, and did not think any man should be thanked for doing his duty, especially a Congressman, as the labor interests were not as well protected in the House and Senate as well as the trusts were. He spoke for some time on the conditions existing in the States of Nevada, Colorado, and Idaho, and denounced a statement having circulation in the House that the Western Federation of Miners was an organized body of outlaws as absolutely false. He advised a solid organization of toilers on the basis of educational lines, and said that if D. M. Parry and his supporters were of the same caliber as the citizens of Colorado and Nevada there would be no labor conflict between employers and employes.

Mr. Van Duzer's remarks were listened to with attention, and his scoring of D. M. Parry received great applause.

The chair then introduced Mr. Caldwell, of Illinois, who spoke for some time on the experiences he had met through life with labor unions, and stated that the discipline of the United Mine Workers Union had improved the output of the mines of Illinois.

Mr. Caldwell entertained a very attentive audience for more than an hour.

The chair then introduced Mr. Hughes, of New Jersey, who spoke on the differences existing between the conditions of the British and American workmen and the present attitude of the administration toward organized labor.

After he concluded Delegate Roche moved that a standing vote of thanks be extended to the Congressmen present. Carried.

Cummings Memorial Fund.

To the Members of Columbia Union:

The endorsement by many unions of the movement to erect an addition to the Union Printers Home as a Cummings Memorial Library Hall, has given new impetus to the work of securing contributions throughout the International jurisdiction. The success of this plan seems assured. Its feasibility is admitted by everyone, and that it will fill an imperative need is shown by correspondents in the craft press. The idea is sensible. It will be a fitting monument to Amos J. Cummings, who, through all his life, worked to secure better conditions for those who toil, and especially printers.

This is a proposition that should be supported by every member of our craft. The giving of a few dimes by every member of Columbia Union will swell our Union's contribution to the fund to over $1,000; it is now nearing the $500 mark. Let us keep it up for weeks longer, and by these 10-cent monthly contributions make up at least $1,000. Every chairman is authorized to receive contributions. Let the good work go on.

Fraternally,

CUMMINGS MEM. COM. OF 101.

Night Proof Room.

The candidates from the Proof Room—Vaughan and Kidd—are certainly lively campaigners, and if any votes get by them they will have to wear "sneaks."

Mr. Weston has been detailed to rssist Mr. Etchberger, et al to prepare copy. Fred proceeded to make good in his new position, as he does in anything pertaining to printing.

The literature received by the chapel in advocacy of Mr. Hawkes' candidacy is about as punk as it could possibly be. If I am not greatly mistaken it is acting as a boomerang for Hawkes. Every copy makes votes for Lynch.

It is very hard to become enthused over any particular candidate when we have such a fine array to choose from. The way of the office-seeker is hard indeed if they get half as tired as some of us do over the continual round of introductions.

Mr. McDowell, of Chicago, tendered his resignation last Monday and has accepted a position as law clerk in the Interior Department. Mr. McDowell possesses marked ability as a proofreader, and, being well versed in the law, will be a valuable man in his new position.

E. H. Thomas, father of the chapel, reports a very enjoyable evening at the ball given by the ladies of the Union. Ed complains that his avoirdupois prevents him from tripping the light fantastic as of yore, but nevertheless the ladies must be given a treat occasionally, and Ed is nothing, if not obliging.

From appearance one would never suspect our foreman, Mr. Wheat, of being a humorist. Nevertheless his written orders that "We will stay a while this morning," is frequently prefaced by a few words that generally produce smiles, even though we feel somewhat the worse for wear and would prefer to quit at the end of our eight hours.

Many regrets were expressed when Miss McDonald withdrew from the delegatorial race at the last moment. She was the recipient of many compliments during her visit to the big office. It was a very graceful act for her to hand around Miss Wilson's cards, thereby exhibiting a graciousness that should and no doubt will, be rewarded by an election as delegate next year.

Major Rankin reports his new daughter as being the peachiest peach to be found. The young lady, I am told by the Major, has developed a remarkable voice, and lends great hope that she will be an accomplished vocalist of wide range. Major has tried to impress upon her the danger of overdevelopment of the lungs, but she absolutely refuses to accept his advice—a treat so rare in the youths of to-day.

I am in receipt of some campaign literature sent out by No. 82 in advocacy of the reelection of Mr. McCaffrey, of Colorado Springs, as resident trustee of the Home. A personal acquaintance of seven months with Mr. McCaffrey convinced me that he is a valuable member of the board, especially as his home is at Colorado Springs, which affords him every opportunity to visit the Home frequently. Mr. McCaffrey has filled the position so acceptably in the past that he should receive a large vote in recognition of services well performed.

Going to Europe.

Frank E. Buckland, of the Government Printing Office, clerical force, and Frank Roderick, of the Proof Room Division of the same office, accompanied by their wives, will sail, on May 7, from the North German-Lloyd pier, Hoboken, N. J., on the S. S. Princess Irene, for the Mediterranean. After a two weeks' run through Southern Spain, they will steam to Naples, and from that point tour through Italy, Switzerland, France, Austria, Germany, Belgium, the Channel Islands, and England, returning from Cherbourg or Southampton about the middle of September.

MR. LYNCH'S RECORD.

Interesting Data Obtained in Secretary Bramwood's Report.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Only those who have closely observed the trend of conditions will have noted the growth of the International Typographical Union. Perhaps the general prosperity the country has enjoyed had much to do with the success which has attended the efforts put forth in the way of organizing printers. Yet it can be contended that President Lynch's administration had equally, if not more, to do with the achievements than prosperity. However, it is well to look into the records as published in The Typographical Journal.

As has been well said by Mr. Broderick in a recent communication, Mr. Lynch has always advocated a shorter work day. In fact the heads of all labor organizations have urged such legislation, and as it is a fundamental principle the work should go on and there should be no grumbling at expenses. To have organizers in the field is expensive, but fair-minded people realize that it is a profitable outlay of money.

But let us take notes from the report of Secretary Bramwood in the February Journal. His figures are interesting, and as the work of organization is entirely under the control of President Lynch it must be admitted that his judgment has not been at fault, and the results are highly commendable. It is only proper in this connection to give Mr. Bramwood much credit for the minute manner he has carried out the law of the Washington convention. The compilation shows his ability and worth in the office he has acceptably filled.

The previous statement, and the one which is used as a comparison, was issued in May, 1902. Mr. Bramwood says: "The nine-hour day remains the distinguishing feature of book and job offices. It is pleasing to state that the number of unions reporting longer hours for this class of labor has diminished one-half, while those reporting less than the fifty-four hour week for book and job work have increased three fold since May 1, 1902. Greater progress in this direction should be made in the next year, as the eight-hour campaign is well under way. There has been no attempt to show, on this compilation, the number of locals that have already arranged for eight hours (to become effective at a later date) for their book and job members."

This was written in Mr. Bramwood's best judgment, and not to influence this or that man's election as president of the I. T. U. But the improved conditions were brought about under Mr. Lynch's guidance and of course at an expense for organizing purposes of about $35,000 in two years. Pretty good investment it seems.

The aggregate weekly reductions in hours in 627 unions, amount to: Hand, 2,305½; machine, 823, which means a weekly decrease of about five hours for both hand and machine composition. And this was accomplished in less than two years—from May 1, 1902, to January 1, 1904.

Further on Mr. Bramwood says: "A remarkable increase is shown in the number of machines in use. * * * In 1902 the percentage of machines in union offices was 82, now it is 85—a gain of 3 per cent."

Naturally one would conclude that this increase was due only to an increase in the work done. But such is not the case. Additional machines were required because of the reduction in the number of hours worked in each week; and of course more men were needed to operate the machines. In referring to machines it is only fair to say that, according to a table in the report, there were nine different machines in use.

The total number of machines in use in union offices is 6,074, and the people who operate and tend them number 10,417, of which 8,526 are male operators, 325 female operators, 596 machine tenders, and 970 operator-machinists.

Then follows a most interesting statement. Mr. Bramwood says: "A comparison of the foregoing figures with those presented in the statement published May 1, 1902, affords the best means of demonstrating that, despite the growth in the number of machine operators, tenders, etc., the percentage of union men and women so employed has steadily increased."

The percentage of totals in 1902 was 90. In 1903 it was 92¾. In the increase of female operators it reached 6½ per cent. In commenting on these gains Mr. Bramwood says: "It demonstrates the claims of the International that it controls practically all machines, operators, tenders, etc., and that all superior workmen engaged in these branches of the trade are found in its ranks."

It is not my purpose to rob a single organizer of any credit due him. The work done by these gentlemen is shown over their own signature in their reports to the president, who in turn transmitted them to the Washington convention. But it is substantially true that President Lynch was the directing power. As we read on we have further evidences of the business capacity of Mr. Lynch. Mr. Bramwood says:

"It is impossible to present a resume of the increases in the scales of our locals so as to show clearly the gain by each one. Suffice it to say that they vary from 1 cent per 1,000 ems to $6 per week, or, comparatively estimated, from 2 to 75 per cent. In a large number of cases newly formed unions have not only greatly increased the wages of their members, but have at the same time reduced their working hours six per week. The older locals have been content with smaller gains, but have made substantial and encouraging progress."

Since May 1, 1902, hand compositors, proofreaders, floormen, and admen have had their wages increased in 760 offices, and machine operators in 328 offices.

If the people who so strenuously advocate the defeat of Mr. Lynch, and especially those who are using unquestionable methods of influencing—a mild word, coercion would better express the practice—voters in the big printery will get down to facts they will have not a peg to stand on when they contend that President Lynch has been extravagant. Mr. Bramwood's report is specific, and the amount of money expended is carefully enumerated.

Mr. Saloman Protests.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

The "callow youth who butted in on the Miss Wilson nomination" meekly accepts the "call-down" of the superior person who conducts one of your columns.

He was of the opinion at the time of committing the indiscretion, to use a mild term, of exercising the privileges of a member without first securing the sanction of THE TRADES UNIONIST, that his union card, which he has carried for twelve years, entitled him to privileges other than paying assessments and voting for men and measures. He thought the practice, which obtains in other local unions, of securing the recognition of the chair was all that was necessary to secure the privilege of voicing his opinions on the floor of the Union. He is evidently wrong in this.

No. 101, we discover, to its shame, has a censor in the person of your correspondent, who, as his communications are unsigned, must be in your employ and, therefore, express your views. The "callow youth," who desires to do things in approved fashion, will not in the future lay himself open to "call-downs." He intends, at his earliest opportunity, to apply to the anonymous person, who is such a power in union matters, for a permit giving him the right to take an active part in union proceedings if he feels so inclined.

You have given space to the paragraph which calls forth this letter. In justice to me, I ask you to publish this.

ALLIED BUILDING TRADES.

Meeting of April 26, 1904.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades of the Central Union was called to order at the usual hour by Chairman Wells.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Hod Carriers Union, No. 21, extending an invitation to all delegates to be present at an open meeting of their union to be held at Cadets Armory, Thursday, May 5, 1904.

From Pipe Coverers Union, No. 9425, stating that the Philip Carey Manufacturing Co., of Baltimore, had violated the agreement entered into with their union by employing men not affiliated with their union on telephone building. Referred to Business Agent.

ROLL CALL.

Under roll call to submit business, thirty-nine delegates representing twenty-three unions were marked present.

Stone Laborers asked assistance of Business Agent at Soldiers Home and St. Patrick's parsonage.

Hod Carriers reported that they had had trouble on K street job with a Mr. James Hughes, but that through efforts of Business Agent they expected a favorable settlement.

Machinists asked that secretary furnish their union with a report of their attendance and urge the union to appoint delegates who would attend the meetings.

Glaziers had agreed to rent hall in building.

Pipe Coverers reported grievance on telephone building. Referred to Business Agent.

Amendment to constitution laid over from last meeting was taken from table and read. On motion, the matter was laid on table for one week.

Union-Made Clothes.

Mr. T. E. Gilbert, importer and tailor, No. 818 F street Northwest, informs us that since his establishment was placed on the "fair list" of the labor unions of the city, his business has greatly increased.

He claims that the "union label" attached to well tailored garments has been the best advertisement he has ever tried.

We are much pleased to learn of this, as it is a good example of how a business can be benefitted and built up by being patronized by those affiliated with union organizations.

Mr. Gilbert is an advertiser in our columns and we take pleasure in recommending him to our readers.

The Labor Lyceum.

A well-attended meeting of representatives of unions affiliated with the Central Labor Union was held at Building Trades Hall, on Wednesday evening, the object being in pursuance of the action of the Central Labor Union indorsing the proposition to create a labor lyceum in this city.

Temporary organization was effected and a committee on constitution and by-laws appointed to draft laws governing the organization.

Addresses were made by several of the leaders in the new movement, and an adjournment was taken to next Sunday (May 1) at Building Trades Hall, at 2.30 p. m.

An invitation is extended to all members of unions affiliated with the Central Labor Union to be present at the next meeting.

WHEN men become thoroughly civilized the "you're another" style of oratory will not be encouraged.

IT is sometimes asserted that American oratory is a thing of the past. And yet BOURKE COCKRAN attracted more attention than PU LUN.

WE hear a great deal about "the dignity of labor," and as a nice sounding phase it is a serviceable oratorical asset, albeit somewhat shop-worn. But why not have something to say about the dignity of the laborer? Sometimes the very people who sing of "the dignity of labor" have nothing but condemnation for the laborer who tries to dignify himself by bettering his work-day and wage condition.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

There have been some misrepresentation (willful, I am afraid, in view of the ease with which the facts may be ascertained) and much weak subterfuge resorted to here by those opposed to the re-election of I. T. U. President Lynch. One man told me his opposition was because Lynch had lost the strike in Boston, when it has been shown by the editorial article in the Typographical Jonrnal, entitled "The Boston Settlement," and by letters from that city, that Mr. Lynch and the Executive Council saved all that was saved, which was really all that they struck for, except that they must wait a year for $1 per week of the advance asked. It has been shown that the strike was ordered without the consent of the Executive Council; that the president of Boston Union suppressed telegrams from I. T. U. officers regarding the strike, which he acknowledged before his union in open session (when made to do so by the I. T. U. officers), throwing himself on the mercy of his union for duplicity; that the strike was conducted without regard to I. T. U. laws or consent until it was evident that without I. T. U. aid it must fail, when they threw up their hands and called for help; that the Executive Council refused to touch the case, as they had been ignored in its inception, unless they were given carte blanche, which was gladly given, and they saved the day. All of this is susceptible of easy proof.

Another excuse for opposition given is that "Lynch has had the office long enough." I have driven a number of this sort of subterfugists up a tree by showing them that that was not their real reason for opposition, and I found one who was honest enough to acknowledge it when cornered.

"How do you stand on the Hawkes and Lynch contest, Bill?" I asked a friend on a car one evening.

"Oh, I'm for Hawkes," he answered. "Lynch has had the office long enough. I believe in passing the offices around."

"I am sorry to see you take that position," I said, "for that indicates that you are against my friend Garrett for secretary."

"Oh, no; I'm for Garrett," said he.

"I'm glad to hear that, but where does that leave you?" I asked. "Garrett has been in office a good deal longer than Lynch."

"I guess it makes me out a liar," he admitted, "and I guess you'll find every man a liar who gives that reason; but any way I'm for Hawkes."

My friend big Bill Sill takes a joke so good-naturedly that I like to hear one on him occasionally. A week or so ago he told his wife to dispose of a bundle of worn-out clothes that he had put up. A little son who heard the conversation succeeded in disposing of the week's family laundry that afternoon, in the absence of both parents, to a perambulating rag man, for ten cents. Big Bill and a big policeman put in the evening recovering the domestic linen, and Bill has been laughing over it ever since.

Among those who worked hard to bring about the great success of the entertainment of Columbia Union and the Woman's Auxiliary last Friday night none are entitled to greater credit than Mrs. E. H. Thomas. There is always a lot of hard routine work connected with such an enterprise, which to many is distasteful and for which little credit is generally given, and it was to that class of labor that Mrs. Thomas addressed herself. I believe that those who do our work efficiently for us should have their services properly recognized.

If I had but one vote for trustee for the Home it would inevitably go to George P. Nichols, of Baltimore, who has been such a faithful and efficient friend of Columbia Union under all circumstances; but I have two, as two are to be elected. While I have the sincerest admiration for a number of the gentlemen who are candidates and no acquaintance whatever with Thomas McCaffery, of Colorado Springs, the present resident trustee, I recognize that he should be elected, both in the interest of the Home and as a reward for the splendid service he has rendered. We must at times set aside preferences merely dictated by personal friendships and consider the interests to be served.

From the number of reputed Wahnetas who are opposing Mr. Lynch I figure that his enemies have captured the organization.

Let us have the union ballots, local and International, turned upside down once in a while, putting the last letters first. If there is any advantage in being early in the column of candidates (which I don't think), there is no good reason why Abbott should always have it over Ziegler. He has no superior claims based on his cognomen. The names could still be alphabetically arranged and so comply with the law.

The entertainment given in Masonic Temple last Friday night under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary, followed by dancing, was one of the greatest successes of the season, from what I hear, for being a night worker prevented my attending. Not only was the program most enjoyable, but the members of the union and their friends did themselves and the ladies the justice of packing the hall. Nothing will work more for the good of our union than closer social intercourse, especially when we raise money by it.

Mr. Chapin and Mr. Thompson, respectively business manager and foreman of the Post, made a brief visit to the Record room one evening last week, inspecting the improved mechanical devices used in producing our great paper. Mr. Chapin is a practical printer and wants everything that will conduce to good and rapid work, and he has a most efficient subordinate in Mr. Thompson.

"O that mine enemy would write a book" exclaimed the Psalmist. President Lynch has reason to rejoice that his opponent writes a newspaper, for another issue of the Union Printers Bulletin will undo all that has been done for Mr. Hawkes here, and no other city has been worked so thoroughly for him. When a candidate begins to deny things and offer rewards for proof, you've got him on the run, and all you've got to do is to point your finger at him to keep him going.

The three candidates for delegate from the Woman's Auxiliary to the St. Louis convention, Miss Katharine K. Spencer, Mrs. John A. Huston, and Mrs. E. H. But, honestly it is as much as I can do to bring about the results I want in the Columbia Union election.

When there is a measure before Congress in which we are interested there is nothing that can do it more harm and worse prejudice our case than for all sorts of unauthorized persons to run up to the Capitol and insert their augers into every Congressman or Senator with whom they have an acquaintance. This was done on the thirty days' leave bill now hanging high and dry, and has been done every time we have wanted action. If everybody will leave such matters to the authorized parties we will prosper more.

Mr. Gutelius was observed at the weighing-scales the other day, and it was also observed that he is gaining instead of losing. The same may be said of his prospects as a candidate for delegate.

This chapel was well represented at the Woman's Auxiliary entertainment last Friday evening. The program was thoroughly enjoyed and reflected credit both upon the management and the talent employed. There is general agreement that the ladies have located pocket books that will not fail them in any future undertaking.

These paragraphs should not be construed as a "butt in" on territory so universally admitted to be well covered by Mr. King; but in case that gentleman further fails to respond to the popular demand some one with reckless daring will yet rise up and suffer martyrdom rather than that the good people of Specifications shall suffer from inattention.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

First Division.

AUDIETUR!

Place the laurel wreath upon him
Help him now—he's worked for you;
In the days when we were children
Led he the craft so brave and true—
In the olden times so troublous,
Putting self behind him then.

Succoring some and chiding others,
Tenderly he fashioned Men;
Even now, with years upon him,
Even now so grandly leal,
Let's support him, let's elect him—
Everyone, now vote for Steele!

C. L. Williams (Slug 82), has announced himself a candidate for teller.

H. W. Templar (Slug 52), was called to Pennsylvania on Saturday by the sudden death of his brother-in-law.

A. Bruce Bielaski, who acts as Mr. Spottswood's messenger, is a member of Columbia University base ball team, a picture of which recently appeared in the Times.

Capt. Jack Robinson received news on Monday of a serious accident to his aged mother, at her home in Martinsburg, W. Va. Later news states, however, that she is rapidly recovering.

The changing of the dates for holding the civil service examination for compositor came as a surprise to the many "temps" and emergency men employed here. The question seemed to be "why so?"

There is a gentleman on the Night Force connected with the labor department who needs some attention from the front office. The average printer enjoys being buncoed once in a while, but there are some things they draw the line on.

J. N. Cobb (slug 116) is the proud possessor of a handsome new automobile. Mr. Cobb is a thorough lover of out-door life, being an expert with the camera, gun, and fishing tackle. With this new acquisition he is fully equipped to enjoy all of the luxuries of life.

T. C. Parsons, who wishes to represent No. 101 at St. Louis as a down-town delegate, has created a most favorable impression in this division. Mr. Parsons was a member of the down town scale committee, and worked hard and earnestly to bring about the success which attended that committee's efforts.

Here is a problem that will not require as much figuring as finding out Ann's age. If it requires from fifteen to twenty-two years' service before a man can intelligently guide the organization over which he may be elected president, who is responsible for the "present prosperity" of the I. T. U.? Answer. It isn't Lynch.

I trust J. Herbert Broderick, of the Post, has seen a copy of the Union Printers' Bulletin, published at Chicago, in which appears an itemized statement of Mr. Hawkes' expenses as organizer. If he has not it will do him good to look it up, for it show him how an honest man renders his accounts to the organization he represents.

While the great majority of the printers of No. 101 will probably not agree with the able editor of the Washington Post in regard to the retention of our present I. T. U. president, nevertheless I am sure we all feel flattered that the time has arrived when a few of its compositors may shape the course of a great daily newspaper's editorial column.

One of the most interesting characters in the First Division is Mr. B. C. Wright (Slug 141), who attained his 77th birthday anniversary on Wednesday. He is one of the most faithful and constant workers in the room, and from his robust and healthy appearance one would never imagine he had been "digesting pie" eight hours a day for six years. May he be with us many years.

Will the esteemed Washington Post please tell us which of the organizations among those enumerated as having presidents whose terms of office range from 15 to 22 years maintains a magnificent home for its needy members? Which one, Mr. Post man, is superior in intelligence, conservatism, and all that makes up a great organization, to the I. T. U.—the organization that has changed its president several times in the last few years?

Among the last of the delegatorial aspirants to appear in this division was Frank A. Kidd. Somewhere in the Good Book I am told there is a passage which says the first shall be last and the last shall be first. Such being the case it looks like Kidd would carry the "creds." In this connection I wish to say Mr. Kidd has been a hard worker on various committees of the Union. It was due to his untiring efforts and masterly diplomacy that the Typothetæ granted the raise in the down-town scale. This I know, for one of the largest publishers in this city told me it was the opinion of all the Typothetæ members that he was one of the ablest men ever sent to them from No. 101. Mr. Kidd worked hard for the down-town man, and an opportunity to show their appreciation will occur on May 18.

TOPSY.

Third Division.

A certain prominent and shining light of Alley 7 has, it is alleged, "sworn off" using profane language. Now boys, let's all be good."

Frank L. McUmber, of this division, but temporarily assigned to the Proof Room, has been sick with grip, at his home in Langdon, for over a week.

I don't want the Second Division man to think I am jealous of his success in writing up a column for this paper; but in the name of suffering humanity, keep out McPike. He is the limit.

Vice-President Dan C. Vaughan, was around the division leaving his cards a few days ago, and looking smiling and confident. As the boys of thirty years ago used to say about "Dickie" Lingard, "He's little but he's good."

All printers are notified that the subject of his discourse at the Ninth Street Christian Church next Sunday evening, May 1, will be: "Samson and his Exploits; or, The Man Who Resisted Everything But Temptation." It is a real pleasure to hear Rev. Mr. Bagby talk, and when the service is over one may shake hands with many of his brother and sister printers.

Certain anxious individuals who were apprehensive of an unfavorable result to their own scheme should Herzinger conclude to run for vice-president of Columbia Union, and who, previous to the last meeting, approached him with the request that he withdraw his name from the list of candidates, are now attending strictly to business. There are indications that Herzinger will poll a surprisingly large vote, and I think it is not too much to say that he will keep the other fellows guessing.

It was with the air of a winner that Frank Kidd shook hands with us last Monday. Everybody seemed glad to see him and there was vim in the hand clasps which he got from his old friends in the Third. Bret Harte used to call his baby a "venerable impostor" because it had a bald head; now comes Frank Kidd with gray hair. There is reason to believe, however, that notwithstanding his name, Frank Kidd is a man, and that he will keep some of the other men guessing for the next three weeks.

Of all the candidates for delegate presented to our notice perhaps there is none more worthy of the honor than Philip S. Steele, who for over thirty years has worked hard and well as a Union man to better the conditions of his fellow-workmen—sorrowing in their adversity and rejoicing in their prosperity—himself the author of some of the wisest laws ever enacted by the I. T. U. Mr. Steele is a man upon whom every one of us can depend to give the best that is in him to the service of the Union, whether elected delegate or not; and that is the sort of a man we ought to have for a representative.

Night Bill Force.

The mother of W. J. Phillips, of Second Division Annex, is visiting him here from Fall River, Mass.

C. W. Herzinger, candidate for vice-president, went through Tuesday night. He is the most hopeful of success of any candidate we have yet seen.

The rumor committees are now working overtime on the question of when this force will break up, and how many machines are to be put in.

J. T. Herbert, down-town candidate for president, was through Tuesday night. He says, if elected, that there are three offices down town which he thinks he can unionize.

W. L. Gutelius, candidate for delegate, made a good impression on the members of this force. He looks one straight in the eye and appears to be a man of action and determination.

No introductions were needed for Billy Love. As he passed from man to man and alley to alley, it was: "Hello, Billy, this alley is all right for you." He is able, reliable, and has the acquaintance and confidence of the membership.

Thos. E. Doty and E. E. Richards, two expert photographers of this room, took three group pictures of this force on the east steps of the Capitol, Monday. Rarely does any professional work surpass that of these two artists. They excel also in interior work.

Frank A. Kidd, candidate for delegate was highly pleased with his reception in this room. He has an active union record, acting from 1880, when he joined Cincinnati union at 20 years of age. In 1890, when elected as organizer for Chicago Union, No. 16, most of the shops were outside of the union. In three years he succeeded in bringing all in but two, which came in shortly after his term of office expired. He was one of five labor delegates to the conference which organized the American Civic Federation and was its first vice-president, being succeeded by Mrs. Potter Palmer. He has attended many labor conventions, and represented Chicago, No. 16, at Boston. He has served on many of Chicago Union's important committees; was president of the Chicago Central Labor Union, the largest delegate labor body in the world. He has been chairman of our Business Committee and Book and Job Scale Committee, and is now on the Nominations Committee.

Official Gazette.

Save your Union card for April. To be used at election May 18, 1904.

A. J. Arnold has been transferred from the Specification to the Official Gazette.

Andrew Turnbull was incapacitated for work for a couple of days on account of rheumatism in his right arm.

Warning ! ! ! If you value your health, don't allow your wife to take your heavy underclothing away from you.

Have you noticed the delegatorial acrostic? Anna Wilson is the only name that can be properly evolved from the combination of ten names. Rather a good omen; isn't it.

Jos. A. Dreis, Specification Division, has a linotype keyboard on exhibition at his frame—similar to the one at THE TRADES UNIONIST office—which is inexpensive and will give good results.

Hints to voters: When in doubt vote for Miss Wilson. Don't be in doubt; vote for Miss Wilson. If you want to keep informed about how things are going subscribe to THE TRADES UNIONIST.

A number of the employes of this division have been using a copy-holder which is the invention of a member of the Specification chapel (E. W. Edmonston) and, according to their testimony, it seems to fill all the requirements.

Chas. W. Baker, our "original Spess man," has been confined to his home for about a week with inflammatory rheumatism. He is back to work now and says he has no desire to play fat man if it entails so much excruciating pain.

The last meeting of the G. P. O. Veteran's Club was no exception to the rule of excellence which has marked their social meetings. The programme consisted of vocal selections by Mrs. Loomis, recitations by Chaplin Coudon and Miss Essie Shepard, some fine selections on the graphophone by Al. Bowen, and several short addresses. Refreshments were served by the ladies of the G. P. O. Veteran Auxiliary.

At the last meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of Columbia Union the following ladies were nominated for delegate: Miss Katherine Spencer, Mrs. J. A. Huston, and Mrs. E. H. Thomas. As there is no law under which the Auxiliary can proceed to elect its delegates and officers the Laws Committee will present something of that nature at the next meeting for consideration. Miss Josepha Lang withdrew from the Laws Committee and Mrs. H. J. Redfield was appointed to the vacancy thus created. A number of new members were admitted and the officers are hopeful of reaching the required 150 members very soon.

The advertisement solicitor for the programme of the joint entertainment of Columbia Union and the Woman's Auxiliary was so successful in procuring advertisements that there was no room on the programme for the names of the Refreshment Committee. These ladies did good and faithful service and contributed their full share to the success of the most successful entertainment that Columbia Union has given. As near as I could ascertain the following is a list of the ladies who served on the Refreshment Committee: Mrs. John McCormick, chairman; Mrs. Al. Bowen, Mrs. Arthur Webb, Mrs. Harry Wilson, Mrs. Huyler, Mrs. William M. Garrett, and Miss Mamie McCormick.

H. J. REDFIELD.

Bindery Notes.

"Pete" Polk's propensity for turning things down has attracted lots of attention recently.

Fred Whammond is eagerly looking forward to his second honeymoon which begins this month.

Feeney's editorial in The Bookbinder on the "Drink Habit" caused a great deal of comment. "The galled jade winces."

The election of Messrs. Feeney and Fogerty to be delegates to the International convention at St. Paul seems to be very gratifying to all.

Oscar Grant has a very interesting piece of literature which he will be glad to show his friends upon application. It is curious, unique, and satisfying.

A number of the emergency employees from Baltimore took the civil service examination Saturday, with a view to securing a regular appointment.

Bill Brady's excursion into the sewing room bearing the insignia of the Shylock pleased the ladies greatly, and they all are asking "What's his name?"

Col. Bill Glover, who is known as one of the most extensive travelers in the G. P. O., expects to take in the World's Fair, and a large part of the West, this year.

It is announced that Mr. Feeney proposes to give his friends a little treat on Saturday, May 7, at Typographical Temple. He will have some vaudeville artists there to entertain the crowd and refreshments will be served.

One of our "dear brothers" took occasion recently to write an anonymous letter to the Public Printer by which a man lost his position in the office. It must be very gratifying to the anonymous writer to know that a man's family is suffering by reason of his perfidy.

Charley McCarthy has a new boy at his house of whom he is very proud.

We have here given a picture of Charley trying to train him for a position on the Blank Men's team, a position Charley was compelled to resign from because of his incapacity.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

The recent death of Mike Carroll, of Chicago, recalls the Boston convention of the I. T. U. At a meeting of the ex-delegates it was suggested that Martin Witter, of St. Louis, take the chair of the presiding officer. That little axiom of Cavalry General Forrest about getting there first with the most men will apply with equal force to making the right motion at the right moment; so, moving that a secretary be appointed, I naturally drifted into that position. Later a committee was appointed (which consisted of Messrs. Carroll, of Chicago; Ferguson, of New York, and Sutton, of Washington), to poor oil on the troubled waters.

Now comes the lithotype, the invention of W. S. Timmis, claiming to have solved the metal-pot and space-band problem, and announcing its ability to put the vaunted Merganthaler "out of commission." The new device is dual in nature—one section perforating a tape and the other making a mold therefrom. Corrections are made by pasting strips of paper with the corrections thereon over the faulty matter on the transfer paper. When competition shall have become the life of trade, I want to recommend a man on the road—W. H. Stubbs—to the Merganthaler people, to travel from city to city delivering lectures to word-builders, and incidentally sounding the praises of their product.

Making a bluff at straightening the material for the day man, I lean my face against the pane. The vista is a scene of alternating hills and vales of light and shade. As the retina becomes accustomed to the darkness, I outline the gloomy Hotel Kenmore above the rising smoke of an engine on the B. & O. tracks. It requires no strain of a fertile imagination to discover a willowy form descending from a fire-escape thereon—a reminder of the Ayers-Bonine tragedy, a tale untold, forever locked in a woman's breast. That bright mountain rising to the east is the Congressional Library, typical of light and learning; that shadowy valley to the west is Little Italy, its denizens, with sheathed stilleto, dreaming in the shadow of the Capitol dome of a new-found world of Italia's skies and sweethearts. The himalaya holding the center of the stage is the Nation's Capitol, its great wings stretching to the North and the South like the outspread pinions of some giant condor of the Andes. Silent in its majesty the mass of marble teaches history. The ideas for the wings and the symbol of liberty crowning the ensemble were born in the brain of a man who shortly thereafter became recognized as the head and front of the offending in the dismemberment of the Union of States. Under the dome Hope and Ambition meet—a hope realized at the attainment of a place around the council fires of the Nation; an ambition to make that flying leap from First to Sixteenth via Pennsylvania avenue. When Ambition shall blossom and bloom and wither and fade, when Hope, fair child, has perished, relief is at hand. Just follow that long row of lights leading to the Southward. The river lies beyond—when "tinkle!" "tinkle!" It's Mr. Greene's little bell. I have been but a fraction of a second with my face against the pane.

To All Fair-Minded Men.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

The membership of the Woman's Auxiliary to Columbia Typographical Union is composed of the wives, mothers, unmarried daughters and sisters of the members of the union, also of the women members of said union. The membership has nearly reached the hundred mark.

The leading objects of this grand organization are: To promote unionism; to push the label; to visit and extend aid to the sick; to encourage sociability between the families of the union; in fact, to help the printer in every way within their power.

It would undoubtely be a difficult matter to pick out an equal number of men in Columbia Union who are accomplishing more real and permanent good for the order.

It will no doubt surprise a majority of the members of the union to learn that the lady members annually pay into its treasury nearly seven hundred dollars in dues. Considering this fact, and the good work that is being accomplished by the Auxiliary, it is certainly no more than fair and just that the lady candidate for delegate should receive our hearty support. The next convention of the I. T. U. will have social features connected with it, and the presence of one or more ladies will be very desirable.

THE I. T. U. CONVENTION.

Ex-Delegates' Association Planning Trip to St. Louis.

At a meeting on April 3 the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway was selected as the official route of the Ex-Delegates' Association, of Washington, D. C., from Washington City to St. Louis, via Indianapolis or Louisville, at a rate of $21.50 for the round trip from Washington. This rate is on tickets limited to fifteen days, including day of sale. (Tickets with a sixty-day limit will be sold by the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway at $28.35 round trip.) Pullman sleeping-car accommodations as follows: Berths, either upper or lower, $5 each way.

Round-trip rates elsewhere: From New York, $23 25; Philadelphia, $23.25; Baltimore, $23—for fifteen-day tickets.

The Association hopes to carry on the train leaving Washington over the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway on Friday, August 5, at 2.30 p. m., a sufficient number to fill two Pullman sleepers. This train will be due to arrive in St. Louis at 6.45 p. m., Saturday, August 6, the convention opening the following Monday.

The Ex-Delegates' Association extends an invitation to the members of Columbia Union, and ladies and friends, to join the Association on this trip, and also to members of the craft, and their friends, of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and other Eastern cities.

It is desired that applications for tickets, accompanied by amount of fare and sleeping-car accommodations, if desired, be reported at not a later date than August 1. All sums will be placed in the hands of Chas W. Otis, the Treasurer of the Ex-Delegates' Association, who is custodian of the Convention fund, deposited in bank.

The Louisville Strike.

The strike of the job printers in Louisville, Ky., is still on, and some 115 men are out. The I. T. U. has appropriated $500 a week for strike benefits, and as it is now no longer a strike for wages, but a fight between the Typothetæ and the I. T. U., it behooves the members of No. 101 to see to it that no men leave Washington, after Congress adjourns, for Louisville. Advertisements have appeared in the local press for "union or non-union printers," and the purpose of the Typothetæ is to force "open shop."

Mr. Albert E. Hill, whom many will recall as Mr. Bramwood's right hand man and assistant here during the late convention, is in charge of the situation at Louisville, and a better man could not be found. Mr. Lynch and the Executive Council of the I. T. U. are determined to win this strike, and acted at once and called the Typothetæ's bluff of a half millions dollars to force "open shop" in Louisville by opening the I. T. U. treasury to the members of No. 10.

Errata.

In our last issue the sketch of Titus F. Ellis, candidate for delegate, with portrait, contained a line transposed to read that Mr. Ellis was "born [in Maysville, Ky., and joined the union] in Aberdeen, Ohio; learned his trade [in St. Louis, Mo., his adopted home]." It should have read: "born in Aberdeen, Ohio; learned trade in Maysville, Ky., and joined union in St. Louis, Mo.

The Pastoral Symphony.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

In your issue of February 18, Mr. Belcher, in his correspondence, undertook to correct Miss Berenice Thompson, who, in an article in the Post on "Songs of Richard Strauss," attributed the authorship of "The Pastoral Symphony" to Beethoven, he claiming that Handel, and not Beethoven, wrote it. I saw his item and scribbled a paragraph correcting the gentleman's erroneous statements, and handed it to one of your correspondents, who wrote a eulogistic introduction to it and had it printed under a separate heading. I wish, however, to "deny the soft impeachment" contained therein to the effect that I "stand high in Washington musical circles as a teacher and critic." I have fiddled some in orchestras, such as the New York Amicitia and Georgetown of this city, done a little violin teaching, and wrote a bit on musical subjects. That's all.

Two weeks after my paragraph appeared Mr. Belcher made a scathing onslaught on the "anonymous writer," in which he displayed much temper and sarcasm, and quite a paucity of knowledge of his subject. To use the euphemistic parlance of the printshop, he "went in the air." He says in one place: "The editor set up a man of straw for me to knock down." "My poor, deluded friend," he dubs me at another place in his eructation. He could not find the word "eruditeness" in his spelling book and said when I used the word "I meant well, but didn't know." He wound up by again asseverating that "Haendel" was the author of the Pastoral Symphony. I was about to let the whole matter rest there when I saw an item from Mr. Newsom in a recent issue stating that Mr. Belcher had shown him documents in proof of his contentions. This was too much, so I decided to ask the editors of THE TRADES UNIONIST to allow me the privilege to reply somewhat at length and explain my position.

First, with regard to the word "eruditeness" the gentleman will find it if he will look in the "Century." While on this dictionary question I would state in passing that I looked up the word "belcher" and find it means "one who ejects wind from the stomach."

But let me state the case as it stands. On February 14, Miss Thompson, in her article in the Post said: "As far as the definite expression of ideas in music is concerned, he [Strauss] has not gone an inch beyond Beethoven in the Pastoral Symphony." Notice the word "the." There is but one great musical work known as "the" Pastoral Symphony.

Mr. Belcher followed on the 18th, in THE TRADES UNIONIST with this statement: "However, I will risk saying that Berenice Thompson * * * was wrong in saying that Beethoven was the author of the Pastoral Symphony. It was written by Haendel, the greatest composer of oratorio that ever lived." There is no ambiguity here. It is a positive assertion that the writer in the Post is wrong. In his reply to my paragraph he endeavored to wriggle out of the above by introducing the question of the author of the word symphony, in which he also displays absolute ignorance of his subject when he endeavors to maintain that the word originated with Handel and that the symphony is a vocal as well as an instrumental composition. Hear what Mr. Henry T. Finck, one of the best musical authorities, says in his articles on "The Evolution of the Modern Orchestra" in "Music of the Modern World," edited by Anton Seidl: "It is necessary to seek for the next steps in the evolution of the modern orchestra in connection with the history of the symphony—a form of composition which did not exist in the days of Bach and Handel." How is that, Mr. Belcher? Mr. Finck continues: "The reader doubtless knows that the word symphony originally meant any prelude or interlude in an opera, oratorio, or cantata. In the course of time these interludes were separated from the opera (where nobody listened to them) and developed on their own account as concert pieces. The first musician, so far as known, who wrote such independent symphonies was Allegri, who died in 1652. His successors in his line—Bach, Stamitz, Cannabich, Abel, and others—also used flutes, oboes, and horns. These composers may be called remote ancestors of the modern symphony, but its father was Haydn, who first gave it its typical form in four separate movements and taught the various instruments to speak a language of their own."

Moore's Encyclopedia of Music says: "At present the word symphony is applied to overtures and other instrumental compositions consisting of a variety of movements and designed for a full band."

So, you see, Mr. Belcher is again wrong in stating that the symphony is a vocal as well as instrumental composition.

With regard to spelling Handel's name I will simply say that none of the modern histories, newspapers, or encyclopedias, so far as I know, spell the name with either the diphthong or diæresis (Mr. Belcher calls them "dotted a's").

I trust I have made it clear that Miss Berenice Thompson was correct in mentioning Beethoven as the composer of The Pastoral Symphony; that in olden times the word symphony was used in place of interlude or prelude; that the symphony is an instrumental composition; that "Haendel" is obsolete; that there is such a word as erudi.eness; that the symphony did not originate with Handel, and that "my poor, deluded friend" Belcher needs to read up.

Anna C. WiLson

Mr. "Swift" McCann should remember that "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

Titus Ellis was over to see our new men before they had fairly got their bearings. Titus is a mighty persuasive man.

Don't forget Whitehead. Mr. Whitehead is an ideal candidate, because he is a man we can depend upon to "get there" when he goes after anything.

Dan Vaughan was with us again last week. He took time to hold a heart to heart talk with each member of the division. Look out for Vaughan.

Candidate T. Frank Hall thinks the following is a better acrostic than that made from the name of Miss Wilson and printed on the programme of the Woman's Auxiliary entertainment.

"David and His Sling; or, How to Become Giant Killers," will be the subject for next Sunday evening's discourse at the Ninth Street Christian Church. All printers are welcome.

Frank Hall is getting the bulge on the other candidates. Masquerading as the South Washington Hearst Association, his supporters held a mass meeting last Monday evening at "Frank Hall's summer garden," 7th and K streets S. W., at which there were music and refreshments. That is what puts ginger into the campaign.

On Monday last, upon his return to his desk after a severe illness, Mr. J. M. A. Spottswood, Assistant Foreman of Printing, was the recipient of two magnificent bunches of American Beauty roses from his friends, one commemorative of his entrance into the service in 1858 and the other of his assuming the position of Assistant Foreman of Printing in 1873.

Government Printing Office Council No. 211, National Union, will give a grand open meeting on Monday, May 23 (hall to be decided upon), to celebrate "Natioual Union Day." We have the assurance of Captain Brian that it will be the finest entertainment given in Washington this winter. Members will each be given two tickets free of charge, and they are urged to bring with them some friend who is eligible for membership.

Thos. L. McEneany, of this division, mourns the loss of his brother, Joseph, who was drowned off Shanghai, China, April 23. The deceased was a private in the U. S. Marine Corps on the Monadnock. While the vessel was at anchor in the harbor he and a comrade went sailing, and the boat capsizing, he was drowned. He was a member of the Fourth Regiment U. S. Immunes during the Spanish War. Tommy has the sympathy of the whole division in his loss.

The Third Division now carries 122 names upon its roll, the largest number in its history. On Monday morning we were deluged with new men, 48 being assigned to frames. One of these, a temporary man, was dropped that night. On Tuesday morning there were two additions to the force, making a total increase of 49. It is safe to say that this force will be able to take care of the Copyright Catalogue with three takes apiece or less; other matter in proportion.

Secretary Garrett has many friends who want to see him elected again. There are many among us, however, who would prefer seeing a new man in the office, provided a worthy candidate can be found. Such a candidate is George A. Seibold of the Times chapel, a gentleman who would, if elected, serve the Union with faithfulness. He is thoroughly capable of filling the office of secretary in a creditable manner, and commands the confidence and respect of a large circle of friends.

Mr. Burd G. Rapp, until recently an emergency man connected with this division, is about to start a labor paper in York, Pa. Mr. Rapp has had considerable experience as a newspaper man, having been connected for ten years with the Harrisburg Evening News, and for about a year published the Advocate of Labor in the same city. He has considerable influence in labor matters in Dauphin County, Pa., and has every prospect of making a success of his venture. Mr. Rapp has our best wishes.

With the passing of the Night Force and the adjournment of Congress, three of our men who had been transferred to the Proof Room, have once more made their appearance in our midst. They are Edward J. Hall, Frank L. McUmber, and Jack Childress. Mr. Childress has been assigned to frame 75, and has already begun booming Miss Wilson; Mr. McUmber is unfortunately confined to his home by a severe attack of grip, while Mr. Hall once more resumes business at frame 17. The latter had just concluded several tours of duty at the Spess before he went to the "brainery," and had previously worked in various parts of the office, acquitting himself creditably wherever posted. Such representatives are a source of pride to the division.

Two weeks ago there appeared in the Second Division column a paragraph which the reader was told to lay to McPike. This paragraph was a sort of mixture in which the names of the candidates for the various offices within the gift of the Union were freely interspersed, from which by a superhuman effort of the imagination one might be able to extract amusement. In referring to McPikes effusion I was so unfortunate as to use language which offended that gentleman. I desire to disclaim all intention of offending Mr. McPike, and to withdraw, so far as I may, the objectionable language. Being informed, however, that my friend from the Second has vented his feelings in verse, in the form of a communication to this paper, in which various awful things are done to me, I may be pardoned for venturing to hope that he will now see the error of his ways and desist henceforth.

The friends of Miss Anna Wilson state that they are ready to wager odds that she will be elected delegate to the I. T. U. by an unprecedent majority.—Evening Star, April 25.

There is unquestionably a wave of sentiment sweeping over the members of Columbia Union in favor of Miss Wilson that will, I firmly believe, result in her triumphant election. As a matter of right and justice, the large contingent of women in our Union should be accorded representation. They have voted loyally for the men in the past years and have done yeomen's service for the cause of unionism without thought of reward. The time has now come when we as voters have the opportunity to show our appreciation of their long years of faithful and unselfish service. We can do this better by electing one of their number as delegate than in any other way. The candidate they present is one who has been, and is, a worker in the Union and in the Woman's Auxiliary, holding honorable and useful office in each organization, and giving much of her time and all of her influence to further the causes dear to the heart of every true Unionist. A vote for Miss Wilson will go far to encourage the Woman's Auxiliary of Columbia Union to persevere in the noble work which it has undertaken in order to assist us in the maintenance of Union doctrines, Union practices, and Union influence throughout the city. While I believe we have a singularly able body of candidates so far as the men are concerned, I am confronted with the undeniable fact that I cannot vote for each of them. But I can and will vote for Miss Wilson for the reasons I have given, and in my opinion it is the duty of every fair-minded man in the Union to do the same.

The following letter from a resident of the Home to an old member of the Union, and written with an earnestness that is convincing of its sincerity, is submitted for publication:

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., April 19, 1904.

FRIEND BILLY:—This is about the last that I shall ever write, as I find it difficult to express what few ideas that run through my shattered mind. In a short time the election for delegates will be on hand, and two Trustees, the election of one of whom is of vital importance to the welfare of all the inmates of the Home. Mr. McCaffery has been so long trustee and discharged the duties with so much fidelity and ability that it is vital to secure his reappointment. You must see the necessity of a resident Trustee, who can always be on hand to look after the conduct of affairs here. He is regarded by all as being the man for the place, having a large amount of capacity, and, what is of more importance, fidelity to the interests of the Home, and I earnestly request you to use you influence in trying to have him retained. By doing so you will confer a lasting obligation on almost everybody at the Home.

My health is bad, and my mind, what little I ever had, is much impaired.

Always your friend and well-wisher,

And the dust of a winner, at 40 to 4.

Sir Samuel Sims saw sweet Sara Sampson swimming. Suddenly she seemed sinking. Sir Samuel stood stunned. Striding seaward, spurning shingle, Sir Samuel swiftly swam Sarawards. Sir Samuel skillfully supported swooning Sara. Swimming shorewards Sir Samuel successfully succored Sara. Seeming somewhat shaky, Sir Samuel sampled some spirits—special Scotch. Sara saw Sir Samuel's self-sacrificing spirit; Sir Samuel saw Sara's sweetness. Sir Samuel soon sought Sara. Striding slowly, Sara sighed softly. Sir Samuel seemed speechless.

"Say something, Sir Samuel," said Sara.

"Say Sam, Sara," said Sir Samuel.

Sara, smiling shyly, softly said "Sam."

"Sara—Sally!" stammered Sir Samuel. "Sweet Sara—sweetheart!"

Sara solemnly surrendered.

THE British expedition into Tibet is called a "political mission." It follows, of course, that it is not a military expedition except in a "constructive" sense, and that the Tibetans killed by COLONEL YOUNGHUSBAND'S force are only constructively dead.

IT was stated in a London dispatch the other day that KING EDWARD having left some cherry stones on his plate at a public function, as soon as he left the table a crowd of American ladies secured them as relics. Of course such incidents are a source of considerable insular glee, but in this case the last laugh may once more prove the best laugh after all. Those precious seeds, planted in American soil, may sprout and develop into hardy cherry trees, recalling the story of the man who, through his able assistance in thrashing a certain predecessor of EDWARD, did so much toward making anglomania possible.

THE fact that there have been no widespread and serious labor troubles this year is a source of great satisfaction among all classes. In the comments regarding this encouraging state of affairs we do not think sufficient credit is always given to trades unionism. One of the strongest arguments in favor of organized labor is that in various ways it tends to suppress the dangerous spirit of restlessness which is inseparable from large bodies of unorganized men with real or fancied grievances which they think they can no longer tolerate. Unions are only human institutions after all, and are liable to err. But in the matter of strikes and boycotts and lockouts, the union, even at its worst, is a Sunday-school picnic compared with the mobs which would periodically threaten society in the great modern centers of population if labor were unorganized. And so we find the union in the spring of 1904 meeting the employer more than half way in the interest of industrial quiet and the general welfare. Of course this does not mean that we have seen the last of unnecessary industrial commotion, but it does indicate that labor and capital have more respect for each other than they ever had before and encourages the hope that prejudice and bitterness on both sides will diminish more and more in the future.

IT is easy to understand the feelings of the local bar regarding the appointment of another outsider to the Supreme bench of the District of Columbia. No doubt among their number are many able gentlemen qualified by temperament and wide experience, as well as by a thorough knowledge of the law, to dispense justice to the satisfaction of the legal fraternity, not to mention the community at large. We are accordingly sorry that some local luminary was not selected for the position. At the same time we hardly think the lawyers of the District will do themselves credit if they specially protest in this instance. So long as the District is without suffrage it will be to a very considerable extent governed by outsiders or quasi-outsiders. But although our present form of Government may not be strictly according to the spirit of free institutions it is literally constitutional. And there are those who claim that the District, considering its relation to the General Government, is better off without suffrage. Probably a large majority of our lawyers are of this way of thinking. Such being the case, they should accept the natural outcome of non-representative government with professional good grace, and if they think they don't exactly like the manner in which local officials are selected there is nothing to prevent them from forming a suffrage club and lending their powerful influence to an effort for the re-enfranchisement of the inhabitants of the District.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

While cleaning house the other day, preparatory to moving, Zach Jenkins came across a copy of the "Souvenir of the Fortieth Annual Session of the International Typographical Union, Philadelphia, Pa., June 13 to 18, 1892," which he submitted for my inspection. It is a well-printed and more than usually interesting specimen of the publications usually issued by the cities in which I. T. U. conventions are held, containing full-page portraits of President William B. Prescott, who bears little resemblance at present, in his robustness, to the slender youth then portrayed; Secretary W. S. McClevey, George W. Childs, A. J. Drexel, President George Chance, ex-President Ira Somers, and W. S. Waudby, now a prominent candidate for Commissioner of Labor; vignetted pictures of the officers of the Union, and groups of the reception committee and the ex-Delegates' Association; illustrations of the noted public institutions of the city, etc.

Among the literary features are "The International Typographical Union," being a rayzumay of the proceedings of previous conventions; "The Childs-Drexel Home for Union Printers," by August Donath; "History of Typographical Union, No. 2," by George Chance; "The Drexel Institute of Art, Science, and Industry;" "The Ex-Delegates' Association," with a list of members, among which is my friend John Crowe; "The Philadelphia Typographical Society," by William F. Lacey; "Old Liberty Bell," being the Declaration of Independence set up in type to represent the famous old bell; "Sketch of the City of Philadelphia," by C. S. Roray; "Something of Interest to Printers," a statistical article by William S. Waudby; "The MacKellar System for Measuring Type Composition," by Wm. B. MacKellar; "The Rastall; "Philadelphia Stereotypers' Union, No. 7;" "Our Nomadic Brethren," by Joseph C. Gibbs; "The Apprenticeship Question," by Dominick O'Connor, and "The Typographical Athletic Association," by W. T. M.

Of poetic effusions there are Eugene H. Munday's "Memorial Poem," read at the dedication of the Printers' Home, May 12, 1892; "Before and After the Invention of Printing," by William J. Galt; "Some Points in Our Make-up," by Thomas Gravell, and "The Song of the Type," by Ernest Lacy.

It is well preserved, except the cover, and is an interesting memento.

The following echo of the late Night Bill Force is handed to me, and I pass it along:

SANDBAGGERS.

As on through life's journey you go day by day
Sandbaggers you meet at each turn of the way.
The first on the list is Wallace, James K.;
The next one to name would be Bowden, I'd say;
Then Singleton, Shorty, and John Smith in turn,
And even Fred Grose is beginning to learn;
Then comes Doc Horen, in a class by himself;
For sandbagging proper has us all skinned to death;
Then Stidham, and Burchfield, and Werneke, too—
As sandbagging artists their equals are few;
Then Tanner and Broadnax, a mighty good pair—
If they ain't throwing sand they are spouting hot air.
Then there is Langford, always in prime—
When it comes to the sandbag he works overtime;
Then Jere O'Connell, and Fuhrman, and Pat—
Just hang up the bag and they punch at that;
Then Captain Kinnaird, with his stereotyped smile—
When bill proofs are plenty he sandbags awhile;
Then Tommy and Burgess I must not forget—
When others are through they are sandbagging yet;
Nor Owen L. Carter, on whom I've a hunch
As the worst of sandbaggers of the whole crummy bunch;
And last, but not least, is good-natured Crump—
To beat him sandbagging takes a h—l of a hump.

Among the ladies of the Woman's Auxiliary who especially distinguished themselves by their efforts in the interest of the late entertainment is Mrs. John A. Huston, who, among other feats showing energy and tact, sold over a hundred tickets in the Record room—as many as there were employees. Mrs. Huston is one of the candidates, in the remarkably good-natured campaign that is on in the Auxiliary, for delegate to St. Louis, and is one of the warmest supporters of Miss Gordon for president of the National Auxiliary, notwithstanding an erroneous rumor that Mrs. Huston would be a candidate herself for that office if elected a delegate. The other candidates are Mrs. E. H. Thomas and Miss Katherine K. Spencer.

Joe Hamilton, who formerly worked in the Record and other divisions of the G. P. O., dropped in to see the boys one night last week. He is now a bronzed and sturdy farmer down the Potomac forty or fifty miles, and he says he has a farm that he wouldn't sell for four times what he paid for it and that he doesn't want any more printing in his. He said the advent of machines determined him to get out of the business some years ago and that he availed himself of the earliest opportunity. He is a brother-in-law of William E. ("Kid") Shields, now of Denver, who has spent considerable time with him on his farm.

President James M. Lynch, whom I have heretofore mentioned as successfully using his good offices to secure the unionizing of the stereotyping departments of the Chicago newspapers, after their disastrous strike of six years ago, recently received the following from the secretary of Chicago Stereotypers' Union, No. 4, I. S. and E. U.:

At the last regular meeting of Stereotypers' Union, No. 4, I. S. & E. U., I was instructed to extend the sincere thanks of this union to you for your efforts in obtaining an interview between the Publishers' Association of Chicago and our Union, and, after the conference, for your help in straightening out the various offices under their control, thereby enabling us to make an agreement with the publishers in regard to unionizing their stereotype rooms in this city, which was consummated last week. Again thanking you for your kind offices in our behalf, we remain etc.

The great advantage of having a man of the ability of Mr. Lynch at the head of our International organization is better appreciated as it is being better understood, and in his candidacy for reelection he is growing in strength every day, notwithstanding the campaign of vituperation Mr. Hawkes' friends are making against him. Alert, but conservative, he is a safe man to have at the helm, and he has the respect of the business men with whom his position has brought him in contact.

As it seemed to be well understood that the night forces would break up last Saturday, the candidates for delegate were unusually active during the past week among the night hawks. Miss Anna Wilson deferred her visit until Saturday night, when she made a thorough canvass, with the result that she will undoubtedly get a pretty nearly a solid vote. Her election is assured.

Mr. Whitehead received most flattering assurances, and he will doubtless get at least nine-tenths of all the votes. He will certainly be one of Miss Wilson's colleagues.

There were very few votes in the night forces of which Mr. Vaughan was not already assured, and he went through and secured those. It will be impossible to beat him.

Mr. Steele has always been a favorite with us, and his recent visits have brought confirmation of the fact. He will be a delegate.

That Mr. Kidd will receive practically the full vote of the night forces, scattered they now are, is evident to any one who has seen the receptions he received. He has a fine residence on Easy street.

Mr. Hall did not need to make his final visit to feel assured of his practically unanimous following in the bill and Record rooms, He will be eligible to membership in the Exes' Association next year.

Mr. Gutelius probably has more warm friends and assured votes among the night workers than any other candidate. He is as good as elected right now.

Mr. Ellis has good reason for his confidence in his election. There is a feeling that he should lead the ticket, and he undoubtedly will. Uncle Joe Jackson shall not be disappointed.

The down-town candidates did not neglect us.

Mr. Parsons, at all his visits, has made such a favorable impression that there is no doubt that he will carry the night forces almost solid. He will worthily represent the down-towners at St. Louis.

Mr. Knapp is recognized as the best representative the down-town people have ever put up and their choice will undoubtedly be ratified by those of the late night workers. He will be elected easily.

I have at least carried out my idea of turning the alphabet upside down. The other candidates will have to await another issue to have their horoscopes cast.

* * * *

At the break-up of the Record last Saturday night the boys indulged in a song or two (to render the parting less sad, though there are one or two voices among them that might be useful in huckstering), which Mr. Berg broke into with a brief speech:

Gentlemen: We have been very successful this session in getting out the Record, and to no one is the credit due more than to you. I want to express my thanks to each and every one of you for your faithful efforts.

(That was about the way I caught it.) Whereupon they broke out with—

For he's a jolly good fellow,
For he's a jolly good fellow,
For he's a jolly good fellow,
Which nobody can deny—

at which Mr. Berg retired to the cage and held his fingers in his ears until it appeared the agony was over. Within my thirty years' experience and observation there has never been a smoother working of the Record machinery, and few in which, for the past ten days at least, there were greater demands made upon and responded to by the men.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Post Chapel.

Topsy-turvy—that's all.

J. Louis Ferber, bank man, has moved again.

It appears that Mr. Hawkes is now holding a salaried office in Philadelphia Typographical Union, No. 2.

Edward Osborne, foreman of the stereotyping room, is seriously ill at his home, 618 Massachusetts avenue nothwest.

The Times and Star chapels are sure winners this year—delegate and alternate, not to mention some other things possible. Will the Post be in line next year?

A Hawkes lieutenant, member of this chapel, told me I was a poor politician. That's why I did not contribute last week. I am slowly convalescing from the shock.

If we can locate the compositors who "shape the course of a great daily newspaper's editorial column" we will "seek" them onto our business manager and see if they can persuade him to put a skylight in the composing room.

No wonder the Post chapel has been so successful in the matter of having winning candidates for delegate. The esteemed nameless gives a few of our members credit for shaping "the course of a great daily newspaper's editorial column."

Peter Embser furnished much merriment a few days ago when he came to work rigged out in a new bicycle uniform and bright red stockings. All hands took a whirl at him, but Pete is too good-natured to show ill temper on such occasions.

The Chicago Union Printers' Bulletin was kind enough to write me a personal letter informing me that a small communication I had forwarded would be published later on. In commenting on a four-line item taken from my notes in THE TRADES UNIONIST they devoted a column of their valuable space. Such is fame.

Carlos B. Tomlin reads a certain Chicago publication, the editor of which will, if he reads last week's TRADES UNIONIST, recognize the truthfulness of a Washington communication he has on file. Mr. Tomlin has a young and studious brother who is employed in the Post composing room, who will in a few years be known as T. Harrington Tomlin, M. D.

It will be no news to members of the Post chapel to hear that T. C. Parsons dropped in to see us Sunday night. "Spadge," as he is familiary known to everybody down-town, long ago formed the habit of coming to see us on Sunday nights, and, although now a candidate for delegatorial honors, his manner is the same as in years gone by. Any votes his opponent may get in this chapel will indeed be complimentary.

The Chicago Union Printers' Bulletin calls my attention to some itemized bills of Mr. Hawkes. I note that he receives $5 salary and $3 hotel expenses per day, besides a few other minor incidentals. It will not take long, at that rate, to spend the I. T. U. money No. 2 is using. Philadelphia has a number of quite respectable hotels whose rates are more reasonable. The Bulletin is a good itemizer, however.

MANILA TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION, NO. 626,
Manila, P. I., March 22, 1904.

To the members of the Post Chapel:

I have the honor to thank you, in the name of this Union, for the copy of your souvenir received sometime ago. It occupies a conspicuous place where most of our members may see it often, i. e., on the walls of the composing room of the Bureau of Printing, and is greatly appreciated, especially by those who came directly from Washington to Manila.

Wishing your chapel a prosperous year, I am, Fraternally yours,
GEO. H. PATTERSON, Secretary.

"Mr. Hawkes has never visited a union that has not been materially benefited by his presence." There is one, at least. According to his own words he failed to accomplish any good at Lorain, Ohio. In his report he says: "The union was having trouble over a new scale. The union was in a peculiar condition, and I decided it was best to make haste slowly. President Lynch was in Toronto, and, intending coming by way of Cleveland, I requested him to stop in Lorain on his way. My message miscarried, but later Organizer Brady visited Lorain and adjusted the matter." This, in a measure, may justify the larger sum allowed Mr. Brady for expenses.

First Division.

James Broadnax, on returning to day work submitted the following for the benefit of his alley mates:

No more they'll skin our cases
While we're asleep in bed;
A smile adorn our faces
The "Cascarets" are dead.

"I wonder what Bloomer will say this week?"

The last few days of Congress were mighty strenuous.

T. M. Donn has joined the force of imposers in this division.

Jas. K. Wallace is holding down the make-up bank in front of the cage.

Will H. Chase, John Greene, and L. P. Kenney have been assigned to the "Y."

There's something wrong. There hasn't been a candidate around for at least a day.

W. Frank Estep and Carlin Drake have enrolled themselves as students at the linotype school.

There is one sad thing about the breaking up of the night force. There is absolutely nobody to put the blame on to.

James Monroe Kreiter got on the firing line again last week. After all it was only a reproduction of the Typographical Journal.

If the gentlemen who are discussing The Pastoral "Symphony" will change it to "symposium" the subject will be much more touching.

Our force is now composed of 1 foreman, 1 in charge of the Y, 21 make-ups, 9 imposers, and 151 compositors. This is a tip for candidates.

J. R. Charles, who labored all winter on Slug 14, left on Monday for some port in West Virginia, where he will play ball this summer.

Pard Bloomer much prefers the Lynch to the Hawkes campaign literature. Pard has always shown marked preference for the dead.

Jimmie Weaver is back at the mines again. As charge d'affairs of the rule cases during Frank Lloyd's absence he was a howling success.

The regulars who found amusement in watching for the flag to go down on Thursday, are reminded of the fact that the "temps" failed to see the joke.

J. Herbert Broderick is achieving some notoriety by his opposition to Mr. Hawkes. Mr. Broderick is the gentleman who generally lets forth a cry of delight at the mention of machines for the G. P. O.

The callow youth who butted in on nominations day butted out in THE TRADES UNIONIST of last week. From what I observed on nomination day I am inclined to think he will never suffer from nervous prostration.

Will my friend H. S. Sutton please tell us what brand he smoked on the night he pressed his nose to the window pane? It was beautiful, Maud, beautiful in the extreme. But I must draw the line on that willowy form coming down the fire escape, and the Dago with the unsheathed stiletto.

Looking up expense accounts is getting to be mighty interesting business. Organizer Brady charges I. T. U. $3 per day for hotel expenses at Loraine and Hamilton, Ohio. The Hotel Guide doesn't give a hotel in either place where the rate is over $2 per day. But probably Brady needed the money.

To give the names of all those recently relieved from duty in this division is almost impossible, but I will venture the assertion that it was with considerable reluctance that Foreman Bowen parted with his "temps." Throughout the hustle and bustle of a busy session of Congress they have been found willing and obliging and always at their post. Those of us who are left wish them well, and hope that when their names are again placed on the roll it may be without that little indicator—the star.

I am glad James Monroe Kreiter brought up the subject of organizers last week for it reminds me that some few months ago a gentleman by the name of Brady, one of President Lynch's pet organizers, made an official trip into Ohio. Later his expense account for that trip was published in the Journal. The account coming to the notice of one Mr. Turk, of Indianapolis, brought to his mind the fact that on two of those days charged up as being in Ohio, Mr. Turk had conversed with him in Indianapolis. This fact he brought to the attention of President Lynch. The reply of a man interested in his organization would have been that the matter would be immediately looked into. But the reply of Mr. Lynch was that he never questioned the accounts of "his" organizers. These are published facts, and show that the lack of method of conducting affairs of the I. T. U. demand a change.

Andromeda in ancient days
Ne'er shrank with fear from seas or bays;
Nor did she cringe when shackled fast,
And all untrammeled, stood free at last.

What can be said these latter days?
It's nothing else than loudest praise.
Let her who runs may clearly read
Some words of praise and loving meed.
O printer men, both short and tall,
Name ANNA WILSON, "That is all."

Union Smoking Tobacco.

If you love a good pipe smoke we would recommend the new combination package—Gold Crumbs and Queen Quality. It is union-made and made under healthful and good conditions. The name of the house placing this tobacco on the market is a synonym for fair dealing—The F. R. Penn Tobacco Co. Give it a trial, and insist on your dealer handling it for you.

Second Division.

BELCH AGAIN, BELCHER.

Brother Belcher, the squelcher, has belched out a plot
To get rid of McPike and his "rhythmical rot,"
And, if well works the scheme, there'll be reason to hope
His own "limit" he'll reach without aid of a rope,
Though what McPike did to tap his "hot air"
Is a problem we're forced to give up in despair;
Still, if the belching of Belcher brings ease to his pain,
And soda and pepsin are too much of a strain
On his "innards," and diet and air all in vain,
We're quite willing, indeed, to have him squelch us again;
For, to be candid and straight, we're the "limit" to strike
When Belcher, the squelcher, wants to poke fun at McPIKE.

J. H. Babcock is now of this force.

Forty-six came over from the night side Monday. With the 44 old compositors, there is now a force of 115 in this room in all.

Lem Miller has the sympathy of his many friends all over the office in the loss of his son, age 33, who died last Monday at Brentwood.

At the request of the former correspondent, and several members of this division, I will hereafter endeavor to report events from this room. Please hand in items to slug 38.

All of the late transfers do not seem to have proven satisfactory, as some have made exchanges. One trusty who was sent to the case is reported as having not gone to work yet "because his expenses are greater than he can earn there" and must receive more pay.

State Branch.

Real estate in Langdon is looking up.

Every member of this chapel will vote for—guess!

Charles S. Heinline has blossomed out with his usual brilliancy.

"To unionize down-town offices" seems to strike a very responsive chord in this baliwick.

We have had our usual reminder that Memorial Day is drawing near. Everybody contributed.

The daily consular report was cut down from 16 to 8 pages, necessitating a reduction in the force.

William Rebuschatis' little daughter is just recoveriag from a nine weeks' siege of whooping cough.

Horatio Barnum left for New York State last Thursday to spend his leave among relatives and friends.

Chas. E. Staunton, was transferred on Thursday to the main office, going back to the Fourth Division.

Frank M. Hatley has been inquiring what kind of tobacco plants cigars grow on. He thinks of raising some.

Our chairman, Wm. H. Duling, has been holding copy for the past couple of weeks, while a sore thumb has been recuperating.

C. G. Koonce and G J. McLain, of the Fifth Division, have been helping us through a rush of work for the past two weeks. Mr. McLain returned to the main office last Monday morning and Mr. Koonce on Thursday morning

John Browne, who has been employed at this branch for the past five years, was transferred last Wednesday morning to the main office, going to the First Division. Mr. Browne left us with regret, as he was a popular fellow and will be missed by his late co workers.

One of our fisherman, who has always made brave efforts but never caught any fish, recently spiked our guns of sarcasm by coming into the office one evening with about 400 nice perch, and every one had fish for supper and breakfast, too. One of the other boys went along to bait the hook for him. Thus doth the worm turn.

Night Bill Force.

Mr. Ross went to the Proof Room.

Messrs. Greene and Burnett went to the First.

Charley Holmes, candidate for treasurer, went to the Second.

Zach Jenkins says working in the Proof Room is like being on leave.

The largest day force on record is now employed in this mammoth office.

We notice some of the late proof-readers now performing with stick and rule.

Thos. E. Doty, who took the pictures at the Capitol, is on Slug 28, Second Division.

R. P. Piehoff had the distinction of getting the last take, with an all "O" mark Saturday night.

Last Saturday night, after a run of two years and eight months the Night Bill Force disbanded.

The best of good will prevailed throughout the session and it was with feelings of regret that we parted.

The members of this late force Monday invaded the Second, Third, and Fifth Divisions to such an extent as to outnumber those already there.

In assigning the various members of his big force to their new positions, Mr. Young took occasion to thank them for the intelligent and excellent services during the past session and they could all work for him next year if he had the hiring to do.

Any one who has gazed out the south windows at night and meditated, while making out the different objects outlined on the sky or indicated by flickering lights, will thoroughly enjoy Mr. Sutton's reverie, or moment in dreamland, in his items last week.

A New Enterprise.

The Union Investment Company, a corporation in which a number of prominent members of our craft are interested, has established a branch office over the cigar store of William J. Reilly, 735 North Capitol street. The subscription for stock has more than exceeded expectations. It is stated that the books for the sale of stock will probably close about June 1. From the report of business done up to date this stock will soon be above par. The company has limited the number of shares for sale and it may be well for those having money to invest to consider this enterprise.

ALLIED BUILDING TRADES.

Meeting of May 3, 1904.

The regular weekly meeting of the Council of Allied Building Trades of the Central Labor Union was called to order at the usual hour by Chairman Wells.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Hod Carriers announcing change in the date of their open meeting from May 5 to May 11, and inviting the delegates to be present. The chair asked that all delegates be present at this meeting and assist the Hod Carriers in their effort to maintain the principles of trade unionism.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Delegate Daly reported from the Central Labor Union that the name of Hecht & Co., had been removed from the unfair list.

Delegate Ratigan reported that the agreement prepared by the Council to submit to builders, contractors, etc., had been ratified.

The Business Agent made his report, which was accepted.

CALL OF UNIONS.

Under call of Unions to submit business, thirty-four delegates from twenty-two Unions answered to roll call.

Stone Laborers reported progress on Barnes Hospital at Soldiers Home.

Hoisting Engineers asked that a committee of three be appointed to visit Thompson & Starin Co., and endeavor to have them employ union engineers. The request was granted, and the chair appointed Delegates Ratigan, Nothnagel, and Lewis.

Hod Carriers reported that they had agreed to furnish men on the Ruppert job on K street Northwest, but that the conditions imposed upon them by the contractor were such that they had to refuse to work on the job, and asked that the matter be referred to the Executive Committee. It was so ordered.

Pipe Coverers reported having effected a satisfactory settlement on the telephone building.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The resolution introduced by Delegate Winslow April 5:

Resolved, That when two or more Locals affiliated with this Council, unions of the same craft or calling, form a joint council or committee, said joint council or committee shall be admitted to the Council on the following basis or representation, viz: One delegate from each Local Union forming said Council or committees, and when less than three Locals form said Council or Committee then the said Council or Committee shall be entitled to three delegates.

was taken from the table, and Delegate McClelland moved to amend by striking out the word "shall" and insert the word "may."

Delegate Smith moved to lay the whole matter on the table. Lost by a vote of 16 to 9.

The amendment was then put and carried by a vote of 9 to 8.

Delegate Gilmore asked that his vote be changed. A point of order was raised that the vote had been declared and the chair sustained the point of order.

The resolution as amended was then put and was lost by a vote of 21 to 7.

NEW BUSINESS.

Delegate Peyton asked that a committee of three be appointed to secure signatures to the agreement approved by the Council. It was so ordered and the chair appointed Delegates Gilmore, Grove, and Ratigan.

Delegate Ratigan moved that all unions in the Council who were not in possession of current working card be suspended and the Central Labor Union asked to take similiar action.

Amended by Delegate Nothnagel that the unions be granted one week's time to take out card.

Substituted by Delegate Daly that a committee be appointed to confer with the Carpenters and endeavor to adjust matters. Substitute lost by a vote of 16 to 11.

Amendment lost by a vote of 16 to 9.

The original motion carried by 23 to 5.

The secretary was directed to forward bill "to Carpenters, 884" for cards for quarter ending March 31, 1904, asking that it be paid.

The secretary was directed to notify Amalgamated Carpenters, first branch, Amalgamated Carpenters, second branch, and Unions No. 884 and 1651, Brotherhood of Carpenters, that they had been suspended.

Delegate Desmond called attention to official building to be erected on Indiana avenue, and asked that an effort be made to secure Council contract on such job. Delegate Thompson was placed on committee to secure contracts, vice Delegate Gilmore.

As to Mr. Lerch on Lynch.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Mr. Frank Lerch's statement in THE TRADES UNIONIST might be "interesting if true." In his first paragraph he asserts that San Francisco and Seattle Unions nominated Mr. Lynch. As a matter of fact neither of them did so, as a glance at the official list of nominations will show.

Neither did Dixon, Ill., which he declares in a later paragraph nominated Mr. Lynch. Nor did Mr. Hawkes "organize" the list of unions Mr. Lerch says he did.

Mr. Lerch's reference to Chicago is particularly unfortunate, for it requires comparison with Indianapolis where Mr. Lynch has had his residence for about the same length of time as Mr. Hawkes has been a member of Chicago Union, and Indianapolis declared (by a very decisive vote) it wanted no more of Lynch.

The Lynch supporters are getting their wires crossed. One of them declares the Washington nomination does not count because the members will vote differently on the election; another says that Lynch nominations are sure indices of the sentiment of the membership. In other words, the Hawkes nominations don't count, while Lynch's do.

Really the reverse is true. Mr. Lynch has been a candidate for reelection ever since the last vote and has lost no opportunity to strengthen himself politically. Fearing the growing popularity and strength of Mr. Hawkes, for more than a year he has practically ignored his existence as an I. T. U. official.

While Mr. Lynch has been an avowed candidate for reelection for more than a year, even so late as last December on a visit to this city Mr. Hawkes declined to commit himself. His first circular and the first announcement of his candidacy outside of the endorsement by No. 16 the last Sunday in December was sent out the latter part of January. Is it any wonder then that with a majority of unions meeting the first Sunday in February, Mr. Lynch had all the best of the nominations? Lynch men were organized and fighting all the time, and where Hawkes won it was against the strongest opposition the friends of Mr. Lynch could put up.

Perhaps a glance at the expense accounts of organizers would throw light on this subject. From the Typographical Journal correspondence I see that two organizers were in Detroit in February though there was no trouble there. Another was in Memphis without any excuse. Columbus, Ohio, was also so favored, as well as Cleveland, Ohio, Lansing, Mich., and Rock Island, Ill. Here is an interesting compilation from the Typographical Journal showing the expense accounts of "favorite" organizers for the first four months of 1903 and the same months in 1904. I will not undertake to say that the absence of an I. T. U. election in the first instance and its proximity in the other accounts for the difference in amounts expended in traveling, but I confess to suspicions.

Puzzle: "Find the story in the figures."

Finally Brother Lerch fails to distinguish between a diplomat and a politician, which is the difference between Mr. Hawkes and Mr. Lynch. It is for our members to decide which they want—a "diplomat" who can secure for employees good wages and fair conditions without strikes or friction, or a "politician" who by the exercise of his peculiar talents and generous distribution of the spoils can maintain a smooth working machine within our organization, but who has lost the confidence of employers and involved our unions in many needless and expensive controversies?

On The Executive Board.

In the recent election held by the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers Union, Michael J. Shea, a member of Electrotypers Union, No. 17, of this city, was elected a member of the Executive Board.

In the selection of Mr. Shea the members of the I. S. and E. U. have secured a man of wide experience in matters pertaining to his craft, and he will give a good account of himself on the Executive Board.

Mr. Shea is an employe of the Government Printing Office, and has attained prominence in No. 17 as an advocate far all measures that has marked the progress of that thriving organization.

Observations.

Berg is a cold proposition—simple as plain addition.

Our friend Belcher puts an "if" after Major Herbert's name.

Whitehead is acknowledged by all to be the leading delegatorial candidate.

Did Kidd do the thinking and Ennis the talking in that nomination speech?

It is rumored that Hawkes is not pleased with his campaign in this city.

Ellis at the bat with two strikes on him, is trying to make a home run while three men are on the bases.

In reply to a question of mine, Candidate Hawkes said: "Lynch was a big man before he became president."

Lynch and Hawkes remind one of Columbia Union's last presidential candidates—Joe Johnson and Shelby Smith.

A prominent member of our Union told me that he did not believe Lynch law was perfect, but he did believe it is the best available.

HERO.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

With your kind permission I would like to say a few words in answer to Mr. Joseph W. McCann, who was born to the knowledge of your readers in your issue of April 28. Mr. McCann accuses me of trying to "wriggle out" of my original statement concerning the identity of the author of the Pastoral Symphony "by introducing the question of the author of the word symphony." In this statement Mr. McCann is, as usual, mistaken. What I did say, and what he will see if he refers to my letter of March 24, was that Haendel was the first to use the title "Pastoral Symphony" for a musical composition, and that having used such title over 65 years before Beethoven wrote his work of the same name, Haendel was, and is, justly entitled to the use of the name. The mere fact that the word "symphony" was applied to an interlude or prelude in ancient times has nothing whatever to do with the fact which I have set forth above and which has not and cannot be denied, viz: that Haendel, not Beethoven, was the original user of the term Pastoral Symphony.

Any German grammar, or any intelligent German, will inform Mr. McCann, if he will take the trouble to inquire, that words like Haendel are spelled with either the diphthong or diæresis, on this instance he speaks "so far as he knows" in disagreeing with my spelling. I must again pay Mr. McCann the tribute of saying that he mean well; as to whether he knows or not I will leave to the reader to decide.

In repeating his assertion that the symphony is an instrumental composition Mr. McCann deliberately shuts his eyes to the well-known fact that what is generally conceded to be the greatest work of the great Beethoven himself, the "Shakespeare of music" (I quote Mr. McCann's words), is only partly orchestral; which would seem to indicate that a symphony may not necessarily be restricted to instrumental music, all the "best authorities" to the contrary notwithstanding.

In referring to himself, Mr. McCann says: "I have * * * wrote a bit on musical subjects." A man who can perpetrate a thing like that is capable of writing his own epitaph. It appears at the end of his letter:

Washington, April 10, 1904.
JOSEPH W. MCCANN.

With apologies for taking up so much of your valuable space with this controversy, and with many thanks to Mr. McCann for introducing me to a number of excruciating expressions ("euphemistic parlance," "eructation," "I have wrote"—I can almost hear Pard Bloomer emitting another "scream of anguish") that I may find handy sometime in the future,

I am yours, sincerely,
J. W. BELCHER.

ANNA C. WILSON.

Miss Anna C. Wilson is presented to the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST as a candidate for delegate to the convention of the International Typographical Union at its fiftieth session by her friends, who consider her intelligent, capable, and competent to represent Columbia Union, No. 101, in a creditable and worthy manner at the session to be held in August at St. Louis. She is at present employed on the Official Gazette in the Government Printing Office and served her apprenticeship in the craft in the office of her brother, who is the proprietor of the Tuscola Review. She joined the typographical union in Chicago and has been a member of the organization for twelve years. She worked on typesetting machines when they were first introduced in the office of the St. Paul Dispatch. She is at present a member of the Entertainment Committee of Columbia Union, Sergeant-at-Arms of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Union, and acted in that capacity at the convention of the International Woman's Auxiliary held in Washington last year.

An Enigmatical Forecast.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

It is dead easy to solve this:

My first is in jump, but not not in leap;
My second is in sow, but not in reap;
My third is in hot, but not in cold;
My fourth is in young, but not in old;
My fifth is in bright, but not in dim;
My sixth is in slender, but not in slim;
My seventh is in merry, but not in sad;
My eighth is in good, but not in bad.
My whole is a man, when the voting is done,
Will be in the chair of a hundred and one.

The Labor Lyceum.

The next meeting of the proposed Labor Lyceum and Bureau of Information will be held on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock at Building Trades Hall, 610 G street northwest. Permanent organization will be effected by the adoption of rules and regulations for the guidance of the Lyceum, and permament officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

The declaration of principles of the Lyceum embody the discussion of economic questions as they relate to the educational, social, and industrial conditions of the wage-earners of the United States; collecting and disseminating legislative data relative to labor measures submitted to Congress, and to forward information to labor bodies throughout the country of the attiude of Senators and Representatives in Congress on such measures.

All persons interested in the formation of the Lyceum are urged to be present at Sunday's meeting.

The Cummings Memorial Fund.

To the Members of Columbia Union:

That the International Typographical Union, in convention, at St. Louis, will indorse the proposition to erect an addition to the Union Printers' Home at Colorado Springs, to be dedicated to the memory of Amos J. Cummings and to be known as the Cummings Memorial Hall, now seems assured. A large number of subordinate unions have indorsed the suggestion, among them Columbia Union and New York Union, No. 6 Columbia Union has instructed its delegates to support and work for the adoption of the proposition at the St. Louis convention. The work of securing contributions is in progress throughout the International jurisdiction, which is showing good results. The contributions of the members of Columbia Union, at the present rates, will soon reach $600. It ought to be at least $1,000 before the account is closed and the total sum forwarded to the general committee, which will report to the St. Louis convention. This addition to the Home will be a fitting and worthy testimonial to a true and life-long friend of the union wage-earner, and especially to our craft. Fifty cents or a dollar from a member of our union will add to the comfort of a fellow-workman in the Home and erect a monument to the memory of Amos J. Cummings more enduring than stone or bronze.

The members of Columbia Union who have been making monthly contributions to the chairmen of chapels are requested to continue and pay the chairman where employed, though the recent transfers may have placed them in divisions other than where their payments began. Proper credits will be given by the chairmen, who are ex-officio members of the local committee. The members of No. 101 are respectfully solicited to aid the fund by liberal contributions at an early date, so that the total of monthly installments may be completed as early as possible and full returns made to the general committee.

OUR BOSTON LETTER.

Our Correspondent Touches on the I. T. U. Situation There.

BOSTON, MASS., May 9, 1904.

Boston, in common with every other town within the jurisdiction of the I. T. U., is having its annual spring attack of politics, and this year the symptoms are more violent than ever before. Never in the memory of the oldest "pol" have the "knockers" been quite so numerous; never have the hammers been wielded with such crushing force as this spring. And never before have the wise ones failed to pick—"so and so"—as a sure winner.

Union politics in the Hub are in such a muddled condition that so far as the local candidates are concerned no one can tell until the votes are counted who will win. Men who have fought shoulder to shoulder in the past against the "enemy" are now arrayed against each other and are cheek by jowl with the men they were fighting last year.

The candidates for president are D. X. Coughlan, anti-administration; William Holland, independent anti-administration, and Alexandria Cook, independent. Administration candidates are not numerous, most candidates running as independent or anti-administration.

The presence of Hawkes in town last week added a ripple to the already troubled waters and only a ripple. I understand he was very much disappointed at the news he received on every hand in Boston. He had been led to expect by his campaign manager, Charley Wilkins, that he had a chance of breaking even, but the unmistakable Lynch sentiment wherever he went soon dispelled this idea. Lynch will undoubtedly carry Boston by a large majority. The feeling is so strong here in regard to I. T. U. politics that one of the first questions asked local candidates in visiting the various offices is as to how he stands on the I. T. U. presidency—and the answer almost invariably is "Lynch." The presence of stray copies of the Printers' Bulletin of Chicago, containing such grossly untrue and absolutely unfair articles as it does in regard to the Boston strike settlement has so disgusted the fair-minded members of No. 13 that Hawkes's friends have advised him to cut Boston out with the Bulletin and plug outside, where they don't know the facts. So Hawkes' visit only was money wasted so far as Boston is concerned.

Speaking about money, some of the boys who were "in" on the good things during Hawkes's visit have been figuring out how much it cost to run for the presidency of the I. T. U.? But up to date they were only figuring—and wondering.

WHEN A GIRL IS TWENTY-NINE.

The hurrying months are passing,
Another birthday near!
And some one is lamenting
In secret, so I hear.
The idle gossips whisper
That it is much too late
To hope for any miracle to save an old maid's fate.
What base insinuation!
What falsehood, line on line!
For lots of nice things happen when a girl is twenty-nine.

"Young things" may still be pretty,
No doubt. Yet critics state
They're really quite old-fashioned
And somewhat out of date.
Our dramas, poems, and novels,
As any one can see,
Have relegated "sweet sixteens" to tales of ancestry.
If heroines are older,
It's certainly a sign
That lots of things may happen when a girl's "sweet twenty-nine!"

So do not grow too wistful
O'er long forgotten teens,
With sighs of retrospection
For whispered might-have-beens.
But if you smile as sweetly
As then, and are as coy,
And never show that you prefer a graybeard to a boy;
In short, if you're your own true self,
You'll never have to pine!
For everything can happen when a girl is twenty-nine.

Resolutions on the Death of W. H. Hickman.

ENCAMPMENT NO. 69, UNION VETERAN LEGION

Another one of our members has passed on to that bourne from whence, it is claimed, "no traveler ere returns." We are here to-night to pay tribute to his memory.

William H. Hickman, late a member of Company F, Second Maryland Volunteers, and a member of Encampment No. 69, his membership dating from the 13th day of November, 1890, passed to his reward on the 5th of February, after an illness lasting over a year. His remains were interred in Arlington National Cemetery on Sunday morning, February 7.

Comrade Hickman, although born south of Mason and Dixon's Line, so-called, was always a true American and a loyal citizen of his country. He was born in 1841, in Washington County, Maryland. He served an apprenticeship at the printing business in Hagerstown and Boonsboro in his native State. On the completion of his apprenticeship, he went to Baltimore, where he secured a position on the Baltimore Sun. On the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion he enlisted as a private in the Second Maryland Infantry, for a term of three years, on the 8th day of August, 1861, at Baltimore, Md. He served in all the minor (non-commissioned) offices, and after a service of thirty-eight months was honorably discharged as second lieutenant an the 24th day of October, 1864, at the General Hospital, Annapolis, Md., by reason of wounds received in line of duty. June 16, 1864, at Petersburg, Va., was wounded in left thigh. Participated in all the battles of the Ninth Army Corps previous to June 16, 1864, including three skirmishes in North Carolina, the battles of Bull Run, Chantilly, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, the campaign in East Tennessee, and the siege of Knoxville.

Two sons and one daughter survive Comrade Hickman.

Comrade Hickman was a true friend, a more than honorable man. His nature was one of cheer; ever had a kind word for those under his care or charge, and was beloved and respected by all with whom he came in personal contact, always being hailed by his intimates and co-workers as "Hick."

WHEREAS, He "who doeth all things well" has seen fit to remove from our midst our comrade; and

WHEREAS, His children have lost a kind, indulgent, and ever cheerful father; and

WHEREAS, This Encampment has been deprived of the companionship of an honorable and a devoted comrade; and

WHEREAS, The country has been deprived of the presence of an upright citizen, a champion of its cause, and a patriotic and devoted soldier; therefore be it

Resolved, That Encampment No. 69, Union Veteran Legion, extends to the children of our deceased comrade our heartfelt and sincere sympathy in the great loss of one so dear to them; and be it further

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to the inevitable, as his taking away should arouse in us a deeper appreciation of life's brevity of tenure; and be it further

Resolved, That we feel deeply the taking away from our esteemed friend and worthy comrade; and be it further

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered on the Encampment; also that a copy be sent to each of the three children—Harry B. Hickman, Mrs. Arthur Wallenhorst, and Edwin L. Hickman; also that a copy be sent to the Typographical Journal, Indianapolis, Ind., and a copy to THE TRADES UNIONIST, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Pecksniff—I must say, Mr. Naybor, I'm quite surprised at you. Why are you watering your garden to-day?

Mr. Naybor—Simply because the plants need it.

Mr. Pecksniff—But don't you know this is the Sabbath?

Mr. Naybor—Of course, I know it; but the plants don't.

Death of M. P. Carrick.

Michael P. Carrick, general secretary-treasurer of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, died at Lafayette, Ind., Sunday, May 8, 1904, of erysipelas contracted on returning from San Francisco, where he had been called on business by his association. Mr. Carrick was born in Ireland forty-two years ago, and came to this country when a boy. His parents located in Pittsburg, Pa., where he learned the trade of painting, and when a journeyman connected himself with the Painters' Union, and has always taken a prominent part in the conduction of its affairs, both locally and national. During the factional fight between the Lafayette and Baltimore factions Mr. Carrick was a leader of the Lafayette faction, and by his efforts the peace conference held at Washington succeeded in the amalgamation of the factions. His funeral took place in Pittsburg May 12, 1904. As a mark of respect the general offices of the Brotherhood remained closed until after the obsequies.

When informed of Brother Carrick's death, H. J. Wells, chairman of the Council of Allied Building Trades and business agent of Paperhangers' Local Union 420, made the following statement:

M. P. Carrick was a man all labor organizations were proud of. He was a fighter, every inch of him, and as true as steel. He was a broad-minded, liberal fellow and a loyal friend. Although aggressive and a man of positive opinions, he always fought openly and squarely, and the paperhangers of the District of Columbia have lost a true and tried friend.

Buried the Hatchet.

During the recent conference of the Executive Council at Denver, Colo., an attempt was made and successfully accomplished in bringing about a consolidation of the two central bodies in that city. We clip the following, taken from the Denver News:

"Union" was the cry of the conference committees from the two trades assemblies at their meeting last night. An agreement was reached that brings the old assembly together again, and peace has been restored. The date of amalgamation is set for May 22.

The basis of settlement follows:

"All legal suits to be dropped, and money and property tied up to be turned over to the affiliated assembly. Dual organizations are given sixty days in which to settle differences; failing, the affiliated assembly will act in accordance with section 3 of Executive Council agreement. The incorporation to be removed, as provided by Executive Council agreement."

For his efforts in aiding in this matter, Denver Typographical Union, No. 49, passed the following resolution, commending Secretary Frank Morrison:

DENVER TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION, NO. 49,
DENVER, COLO., May 6, 1904.

FRANK MORRISON, Secretary
American Federation of Labor.

DEAR SIR: At a meeting of Denver Typographical Union, No. 49, held Sunday, May 1, 1904, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, and a copy ordered furnished to you:

"Resolved, That Denver Typographical Union, No. 49, tender a vote of thanks to Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, for his earnest efforts to bring about the consolidation of the two central labor bodies in this city."

Fraternally,

J. E. COLLETT,
President D. T. U., No. 49.

THURSDAY, MAY 12, 1904.

COUNT CASSINI, the Russian ambassador, is a victim of hay fever. No pun intended.

DEAR PROFESSOR LANGLEY: We take our pen in hand to let you know that fly time is almost here.

AND so there is reason to believe that "UNCLE JOE" has set his bonnet for the Presidential bee of 1908.

"MAKE money your slave," is the latest advice to the ROCKEFELLER Bible class. That's easy enough if you only know how to make money.

THE Typographical Journal for May is an exceptionally readable number. Besides the bright and interesting correspondence, there is a thoughtful leading article on "Sobriety for Printers," by "Skopeo, of Number Six." Other special features are: "How I Broke Into Literature," by BEN BROOKLYN, of Number Six, a sparkling sketch; "The Great Skinkwiddle Strike," a little tale wherein ARTHUR F. BLOOMER pokes fun at a certain class of labor problem novels, and "My Protoplasmic Guest," an up-to-date ghost story with sociological embellishments. The "President's Page," is, as usual, full of interesting facts and vigorous comments, and GEORGE A. TRACY contributes an article, entitled "Conditions in the Philippines," which will be read with special interest by Washington printers.

SPEAKER CANNON, in the course of his emphatic statement that he would not under any circumstances accept the nomination for the Vice-Presidency, made use of these words, as reported by the Washington Post: "There are many men in the Republican Party in the Middle West and elsewhere who are better equipped for the great office of Vice-President than I am." This is the language of a man who is simply and with modesty equal to the exacting requirements of a position second to none in this or any other land—the position which he at present holds. It is especially worthy of note because it recognizes the Vice-Presidency as a prize worth having, in refreshing contrast to some who seem to view that "great office" as beneath the consideration of men active in public life. It is not a sign of health in the body politic when any elective office, however insignificant, is made a subject of jest and is habitually looked upon as for any reason to be avoided. And surely there is no citizen so great that he might not feel honored to preside as Vice-President of the United States over the most august and powerful deliberative body in the world.

The I. T. U. Election.

The canvass for the various offices in the gift of the I. T. U. is about completed. Taking the head of the ticket it must be conceded that a contest has been waged for the office of President that has bordered on the indecent. During the heat of a campaign it must not be assumed that the principals in the contest are responsible for the many statesments made by their adherents. It is hardly fair to assume that the warmest supporters of the two gentlemen who are candidates for the position of President of the I. T. U. believe one-half the stories that they assiduously circulated against the opponent of their choice, and we give the membership at large credit in possessing intelligence enough to distinguish between stories meant for campaign consumption and the truth.

If we take the record of each of the principals in the contest and analyze it we find that both have done good service for their organization. Failure in some instances was crowned with success in another, and so we strike a happy medium in looking at their work as a whole.

In the conduct of negotiations so varied as that of a special organizer we should allow the widest latitude. The man who would lay down a hard and fast rule of conduct for any man in the position now held by Mr. HAWKES, and chide him with being extravagrant, citing the fact that his expense account reaches beyond $50 per week would expect a $25 man to do the same work. If Mr. HAWKES accomplishes something in Philadelphia his expense account should be the last item to be attacked. Those who know him best can vouch for the statement that he is worth all it costs us to keep him in Philadelphia.

Taking the record of Mr. LYNCH we find that he has accomplished a great deal since his incumbency in office. He has been attacked by the adherents of his opponent from every quarter, but his success as a presiding officer and the administrative ability he has displayed in the office of President stamps him a capable and efficient official. While it is true we have lost out on arbitration agreements in several cities we must remember that we are pledged to abide by the decisions of the arbitration board selected, and we should not visit our displeasure on our executive officer because we failed to get all we asked for.

In either event, the star of the I. T. U. will shine as brightly in the labor firmament no matter who the members in their wisdom may choose to preside over our destinies for the next two years. Then let us resolve to forget the rancor of the campaign and give our support to our chosen leader, who will need all the assistance we can give him.

It is to be regretted that the system pursued by the pot-house politician should be allowed to creep into our contests, and it is to be hoped that in the future the contest will be carried on more temperate lines.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

As this is the last issue before the election, all of us who have anything to say on the subject must say it now or forever hold our peace. There has been such a change of sentiment on the I. T. U. presidency that I now expect to see Mr. Lynch carry our Union by a safe majority, whereas some weeks ago it seemed to favor Mr. Hawkes. The change has been brought about more by the character of the fight made against Mr. Lynch than by any other cause, for personal abuse and allegations of dishonesty, without anything to back them, invariably act as boomerangs. It has also been sought to use political prejudice against him with those whom it was thought could be reached in that way, the insinuation being made that if reelected he would commit the I. T. U. to one of the political parties, in regard to which he wrote to a member of this Union as follows:

> The political cry in Washington is absolutely groundless. Its instigators know that it is groundless. I have not at any time committed the I. T. U. to politics or to a political party, and I do not intend to do so in the future. This has been the invariable policy of International presidents, and I have no desire to change that policy, which I consider a good one.

The charges against Mr. Lynch that his has been an extravagant administration were so easily disproved by the statements that are regularly published in the Typographical Journal that they fell of their own weakness and probably have not influenced a single voter. Almost from the day of the nominations Mr. Lynch has grown in strength here, and I believe he will carry this Union, as he should do.

Mr. Bramwood, for secretary-treasurer, has practically no opposition. He is alleged to have an opponent somewhere in the West, but there is not one in twenty of our members who knows his name.

Coming to our local officers, Mr. Berg will unquestionably be elected president by an overwhelming majority, as a tribute to him as a genial, wholesouled, and capable man who has done the Union much faithful service in the past. His opponent, Major Herbert, is a gentleman and a fine fellow who deserves well of this Union, it is true, but who has been fairly well rewarded by being elected a delegate.

The vice-presidency is anybody's fight and the interests of the Union will be safe whoever is elected.

There is something of a contest over the secretaryship, but I believe Mr. Garrett's faithful and efficient service in the past will be recognized by his reelection, for during his incumbency our Union has thrived and to his efforts is due the fact that Columbia Union has a standing among the business men that it never enjoyed before. His opponent, Mr. Seibold, is an upright, able man, and if I shall be wrong in my forecast I will not feel that everything has "gone to the demnition bow-wows."

On the treasurership I am again at sea, for each one of the three candidates is a personal friend of mine and fully equal to all the emergencies of the office.

As to the delegates, I expressed my opinion last week. But I will say that never in my knowledge has the outcome been so hard to guess.

I don't know of any one who feels any interest in the other offices—not even the candidates.

* * * *

I am authorized to state that the bowling team of the Record room is ready to meet the team of any other division of the office, only stipulating that the contestants shall be actually members of the division which they represent. In other words, picked teams are barred.

* * * *

Heretofore I have mentioned the candidates for delegate from the Woman's Auxiliary to the national organization which meets in St. Louis at the time of the I. T. U. convention. One of the three is Miss Katherine K. Spencer, who was so capable a factor in providing for the entertainment and comfort of the visiting ladies last summer, and who has been one of those who have done so much to make the local organization the success that it is—facts which are making her a formidable candidate. Mrs. E. H. Thomas and Mrs. John A. Huston are her competitors.

* * * *

Those who were much about I. T. U. headquarters during the convention last August undoubtedly met Thomas F. Crowley, an "ex" from Cincinnati, and were impressed by his whole-souled geniality, for he is one of the finest fellows in the world. He is a candidate this year, as every one knows, for trustee of the Home, and while I have stated that this Union should vote for George P. Nichols, of Baltimore, because of the service he has rendered it, and for Tom McCaffery, of Colorado Springs, because he is "on the ground" and as resident trustee renders inestimable service, still I heartily recommend Tom Crowley, and I hope my recommendation won't hurt him. I wish that I could vote for all three.

* * * *

If there is a candidate in the whole running for delegate to the A. F. of L. who deserves to be elected for his own intrinsic merit, leaving out of sight local pride and personal friendship, it is Frank K. Foster, of Boston, one of the ablest men in the labor movement. Of course I never try to influence anybody, but he ought to be elected.

* * * *

Anybody who is so hard up for wit as to work over the Knockers' Club variety, as did my friend "Hero" last week in asking, "Did Kidd do the thinking and Ennis the talking in that nomination speech?" has my sympathy if not my esteem. Charlie Ennis thinks naturally and without any effort whatever, and he has the faculty of attaching his think tank to his talk spout, which a good many of us great thinkers lack.

* * * *

I was a little off my trolley last week when I said, in connection with Titus Ellis's candidacy, that "Uncle Joe Jackson shall not be disappointed." I meant St. Louis Union, and when I think of St. Louis Union a vision of Uncle Joe Jackson always comes into my mind. By the way, Titus will make a corking a good delegate, and it begins to look like——. "But let me not anticipate," as they used to say in stories.

Foreman Dave Roberts prints a daily bulletin of all the difierent works in progress in his room, showing the number of galleys of each in type, number of pages made up, etc., of which he is the originator. I do not know whether any division besides the Fourth has adopted the scheme or not, but it is a good one, for at any time he is able to furnish exact information as to the status of every job.

* * * *

My friend Kreiter, from his position a mile away, can already hear the merry rattle of the linotype in the G. P. O., according to the Typographical Journal, and sees all hands fingering keyboards during lunch hours; but we can't. In fact, if it wasn't for Jim we would forget that Mergs are impending, so little is said about it. When we do get machines we'll run 'em, Jim. So wherefore your interest?

* * * *

Every once in a while I hear some fellow say that he never takes the wrapper off of his Journal, but just throws it away. That is the kind of a chap who would never find the ten-dollar bill which his mother folded into the Bible that she presented him when he left home. He usually knows nothing about union matters and cares less.

* * * *

Mr. Fred Detweiler, foreman of Judd & Detweiler's, took a look over the G. P. O. last Saturday, with John Berg as guide. He expressed himself as much pleased with what he saw in the big shop.

* * * *

Frank Morrison will very naturally get the vote of this union for delegate to the A. F. of L., his long residence here making him well acquainted and his ability and integrity being conceded. Of course we have in Mr. Garrett and Mr. Goodkey two candidates of our own, but that will not prejudice Mr. Morrison's vote, for he is ours, too.

* * * *

I'm glad that Pastoral Symphony question is settled. But I forget who got the decision.

* * * *

Let me suggest to my friend McPike that nobody has so far called him Bel(lya)cher. This suggestion is open to McCann also.

* * * *

Some friend has sent me copies of the St. Paul Minnesota Union Advocate, a prosperous-looking eight-page paper, which is a credit to labor journalism, but which disfigures its pages by throwing mud at President Lynch, whose enemies are doing him valuable service and rendering his election certain by just such practices.

* * * *

The ladies of the Woman's Auxiliary will give a euchre feast at Typographical Temple on May 28, and I have no doubt that they will have a crowd there to do justice to the occasion. The good work of the Auxiliary is coming to be appreciated by the members of the Union.

"Jumbo" Robison, of New York, paid a visit to the big office on Tuesday, after an absence from the city of ten years. He was well known here fifteen or twenty years ago, and there are many here who yet remember the big, fat fellow.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Post Chapel

At present writing the voting strength of the Post chapel is 63.

It is said that Lynchberg is a pleasant all-the-year-round health resort. rt

The scarcity of white paper had much to do with the small Sunday paper. Oh, the trusts.

The home of Mark E. Towers was made brighter last Saturday by the arrival of a little daughter.

The water wagon still holds a few of the members of this chapel. Good thing, this mythical vehicle.

May the best men win. After all, are we not striving for the same goal—the upbuilding of our organization?

Rumor has it that Jesse Deloe, the general utility man in the Post office, will shortly become a benedict. If true, "Jess" is moving wisely.

Judging from a circular received by a member of this force, a rather formidable battle is being waged against Mr. Hawkes in his home town of Chicago.

"Billy" Garrett and his opponent, Mr. George Siebold, both of whom have their friends in our chapel, distributed their cards and otherwise mended fences recently.

On account of the hard work and results accomplished in Loraine, Ohio, Mr. Brady may have become hungry between meals. But, then, the gentleman is not seeking the presidential office.

Messrs. Willis E. Hall and B. F. Thorpe have returned to this chapel after having had a whirl at "Spess" and other departments in the G. P. O. The former is subbing on the machines and the latter working in the adv. room.

The fact that Ernst Kreft, who is associated with First Vice President C. E. Hawkes in reorganizing Philadelphia, was in Toronto, Canada, quite recently evidences the magnitude of the task these gentlemen have before them.

Harry Knapp last week shook hands with a number of his old friends on the Post and incidentally made some new ones. The down-town race promises to be a lively one and may develop a future candidate for the presidency of Columbia Union.

A candidate for delegate made the remark that were it possible for Miss Wilson to call on every chapel immediately preceding the vote she would carry the credentials. That seemed to be the sentiment when the fair candidate visited the members of this chapel.

Fair-minded people will discover nothing in my remarks concerning the machines to imply that to me their installation in the G. P. O. would be a happy consummation. Learn to operate, Topsy, and you may be cured of that tendency toward palpitation of the heart every time the subject is broached.

"Major" Herbert certainly deserves credit for being a candidate against a G. P. O. foreman. In that Joe M. Johnson served two terms without being made a foreman, it was hoped the office would come down-town. May be it will; and if it does Mr. Herbert will demonstrate that he has both executive and legislative ability.

In a letter from Matt Hayes to J. Monroe Kreiter, the distinguished tourist pays the following tribute to that old wheelhorse of unionism, Phil Steele: "I have known him since I was a cub in the Argus office, Albany, N. Y., thirty years ago, and can vouch for his sterling integrity and worth as a man. He is conscientious in every sense, and a peer intellectually of any man in the membership of No. 101. Although he is a devout churchman there is nothing of the Pharisee about him, and many an unfortunate I have known him to succor. If worth and ability count he should win in a canter."

Second Division.

Four pay days in succession for the late night men.

Mr. C. J. Sheriff is proud to announce the arrival of a girl baby at his house on last Friday.

Mr. Sutton says "Topsy's" criticism of his late "reverie" would look better over his real name.

P. M. Reeder, late of this force, has accepted a position as operator with a New Brunswick, N. J., firm.

W. H. Covert, a late member of this chapel from the Record proof room, went to the "Spess" Monday.

Big Oliver Bennett, late assistant on Night Bill Force proof press, who went to the Fourth Division, is reported to have resigned and gone to St. Louis.

When making out your ballot for delegate, don't forget that old tried and true, and sturdy union man, Philip S. Steele. He has never disappointed us, so let's not disappoint him.

J. Walker Miller went to the Specifications Division Monday. The Second loses an excellent gentleman and admires his fortitude in being willing to attack "Spess" after an absence of thirteen years from that work.

Mr. M. M. Mitchell aptly says the "Campaign Blue Book publishes the advertisement of J. Fred Gatchel, tailor, and advises its readers to patronize him." J. Fred Gatchel's name appears on the unfair list in this paper.

Whenever a man has had public office for a long time and is about to suffer defeat his friends say that he has just reached the period of his greatest usefulness. But, then, we have to elect a new president to the I. T. U. sometime. George Washington, although a good president, established a precedent and refused to run perpetually.

As this will be the last issue of THE TRADES UNIONIST before election, the members of this division wish to again remind their friends not to forget to vote for Titus F. Ellis on election day. He is their unanimous choice for delegate and believe he is also the choice of the majority of the membership. They feel that no better man can be voted for.

Beware of roorbacks or canards sprung on candidates at the last moment. Any story started against a man at that time should be discredited and the man repudiated who circulates it or is responsible for its circulation. An exceptionally strong ticket is running this time and the individual's popularity will largely determine the vote he receives.

We have received a pamphlet, the title of which says "Annual Campaign Blue Book." Above that is the name of this union. The preface states that the publishers found it rather "uphill work," as the union refused to endorse the scheme and the business men complained when approached. Among the contents is a roster of two divisions only of the G. P. O., sixteen bar room ads, thirteen other ads. Twelve candidates out of the thirty-three have sketches.

Third Division.

It's all over but the shouting.

Joel W. Cross was transferred to the Spess last Monday.

H. P. McKevitt was sent to the Job Room last Saturday.

Twenty-five frames and as many men have been sent to the Job Room from the various divisions.

We are due to get some more final calls from the candidates, but the election is practically settled.

It has been truly said, "There is only one George Nichols." Don't forget him on election day.

The next Vice-President of No. 101 is Chas. W. Herzinger of the Third, Division. And don't you forget it.

Leavitt for Trustee would be an ideal choice. Mr. Leavitt possesses the respect of the whole Union. He should have our votes.

On the 5th instant we had calls from Titus Ellis, Frank Hall, Frank Kidd, and "Billy" Garrett. They were tickled to death to see us.

The subject for the evening discourse at the Ninth Street Christian Church next Sunday will be: "Daniel, the Man Who Dared; or, Deliverance from the Den of Lions."

Messrs. Wm. H. Bright, C. F. Cooke, S. Garnett Wise, and Jack Childress have announced themselves as candidates for teller, of whom two are to be chosen May 17.

R. W. Christian was detailed to the correcting alley when the Night Force invaded our division. He is in every way worthy of a position in the "clearing house," as his work is carefully and conscientiously done.

Could any member of Columbia Union desire a better representative than F. N. Whitehead? His good qualities are too well known to need rehearsal here. The thing to do is to vote for him. He deserves it.

I am informed that the Night Bill Force was practically solid for Miss Wilson at the time it disbanded, and that since then the doctrine of giving the women a fair deal has been preached successfully in various parts of the office.

McPike is an honest man. He couldn't help admitting that his "piece," in which he made hash and headcheese of the names of the candidates, was "rot." Now if the "Swift" would only follow his example all would be forgiven.

I have not mentioned a few of the candidates this time. Not because they are not first-rate men and fully deserving of the suffrages of the members of this Union. But because where all are so worthy the honor they seek some must be chosen and others left.

Chas. E. Holmes, late of the Night Bill Force, made his final call upon us on Tuesday. Mr. Holmes has seen considerable service as a worker for Columbia Union, having been instrumental in unionizing several down-town concerns, a fact which will give him, so his supporters claim, many down-town votes.

"Our" T. Frank Hall is "silently, but firmly" abstracting votes from under the noses of the younger and prettier competitors of his own sex for the office of delegate to the I. T. U. convention. Mr. Hall is a man of solid attainments as a unionist, whose wisdom merits the respect of all who know him. The Third Division takes a pardonable pride in him.

Three months ago the prospects of Titus Ellis for election were no bigger than a man's hand; but to-day they loom up like Barnum's big elephant. The reader must not make the mistake of supposing that because Mr. Ellis is big, he is therefore sleepy. Such a conclusion would be far from reality. Titus F. Ellis is a worker from way back, and always gets there with both feet. A vote for him is a duty well performed.

Titus Ellis dropped in upon us Tuesday, but it was merely to inform us that he would be around again next week with a card that will surpass anything in the same line yet offered. He thought it would go Frank Hall's card one better; but the Missouri River pirate, in a voice that sounded like the G string of a bass viol, volunteered the statement that he didn't believe it. When Titus comes around with his card we will give him an opinion.

"Lest we forget," let us, one and all make our cross opposite the name of Anna C. Wilson before voting for anybody else. Not because the candidate is a lady whom we admire and respect, but because she represents in this instance the great principle of equal rights for all. She deserves your vote, not only because she is a worker for the Union, but because she represents a large body of women, members of Columbia Union, who are the equals if not the superiors of the men in their chosen craft; who pay the same dues and receive the same pay as the men, and who have worked faithfully and uncomplainingly for years without having a representative in the I. T. U. Fellow-printers, let us "act on the square" and give these loyal women the representation they deserve.

J. W. BELCHER.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

Brother Galbraith's contribution to the gaiety of the Star chapel:

Lil and Bill are off to-day,
Which fact is rather pleasing;
But they'll be back again, they say—
Lil a'talking, Bill a'sneezing.

Detailed to the Record in the closing hours of Congress, Ikey Wear asked me to name them; and when I tried to Charley Voelker asked if I was Steele Kidd'en the girl.

The effusion depicting the panorama presented with my face against the pane met with such a flattering reception that I am tempted to declare that "Just Every Day Life" will appear with a greater degree of regularity hereafter.

The suggestion made in this column some weeks since, that W. H. Stubbs be employed by the Mergenthaler people to lecture on the road, has been adopted. For two months during the World's Fair at St. Louis that gentleman will be part and parcel of the company's exhibit.

From cards in the possession of Philip H. Steele I am permitted to copy the names of the following makers of typographical history, his associates at the St. Louis convention of 1874: James H. Kelley, Detroit; Thomas Steritt, Albany, N. Y.; Thomas Bailey, Syracuse, N. Y.; W. E. McDermott, Fort Wayne, Ind.; W. H. Bell, New Orleans; George E. Garrett, Burlington, Iowa; William M. FRIENDSHIP.

THE IDEAL.

How much to be prized and esteemed is a friend
On whom we can always with safety depend.
Our joys, when intended, will always increase;
Our griefs, when divided, are hushed into peace.

THE REAL.

But when in our weakness we fall into shame,
And spots black as night time bespeck our fair name,
'Tis then friends could lift us and help us atone;
Instead, they desert us and leave us alone.

O, why not be helpful for charity's sake,
And help fallen mortals a new start to make;
Assist them to zealously strive for their goal;
Reclaim the unrighteous, redeem a lost soul.

Instead, they desert us and go on their way,
Unmindful of those who have griefs to allay;
Too proud to uplift us—why measure the cost—
They let us go downward—eternally lost!

THE JUDGE.

Bindery Notes.

Joe (Better Element) Linzey, who has started an up-to-date farm at North Laurel City, can not resist the edicts of Dame Fashion. He was discovered breaking the clods on his newly-plowed farm in full dress and sweating out collars for fair. He says he gets reduced laundry prices, so he doesn't mind.

There's an old skinflint from Quakertown,
He's a foxy man of some renown;
He hides around in darkened nooks,
Except when carrying pattern books;
With them he flies in the office door,
In haste he drops them on the floor;
But when not in range of the boss's eye,
You ought to see him then—oh, my;
A child could beat him walking then,
This foxy man from the home of Penn.

Wayside Notes.

I notice that all the punk is not produced by Hawkesites.

But the psalmist did not say anything of the kind. The nearest approach to that remark was made by a good old Gentile gentleman named Job, who was the unhappy victim of a series of experiments on the part of a couple of deities who have since reformed. In reply to Bildad the Shuhite, Job said: "Oh, . . . that mine adversary had written a book."

What I started out to say, however, is this: I learn by special correspondence from Los Angeles that the Peruna Drug Company, of Columbus, Ohio, has decided to break its promises to hundreds of trades unionists and cast its lot with the Parryites. It has decided to renew its advertising contract with the rat Times and sink or swim with the scabs. I wish to suggest that the committee having the matter in charge have an analytical chemist of national, or international, standing make a complete and irrefutable analysis of Peruna and then spend the necessary amount to give the result thorough publication. Of my own personal knowledge I can say that the quality of booze which forms 40 per cent of it is the vilest I ever tasted, even in the palmy days of "The Blazing Stump." As to the ginseng or boneset, or whatever it is that is used to soften the sting of the Forty Rod whisky, I am unable to give an opinion. We can be very materially assisted by several thousand drug clerks who are organized and by several thousand more whose sympathies are with us anyway. Make it your business to see to it that your druggist knows the attitude the Peruna people have assumed toward those who work for a living and insist upon getting the living.

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL WASHINGTON. 2

Only Eight-Hour Union Office in Town.

THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1904.

THE Vice-Presidential game of tag is easing up and HITT is It.

IF you don't think there's "something doing in the country," read the fierce, bucolic things which the editors of the Times and Star have to say about each other when they get real angry and het up.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT acted with characteristic courage and rare good judgment when, in defiance of the influential enemies of organized labor, he refused to let the Government musicians leave the band-wagon to take the place of strikers in the Lafayette Theater.

THE New York Federation of Women's Clubs has been somewhat torn up over the relative claims of dogs and cats and children as objects of charitable consideration. It is hard to believe, but there are quite a number of people who appear to be more sensitive to the suffering of dumb brutes than of the young of the genus homo. One would think that in a great city like New York, with its thousands of helpless children pining for moral, mental, and physical attention, such a controversy as that in question could not arise among refined and cultivated women. Not that the afflictions of dogs and cats should be disregarded, but that charity should be comprehensive enough to include in its warm embrace the young of every animal under the sun, not even omitting those which are supposed to have immortal souls to save.

VIEWING human nature as it really is, and not as we hope it will some day be, there is little reason for astonishment if the Colorado miners should occasionally resort to violence, when we consider the things the mine owners have done in provocation. Bear in mind that the fight of the miners is for an eight-hour work-day. And still farther consider that the people of Colorado, by a vote of 72,980 to 26,226, adopted a constitutional amendment commanding the Legislature to pass an eight-hour law. Here it is:

> The general assembly shall provide by law and shall prescribe suitable penalties for the violation thereof, for a period of employment not to exceed eight hours, within any twenty-four hours (except in cases of emergency, where life or property is in imminent danger) for persons employed in underground mines, or other underground workings, blast furnaces, smelters, and any ore reduction works or other branch of industry or labor that the general assembly may consider injurious or dangerous to health, life, or limb.

Did the Legislature place this law on the statute books as commanded? It did not, and it is claimed and is believed, not simply by the miners but by the people at large, that the "conservative" gentlemen opposed to the law resorted to bribery of legislators in order to thwart the people's will. In other words, they are criminals of the most dangerous description. The miners are as a rule ignorant men for whom we can find some excuse even though it may be necessary at times to hold them in check by extreme measures. But what shall we say of the men of wealth and ability—the so-called captains of industry—who, because it is hard to fix responsibility for their crime, have dared to substitute anarchy for law in one of the great Commonwealths of the Union? It is, indeed, a grave situation. And, if such is to be the method of the lawless among capitalists in the future, the only safeguard against widespread violence and bloodshed will be found in organized labor working along conservative lines, and, under fearless, capable, and trustworthy leaders, holding in check the reckless hot bloods in the ranks of toil.

ACCORDING to a statement in the Washington Times the 4.30 o'clock closing hour has failed "to wring more work" from the clerks in the Navy Department for the three months—February, March, and April—during which the new rule has been in effect. It is stated that during this time "bureaus in the Navy Department which have never been known to fall behind in their work before lagged, and chiefs were compelled to report to Mr. Peters, chief clerk of the Navy Department, that the results for the months named were unsatisfactory." The Times quotes "a bureau chief" as saying:

> The new order was galling to clerks, and almost unconsciously, I think, many of them have lessened the amount they accomplished in a day. It has been noticed that the results are less in the half hour from 4 until 4.30 o'clock than in any half hour in the day, and the worst of it is the unwillingness which marks that period seems to have spread into other hours,

From the point of view of organized labor the position assumed by the clerks in question is interesting, to say the least. If they have "unconsciously" lessened the amount of work they accomplished in a day, because they have to work seven hours instead of six and one half hours as heretofore, it would seem to afford a strong argument in favor of the eight-hour work-day for which the ten, twelve, and fourteen hour toilers in other callings have been struggling for many years. As a matter of fact, however, we do not believe our brothers of the desk are suffering extraordinary hardships. We are aware that in the Departments are some misplaced ornaments of society who may have to eat belated dinners while the caddie waits. The postprandial buzz-car spin may likewise have to be curtailed in some cases. But the great mass of the clerks are ordinary mortals after all; and if it be true that misery loves company, they are free to seek consolation by contrasting their lot with that of those servants of Uncle Sam whose daily stunt is eight hours in length—in other words, the thousands of skilled workmen in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the Navy-Yard, the Government Printing Office, and elsewhere, who strangely enough, look upon eight hours as a short work-day, and are really tired when the day is ended.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

Now that the election is over we can all afford to forget the animosities of the campaign until another comes. Of course there are some disappointments over the result; a unanimous election is one of the tamest things in life. If we would put half the enthusiasm into fighting the common enemy that we do in fighting each other during campaigns, we would never lose a battle. But that is not human nature. There is no feud so bitter as one between brothers.

So far as our local election is concerned, it was unusually free from malicious charges and scandalous assertions until the last few days, and that was not between the candidates themselves. All was good-humored as between them, and of those for the most sought positions—those of delegates—if there was any personal feeling between any two of them I never heard of it. This beatific condition also existed as to the candidates for the other offices.

We have chosen our officers for the ensuing term. If the successful candidates are not those of our personal choice, still they are our officers, and let us give them our loyal support, and without offensive elation over the defeat of our opponents, if we have cause for elation.

Wellington C. Robinson, who has been a messenger on the night force for the past two or three years, has been detailed to the annex of the Proof Division now located in the Record proof room. "Duke" is one of the most efficient and accommodating messengers in the office, and he does one a service so willingly that it is a pleasure to ask him.

Joseph W. McCann's Thaler linotype keyboard—Mr. McCann is its inventor—seems to me a valuable adjunct to a man desiring to acquire speed on "the machine." Speed can only come from long practice and the most perfect acquaintance with the keyboard, and such practice can be had as well on the Thaler as on a real keyboard. Mr. McCann has invented a number of appliances useful in printing, but none of greater utility than this.

If Miss Anna Wilson received the votes of all who wore her blue badges during the latter days of the campaign, and the result would seem to indicate that she—but as I am writing this prior to the election it may be well to leave the completion of this paragraph until next week.

Government Printing Office Council, No. 211, National Union, will celebrate the twenty-third anniversary of the founding of the order at National Rifles' Armory, next Monday evening, at 8 o'clock, with a musical entertainment, the programme including some of the best talent in the city. This is the largest council of the strongest fraternal insurance order in the District, and it has ever been celebrated for the enjoyable character of its entertainments. G. P. O. Council is itself eighteen years old, and I had the honor of being one of its charter members. It has had some of the ablest men connected with the office as its presiding officers and for many years has reveled in the enjoyment of two of the most competent secretaries, in Joseph Dierken and Charles H. Leeds, that any organization ever had. G. P. O. Council is not one of the perfunctory bodies which exist merely for the insurance feature, but there is more good, whole-souled fellowship among its members and more real pleasure at its meetings than most of the purely social organizations afford. National Rifles' Armory is a large hall, but it is safe to say that it will be well filled next Monday by the members and their friends. Those who have had little opportunity to partake of the hospitality of the council, or have neglected to avail themselves of such opportunities, will find ample to repay them for attending this entertainment. The committee in charge of the entertainment is composed of George A. Seaman, Fred A. Hall, Joseph Dierken, Thomas L. Jones, and C. V. Bechtel.

Tom Bynum, who, in his capacity as Grand Chancellor of Knights of Pythias of the District of Columbia, acted as master of ceremonies at the laying of the corner stone of the new Knights of Pythias Hall last Monday, again shed luster on himself and Columbia Union because of his membership therein. We are all proud of Bynum because he does everything well that he undertakes.

The bowling teams of the First and Sixth Divisions will try conclusions tomorrow (Friday) evening at the Palace Bowling Alleys. There will be a meeting of giants, but I'll bet (just bet, you know) that the Record boys will lambaste Al Bowen's gang so badly that they will hunt schoolboy teams to meet hereafter. It will be good to take the taste of the election out of our mouths.

The Inland Printer, of Chicago, known of all printers, has done me the honor to accept an article "On the making of the Congressional Record," which will appear in the June number. I thought there might be some who feel an interest in investigating how much I know about the Record.

I have received copies of the Miners' Magazine, published weekly at Denver by the Western Federation of Miners. It contains 16 pages, 12 x 18 inches in size, and is excellently edited and printed. It is in its sixth year and is edited by John M. O'Neill. I received the copies by the courtesy of my friend Otto F. Thum, formerly of the Denver Labor Chronicle, who is one of the employes.

* * * *

I guess "Sig. Ready" is right about it being Job instead of the Psalmist—I'd rather take his word for it than to hunt it up—but that neither affects the appropriateness of the quotation nor relieves him of the suspicion of being braver under a nom de plume than he would be under the name he brought from the haw country.

* * * *

William S. Waudby was doing Labor Bureau business in Pottsville and Sunbury last week. He mentioned meeting Tom Lawlor at the latter place and having an "old-time session" with him. He says Tom is in clover, as he deserves to be.

* * * *

James Lacoste Rodier's "De Profundis," in last week's paper, is very beautiful, but so miserably gloomy. Why does he not write bright, sparkling things, like Jimmy Montgomery?

* * * *

When a man so far forgets the decencies and amenities of life, not to mention the principles of unionism, as to make malicious and untruthful charges against a candidate for office, he should be disciplined to the fullest extent provided for by our laws, and the prompt action taken by Columbia Union last Sunday indicates that such is the feeling of the membership in general. Outside of the morality of that way of opposing the election of man to office, nine times out of ten the slanderer makes five votes for the victim of his malice to one that he takes away from him. We have laws to punish slander; let them be enforced, whether the person maligned was a candidate for secretary of Columbia Union or president of the I. T. U.

* * * *

The Post of Tuesday contained an announcement of the death of Edwin L. Marriott on Friday last, at St. Joseph's Hospital, Baltimore, "a former resident of Washington." Presumably this is Ed. Marriott the printer, so well known here years ago. He worked on the Daily Chronicle when I first knew him, thirty years ago; later in the Specifications Division of the Government Printing Office, and after that on the old National Republican up to the time of its discontinuance, when he went to Baltimore. Ed. Marriott was a good printer and a good friend, and there are many who will read of his decease with pain.

* * * *

It looks now as though Mr. McPike is placated, though there is no telling what he will do to Belcher this week. There is nothing so fierce an an infuriated poet.

* * * *

Nasty little flings generally rebound and punish the flingers. To get even with some such, Maud S. says he is going to put his face against the pane oftener hereafter. So as usual, the innocent suffer with the guilty.

* * * *

The Washington Gaslight Company is getting very religious—refuses to furnish gas to cook with on Sunday. At least it has been so the past two Sundays in the part of the city inhabited by Jack Connolly, Admiral Dewey, and myself.

* * * *

Now that the election is over, after we have exhausted "How it was brought about?" what will we have to write about?

* * * *

If you had to do it over again, would you vote as you did? Of course you will say you would, but would you?

* * * *

And don't you think it is best, after all, that you did not have your way about it?

A. F. BLOOMER.

Card of Thanks.

To all those who supported me in my election, and also to those who gave me their best wishes, I wish to return my sincere thanks.

Very sincerely,

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Second Division.

Mr. Francis P. Williams, Slug 21, a temporary was dropped Saturday.

Mr. F. W. Kern, the count, late of the Bill Force, went to the First Division Monday.

We all daily enjoy the sight of "Rufus" Wilhelm's new hair as it sprouts up so quickly these balmy spring days.

Mr. Daniel A. Gillin, Slug 89, went to Philadelphia last Thursday, on account of the sad intelligence of the death of his sister.

Mr. T. J. McDonough emphatically denies the rumor that he is a Socialist, and says he knows nothing of their number or condition in Philadelphia.

Harry Watkins moved over to the shady side of the house last week in the alley with Owen Carter. Probably "Sarah's" noon-time humming concerts attracted him.

Mr. H. S. Sutton has written an historical patriotic ode, which has a lively swing. The Pioneer Publishing Co., of Chicago, have set it to catchy music and published it. It will doubtless be very well received.

Titus Ellis' unique card was much admired. Many artists helped to construct it. Tommy McEnaney, of the Third, cut the figures from a newspaper, the head from one of Titus' photographs, the hat from an advertisement, and pasted them together on a card, drawing the tie and checks on the suit, with pencil. Weber, of the Rebew Orchestra, selected the words and music from an old Methodist hymn.

The oily-tongued messenger, Louis A. Neuer, always provokes a ripple of laughter from his fair bevy of visitors who daily stand at our dead board and listen to his thrilling descriptions of the G. P. O. It is said the jolly Neuer was showing a cultured spectacled young Boston lady through the office one day and when they came to the Second Division she remarked that they all looked contented. Neuer said they ought to, at $4 a day and 30 days' leave of absence. "Why," she said, "I thought they were convicts."

The betting has been strenuous and nerve-racking.

Next week we will be able to explain just how it happened.

Items are "scarcer than [Presley's] hen's teeth" this week.

The election for tellers Tuesday afternoon resulted as follows: Childress, 57; Cooke, 52; Reid, 44; Wise, 29.

Never before has there been an election for delegates from Columbia Union where the candidates were uniformly such good fellows as those nominated this year.

In the absence of the Secretary, Franklin O. Sanders was Acting Secretary at Tuesday's chapel meeting for the nomination of tellers. He presented a dignified and imposing appearance.

And you too, Bloomer? Well, I might have expected it, I suppose. It is well to confine the Bloomer costume to a few, and perhaps McCann and McPike may find it more becoming to their style of beauty than most of us.

It is hoped that the printers who may have been induced to go to the Ninth Street Christian Church by reading the announcements thereof in this column will fall into the habit of going continuously Their presence has been a welcome addition to the audience, and their example may be just the thing needed to bring some one into the path of right living.

Windy Morgan told me a good one on his friend, Henry Presley, of the Fourth Division. It seems that Henry lives somewhere in the suburbs, and has dabbled a bit in hens and eggs. Being of an economical turn of mind, Henry induced his one old hen to hatch out three broods of chickens, and when the final brood saw the light of day, Henry compelled that one lone hen to care for the large family of chicks in utter defiance of the well-known principle of unionism that one job is enough for one man—therefore, one family is enough for one hen. Last week the hen realized that Henry had imposed upon her and she did what many human beings have done when the cares of life have pressed too heavily upon them—she just laid down and died. Moral: Don't count your hens until the chickens are raised.

W. H. Kauffman received an appointment as messenger in the Gazette Division.

It is a hard task, this trying to be everybody's friend. Particularly when there are conflicting interests.

The election for tellers to count the vote on Wednesday resulted as follows: Miss Carrie Whitehead, 60; C. A. Stretch, 37; Levi Brown, 34.

G. P. O. Council, No. 211, National Union, will celebrate National Union Day on Monday, May 23. The event promises to be the finest of the season.

We are now in possession of a very neat and concise style book—a long-felt want—which makes clear much that it was taken for granted the "transient" knew.

August Donath, who is always ready with voice or pen to aid the cause of trade unionism, has received a deserved promotion in the Pension Office, from $1,400 to $1,600.

Andrew Turnbull has returned from nine days' leave of absence. Suppose he has been putting up screen doors, whitewashing, cleaning out the cellar and garret, chopping wood, etc., from the fact that he will give no satisfactory answer to inquiring friends and others.

Has the Third Division correspondent made any headway with the "primitives" who rebel against "biled" shirts, sanitary plumbing, and other modern inconveniences and concomitants of civilization? Haven't seen his item about pulling the plug for some time. Keep at it, Brother Belcher. You have the right idea.

Bindery Notes.

The only man on the cowboy's team is Leonard Kukart. Being manager of the team, he has no time to play.

Do you notice how tame Jack Weidman and brothers are since they joined the Jonadabs. Let us hope the fad soon wears off.

Bill Lang is very much annoyed because Mike Madden said he played the bones at the opening of the Alhambra. Bill says it's a lie, for he never got an invitation.

Major Fredricks feels very proud of the certificate presented to him. His friends have no doubt but what he will defend his title, George Reynolds being his only competitor.

HEAD BANDS.

Bill Reese would like to visit Suitland Park if some of his friends will hire a carriage for him.

Tom Byrne has chipped his $10 ring and feels very badly about it. This is not the first chip Tom has lost.

Bill Glover has concluded to stop raising chickens, as he does not care to be feeding the colored population in his neighborhood.

John Foster took Whammond on a tour of the building the other day at lunch time, and Whammond has now an interesting story to tell of what he saw.

There has been considerable talk about social equality of the races lately, but the climax was capped when "Corby" kissed "Blokie" Beyler the other day.

Charles J. Mooney very well and favorably known in the Bindery was among the graduates in the class of '04 of the Baltimore College of Physicians and Surgeons, last Wednesday.

In the game between the Cowboys and Blank Men, Wednesday, Major Fredericks was rooting for the Cowboys while his son-in-law was managing the opposing team. Major knows where his graft is.

George A. O'Donnell, who made his third or fourth appearance on earth last November, was "graduated" on the 13th instant, and made the hearts happy of a number of his friends at a neighborhood caravansary.

Miss Bessie Work, who had a temporary appointment in the Bindery and who also was employed for a time in the Bureau, has received a regular appointment, and we are all pleased to have sweet Bessie with us.

An election for Captain of the Blank Men's Baseball Club resulied in the choice of Charley Ecker, who received 19 votes to 1 for McCarty. It is suspected that McCarty voted for himself as no one could be induced to do so after the picture of him which appeared in THE TRADES UNIONIST a few weeks ago. Charley thinks he will call his team the "Pretzels."

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

On the ruins of the old New York Commercial Advertiser has been builded a pretentious metropolitan daily.

E. R. Morcoe, whose cigar store has been the resort of Washington printers for a quarter of a century, is seriously ill with tuberculosis.

James Kane and Al. Ingalls were in Albany, N. Y., thirty years ago, when Phil Steele was elected an I. T. U. delegate from that city.

A late novel is entitled "Four Roads to Paradise." From my viewpoint I can see two. One, a youth who devotes the ambition of a young life to gathering them in from the byways of sin, who, as he advances in years, takes a prominent part in the affairs of the guild, the league, the Sunday school, and the church. But there comes a time when he must seek employment in this mundane sphere. He is met with the question, "Has he references?" "Oh, yes; here's a letter from our pastor." "How many men does he employ?" "Why, he doesn't hire any men; he just preaches." "Then what does he know about your qualifications in your line of business?" The youth realizes that his cherished letter is a "stock" one; that he must needs look to the worldly before he can earn a livelihood.

Another road to Paradise leads through that ideal home where exists such perfect companionship that the one can say "Now I lay me down to sleep" and the other remain on guard—as impenetrable a bulwark as that circle of flame which shields the camp of the pioneer from the onslaught of the beasts of prey; where "the light in the window" is ever brightly burning; where the inspiration for the task diurnal is found in the God-speed; where the step on the stair means an open door and a welcoming smile.

I know one road to hell, down which the finger of Fate points with the unswerving certainty of the needle to the pole. It is via that human upas tree—that himalaya of hate and vesuvius of venom—a mean woman. With the Bard of Avon—simply because the callous heart is reflected in the features. With compressed lip, the true iconoclast crushes all semblance of shape out of Cupid's bow. The same imperial imagination that etched Iago sketched the dark and bloody Richard, or that other and distinct type of Hamlet; but when Shakespeare desired to paint a picture of hell unconfined he drew the black and midnight hags around the cauldron in Macbeth. The only fault I fiud with the ducking stool our ancestors left the wrong end in the air.

A few years ago there came into Washington three people, looking for a job, to put it correctly. Each one, and all of them, hailed from that section where the meadow takes stronger hold on the hue of the sky than in any other portion of Uncle Sam's dominions. While one of them, a country school teacher, waited for the red tape to uhravel that he might hold down a professorship in the Agricultural Department, he concluded he might keep the wolf from the door by doing a little writing. When the mails carried him his appointment, the story goes, it found him too busy to accept. His name is James Lane Allen, and he has found a place in the world's literature with the "Reign of the Law," "The Choir Invisible," and kindred works.

Cartoonist Coffin, of the Post, died, and an understudy stepped into his shoes. His name is C. K. Berryman, and about four days a week he enlivens the first page of that sheet with the product of his brain at a princely salary.

Eugene A. Newman had an idea he might warm a chair as a clerk in the War Department. His pen name (Savoyard), with his aptitude for Napoleonic comparisons, is a household word with readers of current history. He has long since climbed into the George Alfred Townsend class, and to-day can say to the budding statesman, "I can make or break you."

Just at this writing neither of these gentleman are looking for a job.

COLUMBIA UNION MEETING

Louisville Union Receives Substantial Aid In Its Struggle.

A VERY INTERESTING MEETING

Entertainment Committee Makes a Report on Recent Entertainment—Union Gives Its Share of Proceeds to Auxiliary—A Member Under Investigation—The Union Accepts a Typothetae Proposition.

The regular monthly meeting of Columbia Typographical Union was called to order at the usual hour on Sunday last, President Johnson in the chair.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The Nomination Committee reported favorably on several candidates, who were duly elected and obligated.

Mr. Kidd asked that Baltimore Union be requested to carefully investigate the application of one DeVeny, who is now employed in this city, and asked for information relative to DeVeny from Louisville, Cincinnati, Chicago, Joliet, Minneapolis, and Omaha.

President Johnson introduced a representative of Louisville Typographical Union, No. 10, Mr. Quinn, who addressed the Union concerning conditions in that city, where a strike has been in progress for the past seven weeks.

After some discussion a motion to appropriate $300 for Louisville Union prevailed and the president of the Union was authorized to inform No. 10 that further amounts will be given if necessary.

The Entertainment Committee reported on the recent joint entertainment with Woman's Auxiliary, No. 13, and reported our share as $107.

Mr. Bynum moved that the report be received, and the amount of our share be given to the Auxiliary, which was unanimously agreed to.

Mr. T. Frank Hall, from Allied Printing Trades Council, reported that the Council desired this Union to take such action as would place itself as opposed to present rule permitting the use of the label to one-man shops.

On motion of Mr. Lerch the matter was referred to delegates-elect to the I. T. U.

Willis L. Hall moved that the delegates to the Allied Printing Trades Council be directed to cause an investigation of all offices where law governing the label is not complied with and have the label withdrawn from such offices. Agreed to.

The delegates from Central Labor Union having reported that Hecht & Co. had been taken from the unfair list by the Central Labor Union, asked that Columbia Union also take said firm from its unfair list. Agreed to.

President Johnson reported that for the first time since his incumbency in the chair he was pleased to say that no deaths had occurred since last meeting.

The president also reported that communications had been received from members of sister unions, purported to be sent out by a member of this union, reflecting on the officers of this union. After reading the communication, a motion prevailed to appoint a committee to investigate the matter and report at next meeting of the union.

The Cummings Memorial Committee made a report of progress and asked the indorsement of the union for a ball game between Baltimore and Washington printers on Decoration Day. The committee was given full power to proceed.

On request a new proof-room chapel was created for proofreaders in Record proof room.

Mr. Kidd offered a resolution in effect allowing the overtime scale in offices down town where the half holiday on Saturday is observed for all work done after the usual hour for closing on Saturday, which was adopted, subject to ratification by the employing printers.

A committee was appointed to codify the laws of the union.

On request of the Typothetae, a committee was appointed to confer with a like committee from that organization to draft shop rules for offices under the control of the Typothetae.

The proposed amendment remitting dues of chairmen in chapels where the commission allowed is less than the amount paid for the card was laid on the table.

The president announced the withdrawal of Frank C. Bates from his candidacy for the position of sergeant-at-arms.

Mr. Bynum nominated David E. Tyrrell to fill the vacancy in office of sergeant-at-arms, and he was unanimously chosen.

The union then adjourned.

Thanks.

EDITORS THE TRADES UNIONIST:

Kindly allow me sufficient space to thank my many friends for the kind and loyal support given me in the late election of officers of Columbia Typographical Union No. 101.

With a desire to assist those who are dependent on downtown for work, and knowing the existing conditions, it would have been my object and ambition (if elected) to bring about an immediate settlement of the affairs in the several offices. It is, therefore, hoped that the new administration of Columbia will make an effort in this behalf, and may we give our undivided support to the new officers in making this year one of success and prosperity.

If there is a feeling of hatred caused during the campaign, or through defeat, let us obliterate it from our minds and live and work for the elevation of our fellow men, and for the betterment of the condition of the craft.

I am yours, fraternally,

J. T. HERBERT.

Death of John A. Brett.

John A. Brett, a member of Steam Fitters' Union, died Sunday, May 22, and his remains interred in Rock Creek Cemetery Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Brett has, since his connection with the Steam Fitters' Union (into which he was admitted by card from the New York Union March 13, 1887), been one of the active workers in the local labor movement, having been prominent in the local Federation of Labor during its years of prosperity. When the Central Labor Union was formed he represented the Steam Fitters in all conferences and took an active part in the work of that body for several years and was a delegate at the time of his death from his union.

Hall No. 1, "Building Trades Halls," 610 G street northwest, is open daily from 8 o'clock a. m. until 5 p. m. as a reading room to all members of building trades unions affiliated with the Council of Allied Building Trades.

NATIONAL UNION DAY.

A Packed Hall and a Delightful Programme to Celebrate It.

National Rifles Armory was filled to its utmost last Monday night at the entertainment given by Government Printing Office Council, No. 211, National Union, and the audience generously applauded the different artists in evidencing their enjoyment. The Committee of Arrangements, Messrs. George A. Seaman, Fred A. Hall, Joseph Dierken, Thomas L. Jones, and C. V. Bechtel, had provided a most delightful programme, and the Reception Committee, headed by Captain H. T. Brian, a former president of the Council as well as of the Senate of the National body, and composed of sixty members, looked after the comfort of the visitors and guests.

The programme opened with an overture, "Lila," by Harris, rendered by Prof. Henry W. Weber's Rebew Orchestra, the members of which show the careful training which Mr. Weber has given them. Then followed a delightful address of welcome by President Charles T. Hendler, in which he reviewed the history of the Order and the Council. A quartette, "Estudiantine," Lacome, by Mrs. H. M. Smith, soprano; Mrs. W. T. Reed, contralto; Thomas L. Jones, tenor, and Dana C. Holland, bass, brought a demand for an encore. Miss Grace Ross gave a couple of recitations, the second in response to an encore. Mrs. W. T. Reed sang a contralto solo, and was compelled to sing another. Then the orchestra played one of Santelmann's sprightly waltzes and was applauded to the echo. Mrs. Hattie Mead Smith sang Arditi's "Il Bacio," and gracefully responded to an encore. George H. O'Connor gave some of his inimitable coon songs, and had to sing three of them before they would let him go. Master Joseph H. Dierken sang "My Little Irish Canary," and yielded to the demand for more. Mr. John A. Finnegan, one of Washington's most popular tenors, sang "There is a Flower that Bloometh," "Goodby, Sweetheart, Goodby," and "The Palms," the last two in response to vociferous and persistent demands for encores. The orchestra then closed the musical portion of the programme with "The American Patrol," introducing a number of patriotic airs, all of which were well applauded. Miss Alma Ebert, Mrs. Thomas L. Jones, and Mr. Matt Horne were the accompanists.

Then the audience was invited to the lower hall, where there was ice cream and cake for all, in which the distinguishing feature was the frequent invitation of Committeeman Thomas A. Bynum, an ex-president, to come up and have some more. Informal chat played an accompaniment to the merry movement of the spoons, and everybody pronounced it a most delightful occasion and a perfect success.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

Looking for a head-liner in literature, select the Red Book, the new Chicago short-story publication. On its staff is Opie P. Reid and the cream of the contributors who find favor with the reading public.

The four-story building now nearing completion at No. 410 Twelfth street northwest will be occupied, at the beginning of the fiscal year, by the Sudwarth Printing Company. A Sunday inspection tour revealed in position various electric lighting, heating, and power devices, form lifts, and the heavy paraphernalia essential to modern printerdom. A giant optimus—if I catch the name correctly—is being added to the press facilities of the basement, while a number of light and well-ventilated rooms in the upper stories are devoted to the folding and binding of the several publications of the house. A huge contract for work heretofore in the hands of unfair offices in Philadelphia has just been closed.

Third Division.

Berg was not an ice-berg.

My candidate for delegate was elected.

Those blue badges were a very telling factor in governing the result.

Franklin F. Sanders was acting chairman on the afternoon of election day.

W. B. Johnson returned to work Monday morning after a week's absence, having used up the balance of his leave.

W. A. Kinsolving seems to have a steady thing of it in distributing italic. The division only handed him eight galleys of it last Tuesday.

The large vote given to Leavitt for trustee of Columbia Union speaks volumes for the good sense of the voters and the fitness of the nominee.

The Third Division had three nominees for as many offices. Though defeated they are cheerful, and will come up smiling at some future time.

Cliff D. Scott went to work Tuesday morning on frame 42, lately vacated by Henry D. Wadhams. If Cliff behaves as well as Henry did he will do well.

Hearty congratulations to the successful candidates for delegate—Miss Anna C. Wilson, Messrs. Vaughan, Kidd, and Parsons. They will represent us well.

The other day "Si" mentioned casually that he drank water. This was doubted by the Judge, whereupon "Si" floored him with the remark, "I've drunk more water than you used to wash in."

On Tuesday evening, at the hour of sending in this correspondence, George C. Sparks was in a critical condition at his home, 806 I street northwest, where he had been confined for a week past by an illness which it puzzled the doctors to diagnose successfully.

We set some Indian treaties recently, and there was much speculation among the boys as to the various Indian names which occurred in the signature. I think the name "Immoukelorsharhoparyea" is quite as complicated as anything yet handed out by the Spess people.

Last week Bloomer said: "James Lacoste Rodier's 'De Profundis,' in last week's paper, is very beautiful . . . " I quite agree with you, Mr. Bloomer; it is a great relief to read some real poetry, like that to which you referred, after being inflicted with the dreadful stuff handed out by William Tipton Talbott.

The following has been received from Harry Knapp, of the Times, by Chairman Goldstein:

May 20, 1904.

To the chairman and members of the chapel:

Thanking you for the votes cast for me on Wednesday last, and hoping for an increased number at some future time, I am,

Yours, fraternally,

H. C. KNAPP,
Washington Times.

Henry D. Wadhams, who has been employed in this division during the past six months as a temporary hand, terminated his stay with us Friday evening, May 13. Mr. Wadhams was quiet and gentlemanly in his deportment and withal a thorough printer, and was well liked by all who associated with him.

Thanks are due Brother Redfield for his encouraging words about my crusade against the fellows who are too lazy to pull the plug when they finish washing their hands. Now, if Redfield and all the rest will join with me in one grand onslaught upon the mud-puddle fiends, perhaps we might accomplish something. I say perhaps, and I say it advisedly, for not even the legend, "Clean—be clean," which has hung in a conspicuous place in the wash room ever since we occupied the new building, has seemed to have much effect upon the calloused persons who delight to just simply wallow in dirt.

The election of delegates in the Woman's Auxiliary occurs next Tuesday at the Temple. It now seems that they will have the required 150 members, which will entitle the Auxiliary to two delegates. In this connection we would like to make special mention of Miss Katharine K. Spencer, who is employed in the Specification Room, as being entitled to the consideration and support of members of the Auxiliary. Being employed during the day, she has not been able to make a house-to-house canvass, but her friends have confidence in her election. For a number of years she has been the sole support of a family. She is deserving, able, charming, and popular, and it would be a graceful act to elect her as one of the delegates.

There was, it seems, a serious hiatus in the story about Henry Presley and the overworked hen. In the language of a certain good old hymn, "The half was never told." What was related last week about the extraordinary exertions made by the hen in attempting to bring up three broods of chickens was merely the story of the second and last act in her life's eventful drama. She had previously been compelled to "set" on a nestful of croquet balls, and the great disappointment she experienced upon discovering croquet balls were non-hatchable caused her to insist upon being treated fairly, and she was finally given the job of hatching and caring for a family too large for one lone hen, with the fatal result already noted. Henry Presley, who was the owner of the deceased hen, is so overcome by remorse that he thinks of starting a home for indigent and aged hens, where they can spends their last days in peace.

Bindery Notes.

It is rumored that the Foreman of the Cowboys, during Mr. Penicks' absence will be a dark horse.

There will be twenty women delegates in the convention of the Brotherhood of Bookbinders. And yet Billy Hyde was left home.

Jim McDonald was heard the other evening telling Chris. Auracher tales of the Fatherland. Jim's German is pure and unadulterated.

"King" Brady, from the city of culture and the hub of the universe, made a great impression upon the "gang" when he appeared on the avenue Sunday in his new togs.

The Blank men played such a rotten game last week that McCarty and Reese are sorry they had not been elected manager as they feel they could bring about better results than Ecker.

The limit of 90 days has been reached in the case of the "fire victims" from Baltimore. Work is at a standstill in the latter city and in all probability these men will be walking the street for the summer.

The one redeeming feature of the Blank men's game was the playing of Andy Bergerson. He made a hit each time at the bat and would have won the game had it not been for mistakes in baserunning made by some of his nine.

It hos often been noted that the orders issued by the authorities of the office to the employes are couched in language which, to say the least, is harsh. The latest one, like all the others, warns those violating its provisions that a "suspension" will follow. Some have read "dismissal." These terms grate upon the sensibilities of many and do nothing in aiding in the enforcement of the rules. They rather suggest the cry of "bug-a-boo" used to frighten bad children. These orders must also prove interesting reading to visitors.

PASTE.

Specification Notes.

The cry is "anything for g's, n's, or r's."

Now and then one ventures to bring out that last year's straw hat.

Billy Howlin snatched first prize at a private euchre party last week.

The first breath of spring and exposure to drafts have resulted in some severe colds.

Several yet have a few days leave coming, which is very tantalizing to those who have none.

The "Spess" is never without an "issue," but the one paramount is that which relates to the average.

The lunch venders occasionally vary the bill of fare and let us have strawberry shortcake on top of pig's feet.

Judge Davis, of the Anacostia circuit, leads the printer kindergarten people in high-bred fowls and early garden truck.

With house-cleaning season the galley banks have been treated to a coat of paint and the brass galleys shine like new buttons.

A. E. Smoot, late of this division and a son of Capt. E. D. Smoot, has been certified to by the Civil Service Commission and appointment tendered for service at Manila, P. I.

In anticipation of the holiday of next Monday the following-named gentlemen were sent over as a detail from the main office on Tuesday: L. B. Cooley, Owen L. Carter, Thos. Doonan, Oliver C. McCardell, and Charles A. Morgan.

The friends of J. Walton Naylor will all be pleased to learn that he is making a success of his paper, the Allentown (N. J.) Messenger, which he launched a year or two ago. A further evidence of good luck came on the 18th instant when his family was enlarged by one—a boy.

Miss Julia M. Burke will take a three-months' leave with friends at her home in St. Louis, Mo., beginning June 1. This will give her ample time to get acquainted with a very young nephew, visit the Exposition, and appropriate the small blocks of time remaining to a rest well earned.

The many friends of W. F. Walsmith have assured that gentleman that the only reason for his defeat for teller at the recent election was the fact that his candidacy was sprung too late. The announcement is now made that he will be a candidate next year, when the management will see to it that full and timely notice is given.

Some spirited games of baseball are witnessed nearly every week day evening between local clubs on the Mahone lot, but as yet the "Spess" is not represented, though we have some lively sprints, as witness the time made in passing "run-downs," stealing bases, and home runs with each blowing of the whistle and the timekeeper's tri-daily visits.

Connors instructed his wife to purchase for him a pair of suspenders, with the stipulation that they should be of the brand known as "The President's." When the purchase was made "Roosevelt" suspenders were called for. The accommodating salesman disputed not his customer, but received the price with thanks and with a smile that was almost audible.

THE DEPARTED HEROES.

Those gallant boys in blue,
To the Union ever true,
Are sleeping 'neath the sod of mother earth;
Self-sacrificing, brave,
Gave their lives the flag to save,
That America might have a second birth.

This nation now is free,
And the islands of the sea
Have learned to sing of liberty and peace;
From the seeds of civil strife
This country took new life
Whose prestige and power for good will never cease.

We are gathered here to-day
To strew flowers by the way
And with comrades chant the stirring battle song;
Let us emulate their zeal,
Come there either woe or weal,
And cheer them for their valor loud and long.

United once again
From the South and West to Maine
This happy land is marching grandly on
To the music of the free,
Floating out from sea to sea,
Which was written by its father—Washington.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

As it is always interesting to know to what defeated candidates attribute their defeat and how they take it, I will give the substance of my recent interviews with those who, though having my support, still went down before the cyclone.

Maj. John T. Herbert: "As I never expected to be elected, I am not worrying why I wasn't."

Dr. James R. Armstrong: "I can't account for it. I had enough votes pledged to me to elect two vice presidents."

C. W. Herzinger: "I think the idea was to rebuke a man of brains who sought so insignificant an office."

W. M. Garrett: "Why don't you ask the grease spot how the pile driver came to hit him?"

Howard G. Brown: "My defeat was accomplished by the pernicious activity of Mr. Bright's friends."

Charles E. Holmes: "I forgot that Bright was in the race and was only trying to beat Brown."

F. N. Whitehead: "I guess it served me right. A man so unpopular as to run fifth in his own chapel has no business in union politics."

P. S. Steele: "I was all right until within the last thirty-six hours. I don't know what happened during that time."

T. F. Ellis: "I can only ascribe it to the unwillingness of the union to send a man back to his home at its expense."

W. L. Gutelius: "I could have been elected easily enough but for my natural gallantry. Ladies first, you know."

T. F. Hall: "What does St. Louis amount to any way? I've been there a hundred times."

Harry C. Knapp: "I knocked the stuffin' out of Spadge in our own chapel, any way, and that's a whole lot of glory."

I have received a copy of the Decorah (Iowa) Posten, a Norwegian paper, in which was a translation of a story of mine, "The Man Who Wouldn't Advertise," made by Oscar Nelson, of the First Division. It had been worked on the readers of the Typographical Journal, but under its new title, "Manden, Som Ikke Vilde Avertere," and in its new dress Bramwood might safely republish it without danger of its being recognized. Mr. Nelson uses these complimentary words in mentioning me:

Mr. Arthur F. Bloomer er Korrekturloeser i Regjeringens Trukkeri, hvor han har havt Unsoettelje siden tidlig i Suttiaarene.

I hope to deserve them in the future. I have enjoyed Mr. Nelson's translation very much and feel greatly complimented that he thought well enough of my work to translate it.

* * * *

I recently received a letter from Howard S. Branson, who worked several sessions on the Record and some time in the Spess and the Treasury Branch. He has been located in Atlantic City for the past seven years, where he accumulated a wife, two children, and a home to keep them in. He mentioned having met Mr. Bass there last summer, and he asks what has become of L. Hearn Patterson. There are many who will remember Branson.

The Timothy Class (of young men) of the Ninth Street (northeast) Christian Church, which is known as "The Printers' Church," from the large number of printers and their families who are connected with it, gave a musical and literary entertainment last Friday night, which was well attended. Among the entertainers was John J. Ottinger, of the Proof Room, who has become so skillful a performer on the graphophone that he was on the programme twice, his snappy rendition of his several numbers being loudly applauded.

* * * *

Somebody sent me a fake telephone message last Thursday to the effect that Lynch had carried this union by three votes, whereupon I executed a cute little dance and relieved myself of several "Hahas!" I have been glad ever since that I danced before waiting for confirmation.

* * * *

The Star of last Saturday had a severe editorial spasm because of a threatened strike on account of the employment of a non-union man, accompanied by a refusal to take him into the union. It says:

Two principles are involved—first, the right of the employer to hire any efficient workers he wishes; second, the right of those workers, if not members of the union, to join the union to protect themselves. Carried to its logical limit, the refusal to work with non-union men and to permit them to unionize themselves would speedily create a class of willing but ostracised workers, utterly without a chance to earn a livelihood.

The Star evidently believes in the right of a man to be alternately a scab and a union man, as his immediate interests may seem to dictate. No man is refused membership in a labor union if he is competent and has not violated his obligations. But if he has once proved false and untrustworthy the union has a right to refuse him another opportunity to betray it and equally the right to refuse to work with him. But I am under the impression that the scab has the Star's sympathies under all circumstances—at least as long as he is useful in thwarting the union. Further than that probably no workingman is interesting to that paper.

* * * *

My interviews with the successfu local candidates since the election have been in the highest degree gratifying, and though most embarrassing to a modest man, yet I feel it my duty to report them.

President Berg: "Your nomination and support at the start gave me a lead that I never lost. I feel that I owe it all to you."

Vice-President Love: "You seem to have the art of giving a man just the kind of support necessary to carry him in, and to that I owe my election."

Secretary Seibold: "I know of nothing that brought me so many votes as your support of Garrett. Otherwise he would have beaten me."

Treasurer Bright: "You were the first to announce me, months ago, and from that moment I was a winner."

Delegate Parsons: "I believe the fact that Knapp had been an apprentice under you helped me more than any other one thing."

Delegate Vaughan: "I could not have been elected without your support. I would give anything to have your influence in the union."

Delegate Wilson: "I should not have thought of being a candidate had not you suggested it, and could not have been elected but for you."

Delegate Kidd: "Your words, 'I've just got to have Kidd,' when I first announced myself, were a tower of strength to me and pulled me through." But some time I am going to let the union do as it pleases, just to see what kind of offices it would elect.

* * * *

E. M. Blake, of the Bureau of Labor, visited the office last Saturday for the first time since the occupancy of the new building. He is an ex-delegate and in former years worked in almost all parts of the G. P. O., but has been in the Labor Bureau for about fifteen years.

* * * *

"One thing that struck me in looking over the table of your election returns in THE TRADES UNIONIST," said a gentlemen not connected with the printing business, "is the fact that Mr. Berg received every vote of the division of which he is foreman. A foreman who has not incurred the enmity of a single man under him must be all right in every way."

* * * *

No, dear Belcher, I had no idea of poking the knife under your fifth rib, but couldn't refrain from offering McC. and McP. a suggestion to help them in their seeming difficulty.

* * * *

Very gratifying votes were given for Nichols, McCaffery, and Crowley for trustees of the Home by this Union, and very complimentary ones for Morrison, Garrett, and Foster for delegates to the A. F. of L. Goodkey also did fairly well for the latter office.

* * * *

Out of over 1,700 votes in this union there were 324 cast against I. T. U. Secretary-Treasurer Bramwood. If St. Peter were to stand for re election as gate keeper of the Holy City I think there would be just about 324 votes in this union against him.

* * * *

Thomas B. Brown, foreman of the Kansas State printing office, has been elected a delegate from Topeka to the St. Louis I. T. U. convention. Mr. Brown is a friend of mine. We have never met, but we have had some correspondence and I have been the recipient of several courtesies at his hands.

* * * *

Boston Union gave Lynch 67 majority over Hawkes; gave Morrison 379, Garrett 155, and Goodkey 40 votes for delegate to the A. F. of L., and Nichols 380, McCaffrey 383, and Crowley 379 votes for trustee of the Home. David X. Coughlin was elected president; Henry Sterling, secretary; Frank M. Flanagan, treasurer; Thomas A. Barry, Geo. H. Fullerton, Fred H. Harwood, John Lorway, N. J. Rodgers, and P. B. S. Thayer, from the newspaper branch, and James Bonar, J. E. Dolan, Harry W. Hall, J. M. A. Higgins, W. F. Jeffs, and Charles O. Wood, book and job branch, executive committee; Philip McAnany, James M. Punch, James H. Barry, and Andrew C. Stewart, delegates to St. Louis.

* * * *

Up to Saturday night, the latest advices I have (and these are straight), Lynch had 6,187 majority over Hawkes in 508 unions, and only about 5,000 votes to hear from. Now will you be good?

* * * *

W. E. ("Kid") Shields, whose regular job is reading on the Denver Evening Times, is temporarily in charge of the proof room of the Rocky Mountain News, a morning paper issued from the same establishment. Mr. Shields eschews night work whenever possible, which is why he does not retain the News job.

* * * *

Dr. James Dick Bridger, for several years a proofreader and copy editor in the G. P. O., is one of the staff of physicians of Bellevue Hospital, New York. He is a very capable physician and has brilliant prospects for the future.

* * * *

If we are rendering Lynch's election certain by our attitude toward him, how can Mr. Bloomer regard us as thereby disfiguring our columns? And if by "throwing mud" at him we are doing him "valuable service," where does the kick come in? Mr. Bloomer is a nice man. Pity he has to keep his wits in bloomers in order to fit them to the exigencies of advocating the election of such a man as Lynch.—St. Paul Minnesota Union Advocate.

The election showed the correctness of my estimate of the value of "mud slinging," and therefore I have not now nor have had any kind of a kick at Mr. Editor Guiney, for my early farm experience taught me that the guinea says more and produces less than any other bird, and necessarily all his language is fowl. Seven thousand for Lynch and Lynch majorities still coming in! Guinea-keet! Guinea-keet!

The Cadett Benefit.

The committee who had charge of the recent entertainment for the family of George H. Cadett desire to express their thanks to all who assisted in making the affair a financial success. About $250 was realized on the entertainment.

Among those who assisted in making the affair a success were John R. Galloway, in charge of the euchre; Rev. E. X. Fink, S. J.; P. J. Nee, Parker, Bridget & Co., Peter Grogan Company, John Rudden, John W. Schafer, Saks & Co., A. and P. Tea Company, Prof. Will Kirkland and orchestra, and many others.

Even the wise man who thinks he knows it all dosen't know why the strenuous old hen lays an egg instead of standing it on end.

Election Aftermath.

Armstrong made a strong home run.

It was a one, two, three affair with the auditors.

Herbert got votes in all the chapels, but not enough.

We knew there would be regrets if Mr. Steele was defeated.

Kidd made best time as he hove in sight of the grand stand.

The little word "if" shows unmistakable signs of overwork.

Harry Knapp made a good impression and his turn may yet come.

Seibold loped and plunged ahead as if the track were in prime condition.

In the language of Ananias, each voter exercised his individual choice.

From first to last till the votes were in 'twas in the air that Vaughan would win.

It was a very tight squeeze between Hawkes and Lynch, if that signifies anything.

After awhile it may be deemed advisable to organize a XX-delegate association.

The friends of Mr. King verified the wisdom of Mr. Bloomer's choice for alternate.

The ayes have it on the proposition that Gutelius has splendid prospects for next year.

Who will say there's nothing in a name—take that of the Vice-President-elect, for example.

Not because we want to, but we fail to discover any leaders or blankouts in Garrett's columns.

There were fewer "I-told-you-so" people on the board walk than usual on election night.

The man who picked the winners has regained his voice, which may be heard several blocks away.

The vote of this Union for Secretary Bramwood, of the International, shows a confidence unimpaired.

The returns show that the hatching in some of the chapels turned out goslings from eggs of another setting.

Titus Ellis was good natured through it all, and was not downcast when the proof showed that he had made a mistake in his upcast.

The returns would seem to indicate that Berg's friends of the Sixth Division imagined that he would need all they gave him, but he didn't.

Everybody was pleased with Miss Wilson's canvass. A less attractive personality would probably have finished with good wishes only.

Goodkey in his race for delegate to the A. F. of L. beat himself seven votes—that is, he got seven more votes for delegate than for trustee.

It would seem that all that Secretary Frank Morrison has to do is to let people know that he wants it again, so well does he perform the duties of that office.

None will contend that the vote given T. Frank Hall for delegate is the measure of appreciation which the membership of 101 holds for services rendered by that gentleman.

The much-mooted question which had for its object the ascertainment of the real age of Ann was settled last Wednesday, when she attained her majority. Arnold made the discovery.

The official vote by chapels, issued exclusively by THE TRADES UNIONIST, was much sought after and greatly appreciated, even by those who find profit in reading the paper but are not subscribers.

The suggestion may have the elements of previousness, but if conditions favor a second term Mr. Seibold would find in Mr. Jenkins a good hand at nominating, and besides there goes with each package a degree of security as complete as though it were actually blown in the bottle.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

NOTICE.

During the months of June, July, and August this office will be closed at 12 o'clock noon Saturdays.

Post Chapel.

G. R. Scott is the latest addition to our force of machine subs.

J. E. Chase has been assigned to machine 14, vacated by J. H. Broderick.

W. F. Byers is another of our force who was prevented by sickness from casting his ballot in the late election.

Peter Embser departed Tuesday morning for Dansville, N. Y., on a visit to his aged father, who is quite sick.

"Shorty," Pete, a Charley or two, and several other members of this chapel, sympathize greatly with the St. Asaph people in their present troubles.

John McCormick is absent from work since last Friday. He was pretty badly bruised up on that day by a fall from a street car near his home in Hyattsville.

Edw. Osborne, foreman of the stereotyping department, who has been sick at his home for the past several weeks, was last week removed to Providence Hospital where he is slowly improving.

Willis L. Hall, a machine sub on the Post, has accepted a situation at Burlington, Vt., and departed Tuesday for his new field of work. Mr. Hall was an employe of the big printery the past winter.

"Uncle Sam" got in ahead of our boys and rented the cottage at Hunter's Creek that sheltered the fishing club last season. The club still lives and flourishes, and I'll tell you about it next week.

Victor Hurley has returned from West Virginia mountains but little improved in health. He was at the office on election day, but has not gained sufficient strength to resume his place as one of the Post's makers-up.

D. L. Sandoe is spending a few weeks in the sapphire country of North Carolina. In a recent letter to C. E. Sayles he is lavish in praise of the health-giving qualities of the climate and glowing in description of the grandeur of the scenery.

"Uncle John" Griffin is in such poor health that he was unable to come from his home in Alexandria on election day. It has been many a day since "Uncle John" has failed to exercise his right to express a choice for International and local officers.

"Si" Perkins has recently sprung a couple of poetic effusions on the boys. Both were appropriate and timely, but the originality of the last one is questioned by Orton Pierce. "Si" declares he dug it out of his own "tink-tank," and until O. T. can produce a former copy what "Si" says goes.

J. H. Broderick, who has been contributing to the columns of THE TRADES UNIONIST from this chapel, has resigned from the Post force and accepted employment on the Star. Mr. Broderick has been chairman of this chapel for the past eighteen months, and has on more than one occasion demonstrated his fitness for the position, at times a trying one. After the acceptance of Mr. Broderick's resignation by the chapel and the election of his successor, the following was offered by Francis Benzler and seconded in a few glowing words by J. Monroe Kreiter:

Resolved, That the members of the Washington Post chapel hereby extend to Mr. J. H. Broderick, the retiring chairman, a rising vote of thanks for the very commendable and conscientious manner in which he has conducted the office and for the uniform kindness and favors extended during his tenure of office, and bespeaking for him an unbounded measure of success in his new field of labor and the same kindly feeling of regards and esteem among his newly chosen fellow-craftsmen.

After the adoption of the resolution, Mr. Broderick arose to express his appreciation, etc., but choked up before proceeding far and was unable to proceed, resembling for the moment the old familiar bashful schoolboy. Later on the trusty "Merg." was brought into play, and the result was a very graceful card of thanks bearing Mr. Broderick's signature, which now has a place on the bulletin board. The Post's loss is the Star's gain.

First Division.

The editor of the bulletin board has no occasion for working overtime now days.

"Hero" must have gotten in on the Carnegie fund and gone out of commission.

J. Fred Gambrill, who held Slug 43 during the winter, is now employed at Wilmington, Del.

Fred Berger, of this division, will receive your subscription to THE TRADES UNIONIST.

W. H. Moss (Slug 71), R. H. Mayers (Slug 104), and L. Woodward (Slug 158) are enjoying their annual leave of absence.

John O'Brien, who is entered in the Times free trip to St. Louis contest, has over 22,000 coupons deposited to his credit, which places him third on the list.

L. E. Wheeler, who has worked in this division during the past winter on the temporary roll, resigned on Saturday and has returned to his home in Lynn, Mass.

Harry S. Gunn, the bankman, entertained his brother from Missouri last week. "Johnny" loaded him up with pink lemonade and planked shad, and sent him on his way rejoicing.

Imposer Burnside has been doing his annual stunt, which consists of working in this division, in the old building, the basement, and two or three other places at the same time.

My friend Sutton's latest attempt was not nearly so serious as the one at the time he bumped up against the window pane. However, time and place may have had something to do with the other.

J. N. Cobb has discovered that it requires more than gasoline to run his auto. He recently forfeited $10 collateral for exceeding the speed limit. He has one consolation, however, there are no speed restrictions in this room.

The small vote received by Frank Hall in this division in no wise cast the slightest reflection on that gentleman. Mr. Hall made no personal solicitations, and his best friends never considered him very serious in his appirations.

Foreman Bowen's bowlers didn't do a thing but take two out of three games from Foreman Berg's bowlers in the contest game on last Friday night. The team from this division was composed of Nachman, Richards, Robinson, Jones, and Schinnerer.

If President Lynch has any plums that he can hand out Washingtonward, I hope he will not overlook my friend Broderick, of the Washington Post. Although he did call me a toy pistol at the outset of the campaign, I am quite ready to forgive him, and wish him a place in the Lynch band wagon.

The temporary force is gradually diminishing. On Tuesday W. L. Griffis, Fred. C. Chase, Chas. Hildebrand, and Chas. W. Kirkly completed their six months' service. What applies to one applies to all—they are good printers and good fellows, and all have the best wishes of the entire room.

Among the piano performers who will assist at the Lieberman concert tomorrow evening is Miss Sadie Lloyd, daughter of Frank Lloyd, who so successfully performs on the rule cases in this division. One would hardly take Frank to be the father of two charming young ladies who are just budding into womanhood.

While moving from this city to Langdon on Monday of last week, one of the wagons containing the household goods of Billy Love was accidentally set on fire and almost entirely destroyed. It was somewhat of a set back to the finishing touches of his vice-presidential campaign, but he come under the wire a winner nevertheless.

Geo. R. Boone, of the cage, spent the early part of last week up in the mountains of West Virginia. Leaving here on a very warm day George forgot to take along his overcoat. When he arrived at Sulphur Springs he discovered a drop in the mercury of several degrees, thus necessitating the spending of his vacation sitting by a log fire and telling dog stories.

One hundred and fifty-four votes out of a possible 170 is a record seldom given a candidate, and yet that is the vote give our own Billy Leavitt, of this division. Mr. Leavitt is one of those fellows who can earnestly solicit votes for his friends, at the same time make no enemies for himself. I am sure one of these days he will hold a higher position than member of the Board of Trustees.

In a conversation with a friend of mine the other day he advocated the election next year of a colored delegate, advancing the claim that the colored members pay into the union more money than the ladies, the issue on which so many members seemed influenced into voting for our present lady-elect delegate. However, I am not making any suggestions, but will turn the matter over entirely to James Monroe Kreiter.

The innocent-looking little article under an Indianapolis date which appeared at the head of the election news in Thursday morning's Post, bore all the ear marks of home manufacture. Since the Post boys gave the editorial man a bum steer on the Lynch question there is no telling what they may be able to do to the telegraph man. Anyhow, that telegram failed to appear in any of the other metropolitan dailies published in the East—Harrisburg, Pa., excepted.

THE TRADES UNIONIST is to be congratulated for the impartial manner in which it conducted itself during the recent campaign. That Messrs. Patton and Ring had their personal preferment of candidates goes without saying, but that they refrained from displaying that preferment in THE TRADES UNIONIST is a fact much to their credit. I trust those of our membership who are not subscribers will become so at once, thus encouraging the editors and at the same time relieving themselves of the necessity of borrowing.

In assuming the role of a correspondent for THE TRADES UNIONIST from this division, I wish to disclaim any intention to pose as a literary genius, or to seek notoriety. Realizing that each is interested more or less in the others welfare, and that we are all interested in THE TRADES UNIONIST, I am willing to do my share in bringing about happy results. I trust that all those who may receive mention in these notes will receive them in the spirit in which they are written—with malice toward none and the best wishes for all.

Now that the election is over and each of us have been able to figure out how it all happened, and how it might have been different, it occurs to me that should I ever be so unfortunate as to run for office (this does not apply to alternate) the first thing I would do would be to secure a lady to manage my campaign. Somehow or other I have reached the conclusion that, aside from her own charming personality, in a large measure Miss Wilson's election was due to the able assistance of Miss Laura Gordon and others of her sex who participated in the campaign just closed.

C. S. GUNN.

R. L. Davidson has announced himself for teller for next year.

A. W. Sefton fell over the iron rug at the G street entrance of the new building last week and broke one of his ribs.

Did you notice Charlie Leeds and his full-dress suit at the G. P. O. Council, National Union, celebration last Monday night?

Messrs. Oliver McCardell, Thomas Doonan, L. B. Cooley, Owen Carter, and Charles A. Morgan were detailed to the Spess Monday.

Six candidates ran for teller in this room last week. Edgar Bennett and "Doc" Trudgian were elected, receiving 51 and 42 votes, respectively.

This is the Times' year, it seems, at elections. Secretary Seibold, Delegate Parsons, and Stereotypers' Delegate-elect Larkin are the successful ones.

It is to be regretted that such an able and deserving man as Philip S. Steele should be defeated for the office of delegate. Such, though, is the way of politics.

Though not elected, Titus F. Ellis is just as proud of every vote he received, and especially of the large number in his own room, even after forty-six new men were assigned there just before election.

The words of encouragement received by the candidate prior to the election sounds like the sweet music of lyres, but the result of the vote leads him to believe that it was the old familiar "jolly" of the liars.

Tom L. Jones, that prince of entertainers, is receiving congratulations for the splendid and successful entertainment given by the G. P. O. Council of the National Union on Monday night at National Rifles' Armory.

Pard Bloomer, as usual, got on the wrong side again. The First Division bowling team made the Record team take to the woods, and as soon as Bloomer and his team gets a reputation a return game will be played.

The vibration of this building is very noticeable on the sixth floor. The large presses in the top of the structure probably cause it. Whether it is dangerous to the building or not would require the judgment of one more familiar with architecture than myself.

While some of the other correspondents are bragging on their accommodating messengers, we do not become jealous. D. R. Walters, of this division, is at all times gentlemanly, courteous, and accommodating and has the friendship of every man in the room.

An amusing incident came under our observation quite recently. In order to bring himself within range of the dictionary, which stands on a pedestal about 4 feet high, "Shorty" Huss was seen standing on a page paper. Truly "necessity is the mother of invention."

G. P. O. printers will play a game of ball with the Baltimore printers on Decoration Day at the American League grounds, on Seventh street northwest, at 10.30 a. m. The proceeds are to go to the Amos Cummings Memorial Fund. W. R. Love is the captain for the G. P. O. players.

Judge Mabrey, now assistant inspector of customs at St. Louis, in a letter to Phil Nachman, states he has a large house which can accommodate 15 to 20 people. As he would prefer to have his old friends, any one contemplating going can secure rooms by applying to Phil Nachman, this division.

We had always accepted the biblical theory that there was but one road to hell—the broad one—but "Maud S." has added two more, making three. Now, if the sign boards are only properly and legibly lettered we hope to escape the torments promised the erring ones upon arriving at the aforementioned place.

The reader will recall an item which appeared in these notes three months ago wherein it was stated that John B. Dickman, of this division, was called to the bedside of his father, whose life was despaired of at the time. It is a pleasure, to Mr. Dickman at least, to chronicle the news that he is now engaged in entertaining his father and mother at his home here.

Lovers of baseball will have the opportunity of witnessing one of the finest games of baseball on Decoration Day, between teams made up of Baltimore and Washington printers, that will be held around Washington on that day. Manager "Billy" Love has gotten together an aggregation that will be a credit to No. 101. Tickets are only 25 cents, and it admits you to the grand stand. The proceeds will go toward the Cummings Memorial Fund, and as this is a most worthy object, it is hoped that the efforts of the management will be appreciated and a good crowd will turn out.

A. M. Butler tells a good one. Shortly after he was married his wife was a little nervous when starting on a railroad journey by herself. He put her on the train one day at Atlanta, put her ticket in her purse, and told her good-bye. When the conductor came around she handed him the piece of cardboard. He looked at it, turned it over, looked at her, and handed it back without punching it, then went on. After a while she took it out to see why the conductor had acted so strangely and discovered that she had handed her husband's working card to him and that the conductor was passing her on it.

G. P. O. Council, No. 211, National Union, celebrated National Union Day in a manner that can not be eclipsed by any.

The "plunker" is a selfish proposition. Looks as if you were afraid to have your candidate take his chances with the others.

Jed Shaw, who was overcome by an attack of vertigo several days ago, is still confined to his home, although his condition is somewhat improved.

The G. P. O. Veterans' Club gave another of their enjoyable socials last Saturday evening. Colonel Pierson delivered an address, and, after an excellent programme, refreshments were served.

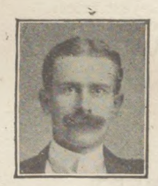
Big magazine this week, and the following contingent has arrived to help out the "pape": J. G. Hickok, John A. Simas, A. C. Nelson, and E. O. Whitman, from the Third Division; L. D. Wheeldon, L. L. Dixon, W. B. Tanner, J. A. Morrow, and George E. Clark, from the Fourth Division.

The Woman's Auxiliary will give a euchre on Saturday evening. Don't forget it. A special meeting was held last Saturday, at which a number of new members were admitted to membership. They need but five or six more members to entitle them to two delegates. It is "up to you" to see that they get them and keep their place as the banner auxiliary.

H. J. REDFIELD.

Death of A. J. McGuiggan.

Arthur James McGuiggan, one of the old-time members of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, died on Sunday last.



The deceased was 75 years of age at the time of his death, and was well known to the newspaper fraternity of Washington. He was a continuous member of the union for over fifty years.

Woman's Auxiliary of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101.

The International Woman's Auxiliary of the International Typographical Union was organized at Cincinnati, Ohio, August 13, 1902. There were only five local auxiliaries represented in that convention. To-day there are thirty-five auxiliaries in good standing, and there will be a substantial addition to the roll when the International holds its convention at St. Louis in August of this year.

Auxiliary No. 13, of Columbia Union No. 101, effected a temporary organization in October, 1902. About a dozen ladies of the Specification chapel constituted the membership. And this faithful band have stood by the organization through all its vicissitudes to its present proportions, when it ranks as the banner auxiliary of the country, and there is every prospect that it will send two delegates to the convention in August. On February 9, 1903, a permanent organization was formed. Then a series of meetings were held, to which the members of the families of all union printers were invited. After the third meeting they applied for a charter with a charter roll of sixty-four members.

Miss LAURA B. GORDON,
President of Auxiliary No. 13.

Miss Laura B. Gordon, the president of the Auxiliary of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, is now serving her second term in that office. She has shown considerable executive ability, and the Auxiliary has flourished under her management, being now the largest auxiliary in the United States or Canada.

Miss Gordon was born in the city of Saginaw, in the county of Saginaw and State of Michigan, and was educated in the public schools of that city. She served her apprenticeship with the Courier-Herald Printing Company and became affiliated with Valley City Union, No. 50, of Saginaw, in 1888, and was appointed in the Government Printing Office in September, 1891. She is a member of the German Beneficial Union, No. 183, holding the president's chair for two years; is serving her fifth term as a director of the Union Building Relief Association; is a member of Woman's Relief Corps of Lincoln Post, G. A. R.; is a past councillor of the Patriotic Order of Americans, and is a representative in the National Council of the Daughters of America.

When the International convention met in Washington, in 1903, Miss Gordon was chosen its first vice-president.

Mrs. E. H. THOMAS,
Chairman of Entertainment Committee.

Mrs. E. H. Thomas, chairman of the Entertainment Committee of Washington Auxiliary No. 13, has had considerable experience in women's organizations, and has done much to promote the welfare of the local auxiliary. In the past three months she has, with the assistance of an active and efficient committee, turned into the treasury over $300 by a series of entertainments. She has been an active worker in the organization since its formation, and is well remembered by the older members of Columbia Union for her activity and good work in connection with both the fairs given by the union in its Temple on G street. She was one of the promoters of the Woman's Veteran Relief Union, John A. Logan Command No. 2, and president the first two years of its existence, being chosen later as delegate to the National Encampment at Lima, Ohio. She was also an active participant in the work of the Woman's Relief Corps of the G. A. R. In more recent years she has been devoting considerable time and attention to the Order of the Eastern Star, being a past matron of Bethlehem Chapter No. 7, and is held in high esteem by its membership. In her connection with Lady Maccabees of the World she holds membership in National Hive, No. 1, of this city.

The auxiliary has been well supported by Columbia Union in all its undertakings. The objects of the Auxiliary are to act under the guidance of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, to assist in its work, and to instill Trades Unionism in the women relatives of its members, and to push the label. The wives, mothers, unmarried daughters and sisters of members, and women members of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, are eligible to membership.

A SHORT BUSINESS SESSION

Carpenters' Matter in Hands of Special Committee—A Local Firm Wants List of Union Members—Musicians and Lafayette Square Opera House—Upholsterers' Trouble With the Boston House.

The regular weekly meeting of the Central Labor Union was called to order at 8 p. m. Monday, President Sherman in the chair.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Delegate Pyles, of Hospital Attendants Union, No. 8097, was obligated.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication received from Local No. 148, Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen, stating that an agreement had been reached with the A. Loeffler Sausage and Provision Co., and asking that said firm be taken from the unfair list. The request was complied with.

A communication was received from Saks & Co. asking for a list of all members of labor organizations in the city. Placed on file and Saks & Co. to be notified that secretary has no way of furnishing information.

ROLL CALL OF UNIONS.

Amalgamated Carpenters, First Branch, stated that the time limit given by special committee on Carpenters matter did not give the Locals interested, time to officially appoint a committee to meet the special committee. In this connection President Sherman reported that during the last week he had appointed Delegate Brinkman on the special committee, vice Delegate Adams, resigned.

Bottlers asked for information as to contract submitted at last meeting which were referred to Contract Committee.

Musicians asked that the usual course be pursued in their grievance with the Lafayette Square Opera House. The Secretary stated that he would comply with request.

Upholsterers stated that the committee of one from each local was unwieldy, and reported that a committee of seven be appointed to handle their grievance with Woodward & Lothrop. The chair complied with request and appointed a new committee.

OUR PHILADELPHIA LETTER.

Election Items of Interest From the City of Brotherly Love.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., May 31, 1904.

J. J. Cooney, who is known in Washington, was defeated for vice-president.

Nine hundred and thirty-eight votes were polled for president, of which Calvert received 568; Bodine, 370.

"Billy" Seltzer, well known in Washington, is making good as foreman of the North American. He displays excellent executive ability.

Charles S. Clayton, a comparatively young man in the union, was again chosen secretary over two old wheelhorses of No. 2—Henry Savage and Larry Meyer. Clayton had the support of Calvert.

There were nineteen candidates for delegates to St. Louis. The successful ones were: John J. Boote and Albert K. Voorhees, bookmen; and W. C. McPherson, of the Ledger, and C. J. Zentmeyer, of the North American.

The present administration was highly successful at the recent election. President A. D. Calvert was again chosen. This will be his third term. His opponent was B. Frank Bodine, who was chairman of the Philadelphia delegation at the Washington convention.

Organizer Hawkes is prosecuting his work, and is making up for the time he lost during his campaign against President Lynch. Only those who are close to him and his associates know of what is being done. It is said that thorough system of having the subscribers stop the newspapers they are after is being pushed vigorously. It is much on the order of the Los Angeles arrangement. It is intimated that it is a costly method, but it is generally approved.

The name of Shelby Smith is at the head of The Trades Union News at the present time. With him is associated T. J. McCaffrey. The paper is thirty-one numbers old, and does not have a prosperous appearance, as the "ads" are very light. It is edited in Shelby's best style, and the selection of plate matter is on the wage-earners line. The announcement of the result of No. 2's election is made in black headlines, and Hawkes success reads: "Hawkes beat Lynch in Philadelphia by over 200 votes."

No. 2 has for a year or more been trying a number of its members for being members of an "inside" organization. At the April meeting the trial board made its report which found all guilty. There was a large number present. The Union rejected the findings of the trial board by a vote of 131 to 101. And thus ends a chapter covering a very important part of No. 2's career, and there should be a getting together now for the Union's good. Mr. Cooney, the defeated candidate for vice-president, defended the accused members and demonstrated that he is lawyer of no mean ability.

The Child of Art

WILLIAM TIPTON TALBOTT

The child of art, his fate seems hard;
The sacred debt which he has laid
Upon the world is by the world
In worldly wealth but poorly paid.

Even at the best, half understood,
He stands ashiver in the cold
Of patronizing smiles, and yearns
For sympathy mid showers of gold.

With weary heart and eager brain
Forever striving toward the best,
The grandest outburst of his song
Is but a vision of unrest.

The chiseled stone or painted scene,
Which ever holds the world apart
From care an instant, does but mock
What glowed within his fervid heart.

Yet on, still on, through mortal years,
O'er heights by ceaseless effort gained,
He seeks with strange unbending pride
The beautiful, the unattained.

JOHN HENRY BONER.

A Proposition to Carry His Remains to His Native State.

Dr. Marcus Benjamin, Ph. D., editor of the Smithsonian Institution and National Museum publications, who was associated with the late John Henry Boner in the work of compiling the Standard Dictionary in 1892-94, and who remained his warm friend until Mr. Boner's death, something more than a year ago, is engaged on a project to convey the remains of the deceased printer-poet to his beloved North Carolina and erect a suitable and appropriate tablet or monument over his resting place. Dr. Benjamin recently published an article reviewing Boner's life and quoting extensively from his poems, with a view of awakening interest in the man who had sung sweetly of the beauties of the Old North State. He tells of his birth at Salem in 1845, of his learning the printer's art, of his editorial connection with papers in Salem and Asheville, of his service as reading clerk of the State constitutional convention in 1868 and as chief clerk of the North Carolina house of representatives in 1869-70, of his coming to Washington soon after and obtaining employment in the Government Printing Office as compositor and later as proofreader, of his presidency of Columbia Typographical Union, of his dismissal from the office in 1886 for political reasons, of his publishing "Whispering Pines" and thereby gaining recognition for him by such literary celebrities as Edmund Clarence Stedman, who obtained employment for him on the Century Dictionary, of the various employments he had in New York and his life and work in that city, of his return to Washington, of his illness here and journey to North Carolina in search of health, and finally of his death and burial in "an unmarked grave in an obscure cemetery in Washington," concluding with the following:

> And What of the Man? I have tried to tell, in his own words, so far as possible, the story of the life of my friend Boner, and my effort will not have been in vain if perchance my poor endeavor finds favor among the men and women of the Old North State he loved so loyally, and of whose beauties he sang so sweetly, and it may be—I pray that it may be so—that they may bring him home at last to rest in the little Moravian graveyard in Salem.

Dr. Benjamin has received some encouragement from other sources than North Carolina, as will be seen by the following extract from a letter to him from the "banker-poet" Edmund C. Stedman, who was so true an admirer and so firm a friend of Mr. Boner in his lifetime:

> You are, I see clearly, one of the loyal breed. There are so many of the other kind—and they really seem of so little use in the world! I have been reading with deep interest (as you may well understand) your touching and poetic tribute to the memory of that gentlest of minstrels, who caught his music from the Whispering Pines. If the people of his "Old North State" don't bestir themselves to restore his body to their soil, some of us must do it for them—yes, and place a fitting tablet over his grave. Possibly you might think it just as well to have his dust lie undisturbed in Washington, where he first met his literary associates and worked so long, and to have a fitting stone or monument there placed above him, for us and our successors to visit and the better to preserve his name? In any case, I feel that you will devise a subscription for some honor to his memory and call upon me as one of the earliest participants after you decide upon the proper amount to be secured.
> During Boner's swift decline I was slowly recovering from a prolonged illness which was thought at one time to be mortal. I learned of his death, and of what the Authors' fund had done to sustain him through his suffering, while I was convalescing in New England, and I sorrowed greatly that my own knowledge of his affairs had ended with my last service for him—when I enlisted the aid of Senator Depew. But for many years before that I had seen him constantly.

Mr. Boner had no warmer, truer, more sympathizing friends than his old associates in the Government Printing Office, and during his last illness in substantial ways they testified their admiration for his talents as a poet, their love for him as a friend, and their esteem for him as a man. While the present movement is being confined to his neighbors of his native State and to his literary associates and admirers, they will be glad to assist in the work if called upon.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

The chairmen of the "chapels known by number" will lay on your bench this week a little volume of verse. Buy it. It will be the extension of the helping hand to a little woman, who dispirited, mayhap, from a long siege in Providence Hospital, takes up the battle of life alone.

Possibly Brother Belcher's range of vision is too narrow—that he has not, as yet, ascended to that elevated intellectual plateau—to be able to properly appreciate the majestic serenity of the poetic thought of Brother Talbott. Instead of pouring cold water thereon, he should fan the spark of inspiration to a flame. The world were better were there more Feeneys, and Talbotts, and Rodiers.

The bright lights on the Avenue have been extended two blocks to the westward by the completion of what has been designated by act of Congress Sherman Park, by the erection of a municipal building on the power-house site, and the removal of the Mount Vernon station from Thirteenth-and-a half street to the neighborhood of Chase's Theater—all much-desired improvements, the last named in particular.

WHALER PLUCK.

[Dedicated to C. E. Hawkes.]

A whaler from Nantucket town
He had the worst of luck;
He sailed far south around the globe,
But not a whale he struck.

Three years he sailed, north, east, and west,
From pole to torrid zone,
And when he turned his course toward home
He'd neither oil nor bone.

But as he sailed around Brant Point
He let his pennant fly,
And as he tied up at the wharf
He cheerily did cry:

"We've come clean as we went out,
We didn't raise a whale,
And we ain't got a barrel of oil,
But we've had a d——d good sail."

In a number of special dispatches to the Minnesota Union Advocate, we take the following from Washington. It has "news" in it:

[Special to Minnesota Union Advocate:]

WASHINGTON, May 24.—One of the surprises of the election was the defeat of Secretary Garrett for re-election by Geo. G. Seibold. At the last moment Garrett's friends saw he was being dumped by his supposed supporters and made every effort to save him, but in vain. Garrett had been depending on the Lynch people to carry him through, but found he was being sacrificed for the I. T. U. ticket. Many Hawkes men were friendly to Garrett and went to his assistance when they discovered the scheme, and the result was that Hawkes' vote suffered. Nevertheless, he secured a majority of 66 in the face of the most desperate efforts of the Lynch crowd, which let everything else go for the head of their ticket. Whitehead, the only Lynch candidate for delegate, was also defeated.

The First Piano Maker.

It was a harpsichord maker, Cristofori, in the employ of the Duke of Tuscany, who in 1711 made the first successful piano. As curator of Ferdinand de Medici he had a splendid collection of Belgian, French, and Italian instruments to look after, and this undoubtedly aided him, though the model was so crude that the inventor could never have dreamed a monument would ever be erected in his memory. There are only two grand pianofortes of Cristofori in existence.

One decorated in gold and Chinese figures is in Florence, and the other is in the Crosby-Brown collection in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Three documents attest the authenticity of this last instrument, which was purchased from Signor Diego Martelli.

From this feeble beginning a long list of names could be mentioned of men who helped perfect the piano. But factories alone could never have achieved without royalty to encourage and virtuosos to play. Frederick the Great ordered five pianos for his palace, where they can be seen at the present day. Marie Antoinette was a patron of the art, and Clementi in England and Mozart in Germany introduced the instruments, so it became a part of life. It was in Pleyel's concert room that Chopin played, and our later firms have brought out a long list of artists—Joseffy, Paderewski and others.—Housekeeper.

Woman's Auxiliary No. 13.

The meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary on Tuesday night brought out a large attendance. After electing a large number of applicants for membership and transacting routine business, the election of two delegates and two alternates to the St. Louis convention, to be held in August next, was taken up. The result was close and exciting, Miss Katharine K. Spencer and Mrs. John A. Huston being chosen delegates and Mrs. F. C. Roberts and Carrie L. Whitehead, being elected alternates.

The Auxiliary is in a flourishing condition, and has the largest membership in the International Auxiliary.

Delegates Desmond, Thompson, and Ratigan were excused to attend meeting called by special committee of Central Labor Union to investigate ch ·ges preferred to that body by the Council against Carpenters Unions for not carrying the Council card.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The bill of THE TRADES UNIONIS under date of May 17, for $12.90, was approved and referred to Central Labor Union for payment.

ROLL CALL.

Under roll call of unions to submit business, twenty-four delegates from seventeen unions were marked present.

Stone Laborers asked for information on jobs at Eighteenth and I streets northwest and Thirteenth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest. Referred to Business Agent.

Hoisting Engineers announced the death of Joseph Huff, a member of their union and former delegate to the Council. A committee, consisting of T. F. McGuire, W. M. Lewis, and C. B. Falbush, was appointed to draft suitable resolutions on the death of the late delegate.

Iron Workers reported nonunion iron workers on job on A street, between First and Second streets northeast.

The secretary was directed to notify the unions of the attendance of delegates.

The committee appointed to draft resolutions on the death of Joseph Huff presented the following:

WHEREAS, The Almighty God has, in His infinite mercy, called our beloved brother and delegate to his eternal rest;

Be it resolved, That the Council of Allied Building Trades of the Central Labor Union extend their heartfelt sympathy to the family of the deceased brother in the hour of their bereavement;

And whereas, The brother, as a delegate to this body, was an earnest and willing worker, always ready to assist a sister union in distress; therefore

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and the resolution spread on the minutes.

The report was received and the recommendation concurred in.

There being no further business brought to the attention of the delegates, the Council adjourned.

Lives of "knockers" may remind us
How to stab and jab and swat
And leave memories behind us
Foul with atrabilious rot.

OBJECTION to the self-made man becomes justifiable when he lets his success project too far beyond the building line.

CARE killed a cat, but it glances harmless from men who prop the pillars of state during a heated political campaign.

Concerning Knockers.

Members of trades unions should strive to cultivate and encourage the spirit of fraternity. And to that end the indiscriminate "knocker" should be frowned down. For it is to be feared that, while the business requirements of unionism are generally kept in view with excellent results, the obligation to cultivate a brotherly spirit is not always given sufficient consideration. Not only in their practical relations with each other, but in social intercourse, it is well that members of unions should study good fellowship. On those occasions when the strength of unionism is severely tested it will be found that the organizations fare best in which "knockers" are few and the feeling of fraternity is strongest. A unionist, however active, has not done his whole duty until he has learned to overlook the superficial faults of his brother workman and tries to discover what is worthy of praise in his character. Unless there are excellent reasons to the contrary, he should do nothing and say nothing which will give offense to those with whom he is associated for mutual benefit and protection in the trade to which he belongs. On the other hand, without vulgar clannishness, he should seek by word and by deed to keep in friendly touch with his union associates, possibly making stronger the unionism of weaker members than himself. In other words, if he is a "knocker," he should repent and mend his ways. And at all events he should be genial and helpful and avoid the fault-finding disposition which is a sign of narrow selfishness. Unionism should be free from the contamination of the hammer and the stink pot. The glad hand and the fragrant bouquet form its surest source of vitality.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

Among those who graduated in medicine from Columbian University at the term just closed, of which the commencement exercises were held in the New National Theater last Monday evening, were Joseph Washington Halford, of North Carolina, for the past two years employed in the Weather Bureau, and Grant Samuel Barnhart, of the Fifth Division, Government Printing Office. Dr. Halford was a delegate from Raleigh, N. C., to the I. T. U. convention that met in Cincinnati in 1902 and is a member of the Association of Ex-Delegates of this city. Dr. Barnhart has for a number of years filled his present position in the Fifth Division, and is so well thought of by his associates that on his graduation he was presented a case of surgical instruments by the members of his chapel. L. J. Clements, of the Sixth Division, is a student in the same institution, but will not graduate for another year. To each of these gentlemen, who are shining lights in the art typographical, and I hope will be in the medical profession, I am indebted for invitations to the commencement exercises.

Among those who graduated from the Department of Jurisprudence and Diplomacy of the Columbian University last Tuesday night was Edmund Archus Hutchison, of the great State of Texas, but who prints in the G. P. O., who is now entitled to be called Master of Laws, he having been heretofore an LL. B. of Georgetown University, and who kindly sent me an invitation to be present. I attended the commencement exercises of the Medical Department on Monday night, and, barring the fact that all the professors who spoke were troubled with great weakness of the lungs, so that I had to take everything on trust, I enjoyed everything much. Even Professor Wiley's voice was so weak that I could catch only a sentence here and there. I did hear him say, "The doctors ought to form a union; everybody is forming unions nowadays," when the thought occurred to me that they have got about the tightest union in the country—so tight that they can reject as practitioners, by laws which they have passed, a large portion of those who have served the regular apprenticeship in the recognized colleges and which certify to their fitness to pursue the practice of medicine. Oh, yes, Professor; the doctors have a union all right, only they call it the Medical Association, and it has a scale of prices and refuses to recognize the "open shop." Talk about unions refusing to permit boys to learn trades! The doctors' union lets the boys learn the trade and then refuses to let them work at it by having an examination, before being licensed to practice, purposely made so hard that a large per cent can not pass it after their recognized schools have pronounced them competent. The lawyers play the same game. Human nature does not vary much the world over.

Mrs. William S. Waudby, wife of William S. Waudby, formerly a compositor in the G. P. O., for the past twenty years a special agent of the Bureau of Labor and now a prominent candidate for the Commissionership to succeed Col. Carroll D. Wright, recently addressed the Woman's Auxiliary of Rochester, N. Y., of which she is the president, on the aims and objects of the organization, giving a brief history of it, from its origin in Atlanta, Ga., to the present time. Mr. Waudby is a very intelligent as well as a charming lady, and as a speaker she is forceful and interesting.

The Carlisle (Pa.) Daily Herald of May 25 contained a half-tone cut of Assistant Foreman of Printing James M. A. Spottswood and a sketch of his career, from the pen of Charles H. Leeds, of the First Division, a townsman of Mr. Spottswood's in the old days. The article, after reviewing Mr. Spottswood's forty-six years' connection with the Government Printing Office, thirty-one of them in his present position, mentioned the presentation to him of bouquets of roses by his fellow-workmen on the occasion of his return to the office after his recent severe illness.

"Topsy's" glee over the first victory of his bowling team in contest with the Record team was short lived, for at the next match the Record boys wiped 'em up for three straight games. But "Topsy's" predictions in regard to Hawkes in the I. T. U. campaign show how unimportant his opinion is in general.

* * * *

However much I may feel complimented by J. W. Belcher's indorsement of what I said about Mr. Rodier's poem, I am compelled to say that his remark about William Tipton Talbott was in very bad taste, for "dreadful stuff" is not accepted by the Post and copied into many of the best papers of the country, as Mr. Talbott's poems have been. There is no gainsaying Mr. Talbott's talent, and he who does so hurts himself more than Mr. Talbott.

If by the transfer of Mr. Broderick from the Post to the Star we shall have his services as a correspondent from the latter chapel and continue to have those of Little Willey from the Post, we will all be gainers.

Last Saturday a little, old, bent-over fellow on North Capitol street watched the crowds stream out of the office at lunch time and remarked to nobody in particular, "Ah, you d—d scoundrels, you'll all be lookin' for a job after the 4th of March!" Thus does dire Disaster send her messengers to croak their warnings.

Among the recent graduates of the law school of Columbian University is Joseph T. Sherier, the capable stenographer and typewriter in the office of the secretary of the union.

Andy Wagner, manager of the Baltimore Typographical baseball team and recently a candidate for secretary of Baltimore Union, was in the city last Saturday arranging for a match with some of our talented players. He'll have no trouble getting taken on.

I am under the impression that the ladies of the Woman's Auxiliary would have been able to elect their officers just as satisfactorily to themselves without the interference of sundry old ladies in pants. Now, don't take it that this means you.

Some people seem to think that Tenn-

Ding judgment I will suggest Col-

Ow in my merry, mad career;
All style is dead—the Mergs are here!
At least I've noticed in the new-
Spapers that that is how they do.

Wiley H. Davis, of the First Division, has blossomed forth as a singer in Masonic bodies. He has a well-cultivated voice and sings with much taste.

* * * *

W. I. Reed, of the Sixth Division, continues to amuse the boys with well-conceived cartoons. A recent one of George Hayden, an Alexandrian, gazing with rapture on a string of fish, was particularly popular, for it is well known that Alexandrians live on fish. Another, following the election, representing John Berg seated in the president's chair, with Major Herbert left at the post, was also well done. I'd like to see him do something with his talent besides amusing the boys.

Nobody, so far as I know, has ever heard how Baltimore went on the International ticket. Andy Wagner says that the secretary declined to count the ballots, alleging that it was too big a job, he having put in all one night counting the vote on the local ticket. But I don't want to start anything.

Many who were in the G. P. O. during the last administration of Mr. Benedict will remember E. S. Nichols, a proofreader and therefore a scholarly, genial gentleman. He later returned to Wapakoneta, Ohio, whence he came, and entered on the practice of law as a business and the publication of a newspaper as a pastime. A programme of the thirty-fourth annual commencement of the Wapakoneta High School was lately received here, and among the graduates is Miss Effie Gertrude Nichols, daughter of the aforesaid, and her part on the programme was Liszt's Sixth Rhapsodie Hongroise, as a piano solo, which any one familiar with music will tell you is no slouch of a piece. There are a lot of us who are glad that Ed Nichols is cutting a deep notch in the Auglaize County section of the world and that he has a daughter old enough to graduate from high school and good enough musician to play Liszt music.

There was a perfect jam at the regular meeting of G. P. O. Council, National Union, last Saturday night, partly as the result of the awakening brought about by the entertainment of Monday of last week and partly because a lot of former night workers were free to go. The National Union is the only order, and G. P. O. Council is the onliest of the only.

I received a letter from Billy Shields early in the week, in which he says that Bob Speer, a brother-in-law of big, fat J. W. H. Thrush ("Birdie"), of the record clerks' division, was elected mayor of Denver by a combination of the workingmen. He says that Frank Morrison did great work in straightening out the internal dissensions among the labor people of that city, and, thanks to him, the workingmen now present a solid front to the enemy. Shields and Otto F. Thum were elected delegates to the Trades Assembly. A. J. E. Hubbard had just been up from Colorado Springs and was looking and feeling first class. A new labor paper is to be started in Denver.

Another of my alleged stories has been translated into Norwegian by Oscar Nelson and printed in the Decorah (Iowa) Posten. Between us, we'll get those sturdy Norse sons of the Vikings educated after a while. I've often thought those branch foremen had too easy a time of it any way.

A. F. BLOOMER.

SPRINGTIME.

Grim winter, with its damp and gloom,
At last has passed away;
The springtime comes, the flowers bloom,
Renewing life each day.

The crocus lifts its purple head
And peeps above the ground,
To smile along the paths we tread
In every daily round.

The song-bird, flitting through the trees,
Makes music in the air;
Its notes are wafted on the breeze
From every woodland fair.

The sunlight on the limpid stream,
The rippling of the rill,
So like a pleasant summer dream
Our tired natures thrill.

The moonbeams on the placid lake,
The cooing of the dove,
All latent powers in us make
Of nature's truest love.

Oh, balmy spring, we greet thee now
With music's sweetest strain;
Before thy shrine we haste to bow
And welcome thee again.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

NOTICE.

During the months of June, July, and August this office will be closed at 12 o'clock noon Saturdays.

Post Chapel.

"Mootzy" wound the clock Sunday night.

Monday holidays are not in favor with our boys. The paymaster is one day later on such occasions.

"Cycle" had things sized up about right when he said "In the language of Ananias each voter exercised his individual choice."

Peter Embser returned from Dansville, N. Y., Tuesday. His father is still in poor health, but in no immediate danger of demise.

"Smokey" says ice water is all right as an occasional thirst quencher, but he strenuously objects to the use recently made of it by Major Herbert.

After reading THE TRADES UNIONIST of last week, "Our Jim" handed me the following: "The firing of the toy pistol heralds the near approach of July 4."

D. L. Sandoe is back at work again after a two weeks' vacation spent in mountains of the Tar Heel State. "The grandest health resort in the world" is "Sandy's" verdict.

Victor Hurley came back to work Sunday night. He is not the same old "Dumps," but his health is much improved and he made the remark Tuesday that the Post composing room is superior to the Grafton, W. Va., vicinity as a health resort.

Several of the boys made John McCormick's enforced confinement to his home in Hyattsville an excuse to go out there last Tuesday morning. They are louder in their praise of the breakfast Mrs. McCormick had prepared for them than they are in expressions of sympathy for Mack. They report John's injuries as painful but not serious.

The recent election was a fruitful theme for the correspondents last week. I was the only one entirely silent on the subject, and for fear my silence may be attributed to dissatisfaction with the result I will state that I am not a politician and worry not at all over the outcome of elections, knowing full well that each member of our organization is thoroughly competent to acceptably fill the office to which the rank and file may elect him. I voted for the men of my choice, and the outcome revealed to me that my choosing was but little different from that of the majority.

The following communication was received last week and posted on the bulletin board:

BALTIMORE, May 22, 1904.

Mr. C. C. Thompson, and Members of the Post Chapel, Washington, D. C.:

DEAR SIRS AND BROTHERS:—At a largely attended meeting of Baltimore Typographical Union, No. 12, a unanimous vote of thanks was accorded you for the great courtesy and assistance rendered the members of No. 12, who were associated with you during the trying weeks after the great conflagration in Baltimore on February 7-8, 1904. I can assure you that these men speak in terms of highest praise of the manner in which they were treated, and feel very grateful for same.

Again extending to you the sincere thanks of these men, and of the Union as a body, and with best wishes for your future success, I remain,

Yours fraternally,
EDWARD J. BURGAN,
Secretary.

First Division.

Billy Ball (Slug 128) has resigned.

John Green is doing the honors for the high officials while the latter are on leave.

W. F. Crump, was assigned to slug 54, this division, on Saturday. He comes from the Fourth.

John Brown, recent arrival from the State Branch, was sent to the Treasury on Wednesday night.

C. W. Scott, better known as "Scotty," is spending his vacation over in the wilds of Anacostia.

Past events have proven that Billy Love is a much better campaign manager than a base ball manager.

Treasurer-elect James E. Bright is on leave. There is no question but that wherever he is he is smiling and happy.

Jack Burnside started on a 25-days' leave of absence yesterday. And now the question is what will the onion brigade do at noontime?

By the way, Frank Lloyd's daughter, Miss Sadie, who took part in the Lieberman concert, last week, was the winner of a handsome gold medal.

Charlie Stanley, chairman of the Fourth Division, paid this room a visit on Saturday. He was chaperoned by delegate-elect Miss Anna Wilson.

President-elect Berg has the boys guessing at present as to who will compose his committees. Its a good chance for somebody to pull off a guessing contest.

James Harris, an Ex-First Division man, is again able to be out after a lingering illness. The best indication of his rapid recovery is his daily noon visits to the pie counter.

Timekeeper Leeds is taking his leave in a sort of "steady by jerks" manner. There is an attraction in the shape of Miss Sylva's raisin pies that reminds Charley he needs something out of his desk about noon time when off duty.

Foreman A. W. Bowen is enjoying a two week's leave of absence. From the time of moving into the new building, Mr. Bowen has been one of the hardest workers in the big printery. He is always among the first to arrive and the last to leave. I am sure I but voice the sentiments of the entire room in wishing him a pleasant vacation.

The closing of the port holes in the ceiling on Saturday caused no end of comment. George Ellis said it meant a closed shop hereafter, while John Dickman was sure it was done to save the wear and tear on the hole caused by the draft.

Charley Purdy and Phil Nachman, the substitute players, gave the best exhibition of ball playing seen at Monday's game. They remained on the bench. For this I am sorry, for I should liked to have seen Nachman in one of those suits.

Simon Pocher spent Decoration Day looking over the battlefield of Gettysburg. Out of due consideration for President Roosevelt and other dignitaries I am informed he traveled incog. Ed. Heidingsfeld, however, declares he saw him at the Zoo.

James K. Wallace has been demonstrating to his neighbors up in Bloomingdale that there are other things besides working in a print shop and pulling teeth at which he is an artist. A new set of screens which adorn his home are his own handiwork.

"Mike" Serrano recently invented an appliance for a cigarette box which has a tendency to put a man out of business on opening it. "Mike" has a great head. I shall watch his future with eagerness. He was among those transferred to the Treasury on Wednesday night.

Alley 1 has become patriotic. The inmates have recently purchased a silk flag which they intend flying in the breeze from the rear window. At the rising exercises Chas. Gardner is expected to beat the tom-toms, and Wallace Brewer sing the "Star Spangled Banner."

Persons desiring to make books on the chairmanship election, which takes place this month, can do so now. Jack Robinson and Harry Templar, have announced themselves. "Shorty" Huss is yet to be heard from. Phil. Nachman, present chairman, says he will stand for re-election.

R. L. Davidson is on the war path. And when "Davy" goes on the war path he can make a cigar sign Indian warrior look like a missionary. Its all because his candidacy for teller next year has been announced. He says it will give the opposition a year in which to hatch out campaign lies.

L. L. McWhorter (Slug 27) covered himself with glory at the Decoration Day ball game. His fielding was a feature of the game, and his coaching as enthusiastic as could be expected under the circumstances. Mr. McWhorter's term of temporary employment expired Wednesday night.

Printers are always glad to hear of the success of former comrades. The latest to achieve success outside of the big printery is Fred L. Ames, who, a few months ago, resigned from this office to become a newspaper manager in Norwich, N. Y. Last week he received the appointment of deputy county clerk for Norwich county. Mr. Ames is a native of New York State, and the last issue of the Utica Saturday Globe contained an elegant half tone picture of that gentleman, together with a highly complimentary notice. His many friends in the office are glad to hear of his success.

Third Division.

Willis L. Hall, formerly of this division, later of the Spess, then a sub on the Post, has accepted a situation at Burlington, Vt. He left Washington for that place May 24.

"Cycle's" belated word of appreciation for the valuable and unselfish services rendered in behalf of Columbia Union by T. Frank Hall is a reminder that some of our very best men often go unrewarded.

We missed the Judge from his frame on Tuesday. He said his "brothers" were coming to see him. It is no more than reasonable to expect that the motion of the presses will cause the building to vibrate when he returns.

Next Sunday morning there will be services in celebration of Children's Day at the Ninth Street Christian Church. In the evening the pastor will preach upon the subject, "The Monument of the Master." All printers, their families and friends are cordially invited.

The Woman's Auxiliary now has 163 members, or 13 more than the number necessary to entitle it two delegates to the International Auxiliary. President Gordon says: "We hope to have 500 members next year." Men, members of Columbia Union No. 101, if you don't look out these women will get ahead of you.

A Former Occupant of frame 42 was in to see us, and as he passed Cliff Scott (who now answers to that number) he remarked, "I used to be on that frame." "You did, did you?" said Cliff; "I was wondering what in h—l mixed it up so." And the smile vanished from the face of the Former Occupant.

Congratulations are in order for J. Herbert Broderick, formerly chairman of the Post, who has accepted a presumably better situation on the Star. His interesting items in this paper will be missed by the readers. What's the matter with Broderick being the Star correspondent for THE TRADES UNIONIST?

The condition of George C. Sparks, from being extremely critical, has changed for the better, and there now now seems to be a chance that he will recover. His life still hangs by a thread, however, and under the most favorable conditions he will need constant care and careful nursing for a long time to come.

Although the election for chairman of this chapel will not take place until the last of the month, canvassing has already begun. The other day Doc. Le Merle announced his candidacy "if the present chairman does not run." There are also several dark horses in the field. Meantime, Chairman Goldstein says nothing and saws wood.

The many friends of Hubert Newsom will be pleased to learn that he was married to an estimable young lady Wednesday evening, June 1. Newsom formerly worked in this division, leaving it last fall to go on the Night Bill Force, from which he was transferred to the Second Division. He was our correspondent for THE TRADES UNIONIST, and now ably fills that post for the Second. We wish him and his bride long life and happiness.

"The Man from Oklahoma," Charles S. Davis, slug man for this division, has done a good stroke of business on the opening of the Times coupon contest for a World's Fair ticket and expenses. Mr. Davis began collecting coupons, and stood a fair chance of coming out among the leaders. One of his rivals, fearing his ability, offered Mr. Davis $42 for his coupons, which offer was promptly accepted. In my opinion, he is just $42 ahead of the game.

Public band concerts will be given during the week ending Thursday, June 9, as follows:

Friday, June 3—Engineer Band, Lincoln Park and Washington Barracks.
Saturday, June 4—Marine Band, White House Grounds.
Monday, June 6—Cavalry Band, Dupont Circle and Fort Myer.
Tuesday, June 7—Cavalry Band, Judiciary Park.
Wednesday, June 8—Marine Band, Capitol Grounds.
Thursday, June 9—Cavalry Band, Iowa Circle and Fort Myer.

It now looks as though we are beginning to appreciate and understand the work of the Woman's Auxiliary. The work of this organization can not be minimized. It is one of the most potent forces in unionism, even when exercised upon a comparatively small scale as at present. If the whole membership of 101 would bind themselves and their families by the principles which the Woman's Auxiliary is striving to exploit, "rats" would never be heard of and strikes would be unknown.

Good-bye, "Topsy!" I read your valedictory with great regret in last week's paper. You were a bright lad, even before you cut your teeth, but after I named you it was pleasant to see you begin to "take notice," or, as Artemus Ward used to say, you were "as large as life and quite as natural." Yes, "Topsy," I shall miss your cheerful prattle. I know, however, that the second summer is a time of danger, and you are wise to get out of the way of the Toy Pistol. By and by we may meet again. Until that time let me say again, Good-bye, my son! Be good and you will be happy!

OF INTEREST TO MR. BELCHER.

The world is moving onward, ever onward,
Though its progress is at most an infant's crawl;
But you needn't fear 'twill get there any slower
When that able man is gone who knows it all.

Our good friend J. W. Belcher, having swatted McPike to a standstill and devoured McCann blood raw, last week turned his attention to William Tipton Talbott and came near knocking him out in the first round. This is as it should be. The silly season is close at hand, and when Mr. Talbott recovers sufficiently to crawl out of his corner there may be something doing which will be worth the price of admission. At least that is the hope of those barbarians who sigh for the good old days when "Old Spav," "Old Prog," and other fearless worthies beclouded the arena with the dust of conflict. It is true that Mr. Belcher's literary style is somewhat crude, but the unpolished directness of his attack makes him a dangerous opponent, as the scattered remains of McPike will testify. Mr. Talbott would doubtless enter the arena more for the sake of innocent merriment than for the dubious pleasure of inflicting pain. But as to the outcome there can be little doubt. Mr. Belcher has already made himself a subject of ridicule, and would soon become the laughing stock of the G. P. O.

ADAM BUGG.

Labor Notes.

A bill has been introduced in the New York Legislature to make it a felony to bribe an officer or representative of a labor union.

At a recent meeting of the Kern County (Cal.) Council of Labor it was decided to take up the matter of building a Union Labor temple in earnest. A committee has been appointed to devise ways and means for raising a fund for the proposed building.

William Weil, official bandmaster of the World's Fair, recently expelled by the Musicians' Union, has paid a fine of $1,000 and after agreeing to obey union rules has been reinstated as a member of the local union. He agrees to employ only St. Louis musicians in his World's Fair band.

The Minneapolis (Minn.) Union says the Press Feeders are jubilant over the settlement of their controversy with the Typothetae, which has been "hanging fire" for practically a year. At a meeting recently an agreement was reached by which the union secures an increase over the old scale.

The latest novelty is a strike for a change of bed linen, which was called by non-union men in Chicago recently. Twenty-five non-union chandelier workers in the factory of R. William son decided that they had occupied straw pallets long enough, and demanded cots and clean bed linen.

Judge Holbrook, in the District Court of Saguache County, Col., has declared the semi-monthly pay-day law unconstitutional on the grounds that it is special legislation. This decision is in line and in harmony with nearly all the decisions recently rendered by Colorado's courts on labor legislation.

The Cumberland Glass Company, a Maine corporation, with a factory at Cumberland, Md., has followed the old custom and availed itself of an injunction in order to escape the power of the Glass Workers' Union and conduct an "open shop," which, of course, means a non-union shop. The injunction was granted by Judge Morris, of the local United States Court.

Stranger—Oh, no offense, I assure you. I was only carrying out the instructions as printed on the bill of fare, which says, "Please report any inattention of waiters to cashier." And I thought if they were inattentive to you I would report them—that's all.—Baltimore American.

"MAKING A BOOK."

A "Producer" Told He Must Not "Make Book" In the Street.

In a noon hour lunch crowd at Chambers and Centre streets, in front of the Typographical Union's rooms, New York, was a man of medium height, neatly dressed and with kindly bewhiskered face.

Presently a sad-looking figure with a slight unsteadiness of step approached. Neither knew the other, but both were printers, and that in itself was enough. The sad-looking individual told the other a sad, sad story of hard luck, and the sympathetic comrade placed a quarter in the shaky hand of his companion. The sad-looking individual immediately disappeared into the surrounding group and a policeman became interested.

"What yer got?" said another sad-looking individual, as his brother in misfortune reappeared.

"I got a quarter. He's easy; strike him yourself."

And presently another approached the man with the kindly face, told a similar story of hard luck and also received a quarter.

The policeman on the other side saw and wondered. He came over to the man with the kindly face, and that individual noted his approach with surprise. "Say, boss," said the policeman, "I have been watching you for the last ten minutes, and I want to tell you right now that I won't stand for your making book right here in the street."

The man with the kindly face walked away without a word, and the policeman congratulated himself on having done his duty.—Exchange.

General Labor Notes.

Governor Murphy, of New Jersey, has signed the child labor law, but it will not go into effect until September 1.

John Mitchell will not go to Europe until August. The International Miners' Convention has been postponed until that month.

Cigarmakers' International Union paid out in death benefits during the year past $138,625 91 to their widows and orphans.

Government reports show that there are 1,750,000 children under 14 years of age employed in factories, mills, and workshops in the United States.

All the shingle mills at Olympia, Wash., and in Thurston County are closed as a result of an attempt on the part of the employers to reduce wages.

The reports of the Indiana State Labor Commission show that more than 60 per cent of the labor troubles in this State occur among unorganized or newly organized men.

The unorganized textile workers at Lawrence, Mass., are in a deplorable condition. In some cases every member of the family must work in order to bring in enough to subsist upon.

The typewriter girls of New York have at last succeeded in forming a union, starting in with 30 charter members. The object is to place the minimum wage scale for beginners at $7 per week, and the working hours from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

There will be no strike of market and provision house teamsters in Boston, a settlement having been reached. It is agreed that in hiring men in the future members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters shall be given preference.

The Supreme Court of Kansas has declared void the statute which makes it unlawful to discharge an employe because he belongs to a labor organization and which provides for the recovery of damages for the discharge. T. P. Berry, an employe of a vitrified brick and tile company, was discharged from its service, and brought action to recover damages, alleging that he was discharged because he was a member of a labor union. He recovered judgment in the lower court and the brick company appealed, attacking the constitutionality of the law.

Bindery Notes.

John Pymont has returned from his leave.

Bob McLanahan has returned to work after a week's illness.

Charles F. Weston is acting foreman in place of Peter Frank while he is on his leave.

Mrs. Dunn, wife of Michael Dunn, of Mr. Penicks' division, died on Wednesday last after a protracted illness lasting for several years.

The boys of the "cow" department, who had expected the pleasure of working under Major Frederick as foreman during the absence of Mr. Penicks, whose leave is now due, are very morose from disappointment. The various duties and great responsibilities incumbent upon Mr. Frederick could not admit of even a thought of a change. So Ed Roche has been selected to fill the place during the absence of Mr. Penicks.

One of the most sensational games of ball ever played by any team, local or otherwise, was played at Ruppert's on Sunday last between the Cowboys and Mike Dunn's nine. Mr. Dunn not being able to play, Charles Holbrook was captain for the day, Mr. Kukart captain for the Cowboys. The game was a pitchers' battle, and for eight innings not a score was made, when in the first half of the ninth inning Dunn's team made 19 runs, and would probably be scoring yet but for darkness. Another feature of the game was that there was no errors for either nine, except the King of the West, who had 13 errors to his credit. The score was 19 to 0 in favor of Mike Dunn's club. Batteries—Dunn's club, Holbrook and Reynolds; Cowboys, Kukart and Nevins.

THE LABOR LYCEUM.

An Enthusiastic Meeting Held Last Sunday at Building Trades Hall.

The meeting of the Labor Lyceum held on Sunday last at 624 Sixth street northwest was well attended. Quite a number of applications for membership were read and accepted.

The Executive Committee, which is composed of the six vice-presidents of the Lyceum, meet weekly and are making arrangements to take up the work of the Lyceum, which consists of acquainting the union men of the District of the aims and objects of the association; also taking up the best method of letting the union men in the States know just how their Representatives in Congress voted on the various labor bills before Congress.

The Labor Lyceum is strictly nonpartisan, and to become a member a man must be a member in good standing in his respective trade or calling.

The Lyceum is growing in membership rapidly, the initiation fee being only 50 cents.

The next meeting will be held on Sunday, June 19, at the Building Trades Hall, 610 G street northwest, and all union men are invited to be present. The promoters of the Lyceum expect in the near future to have a membership of over two thousand members.

Foreign Labor Notes.

In New Zealand last year 12,481 persons drew old age pensions amounting to $1,057,970. The total cost of administering the act was only $19,025.

Industrial questions mixed with politics are causing anxiety in parts of Austria. At Tamovar, near Agra, there were serious riots after a recent meeting.

The longest strike on record is now on in Wales. The 2,800 men and boys employed in Lord Penryhn's slate quarries went out two and one-half year ago, and the settlement of the strike is now a question of British party politics.

Demonstrations in favor of universal suffrage were held by the workingmen in all the cities of Sweden in the Easter vacations. There were no disturbances, but the meetings were well attended, and strong resolutions were adopted everywhere.

The Austrian trade union movement enjoyed a steady progress during the last year. The number of new members gained by the various unions was more than 30,000. This seems to be a merely insignificant gain compared with the achievements of trade unionism in the United States in the same period. But it must be considered that in Austria freedom on the part of workmen to form unions for the protection of their mutual interests has always been considered a privilege which is granted by the government authorities only under rigid restrictions.

Hall No. 1, "Building Trades Halls," 610 G street northwest, is open daily from 8 o'clock a. m. until 5 p. m. as a reading room to all members of building trades unions affiliated with the Council of Allied Building Trades.

IN APOLOGY TO A. F. B.

Can roses bloom when winter's chill
Enthralls our Mother Earth?
When pipes are broke can cadence thrill—
To joyous lays give birth?

When banked the sky with lowering clouds
And Nature sobs and sighs,
Her children see but palls and shrouds,
Nor mock her moans and cries.

Or sad or gay, the song my heart
Sings to me I must raise,
Else am I acting but a part
To win man's sulky praise.

PULL THE PLUG.

As Watch Dog of the Washbowl, our friend J. W. Belcher "has done the state some service" and deserves the thanks of all those who believe that cleanliness is next to godliness. With the rare discernment of a cultured Bostonian he was the first to call attention to the iniquity of those Bœotian Yahoos who let their dirty water stand in the washbowls of the new Government Printing Office. But, like most great geniuses, he has his limitations. For instance, he was ignominiously floored some time since by a common ordinary printer in a controversy appertaining to the history of music. And now it appears that he does not get intoxicated on the particular brand of poetry kept on tap in the vicinity of the Big Printery. Futhermore, he shows a disposition to slop over somewhat offensively at times. All of which is accounted for by the fact that, before he ran afoul of the unspeakable McPike and the impossible McCann and the dreadful stuffy McTalbott, his intellectual development took place at Boston in the Inner Circle of the Æsthetic Washbowl. Pull the plug.

SOME INSIDE INFORMATION

Helen X. Writes to Carolus Henricus on a Stock Proposition.

THE SAGE OF MINTBED NOT EASY

An Intrusion on His Sylvan Solitude—The Sage Has Sampled All Kinds of Graft—His Experience in Steel and Other Possibilities—Frank Exposition of Weakness—Quotes Solomon to Helen.

The following correspondence is published for the information and guidance of some of our readers who may receive tempting offers to get rich quick through information received from questionable sources. Those who have the pleasure of Mr. Slack's acquaintance will recognize his inimitable style of word painting and will appreciate the humor of the situation:

123 GRENADA PLACE,
BROOKLYN, May, 24.

DEAR SIR: This letter will interest you if you speculate; if you don't, it won't.

I am a perfect stranger to you. I received your name from a lady friend of mine, a stenographer in a broker's office in New York.

I am also a stenographer and secretary in a broker's office, and the private mail and telegrams to the friends of the head of the concern are dictated to me and pass through my hands. He advises these people what stocks to handle, and whether to buy or sell. I have never found that his advice was wrong, and I know he has the very best facilities for receiving through powerful sources the information he acts upon, and which passes through my hands.

It has been suggested to me that this was my opportunity to get a few out of the city to carry a few shares for me; and I therefore ask you, Will you do so, and I will let you know what this information is? I have had some fine deals lately.

I will ask you please to consider this proposal, and let me have an early answer.

Ten shares for my account, carried with your own broker, and a remittance from you at close of deal, is all I ask. All correspondence strictly confidential.

An early answer will be appreciated.

Yours, very truly,

HELEN X.

MINTBED, Mayberry Time, Naughty-four.

MY DEAR HELEN: To begin: I can not imagine what harm I ever did you that your proposition, as broad and alluring as the road to destruction, should find me in my sylvan solitude, far from the strife of "the madding crowd," free from the worries and disappointments of the weary workaday world, and seek to do me good. This proffered kindness, unsought and unexpected, is more than I can bear; indeed, I do not deserve it! Ah, surely, you are not some "rag, a bone, and a hank of hair," with a seed wart on the side of your nose and a bale of cotton swelling proudly as the wells of life, as some poet or other may have remarked. All the gods and goddesses vied to do you homage, and each a choicest blessing gave, when, flannel-faced and squalling, you kicked your way into a cold-hearted and uncharitable world. Ever since, doubtless, you have been a walking, talking spirit of life and light and love, doing good by stealth and blushing to find it fame—a crop-winged and blondined seraph, with a temptatious strawberry mark judiciously exposed—the physical reincarnation of that famous but fabled Helen, whose fair face, perfect form, and punk morals brought fire and sword to a mythical Troy and raised hades generally in all the regions around about!

Well, to resume: As truant schoolboy I was wont to wonder, with bulging eyes and hair standing like quills upon the fretful porcupine, at the heroic achievements of ye ancient gladiator who had faced upon the bloody sands of the arena every form of man and beast that the broad empire of Rome could furnish. I know now that his great deeds were mere childish fancies, comparatively speaking; for in the last few months I have been right square up against more get-rich-quick grafters, syndicate sharks, "pony" pirates, gold-brick gamblers, confidence cutthroats, hot-stuff handlers, and sure-thing stringers than I thought ever lived outside of Sing Sing in a single season. I have "taken out" with all of them. I have plotted all night with wire-tapping wizards, only to find out next day that I was expected to furnish seventy-five large and oleaginous "bucks" to induce a mule-minded operator to allow a "flash" to come through. I have taken stock enough in oil refineries to reduce Soap Mountain to the infinitesimalness of an ordinary grease spot. I have built palaces in rabbit patches, backed Klondyke prospectors, petroleum boomers, and patent medicine fakirs; started to the African diamond fields, and have a proposition "on the hook" now to buy a lot in South America. I have laid awake o' nights, dear Helen, and blown in enough money from my contemplated winnings to rob Hetty Green of her reticule, send Jawn D. Rockyfeller to a charity hospital, drive John W. Gates to the free-lunch counter, and put Jim Keene on the corner to peddling shoe-strings and matches. I have collared and squandered the buckerino and montezuma and scudi in every known land and language of every latitude and longitude; and, soothed by the music of the spheres, fallen asleep in a bower of rainbows. Honestly though, Helen, you are the only real woman, except the "walking boss" of my matrimonial union, who has ever had serious designs upon me fortune. I could love you for that reason alone.

Now, to continue: Yes, I have been in some "fine deals" myself, not only lately but all my life. I ran a daily paper ten years in a semiweekly town, only to hear afterwards from the chief charity advertiser of the community that the publication was without adequate facilities and public spirit. I have had politicians to swear that they were my warmest friends and then slip around to the powers that be and get the cushioned rocking-chair job for another fellow. I bet a hundred on a "cat hop" and they said at the hospital that they were not sure whether the dealer had been kicked by a mule or hit with a brick. I had $800 paper profits on a wheat deal, and was congratulated as the only sucker to get back the original hundred invested. I sold cotton one Saturday afternoon last fall, and it jumped thirty-six points at the opening Monday morning. I swung on to the tail of the Sully boom when it was sure to go to twenty cents, and have not reached the bottom yet. I heard that Steel was going to 80, on account of the Panama Canal and the rebuilding of Baltimore, and am still margining. I bought wheat at 107 on account of the war, and the Japs are living on rice and the Russians are stopping long enough only to tighten their belts. I filled aces up just as the other best player caught his fourth seven. I backed "Hot Rag" and he started simply "as a matter of good faith"—God save the mark! I have been spellbound by the sweet song of the Circassian siren as she spun her electric spindle in the side show. I have contributed to the foreign missionary cause in hopes of making miserable liquor-rectifying, short-change Christians out of a happy bunch of ring-tailed savages; and have been simple enough to look for gratitude outside of the dictionary. I took a dose of "bottled-in-bond" in Swampoodle, and spent the night in batting big cotton-mouthed Anacondas out of a poplar tree, with a bean-pole. So, I am rather inclined to the opinion that your little game is too delightfully diaphanous. Of course, I may be prejudiced, but it seems that while I am selling ten shares of Wrinkle Remover to get Helenblazes a salmon-hued pettiskirt with a sand paper rustle, some other Wise Guy is buying the same ten for the same philanthropic purpose. Helen soforth pockets the profit, while we unpocket the loss and charge the same to experience—if my large and varied stock of which were liquidated it would be cheaper than Little Leather.

And, to conclude: My old friend Solomon (I guess he is known even in Brooklyn) observed a few things, among them female women, and he said, "My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not." It is real sinful to steal information from your employer and peddle it out on a credit. If you are mean enough to treat your benefactor so traitorously, you are not too good to have total strangers buy and sell the same stock at the same time. Leave my hand out, please. I wouldn't choose any, thank you, ma'am.

Yores, overcropped and slightly crippled, but still dead game,

CAROLUS HENRICUS SLACK.

MY CHILD.

There came to me with all the grace
Of tiny bud or new-born flower
A little child with angel face
Who blessed my home with magic power.
This sweet young life was more to me
Than all earth's riches piled in store,
And, measured by eternity,
Life now is more than e'er before,
For in that realm where souls unite
And peace and love both reign complete
The child who passed from death to light
Will be of those I hope to greet.

A Social Blunder.

Every citizen who has given any reflection to the question now confronting us on the relation that capital holds to labor must view with concern the campaign now carried on against organized labor, economically, socially, and politically. Such a campaign is a blunder. It is a fertile field in which the seeds of class hatred and distinctions in economic interest are shown. Men blinded by immediate material interests may excuse themselves on the plea of enlightened self-interest. But is it?

Organized labor as now constituted is a prop and bulwark against the spread of doctrines that aim to destroy present society in its property relations, despite the violence and lawlessness committed by and in the name of organized labor. These men are not vicious; they are simply ignorant of economic laws. The vast mass of workers belonging to these organizations are citizens who may, if their economic organizations are destroyed, turn a willing ear to demagogues and thereby accentuate social unrest. The dictum of civilization is that we are interdependent.

Freedom of contract in our social and economic relations is the corner-stone on which civilization rests, and it must be maintained at all hazards. To this declaration we unswervingly give our allegiance.—Organized Labor.

The Last Colorado Horror.

It is hard to comprehend a condition that brings about results such as is developing in the bitter struggle between the mine owners and operators in Colorado.

That men will so far forget themselves as to commit crimes that will bring them to the scaffold and long terms of penal servitude in the struggle for mastery is incomprehensible to those removed from the scene of action.

It goes without saying that the last act of vandalism is charged to the union, whether right or wrong. From the tone of the press throughout the country it is evident that opinion is divided as to where the blame for the deplorable conditions in Colorado should rest.

The following, taken from the Post, of this city, gives a fair statement of conditions in Colorado, and places that paper in the class which is disposed to be fair to the Union when lawlessness does not constitute any part of its acts:

The explosion of dynamite under a railway platform of Victor, causing the death and mutilation of a dozen nonunion miners, comes as a natural climax to the reign of rioting and lawlessness that has prevailed in that State for nearly a year, resulting from strikes in the mines at Cripple Creek, Idaho Springs, and Telluride. These mining camps are hundreds of miles apart—an evidence that the lawless spirit is not confined to any particular locality, but pervades the entire mining region within the State.

The responsibility for the conditions that have resulted in the loss of many lives during the past year, the destruction of property valued at millions of dollars, and the serious interference with the mining industry of the State will probably never be fixed. Charges are met by counter-charges, and the unprejudiced students of the situation can not evade the conviction that both the miners and the State authorities have been woefully in the wrong. While direct evidence has not been obtained, it is the general conviction that members of the miners' union have been directly responsible for the blowing up of certain mining properties, the assassination of mine managers who were opposed to the union, and the brutal maltreatment of nonunion workmen who have accepted employment in the mines.

On the other hand the action of Governor Peabody and the officers of the Colorado militia have been outrageous. Miners have been thrown into military "bull pens," denied the right of trial, chained to telegraph poles, and ordered out of the State without due legal process. Sherman Bell, a former officer in President Roosevelt's Rough Riders, recently resigned as adjutant-general of the Colorado National Guard. In tendering his resignation he charged that the militia of the State had been used as the tool of the mine owners and were compelled to act for one side of the case only. Instead of being used only to preserve the peace and protect property, the armed forces, according to General Bell's statement, were used as the abject servants of the corporations, and flagrantly abused the laws they were supposed to be upholding. General Bell charges that this action was taken in response to the demands of the mine owners who furnish the contributions for the campaigns of the political party in charge of affairs in Colorado.

General Bell acted directly under the orders of the Governor of Colorado and he must be given credit for knowing whereof he speaks. If he is telling the truth, the State is now harvesting the logical crop of its sowing. If the miners used bludgeons and dynamite, the militia, under the direction of the mine owners, have defied the law and overridden the institutions of free Government until all branches of the State Government have been brought into contempt and disgrace. No effort can be made to entertain sympathy for the striking miners, if it be shown that they are in any measure responsible for the dynamite outrage at Victor, yet a share of the blood must necessarily stain the hands of the State officials whose lawless excesses have provoked the resort to violence.

Colorado has furnished the most disgraceful chapter in the history of State Government. She can only redeem herself by civic assertion that will cast out the officials responsible for such conditions and the election of men to official positions, executive and judicial, who will punish violators of the law, be they millionaire owners of mines or the humble workers therein.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

William W. Handley, Vice-Consul of the United States at Trindad, in the West Indies, and agent of the steamer line plying to that port, was in the city recently. A few years ago he was a compositor in the First Division of the G. P. O., and he is well remembered by the older men, who are glad to hear of his prosperity. Under date of June 1 a most interesting report by Mr. Handley on the industries and resources of Trinidad was published in the Daily Consular Reports by the Department of Commerce and Labor.

* * * *

Last Thursday Charles W. Pafflow, for two or three years a reader in the main and night proof rooms, but lately at case in the Third Division, bade his friends good-by, saying that he had resigned and was off for Chicago and St. Louis. Mr. Pafflow is quite a linguist, being familiar with quite a number of European tongues, and a good writer on general subjects, having furnished a good deal of matter to THE TRADES UNIONIST, Post, Star, and other prominent publications. I wish him success wherever he goes. Mrs. Pafflow is a practicing physician in St. Louis.

* * * *

Earl R. Baxter, of the Times, the local agent of the Inland Printer, is pushing that sterling publication with a vigor that promises well for its subscription list, and it is a magazine that is well worth what it costs for what it teaches anyone who wants to print well. Mr. Baxter will take your subscription or furnish single copies, and will call at your flat if you should want to see him about it.

By the way, the Inland Printer Company is about to issue in book form the articles recently printed serially in the Inland Printer under the heading "Composing Machines—Past and Present," by Mr. John S. Thompson, whom many will remember as being in attendance at the I. T. U. convention last August as the representative of that magazine. The entire matter, which in its new shape will be called "History of Composing Machines," has been revised, and a large number of illustrations and descriptions of typesetting machines not heretofore published will be incorporated. The entire field of composing machines has been carefully reviewed and no pains spared to make the information authentic and detailed. Over sixty different machines and processes of setting type mechanically are illustrated and described and the entire art reviewed in detail. It will be eminently useful to every printer, and especially now that the machines are to be installed in the G. P. O. The book will be sold only on subscription, at $3 in cloth or $4 in half leather, and a line to the publishers or to Earl R. Baxter, Times composing room, who is the agent for all the books published and utilities for sale by the Inland Printer Company, will bring the desired information.

* * * *

The officers of the I. T. U. elected May 18, if you should feel any curiosity regarding the matter, are James M. Lynch, of Syracuse, president; John W. Hays, of Minneapolis, first vice president; John W. Bramwood, of Denver, secretary-treasurer; delegates to the A. F. of L. (printers), Frank Morrison (of Chicago), Frank K. Foster (of Boston), and Max Hayes (of Cleveland), and (allied trades) Victor L. Berger (of Milwaukee); trustees of the Home, Thos. McCaffrey (of Colorado Springs) and Thomas F. Crowley (of Cincinnati), printers, and F. W. Worsley (of Boston), allied trades; agent of the Home, William Kennedy (of Chicago). George P. Nichols, made a gallant run for trustee, but was beaten.

There is one thing that goes farther to annoy a doctor than almost anything in the whole list of annoyances, and is the result either of thoughtlessness or prying curiosity—that is, for visitors, or even members of the family, to remain in the sick room during the doctor's visit. The physician almost invariably has questions to ask the patient that he does not wish to ask in the presence of others, and to which he will not get as satisfactory answers as when alone with the patient. If the doctor be a modest man, as most of doctors are, he will, oftener than otherwise, go away without the information which he ought to have in order to understand the case, rather than ask delicate questions in the presence of others than the patient.

* * * *

The season of the year has come around when every scrub nine who can find anybody scrubby enough to play with them are trying to play baseball, and generally they want the full score of the game printed, not realizing that THE TRADES UNIONIST is a great moral engine and its space too valuable to be wasted in such a way. Simple paragraphs giving the outcome may be tolerated, however, of which I will give a few samples for the benefit of the budding geniuses:

The Butterfingers of the First drove it into the Hay Seeds of the Job Room. Score, 118 to 68.

The Red Shanks of the Second ran away from the Third Bassters by 97 to 23.

The Ice Bergs of the Sixth did it to Cottle's Rheumatics, of the Fifth, by 66 to 53.

* * * *

I am under the impression that the Union Printers' Bulletin, lately of Chicago, has suspended publication, its mission, that of defeating Mr. Hawkes for the I. T. U. presidency, having been accomplished, though I am loath to give it all the credit, for it had able assistants.

* * * *

According to newspaper reports, the Saturday half holiday has grown, under the President's order, from an hour and a half to a full half day, though I fear that it will interfere with the agreeable practice, occasional under Major Clifford, but grown into a regular custom under the superintendence of Chief Clerk Brian during the Major's disability, of paying off on Saturday afternoon instead of Monday. But there is a fine day for pay purposes just preceding Saturday which may be utilized. At any rate, we are all glad enough to get the full half holiday to overlook any disarrangement it may make of the present convenient pay system.

Foxy Charlie Leeds was around last week distributing pencils containing reminders of the G. P. O. Council, National Union, excursion last Tuesday. The crowds at the excursion did not indicate that any reminders had been necessary or else that they worked to the Queen's taste. When G. P. O. Council does anything, it is done right, and Charlie Leeds could not take more interest in it if he owned it.

Carlos Tomlin has again been taken ill and is under the professional care of Dr. Chadwick. It will be remembered that Tomlin spent a year in Colorado in search of health, being so successful that he thought he could stand the treacherous climate of Washington and returned. There seems to be but one thing for the tuberculous patient to do, and that is to get to the high, warm altitudes of the West as soon as possible and stay there. But it is hard to convince a whole lot of people that a man's name looks better on a butcher's book in Colorado than on a tombstone in Washington. I hope that Carlos will soon be sufficiently recovered to travel and that he will do so at once, for he is one of the good fellows.

Among the readers of THE TRADES UNIONIST there are quite a bunch who know B. Frank Alexander, at present a machinist in the Naval Gun Factory (or Navy-Yard), and will be glad to learn that he recently graduated as LL. B. from the law department of the National University with honors, being sixth in a class of forty-nine.

Zach Jenkins, president of the Association of Ex-Delegates, told me the other day that he had directed Secretary John T. Herbert to give notice of a meeting for next Sunday afternoon. If he carried out his intention, an official notice will probably be found elsewhere in this paper. I hope every member will come out, and as an inducement I will say that I think it is the intention to levy an assessment. I believe there are still a few outside of the fold who ought to be in, and if they come in now they will be just in time to pay the assessment, if one be levied.

My brief experience in automobiling has taught me a number of things, and one of them is that it is the height of a policeman's ambition to run in an automobilist for fast running, and there will always be suspicion of his motive so long as half the fine imposed is paid into the policemen's fund. In one case a conviction was secured for running 16 miles an hour when the manufacturer's guarantee of speed was only 12 miles. A favorite method of getting "evidence" is for a bicycle cop to strike out after a mobilist who is moving smartly, overtake him in a square, and charge him with running at the speed that the speedometer measured in overtaking him. I once read an article on the blunted sensibilities of men who were frequently sworn, written by a lawyer, and if I were a police judge I should want strong corroboration of a policeman's testimony if it were disputed.

So many of the correspondents took a throw at J. W. Belcher last week, including the usually amiable Adam Bugg, that I am in hopes that he will be good after this. Belcher is a pretty good thrower himself, but what's the use of throwing at all? Or, if you must throw, do as I do—throw at the dead ones, who never answer back. Of course I took a few throws at the Hawkesites; but they were just the same as dead ones.

Col. A. W. Tebbetts, known to all the old-timers of the G. P. O., wrote to Foreman C. M. Robinson, from the Hampton (Va.) Soldiers' Home, under date of June 5, as follows:

Tninking it a duty due a comrade, I announce to his friends at the G. P. O. the death on the 1st instant of Samuel H. Herman. Poor Sam had been much out of health for several years, and, as I saw him a few weeks since, a mere shadow of his former self and obliged to use crutches for a long time. He was buried with the usual Home honors—a full company, with band.

Tom McGowan is still limping along as cheerful as usual and likely to outlive us all.

I call at the hospital occasionally to see Thad Slentz. He is quite feeble and surprises me by his tenacity of life.

As to myself, I am much the same as you last saw me—"all wool and a yard wide." Please extend my regards to the few friends I may have left at the G. P. O.

A hard fight is being made in Louisville for and against the "open office." As the "open office" means the rat office, all support should be given Louisville Union, for it is the intention of the "open office" advocates to extend this style of warfare against the unions everywhere if successful there, one city at a time.

AROUND THE PRINTERIES.

Ex-Delegates, Attention!

A special meeting of the Ex-Delegates' Association will be held Sunday, June 12, at 3 o'clock p. m., at Typographical Temple.

Z. T. JENKINS,
J. T. HERBERT, President.
Secretary.

First Division.

B. L. Fowler has returned from his June vacation.

Harry Templar has withdrawn from the chairmanship race.

Tut, tut, Pard! Don't deprive the "old women" of the comforts of life.

Geo. H. Sehorn and Ben Wolfe, were among those recently transfered to the Treasury.

Chas. Gardner has been transferred to the Job Room. But the flag still floats over Fort 1.

Wm. McFarlane has been selected as official onion chopper during the absence of Burnside.

Pete McCallum, George Woodgate, H. Van de Bogert, and Thos. Rhodes, have enjoyed a five days leave of absence during the past two weeks.

Among the recent arrivals from the State Branch are John W. Clark, slug 27, and Frank M. Hatley, slug 133.

John O'Brien failed to connect with the Times' free trip to St. Louis excursion. However he made a good race.

If you should observe a tall, thin gentleman with a big typewriter headed for this building some dark night, you can bet there's going to be something doing in the observation line, and willowy forms and Dagos had better take to the woods.

Edward McCormick (Slug 149) and Marion D. W. Siewers (Slug 2), are drawing easy money from the Government outside the shop this month.

"The firing of the toy pistol heralds the near approach of July 4." That's it. Just as the squeak, squeak of the pump indicates the running of an old wind mill. Eh. James?

The temporary force is now composed of four members. Chas. Lucas and C. E. Zimmerman were dropped from that roll on Tuesday, having completed their six months' service.

Anybody having any old law suits or divorce cases, or anything in the law line they wish attended to, will do well to call on Bruce Bielaski. Since the graduation exercises of Columbia University he has become a full-fledged lawyer.

During the absence of Foreman Bowen, Assistant Foreman Geo. R. Boone is in charge of the room, while the average clerk, Ben. H. Pratt, has moved up to assistant. Maker-up T. Frank Morgan is looking after the slips. The return of Charley Leeds has relieved Johnnie Green from further duties as time keeper.

The ladies! God bless them! May the Auxiliary always remain the largest in the United States. The two ladies recently elected to represent Washington Auxiliary at St. Louis are choice samples of our fair sisters. In the selection of Miss Katherine Spencer and Mrs. J. A. Huston, they have chosen from among the choicest flowers of the conservatory. Each is capable of doing well that which they will be called upon to do, and in a way to bring glory to their organization and pride to their big brothers who are always interested in their welfare.

It was clearly demonstrated on Saturday that pica quads may be made to justify with odd measure brevier. In fact, the old system of using a "thin space slightly bent" is obsolete in comparison. The discovery was made by a young gentleman who has no objection to its general adoption. The secret is just this: On finding your stick is a little too shy to admit an even number of quads you seize the thumb screw of the stick and turn gently until the adjustable side of the stick give enough to admit the aforesaid quads. By so doing the system of setting "taps" is greatly simplified. For further particulars see Jimmie Weaver.

The downpour of rain on Tuesday caused considerable merriment at the expense of G. P. O. Council, National Union. Several wireless messages from J. E. Bright were posted, among which were: "Great cloudburst at 2.30. Children under 12 under water. Keep quiet." "Come sure. Bring toy rubber baloons. Completely sold out. Being made into life preservers. Raised price 1 cent." "Give away more pencils, and reduce price. Induce policy holders to stay at home." It was at this stage of the game that Joe Dierken saw something had to be done. So he caused the following to be posted: "Charley Leeds will dive from smokestack of Steamer Pentz at 6 30." That settled it, The largest crowd of the season—stayed at home.

Official Gazette.

F. B. Wallace is enjoying fifteen days' leave of absence.

Andrew McGarraghy and F. W. Street have been assigned to the Gazette Division.

Messrs. Tanner and Whitman were returned to their respective divisions Saturday.

John Purvis is not the only candidate who lost fifteen pounds in a strenuous seeking for votes.

I hope Brother Broderick will take up the suggestion that he should correspond for the Star chapel.

R. H. Pegues, who was absent from work several days last week on account of the illness of his wife, has ten days' leave due him, which he will avail himself of commencing June 7.

F. P. Wilkins has returned to work after a ten-day leave. No doubt he has some splendid anecdotes to narrate.

Don't stop your subscription to THE TRADES UNIONIST now the election is over. Perhaps "Pard" Bloomer and some of the rest of 'em can stir up a little excitement for you.

Miss Lizzie Whitmee has acknowledged, by letter, the tokens of good will bestowed upon her by members of the Gazette chapel in the shape of a mahogany and a rattan chair.

Just to think of it! J. E. Payne has twenty-four days' leave left, which he will take, and fifteen more added to that. He intends to visit the St. Louis Fair and his home folks at Benton, Ill.

I have not pressed my face against the pane, but I feel like writing poetry, and I just don't care who knows it:

TYPOGRAPHICAL TEMPLE.

I remember, I remember,
When the Temple was conceived,
How hot-air boys made promises,
Which the printer boys believed,
Of clubs and benefits social,
A "gym," a swimming pool;
But, alas! 'twas hope precocial.
Man ever was a fool.

I remember, I remember,
When the building was achieved,
How the lime-light boys got busy
And the printers were deceived.
"Put the scrivener out in the hall!
Let's make the old thing pay!"
Was the slogan echoed by all.
Ah me! A-lacka-day!

I remember, I remember,
When from debt we were relieved,
How the "gents" who do our thinking
Answered back to those aggrieved,
"You don't know what you want, and then
This thing would never do.
'Twould be for idle, shiftless men
A blooming rendezvous."

Half past six, June, 1904.

Bindery Notes.

Mr. V. M. Roy, after a short illness, died at his home, 1415 Twelfth street, northeast, June 1, leaving a wife and nine children. Interment June 3, Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Roy began his career and learned the trade of bookbinding at Richmond, Va.; also worked at Akron, Ohio, and for a number of years was employed in the Government Bindery.

It gives me pleasure to be allowed to say something good about my fellow workmen.

Mr. Roy was a faithful, first-class mechanic and paid close attention to business. He died leaving not an enemy behind him and with a well spent life, crowned with honor and the undivided confidence of his fellow workmen following him to the tomb.

Sure when his gentle spirit fled
To realms beyond the azure dome,
With arms outstretched God's angels said,
"Welcome, well done, come home."

W. C. CONNOR.

Lewis W. Hart met with a severe accident Saturday night, falling down the stairs of his home, spraining both wrists and lacerating his face. And the only thing he imbibed previous to the accident was hot popcorn.

The delegates to the I. B. of B. convention left during the week for St. Paul, where the meeting will be held on the 14th instant. Messrs. James Fogarty and Jas. L. Feeney, represent No. 4, Miss Peckham represents No. 42, while Messrs. J. A. B. Espey and Wm. H. Kelly go as International officers.

Bill Nevins, having sent his family home for the summer, took a room in a strange house. After the first night the landlady changed the location of the bed so as to give Bill more air. Upon entering the room after the change Bill failed to recognize the appearance of his quarters and hustled out to the front door, rang the bell and inquired for a "buddy" who also lives in the house. The "buddy" assured him he was in the right house and Bill was again happy.

PASTE.

Conference on Carpenters Matter.

At the conference held on Wednesday night, between a committee of the Central Labor Union and representatives of the Carpenters Union, little progress was made toward a settlement of the differences between the Carpenters and the Council of Allied Building Trades. The controversy which caused the suspension of the Carpenters from the Council of Allied Building Trades was brought about by the insistence of the Carpenters to have the building trades card issued to their members through their District Council. President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, attended the conference and advocated harmony of action. The matter is far from settlement at present.

Why Workingmen Must Organize.

Do we approve of organized labor?

It almost strikes me sometimes as ludicrous when that question is asked. It does not really matter very much whether we approve of it. The situation is not such that organization waits upon our tardy approval, or our modified and qualified and condescending approbation.

Organization is in the air. Organization is the order of the day. Organization is everywhere. Capital is organized, they say; why should not labor be organized? Everything is organized.

Science is being organized. Even the solitary thinker is solitary no longer; the solitary scholar, the philosopher, meets his fellow philosopher in congresses, the psychologists, the historians, the economists, the scientific investigators—everywhere are these huge congregations of effort, these cooperative efforts—everywhere instances of concerted action. Everywhere great ends are undertaken, not singly but jointly.

Is it to be wondered at that labor should be organized? Labor simply follows the general trend. You can not any more prevent it than you can prevent organization anywhere else.

And moreover, there is a special reason why there should be this organization or association of laborers, because, as every one knows, the argument is so simple that one is almost ashamed to repeat it, that the laborer, singly and individually, is at an enormous disadvantage as against the employer, the same disadvantage at which a man is who wishes to dispose of a house when it is known that he must sell on the instant, that he can not wait.

A man who must sell his house, of whom it is known that he must dispose of it, is at a great disadvantage. He will not get his price, the price that is proper, because it is known that he can not wait.

So the laborer can not get the price of his services because it is known that he can not wait. His necessities are pitted against the resources of the employer; his existence, always close to the verge of want, is pitted against the broad margin of the employer; his ignorance of market conditions is pitted against the experience and the outlook of the employer.

The only weapon in his hands is the threat of withdrawing his service, but as the place of an individual can easily be filled, that threat is perfectly futile.

What shall we do? To establish himself in business is out of the question. He has not as an individual the capital. More and more, large capital is required. He can not do that.

Shall he go upon the land, as they say? That, too, is impossible. The mere expense of taking himself and his family to the land is prohibitive.

What shall he do? Threaten as an individual to leave his employers' service, when there are a hundred and a thousand others ready to take his place?

What shall he do? He stops to think, and finds that while the threat to withdraw his service as an individual is futile, that if a hundred people threaten to withdraw, that is more effective, because the place of a hundred cannot be so easily filled; and that if a thousand threaten to withdraw that is still more effective; and that if finally 150,000 withdraw, as they did in the anthracite coal strike, that is extremely effective, because the places of 150,000 men cannot be filled.—Felix Adler.

The Nonunionist.

Prof E. A. Ross, of the University of Nebraska, is likely to feel the iron heel if he is not careful, says the Cleveland Citizen. In a lecture to his students recently he openly advocated that union men should not work with non-union men; that the presence of such men frustrated the beneficent plan, and the refusal to work with them is not spite work, but a very important measure of policy.

The professor said the nonunion men follow in the wake of the unions and use them as a wind shield in getting higher wages. He denied that the nonunion man was an independent man, standing out against despotism of the unions, and asserted that the scruples he is supposed to have against joining a union exists only in the mind of his employer. Prof. Ross knows what he is talking about.

In purchasing goods from advertisers in this paper, do not fail to mention the fact that you saw the advertisement in THE TRADES UNIONIST. It will accord you good treatment at the hand of the salesman, and incidentally help the paper.

Abiding by Contracts.

The way to enforce a wise regulation is to enforce it. This applies to members of trades unions as to every one else. When violation of contracts through sympathetic strikes is declared by the official representative or agent of labor organization to be harmful, dishonorable, and not to be tolerated, obedience must be rendered by the local unions which compose its membership, or discipline is lost. It is most gratifying that the general officers of well-organized unions recognize this and act accordingly.

President Slocum, of the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, revoked the charter of the Chicago union of that order because its members violated their agreement with the Chicago Metal Trades Association and went on a sympathetic strike. His action is generally commended by labor leaders. As a result of it the blacksmiths and their striking helpers promptly returned to work as individuals and made a new agreement with their employers. Men who stick to their word are in a position to command good treatment from the men for whom they work, and to hold the respect of the public.

President Young, of the Teamster's National Union, has given a similar lesson to 300 striking teamsters in St. Louis who took it upon themselves to play fast and loose with their agreements by breaking them to go on strike. Those who refused to return to work when ordered to do so by the president of the union were deprived of their cards and left to shift for themselves.

By such actions as those of Presidents Slocum and Young do trades unions vindicate themselves from the charge of irresponsibility and grow strong by their own good faith.

Low Dues Kill Unions.

On the subject of low dues as a fatal defect in the policy of many trades unions, the leading editorial in the current issue of the Weekly Bulletin, official organ of the United Garment Workers of America, indulges in the following plain talk:

"The menace of the unions is the stinginess of the members in the matters of dues. They begrudge every penny paid into an institution that gives returns which make the Standard Oil dividends look beggarly in comparison. They spend more on peanuts or chewing gum than they contribute to maintain an organization upon which their livelihood and their hopes depend. Five or ten cents a week they call dues, and many of the members, if they had their way, would actually prefer to go back to their former helpless state in order to save this petty amount. This is one of the disagreeable realities we have to face, and yet we denounce employers for their greed, when workers are unwilling to make such trifling sacrifices in order to gain independence and better conditions. These self-same workmen will spend their meagre wages without thought of the morrow, but the pennies paid into the union are always too much. They will not dispute that their wages have been increased from one to five dollars a week; that their hours have been reduced several each day; that their grievances have been redressed by means of the union, but they pay the so-called dues as though they were being robbed. It is just this spirit that threatens the existence of the unions should they encounter adversity or go into a prolonged struggle.

JUST EVERY-DAY LIFE.

Every union printer should make an earnest effort to register in the city of St. Louis on August 16, that being the day officially designated by President Francis of the World's Fair as Union Printers' Day. This recognition of the craft, to my mind, is a feather in the cap of unionism, and our appreciation thereof should be shown by our attendance. It should be remembered that nearly every organization on the face of the globe—religious, patriotic, and fraternal—have been clamorous for a "day" they call their own.

Personal Mention.

F. L. Robinson, president of Louisville (Ky) Typographical Union, No. 10, stopped over in this city last week en route to New York.

Henry T. McMahon, president of Boston (Mass) Typographical Union, No. 13, and I. T. U. organizer, is spending a few days here under advice of his physician.

The Pessimist.

Unfortunate indeed is the union which is afflicted with this ogre. There is nothing more discouraging to willing workers for the cause than to have their every act criticised, the plans for the advancement of the membership belittled, and their efforts brought to naught by the harping of these misguided individuals, who never give birth to an idea or put a shoulder to the wheels of progress.

Always ready to stand on a technicality, or to declare impossible anything that savors of getting out of the same old rut, or awakening from a lethargy to face a new condition, the pessimist not only won't see himself, but his intelligence (?) is insulted should anyone try to reason with him. Two things are always found in his make-up—selfishness and conceit. Selfish because he might lose a week and gain a year; because it might be necessary for him to go down into that old sock he generally is possessed of to help himself and his brothers go ahead a step. Conceited enough to feel that his ideas should prevail to the exclusion of the will of the majority, and to sulk and shirk his load of the common burden. No committee work for him, yet he is the strongest kicker at results.

Fortunately, he is not numerous, and after a period of acquaintance, he is sized up for his full value and looked upon with suspicion, for, to the thorough union man, it seems miraculous that one holding views so radically different from himself should have a card at all. "Gene" Debs has properly defined him as "a working man with a capitalist mind. From all such, in the language of our Episcopalian brethren, "Good Lord, deliver us!"—Exchange.

General Labor Notes.

The Commercial Telegraphers have called their international convention for July 19, the anniversary of the great telegraphers' strike of 1888.

Boston, Mass., Garment Workers will print and distribute 50,000 circulars containing the names of the Boston firms that are unfriendly to organized labor.

The Amalgamated Woodworkers' International Union will hold a general convention about June 20. The members are now voting upon the city in which it will be held.

The Home Gold Mining Company of Cripple Creek, Colo., has decided to employ none but union miners in the future. This is a victory for the Western Federation of Miners.

Trades unions at Indianapolis have adopted a novel scheme whereby to obtain money for the erection of a labor temple. They have bought a residence property, which will be raffled among friends of the movement.

Chicago ministers, one of whom has been admitted to the Chicago Labor Council, are considering the advisability of sending a fraternal delegate to the convention of the American Federation of Labor when it meets in San Francisco in November.

The master bakers of Norfolk, Va., have signed the scale of wages demanded by the Bakers' Union; have agreed to employ none but union men in the future, and the strike, which has been in progress since April 30, has been declared off. The result is a complete victory for the strikers.

United States Government reports are authority for the statement that the wages of men in unions average more than 50 cents per day in excess of those men in the same employment who are not organized; that in earning the larger wage the union man works an average of one hour less a day than the nonunion man.

Norway has established a State workingmen's bank, which is to loan money at low interest for the purchase of workingmen's homesteads of one and a quarter to five acres and the erection of houses thereon at a cost not to exceed $804. The interest charge is 3½ or 4 per cent, and the refunding is to occupy forty-two years.

Nearly all the striking miners, seventy-nine in number, who were driven from Ludlow to Trinidad, Colo., a distance of twenty miles, by cavalry troops recently, have been released after having been registered by the military authorities. Several of the men, being weak, were made ill by the long march, and one dropped by the roadside exhausted.

Cincinnati labor unions are to have a general headquarters for all organizations in that city. Representatives and business agents of a large number of unions held a meeting and formed an association to be known as the Amalgamated Board of Labor Union Representatives, and its purpose is to establish headquarters and desk room for the different business agents of that city.

The Executive Committee of District 13, United Mine Workers of America, have taken formal and final action with reference to the refusal of miners along the Kansas City division of the Burlington to go to work. The charters of the local unions at Mendota and Unionville have been annulled and a resolution adopted suspending the members of the union for an indefinite period.

From the New York Press.

The girl to watch is the one that acts as if she didn't need it.

The woman who marries for money can love her children, the man himself.

When a woman isn't afraid of the cook it is because she wants to get rid of her.

A nice thing about not having any money is you can't loose it in a foolish speculation.

It's very hard to convince a woman you can't make your bills less merely by adding up the figures wrong.

In purchasing goods from advertisers in this paper, do not fail to mention the fact that you saw the advertisement in THE TRADES UNIONIST.
